But now, with a flask of juniper in our pockets, we defy the waters of the world! We have you at bay at last; though ye have in you all the water sprites and nymphs of infinite mischief, we will drink you now! We are not afraid of wells sunk till their bottoms touch Tartarus; nor of swamps, nor mineral springs. We believe that, were we sent with thousands of our unhappy countrymen to explore the whole head-waters of Salt River, or the Blue Licks, we could drink copiously saline or sulphureted hydrogen waters. Unhappy Egyptians! when your rivers, like ours, were undrinkable, ye had no Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps! Udolpho Wolfe was not born till our age!

But oh, we revel in joy—there is more joy coming. Read the next paragraph, and clap your hands.

"The distressing effect upon the STOMACH, BOWELS, and BLADDER of travellers, now residents, and all persons unaccustomed to them, produced by the waters of nearly all our great inland rivers, like the Ohio, Mississippi and Alabama, from the large quantity of decayed vegetable matter contained in them, in a state of solution, is well known; as is also that of the waters of limestoue regions in producing GRAVEL, CALCULI, and STONE IN THE BLADDER. The Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps is an absolute corrective of all these injurious properties of bad water, and consequently prevents the diseases which they occasion."

We give these tidings, with capitals and all, as they stand in the advertisement.

Good as this is, better is yet coming.

"It is also found to be a cure and preventive of FEVER AND AGUE, a complaint caused by the conjoint effects of vegetable malaria in the atmosphere, and vegetable putrescence in the waters of those districts in which it principally prevails. The AROMATIC SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS is consequently in great demand by persons travelling, or about to settle in those parts of the country, especially; as well as by many in every community where it has become known, on account of its various other remedial properties."

It makes us sad to remember the unnecessary days and months of unprofitable chills and fever that we have ourselves had; and if any thinks that a regular orthodox "fever and agur" is no great shakes, we heartily wish them a trial of it. But it is all over now. Our Home Missionaries can now go to the most unhealthy river bottoms, with the Bible in one hand and Schnapps in the other; for the very beard is plucked out of this grim monster who has had so long a despotism in western valleys and river bottoms.—The quarterly drafts of missionaries will no longer signify mere cash, but something more subtle; for it will of course be the duty of the parent society to send forth this essence of Wolfe to all their stations.

What else this Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps will do, the reader may see, as follows:

"In all cases of a DROPSICAL tendency, it is generally the only remedy required, when adopted in the early stages of the disease. In DYSPEPTIC MALADIES, when taken in proper quantities, as a Diet, Drink, and especially at dinner, it is found, by uniform experience, to be eminently efficacious in the most obstinate cases, when even the best of the usual remedies have failed to afford more than mere temporary relief.—In cases of FLATULENCY, it is an immediate and invariable specific; and it may be administered in diluted and proportionate quantities even to young infants, in all those paroxysms of griping pain in the stomach and bowels, to which they are especially subject, as well as in the colic of grown persons.

"Its judicious adoption in connection with the principal meals, or when a sense of exhaustion dictates its use, never fails to relieve the debility attendant upon protracted CHRONIC MALADIES, LOW TEMPERAMENTS and EXHAUSTED VITAL ENERGY, by whatever cause induced. These are the facts to which many of the most eminent medical men, both in Europe and the United States, have borne testimony, and which are corroborated by their highest written authorities.

"The AROMATIC SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS is put up in good strong bottles, neatly covered and labelled, accompanied by an Essay upon its properties and uses."

There, we have given the whole advertisement, and expect no pay for it; at any rate none in the regular way. Though,—as the water of Brooklyn is bad, as we have long lived in malarial regions, as we have twinges of rheumatism occasionally, as we are frequently exhausted, as we find after our "principal meals" not unfrequently most somnolent symptoms,—if our temperance Wolfe will send us a specimen—just a specimen only—we will see what can be done with it. But we wish him to remark that this article does not proceed from the regular editors of The Independent, and make mistakes in that direction. They have prejudices which might blind their eyes.

Our readers may be surprised at so long a notice of an advertisement. But they must know that this medical wonder is not only trumpeted abroad most vociferously, but the New York Medical Gazette has given it a most favorable notice, saying, in its closing paragraph—

"Mr. Wolfe liberally supplies physicians with a sample bottle for analysis and trial, as set forth in his circular, and stakes the reputation of the remedy upon the innocence, safety and efficiency of his Holland Gin, when used under medical advice; and pledges his own character in business that the article will not disappoint any who use it."

This is a conscientious gazette. It belongs, we believe, to a school which is not afraid to take the medicines which they prescribe to others; and if our article seems to Mr. Wolfe cold in its praises compared with the Gazette's, he must remember that we were obliged to write it on poisonous cold water, as we have not as yet been "liberally supplied with a sample bottle for analysis and trial," whereas the Gazette had the benefit of Aromatic Schnapps before writing.

And now, if our readers would like a sober word at the end, in the way of our honest opinion, we would say that we regard this as about the most impudent attempt of a ginseller, tricked up with a medical indorsement, to get the patronage of that large class of orphan drinkers made by the Maine Law, who desire to have all the benefits of drinking, with all the respectability of temperance; and Mr. Wolfe is engaged in the interesting game long known under the very homely phrase of "whipping the Devil around the stump."

How I remember well the time—
It seems but yesterday!—when thou
Would'st with a mild, unruffled brow,
Bid me put by my childish rhyme,
And listen to the word of God.
* * * Let good or ill betide,
The light a mother's soul imparts
Will radiate in her childrens' hearts
Till all is dark beside!—BENJAMIN.

☞ Gen. Waddy Thompson, in a three week's visit to the Cherokee Indians, did not see a ragged, dirty or drunken Indian. The laws against the traffic in rum are very stringent.

A man that breaks his word, bids others to be false to him.

A proud look makes foul work in a fine face.

Acknowledgments

Received of W. McK. Dunn, Esq., of Madison, 75cts for the Chart for one year.

Of John Grier, of Indianapolis, 75cts for the Chart for one year.

Of Bro. Shirts, 37½cts for the Chart for six months.

Of Mr. Jones, Indianapolis, 75cts for the Chart for one year.

Of Mr. Cotton and O. J. Creeks, at Oakland, each 50cts on the Chart.

Of J. McIntosh, Hardinsburg, on ten copies of the Chart $5.

Bro. Parsley has sent us the names of quite a number of subscribers to the Chart, at different places, to all of whom it has been duly forwarded.

DIED, At his residence in Economy, Wayne county, Indiana, November 16th, 1851, of fever, WILLIAM W. GOOD, P. W. P. of Economy Division, No. 95, S. of T., in the 31st year of his age.

Economy Division was organized in 1847; Brother Good was a charter member, and retained his fellowship until his death. He was a consistent, thorough-going temperance man, an advocate of the Maine Law, a man of intellect and good education, and a true reformer.

The Division adopted the usual resolutions of respect and condolence. *

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	....	$5 00
200 "	.....	8 00
300 "	.....	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P., that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

The Age of Steam and Lightning!

MORRELL'S Eagle Book Works, 196 Fulton St., N. Y. Warehouse and Salesroom 25 Park Row.

BLANK BOOKS.

BLANK BOOKS, in greater variety and at lower prices than at any other Establishment in the country. Five Thousand Reams of manufactured Account Books constantly on hand, adapted to every market in the Union.

Half-bound Caps, per quire, 9 to 18 cents; Full bound, 15 to 22; and, in finer bindings, 25 to 50; Demys, Russia Bindings, 50 cents to $1 00; Medium Royal, and Super Royal Books in proportion.

A NEW FEATURE.—All the Books furnished by this Establishment, which are 25 cents per quire and upwards, are beautifully PAGED, by a newly invented process, without charge. Memorandum Books of all kinds. Wholesale and Retail Dealers supplied in any quantity, for cash or approved credit.

NEW MISCELLANY.

The Cheapest and Best of its Price yet Published.

A. MORRELL will issue every month, a volume of 150 pages of Choice Reading, useful and entertaining, by the best writers. Can be mailed to any part of the Union at Magazine postage. Single subscribers $1 50 per year; Four Subscribers for $5; and Ten Copies sent to one address for $10; being only One Dollar per year. All payments in advance.—Orders and Communications may be addressed to the office of publication, No. 7, Theatre Alley, or to the publisher, ARTHUR MORRELL, aug 11 25 Park Row, New York.

Divisions who wish Constitutions, or any other kind of printing done with neatness and dispatch, we would recommend them to Bro. Ohr. Bro. O is a practical printer, and a member of the Grand Division. C WOODWARD, G. S.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent

PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq, the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS, N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.

WILLIAM G. STEEL,

Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.

nov 10-3m

Local and Traveling Agents Wanted.

FOR popular and useful Books just published—CALIFORNIA ILLUSTRATED, including a Description of the Panama and Nicaragua Routes, with 48 superb Tinted Lithographs, 234 pages, 8 vo Price $2. This work, by J. M. Letts, has been adjudged by the unanimous voice of the press to be the most elaborate, practical and intensely interesting volume that has yet been written upon this golden theme. Since the publication of Steven's Journal of Travels, no work has appeared that has created such a thrilling sensation. It is pre-eminently practical, and is interspersed with incident of the most amusing character. In the language of one of the city editorials, "it is a perfect daguerreotype of California, taken by the light of a noon-day sun." Also, Dr. Beach's great work on Medicine, THE AMERICAN PRACTICE AND FAMILY PHYSICIAN, 800 pages, 200 engravings, 8 vo. sheep. Price $5. Dr. Beach is at the head of the eclectic practice in this country.—Such was the demand, that eighteen thousand copies of this work were printed in one edition. Also, Dr. C. D. Hammond's work on the same principles of practice, MEDICAL INFORMATION FOR THE MILLION, OR TRUE GUIDE TO HEALTH, 12 mo, cloth, 528 pages, price $1 50 cloth, $1 paper covers, 4th thousand.—Also, WOMAN IN HER VARIOUS RELATIONS; containing practical rules for American Females, for their conduct in the detail of every domestic duty. Royal 18 mo.; red cloth, illustrated; 324 pages; price 63 cents. This work should be in the hands of every lady especially the young Such is its popularity that nearly three thousand copies have been sold in the region of New York alone within a very few months. Also a new and very useful article of Stationery for the preservation of valuable papers, &c., needed for reference, such as letters, invoices, &c. Its form is that of a scrap book, with leaves prepared for the reception of the article to be filed, thus superceding, with many advantages, the practice of binding. The retail prices as follows:

IMPROVED ADHESIVE LETTER, INVOICE AND MUSIC FILE.

Size.	Thickness.	Single.	Doz or more.
Cap,	250 leaves	$1 00	$9 00
Packet Post,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Letter,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Cap,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Packet Post,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Letter,	500 do	1 50	9 00
Bill,	500 do	1 00	9 00
Music,	80 do	1 00
Do half mor clo s	80 do	1 25
Do hf tur mor do	80 do	1 50

N. B.—Orders for peculiar sizes or styles of binding filled with despatch.

Special contracts made for large lots.

Orders for Books above advertised, with cash or postage stamps accompanying, will be promptly filled, prepaid to any part of the United States.

Address, ROBERT T. YOUNG,

(Successor to Wm. Holdrege,) No. 140, Fulton Street, New York.

Editors giving this advertisement two or three insertions entire, will be entitled to a copy of California Illustrated. nov 10-3w

---

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,

Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,

oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2.00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4.00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,

Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. RICHARD M. HALL. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.

aug 11-1y

To Persons out of Employment!

BOOK AGENTS WANTED,

To Canvass for

New Pictorial, Standard, Historical, and Religious Works.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young persons of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "DIRECTIONS TO PERSONS DISPOSED TO ACT AS AGENTS," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid.

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,

sep 1 3m 181 William Street, New York.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

ATTENTION is respectfully solicited to the following facts and statements in regard to the above Agency:

Indianapolis being the centre and Capital of the State, accessible from all parts by means of the numerous railroads which concentrate within her borders—filled constantly with strangers from all parts of the country—presents one of the most available cities in the West, for the successful carrying out an Agency, such as below described:

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

To give efficiency to this most important branch of the Agency, the services of an energetic and responsible Attorney in each county of the State has been secured. This, in connection with the fact that the undersigned is himself a practical Lawyer, and has had several years' experience in this branch of the Agency in Ohio, affords a full guarantee that all business in this department will be attended to with fidelity and dispatch.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

To give efficiency to this branch of the Agency, the services of a distinguished and responsible Attorney and Counsellor, resident at Washington, and experienced in this department, has been secured

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

GEO. TAYLOR, Esq., Attorney and Counsellor at Law, is connected with, and authorized to transact any business of the above agency. Office as above.

REFER TO

Hon. Isaac Blackford, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.

Hon. Samuel E. Perkins, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.

Hon Wm. J. Brown; Editor of State Sentinel.

John D. Defrees, Esq., Editor of State Journal.

Messrs Ellis & Spann, Editors of Indiana Statesman.

Messrs. Elder & Harkness, Editors of The Locomotive.

R. R. Underhill, Esq.

Wm. Sheets, Esq.

C. B. Davis, Esq.

American and Foreign Agency,

CITY OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Under the direction of AARON H. PALMER, Counsellor of the Supreme Court of the U. States.

The undersigned has been duly appointed sole Agent for Indiana of the above Agency, (the best in the Union,) and will give his prompt and faithful attention to all business confided to his personal management, requiring to be transacted in this State or elsewhere in the United States, or any part of the commercial world, through the principal office at Washington. W. M'K. SCOTT, aug 11-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

Real Estate and General Agent,

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

WILLIAM HANNAMAN,

DEALER IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally june30 tf

---

A REGISTER

HAS been opened at the REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE, Indianapolis, in which all persons can enter property for sale, with full description, price per acre, &c., without charge, (excepting disbursements for advertising,) unless a sale effected. Said Register will be at all times open to public inspection, and the advantage thus offered to owners of real estate for the prompt disposal of their property is far superior to all others.

Also, a Register for renting property has been opened under the same regulations as the above.

aug 11-1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,

june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

TO CURE A COLD, WITH HEADACHE AND SORENESS OF THE BODY, take the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, and wrap up warm, to sweat during the night.

FOR A COLD AND COUGH, take it morning, noon, and evening, according to directions on the bottle, and the difficulty will soon be removed. None will long suffer from this trouble when they find it can be so readily cured. Persons afflicted with a seated cough, which breaks them of their rest at night, will find, by taking the CHERRY PECTORAL on going to bed, they may be sure of sound, unbroken sleep, and consequently refreshing rest. Great relief from suffering, and an ultimate cure, is afforded to thousands who are thus afflicted, by this invaluable remedy.

From its agreeable effect in these cases, many find themselves unwilling to forego its use when the necessity for it has ceased.

From two eminent Physicians in

FAYETTEVILLE, Tenn., April 16th, 1851.

SIR:—We have given your Cherry Pectoral an extensive trial in our practice, and find it to surpass every other remedy we have for curing affections of the respiratory organs

DRS. DIEMER & HAMPTON.

TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS this remedy is invaluable, as by its action on the throat and lungs, when taken in small quantities, it removes all hoarseness in a few hours, and wonderfully increases the power and flexibility of voice.

ASTHMA is generally much relieved, and often wholly cured by Cherry Pectoral. But there are some cases so obstinate as to yield entirely to no medicine. Cherry Pectoral will cure them, if they can be cured.

BRONCHITIS, or irritation of the throat and upper portion of the lungs, may be cured by taking Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses. The uncomfortable oppression is soon relieved.

Rev. Dr. LANSING, of Brooklyn, New York, states: "I have seen the Cherry Pectoral cure such cases of Asthma and Bronchitis as leads me to beleive it can rarely fail to cure those diseases."

FOR CROUP. Give an emetic of antimony, to be followed by large and frequent doses of the Cherry Pectoral, until it subdues the disease. If taken in season, it will not fail to cure.

WHOOPING COUGH may be broken up and soon cured by the use of Cherry Pectoral.

THE INFLUENZA is speedily removed by this remedy. Numerous instances have been noticed where whole families were protected from any serious consequences, while their neighbors, without the Cherry Pectoral, were suffering from the disease.

Salem, Ohio. June 11th, 1851.

Doct. J. C. Ayer:—I write to inform you of the truly remarkable effects of your Cherry Pectoral in this place, and in my own family. One of my daughters was completely cured in three days of a dreadful Whooping Cough, by taking it. Dr. Means, one of our very best physicians freely states that he considers it the best remedy we have for pulmonary diseases and that he has cured more cases of Croup with it, than any other medicine he ever administered.

Our clergyman of the Baptist Church says that during the run of Influenza here this season, he has seen cures from your medicine, he could scarcely have believed without seeing.

Yours respectfully, J. D. SINCLAIR,

Deputy Postmaster.

From the distinguished Professor of Chemistry and Materia Medica, Bowdoin College.

I have found the Cherry Pectoral, as its ingredients show, a powerful remedy for colds, and coughs, and pulmonary diseases. P. CLEVELAND, M. D.

Brunswick, Me., Feb. 5, 1847.

DR. VALENTINE MOTT, the widely celebrated Professor of Surgery in the Medical College, New York City, says:

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of 'Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,' which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

Cures of severe diseases upon the Lungs have been affected by Cherry Pectoral in such extreme cases as warrant the belief that a remedy has at length been found that can be depended on to cure the Coughs, Colds and Consumption which carry from our midst thousands every year. It is indeed a medicine to which the afflicted can look with confidence for relief, and they should not fail to avail themselves of it.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. oct. 6 3m

---

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

T. M. NICHOLS. J. F. JOHNSTON.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,

SURGEON DENTISTS,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1852. NO. 25.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

Office—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week. - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Advocate and Home Circle.

A Drop of Woe.

Weird and wild, the drunkard's child,
Shivering in the tempest's wild,
Whispers to the air—
Where—Oh! where
Thinks a soul of me, outcast
Upon the wide, wide world to beg—
Perhaps to starve at last!

Stranger near—the glistening tear
Freezes in my sunken eye—
Scorn not thus my prayer!
Where—Oh! where
Lingers sympathy? And why
Must I beseech in vain, and sink—
Perhaps down here to die?

Weird and wild the tempest smiled,
Whistling o'er the barren heath—
Whistling round the flaxen hair:
There—Ah! there
Lies the corse, and every breath
Awakes the requiem of the poor—
Ah! this is death!

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Texas Tarantula.

BY AUGUSTINE.

This Texas of ours is an astonishingly prolific country. Every field stands luxuriant, crowded—so that it can scarce wave under the breeze—with corn, or sugar, or wheat, or cotton. Every cabin is full and overflowing, through all its doors and windows, with white-haired children. Every prairie abounds in deer, prairie-hens, and cattle. Every river and creek is alive with fish. The whole land is electric with lizards perpetually darting about among the grass like flashes of green lightning. We have too much prairie, and too little forest, for a great multitude or variety of birds. But in horned-frogs, scorpions, tarantulas, and centipedes, we beat the universe. Everybody has seen horned-frogs. You see them in jars in the windows of apothecaries. You are entreated to purchase them by loafing boys on the levee at New Orleans. They have been neatly soldered up in soda boxes, and mailed by young gentlemen in Texas, to fair ones in the old States. The fair ones receive the neat package from the post-office, are delighted at the prospect of a daguerreotype—perhaps jewelry—open the package eagerly, and faint, as the frog within hops out, in excellent health, upon them. A horned-frog is, simply, a very harmless frog, with very portentous horns. It has horns, because everything in its region — trees, shrubs, grass even, has thorns—and nature makes it in keeping with all around it. A menagerie of them would not be expensive. They are content to live upon air—and can live, if desired, I am told, for several months, without even that.

The scorpions are precisely like those of Arabia—in the shape of a lobster, exactly, only not more than some three inches long. You are very apt to put one upon your face in the towel which you apply thereto after washing. If you do, you will find the sting about equal to that of a wasp—nothing worse. They are far less poisonous than the scorpion of the East; in fact, none except new-comers dread them at all.

But the Tarantula! You remember the astonishing elasticity with which you sprang in the air that time you were just on the point of putting your raised foot down upon a snake coiled in your path.—You were frightened through every fibre of your body. Very probably the snake was as harmless as it was beautiful. Spring as high, be as utterly frightened as possible, when you just avoid stepping upon a tarantula, however. Filthy, loathsome, abominable, and poisonous—crush it to atoms before you leave it. If you have never seen it, know henceforth that it is an enormous spider, concentrating in itself all the venom and spite and ugliness of all spiders living. Its body is some two inches long—black and bloated. It enjoys the possession of eight long, strong legs, a red mouth, and an abundance of stiff brown hair all over itself. When standing, it covers an area of a saucer. Attack it with a stick, and it rears on its hind legs, gnashes at the stick, and fights like a fiend. It even jumps forward a foot or two in its rage, and if it bite into a vein, the bite is death! I have been told of the battle fought by one on board a steamboat. Discovered at the lower end of the boat, it came hopping up the saloon—driving the whole body of passengers before it; it almost drove the whole company, crew and all, overboard.

The first I saw was at the house of a friend. I spied it crawling slowly over the wall—meditating murder upon the children playing in the room. Excessively prudent in regard to my fingers, I, at last, however, had it safely imprisoned in a glass jar, unhurt. There was a flaw in the glass, as well as a hole through the cork by which it could breathe, but in ten minutes it was dead from rage! Soon after, I killed three upon my place, crawling about ground trodden every day by the bare feet of my little boy. A month after, I killed a whole nest of them. They had formed their family circle under a door-step, upon which the aforesaid little fellow played daily.—Had he seen one of them, he would, of course, have picked it up as a remarkably promising toy, and I would have been childless.

I was sitting one day upon a log in the woods, when I saw one slowly crawl out to enjoy the evening air and the sunset scenery. He was the largest, most bloated one, I ever saw. As I was about to kill him, I was struck with the conduct of a chance wasp. It, too, had seen the tarantula, and was flying slowly around it. The tarantula recognized it as a foe, and, throwing itself upon its hind legs, breathed defiance. For some time the wasp flew around it, and then, like a flash, flew right against it, and stung it under its bloated belly. The tarantula gnashed its red and venomed jaws, and threw its long hairy legs about in impotent rage, while the wasp flew round and round it, watching for another opportunity. Again and again did it dash its sting into the reptile, and escape. After the sixth stab, the tarantula actually fell over on its baek, dead; and the wasp, after making itself sure of the fact, and inflicting a last sting to make matters sure, flew off happy in having done a duty assigned it in creation. In an hour more, a colony of ants had carried it down piecemeal, and deposited it in their catacombs.

But, deadliest and most aborrent of all our reptiles in Texas, is the Centipede.—This is a kind of worm, from three to six inches long, exactly like an enormous caterpiller. It is green, or brown, or yellow; some being found of each of these colors. As its name denotes, it has along each side a row of feet, or horny claws rather. Imagine that you walk some night across your chamber floor with naked feet; you put your foot down upon a soft something, and instantly it coils around your foot in a ring, sticking every claw up to the body in your foot. The poison flows through each claw, and in two minutes you will have fainted with agony—in a few more, you will be dead. The deadly thing cannot be torn away. It has to be cut off, and claw by claw picked out. Even if it crawls over the naked body of a sleeping person, without sticking in its claws, the place will pain the person for years after; at least, so I have been told.

I have seen these things, in which nature corks her deadly poisons, often; yet I have heard of few cases in which they have bitten or killed any one. The kind Being who makes the butterflies to be abundant, in the same loving kindness which makes them so beautiful and so abundant, makes all deadly creatures to be scarce.—Arthur's Home Gazette.

A good life doth not silence calumny, but it certainly disarms it.

A man that hath no virtue in himself, envieth it in others.

Objections to the Maine Law.

The "Zion's Herald" has an able editorial on the famous Maine Liquor Law.—The objections to this glorious measure are met with a master pen, and for the benefit of its opposers, we append a few extracts:

Is it a sumptuary law?—By such as these the liquor law has been denounced as a sumptuary law. "It interferes," say they, "with our right to drink what we please, and is therefore arbitrary, and despotic." This denunciation is false. It betrays either the absence of knowledge or of truth in its authors. The liquor law is not, in any sense, a sumptuary law. What is a sumptuary law? It prescribes what article of diet or clothing men shall or shall not eat, drink, or wear. As, for example, in France, formerly it was enacted that none but princes should eat turbot, or wear velvet or gold lace. But what is there in the liquor law which resembles this? It forbids no man to drink liquor! It hinders no man from using it in his business, if its use be therein required; it even provides a way by which he may readily procure it for all medical, mechanical, and artistical uses. If he chooses to use it as a beverage, this law neither prevents him from importing it, nor denies him the right of manufacturing it for such private use. It merely forbids him from selling it—from making it an article of traffic—just as other statutes forbid him to sell obscene books, poisonous food, or lottery tickets. Is it then a sumptuary law? Nay! The principle of the sumptuary law is not in it. Every man is left entirely free as to the fact of drinking liquor. The law only makes it contraband as an article of common merchandise.

The Law and the Right of Search.—But it is objected by others, that this law provides for the violation of domestic sanctity. It permits domiciliary visits, and thereby neutralizes the proud boast of the freeman, that his house is his castle, and may not be invaded. "My enemies," an opponent of the law asserts, "have only to swear they suspect me, and straightway I am subjected to the annoyance and disgrace of having my house searched by police officers, and my private stock of liquors seized and destroyed. What could despotism do more?" This is partly true and partly false. The law does provide for the right of searching private dwellings. But is this a new thing in free governments? Do not our statutes authorize search-warrants to seek for gaming implements, obscene books, counterfeit money, and stolen property? Why not denounce these laws? But the liquor law guards the sanctity of home more than any other statute which recognizes the right of search. In other cases, the oath of a single person is sufficient to procure the issue of a search-warrant. This law requires the oath of three voters, before any building can be visited; if a dwelling-house is to be searched, one of these voters must swear to his belief of a sale of liquors within a month, and to the facts on which that belief is founded, and these facts must be such as to satisfy the mind of the magistrate who issues the warrant. Is there any danger of an improper exercise of the right of search under such restrictions?—We think not. And then, if a dwelling-house is searched, the mere presence of liquor is not taken as a proof of guilt; but of liquor "with the implements of sale." Could law guard personal right more carefully than this?

The Law and the Right of Property.—Still it is argued that this law attacks the right of property. Its operations, it is said, will depreciate the value of an immense capital already invested in the manufacture of liquors, and it proposes to seize and destroy personal property in certain cases. These facts, it is asserted, prove the law to be an unconstitutional violation of private rights.

Who is he that brings this objection?—Has he a man's nature?—a human heart? Would he set the claims of property above those of humanity? What if, as in the legendary history of old England, a body of men came among us, versed in the occult mysteries of pretended magical art. Suppose them capable, at an immense cost, of creating wax images, which, gradually melted before, had the power of wasting away the life of the person it was made to resemble? Imagine one or two or ten citizens to have perished thus, and the discovery of these magicians and their infernal arts to be made. Their images are costly. They have invested, say millions of dollars, in their instruments of death. Would any man plead the rights of capital or property in their behalf? Would the boldest priest of Mammon dare to whisper the thought? Nay! A demon would blush to plead the right of such property to be spared from destruction.—But who can show the difference between the two cases. Did the supposed magic figures destroy life? So does the liquor traffic—only on a larger and more fearful scale. Property!—Humanity! Place them in the scale! If you think the right of the former outweighs that of the latter, then oppose the law. Stand by the liquor-dealing capitalist! Tell him that human happiness is nothing, social enjoyment a trifle; the production of crime, the spread of pauperism, the degradation of mind, are all nothing compared with his capital! But if humanity is above property—if capital invested in a traffic which defeatures the glorious mind of man, is wickedly, immorally, and unlawfully invested—then stand by the law, and leave the guilty capitalist to shed his impious tears alone, in the solitude of his deserted distillery; or, if he prefers weeping in company, send him to those dealers in lottery tickets, vile books, and gambling implements, whose property, by the action of kindred laws, is depreciated and spoiled. Let him mingle his tears with theirs. They are fit companions for his grief.

From Arthur's Home Gazette.

Two Pictures.

Nothing is lost, and much gained, it may be, to the cause of humanity, by occasionally holding up to view pictures in strong contrast with those upon which the public gaze has been fixed admiringly—pictures which remind us that, while we are in the enjoyment of life's good things, others are in abject poverty. We are not of those who would lessen the elegancies of the rich, nor who regard the pleasures and recreations of life as evil rather than good. In all art, the world is gainer when high perfection is achieved, and it usually rewards the artist who surpasses in excellence, most liberally. With this no fault should be found. But, in regard to its favorites, the public is much inclined to run into extremes, and in eager devotion to pleasure to forget that something is due to suffering humanity. These remarks are preliminary to the following reference to Madame Sontag, which we find in the Boston Olive Branch. There is that in it which will throw over the mind of almost any one, a sober cast of thought:

"Madame Sontag is, no doubt, a worthy woman, a fine singer, and quite good-looking; but why the musical world should go into rhapsodies about her, we do not see. The praise that is lavished upon her partakes so much of fulsomeness and flattery, that it is almost disgusting to read. We are extravagantly fond of music, but even while listening to Jenny Lind, we could not once fancy that she was a seraph, or anything more than a sweet gifted woman with a wondrous voice. The following description is given of the appearance and dress of Madame Sontag:

"'She was magnificently attired in a white satin dress, flowered and covered with the finest white lace, with pink flounces. To satisfy the curiosity of our lady readers, we may inform them that this splendid dress was made here, and cost fifteen hundred dollars. Madame's hair was tastefully decorated with carnation pinks, and on her neck glittered a diamond necklace of great value. She also wore a costly diamond of sparkling beauty on her bosom, and displayed magnificent gold armlets on her wrists. The tout ensemble of Madame Sontag's appearance was splendid and enchanting, and, joined to her graceful and slight, though dignified figure, she looked a most fascinating personage.'

"We would like to introduce to just as fashionable an audience as greeted this great singer, a character for which the following description might suffice:

"'She was a poor New York seamstress, earning by constant toil ninepence per day. She was miserably attired in a common cotton dress, flowered and covered with various colored patches, without flounces. To satisfy the curiosity, and excite the compassion of our lady readers, we may inform them that this apology for a gown was made here, and cost the enormous sum of fifty cents—long years ago, when it was new. Madame's hair was mournfully streaked with gray lines; there were also sad furrows on her thin temples, and tears falling heavily down her cheeks.—On her neck she wore a little ribbon with the names of those merchants who furnished her with work, written upon it; and many were there having given her a few pennies for a shirt that day, with which she must pay her rent and go hungry, who had lavished a hundred dollars on Madame Sontag. She also wore upon her bosom a lean, famished, wretched child, that might be the possessor of 'sparkling beauty,' had it sufficient health; but its lack-lustre eyes, long swaying limbs, and the utter meaningless look it turned upon the brilliant company, denoted that its little heart had grown so inured to suffering, that it no longer knew a child's pleasure for the beautiful. Her wrists were grown too bony for bracelets, even had they been 'magnificent,' and wrought of gold. Altogether, the tout ensemble of Madame's appearance, and that of her child, was wretched enough to give a pang to the hardest heart, and, joined to her grief-worn features, her plaintive solo, 'I have seen better days,' her emaciated figure and trembling step — suggested appalling thoughts of hunger, shame, and suicide.'"

To Young Housekeepers.—Be satisfied to commence on a small scale. It is too common for young housekeepers to begin where their mothers ended. Buy all that is necessary to work skillfully with—adorn your house with all that will render it comfortable. Do not look at richer homes, and covet their costly furniture. If secret disaffection is ready to spring up, go a step farther and visit the homes of the poor and suffering; behold dark, cheerless apartments, insufficient clothing, and absence of all the comforts and refinements of social life; then return to your own with a joyous spirit. You will then be prepared to meet your husband with a grateful heart, and be ready to appreciate the toil and self-denial which he has endured in his business world to surround you with the delights of home; then you will be ready to co-operate cheerfully with him in arranging your expenses, that his mind will not be constantly harassed with fears lest family expenditures may encroach upon public payments. Be independent; a young house-keeper never needed greater moral courage than she now does, to resist the arrogance of fashion.—Do not let the A's and B's decide what you must have, neither let them hold the strings of your purse. You know best what you can and ought to afford; then decide with a strict integrity, according to your means. Let not the censure or the approval of the world ever tempt you to buy what you hardly think you can afford. It matters little what people think, provided you are true to yourself and family.

Children's Grog-Shop.—Within the last two days the police reports have revealed the astounding fact, that there are grog-shops in this city into which children are enticed, and liquor sold for a cent a glass, and that many children have been induced to become regular frequenters of those dens. The enormity of the thing is scarcely credible, but it is nevertheless true. The evils resulting from such a fiendish traffic cannot be fully comprehended, and no punishment is too severe for those who are engaged in it. The authorities should at once take the matter in hand, and use all the power with which they are invested for the suppression of the practice. Every friend of humanity should exert himself to root out the evil, and bring its authors to condign punishment. It is a matter in which everybody is interested. If continued, it will be the means of producing a generation of drunkards—a generation of lawless rowdies, thieves, cutthroats, and pickpockets.—N. Y. Express.

The Work of Death.

Five years ago, as we learn, there was in Cincinnati a happy and innocent pair united in the holy bonds of wedlock.—They were both connected with highly respectable families, and their mutual friends predicted for them years of conjugal felicity. The husband, naturally of a social and generous nature, was found often and still oftener in the genteel saloons, first with those who drink a social glass occasionally, then with those who "tarry long at the wine." Now he is a whisky-rotted mass, and his once innocent and lovely bride, broken-hearted and abandoned, is the inmate of a brothel.

Is it unconstitutional to rescue our fellow-creatures from the jaws of the second death? Is it fanaticism to urge without delay the application of a known and well-tried remedy for the numerous train of ills forever flowing from two thousand fountains of moral impurity in the Queen City?—Organ.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 15, 1852.

Take Notice!

We publish the Temperance Memorial, adopted by the Grand Division, in order to place it in the hands of all our readers. It can thus be cut out and placed at the head of a sheet of white paper, or those wishing to use it, can copy it. We urge the necessity of energetic and earnest efforts to circulate this petition for signatures, among the entire people of the State. Let all have an opportunity to honor themselves by signing it.

☞ It is more than a week since we obtained from Mr. Scott, of the "Commercial Institute," of this city, a copy of an able address recently delivered by him before the students of the Institution. Our object then was to review the lecture at length, that the young men of the State might generally have the advantage of so excellent an effort. A press of business has, however, hitherto prevented our executing that intention. We hope that greater leisure will soon enable us to do so. In the meantime we are pleased to say, that the Institution is in a highly flourishing condition; and, we trust, will long continue an honor to our city. No young man will ever contract the ruinous habit of intemperate drinking, who follows the advice of Mr. Scott.

Temperance Convention.

Let none forget that the great State Temperance Convention will be held at Indianapolis on the 12th of January next. Let all the friends of the cause who can come be present; and let those who cannot come themselves, send good men to represent them. Let the temperance sentiment of the State be here; and there will be such an impression created in favor of the cause, upon the minds even of our enemies, as cannot fail to promote its triumph.

We earnestly invite the attention of those who may come, to the necessity of coming fully prepared to represent justly, the portion of the State which may send them. For this purpose we suggest that some one man in each county, competent for the labor, investigate the records of his county, with a view to ascertain the state of the accounts between the liquor system and the county. Let this examination go back, say, four years; during which time let the number of Groceries kept in the county, whether licensed or not, be ascertained, together with the amount of cash received by the Treasury for licenses. Next ascertain, the number of fines paid into the Treasury for infractions of the laws, due to intemperance, for the same period. These items may be set down to Profit. Next enquire how many inquests have been held in consequence of the liquor traffic, and the cost of the same to the county. Then, the number of crimes committed, together with the costs in cash of trying and punishing the criminals. This list should include the nature of the offences, extending from the crime of murder down to petit misdemeanors.—The poor-records should also be carefully examined, and the amount of expenditures arising from the traffic under this head, ascertained. These expenditures may be set down to loss. An investigation like this, would enable us to understand at a glance the economical relations of the old system; and as people seem to be more easily influenced by pecuniary considerations than motives of philanthropy, we will thus be enabled to bring our argument home to the purse. In this way it is certain the tax-payers of the State will be brought to regard the liquor traffic as one great source of their burthens; and many who can laugh at a fellow-being staggering drunk into the grave, will be brought seriously to think of the dimes which such amusements cost them.

Herald of the Union.—We have received a number of this large sheet. It is edited and published by C. Edwards Lester, the proprietor, at New York; and furnished to subscribers at $2 00 a year. We know of no paper that contains more reading matter, more handsomely printed. Its only fault is, that it seems to be an advocate of the peculiar institution of the South, and to encourage this country in following what has been styled its "manifest destiny"—the forcible acquisition of territory. To us it is exceptionable on both these accounts. To slavery within its constitutional bounds, we do not, as a citizen of the Union, object; but its advocacy we abhor, and every effort made for its extension we deprecate as full of evil to our country and humanity. Mr. Lester writes well and fearlessly, however; and those who desire to have a glance at the "manifest destiny" doctrines, will find him an adroit advocate of them.

St. Joseph Valley Register.

—The same Temperance Chart which publishes the above, has, as its leading article, an editorial conceding that it has no hopes of the passage of the Maine Law at the approaching session. And this leads us to a reflection or two.

We are not in favor of passing laws in advance of public opinion. But, though more of a believer in moral than legal suasion, we have always been favorable to the enactment of Temperance Laws, as fast as the public mind was prepared for them, but have not been in favor of their passing, unless a sound public opinion was at their back to sustain them. We have doubted, in common with other total abstinence men, whether the people of Indiana were prepared for a law, as stringent in its provisions, and as novel in its practical operations, as the Maine Law. E. C. Delevan, the celebrated Temperance Pioneer in New York, has the same doubt as regards that State. He may be wrong, and so may we; but it is very easy to settle the whole question, and we are in favor of its being settled.

How?

The plan is a simple one. The Chart concedes that the law cannot be expected to pass this session. Then, instead of an ineffectual canvass for that, let its friends ask the Legislature to submit this naked question to the people at the ballot-box, as they have Constitutional Reform, Free Schools, &c.—"Do you desire the passage of the Maine Liquor Law in Indiana?"—There is no Constitutional objection to that, as it is alleged there would be to submitting the law itself to the people. This mode of settling the question is so reasonable that no opponent of the law should object to it. And then, if the majority of the people do desire it, they will know their strength—they will have the law—and they ought to have it. But if a majority of the people are not in favor of its adoption, it ought not, we contend, to be forced upon them against their will. This plan seems to us rational and republican; it will take the question out of politics—it will secure a direct vote upon the Law, uninfluenced by side issues—and the verdict of the people will be respected and observed, on whichever side it may be.—St. Joseph Valley Register.

As we cannot agree with the suggestions of our Brother of the Register, and wish to give expression to our disagreement, we have copied his language, and thus shut the door against doing him wrong by misrepresentation or misapprehension of his meaning. We deem this course due not only to fair-dealing, but to the high respect which we entertain for the editor. Neither he nor his friends can justly complain when we allow him to be the exponent of his own opinions. This we do.

It is proper that, before expressing our objections to the course recommended by the editor of the Register, we should correct a slight mistake into which he seems to have fallen in reference to ourself. The Chart has not conceded, at any time since we have conducted it, that "it has no hopes of the passage of the Maine Law at the approaching session;" nor has it urged the passage of that law in terms. We ask for a prohibitory law—a law that shall effectually and forever dry up the fountains of intemperance in the State; but whether it shall be the Maine Law or not, we have left, and shall leave to our law-makers to determine. This course we have felt constrained to pursue, not, indeed, because we do not approve the Maine Law, both in letter and spirit, but because experience has taught us, that there are demagogues in our State low enough to appeal to the State pride of the ignorant against the adoption of the law of a neighboring State, and thus array a host of narrow prejudices against the best principle of the age. We are sorry to say, too, that even our Legislature has not heretofore been above the influence of such contemptible efforts to defeat the Right.

The editor presents the question, whether the people of the State are prepared for a prohibitory law or not, to his readers; and gives it as his opinion, that they are not. This is really an important question, well deserving our consideration. We do not intend to controvert the propriety of pondering this question well, before we act in this great matter; for the passage of the law, before its is well canvassed, might do great harm. In the first place, it might be a political death-knell to all who aided in its passage; but as they would die for a great principle, the adoption of which is essential to the well-being of society, political martyrdom would not after all be so bad but that it might be borne by lusty patriotism. Then, there would be the bright prospect and promise of rising again; for the beautiful language of the poet applies as well to the votaries of Truth as to Truth itself:

> "Truth crushed to earth will rise again—
> The eternal years of God are hers."

In the second place, other damage might follow. Those who are now made strong and rich by our infamous legislation on the subject of the liquor traffic, might behold the fountains of their ungodly gain dried up, and the channels of their corrupt prosperity laid bare, and be compelled to betake themselves to some honest pursuit. The haunts of drunkenness, disease, and crime, might be changed into the abodes of comfort, health, and honor. The jails might be emptied; the poor-house left tenantless; the gallows torn down; and a thousand other things equally honorable to the Christian people of Indiana driven from her borders. The trembling and bloated drunkard might no longer walk our streets, to the terror of the weak and the shame of all, nor die frozen in our alleys. Children might no longer cry for bread, and shiver in the cold for means their father had worse than thrown away. Wives and mothers might not drag out miserable lives, weeping over the wrecks, murdered joys, and withered hopes, as they now do all over the State. Certainly by the passage of a prohibitory law, a great change might follow in all these respects, before the meeting of another Legislature. Therefore, let us ponder well whether we are ready for it or not.

But, in all seriousness, we should like to know if submission to an evil ever prepared any people for a condition free from it, unless the evil itself was in its nature remedial? Will the drunkard be more easily disenthralled when he shall have descended in his downward and ruinous career for two years longer? Will the whisky interest in Indiana, when gorged and bloated with the unholy accumulations of two more years of license, be weaker or more ready to become Christianized than now? Will demagogues be less active, or fools less gullible, after the lapse of two years, if suffered to remain in statu quo during that period? If so, let it be set down that slavery is the proper school for training men to be free—that vice leads to virtue, and drunkenness to sobriety!

Even admitting, for the sake of the argument, that the proper law cannot be had at the ensuing session, shall we therefore fail to ask it? Is it in that way that we expect ultimately to succeed? Not thus have been achieved the triumphs of those who in all ages have pioneered the march of civilization. They have boldly asked what they deemed right, and failing to-day have renewed their demands on every succeeding day, until success crowned their efforts. It was thus that Wilberforce carried his views against the slave trade; thus that the great law reforms of England were effected; thus, that our independence was won, and our constitution obtained.—It is our duty to ask what is right—to offer no compromise with a system which is only evil and that continually; and to struggle on without intermission, until our demands are responded to by suitable prohibitory enactments.

We shall not, therefore, follow the suggestions of the Register, and ask that the Legislature will graciously refer the question to the people. If that body see proper to disregard the well-being of the State and their own highest fame, so much as to refuse our wishes, they are of course at liberty to provide for leaving the question to the people. We shall not say whether such a course is, in our opinion, worthy of enlightened legislators or not; but we do really think, that it is but another evasion of the great question of reform that is now pressing hard upon our politicians. It is not constitutional to enact the law, and then leave it to the people whether they will receive it; but the constitution admits of its being submitted to the people as an isolated question. So says the Register. The letter of the Constitution is thus left unharmed, but every school-boy in the State can perceive at a glance that its spirit is as much disregarded in the one case as in the other. It is but a polite method of "whipping the devil around the stump;" and we choose not to follow it. If "auld Clooty" mnst be followed, let those who choose to do so, do it openly and above board. It is decidedly more becoming and manly, than to do it in a sneaking way, and then deny that we do it at all.

Local Items.

☞ A most disgraceful affair took place in front of the miserable doggery in the frame house, on the corner west of Little's Hotel, on Saturday night the 4th inst. A large number of rowdies, supposed by the "sweet brogue," to be mostly Irish and Germans, quarrelled among themselves, and several blows were struck. Great "noise and confusion" ensued, and the quiet of the neighborhood was disturbed. If our officers would only look after the infamous establishment where they got their liquor; and institute a proper course of attention to it, the neighborhood might soon be relieved of such a nuisance for the future. Let them see to it.

☞ It was our misfortune to see a man on Sunday the 5th inst., brutalized by intoxicating liquors, staggering from one side of the pavement to the other, in front of the First Presbyterian Church. Several ladies and children were compelled to leave the pavement to avoid coming into collision with the poor creature. Of course a law that shall terminate such outrages by abolishing the murderous grocery system would restrain civil liberty, and meet with decided opposition at the hands of our free people. Hurra! for young America!

☞ We notice a new stone pavement in front of C. Garner's, of flag stone.—This is the first pave of the kind in the city.—Locomotive.

Cause why Mr. Garner has a stone pavement before any other person in the city: The whisky traffic pays better than any decent or honorable employment. But we doubt whether that pavement, broad as it is, is broad enough to hold the names of those who have died of the poison. the profits of which built it. Beautiful pavement that; but 'tis laid in human gore.

☞ A company of minstrels, under the direction of Mr. P. H. Seamon, will perform in this city next week.

We clip the above from the Locomotive. We hope our citizens will think of the many persons in the city who are in absolute want of the necessaries of life, before they bestow their money on a gang of strolling singers, remarkable for nothing so much as their impudence, and the absence of all the qualities that render human nature amiable. Thousands of dollars have been annually taken from our people by such cormorants, which might have been spent to much better profit in purchasing the means of mental improvement for themselves and children, or in dispensing the blessings of that charity which "never faileth." Shall another Winter witness the same folly?

Fill your Division Room.—Yes, Sons of Temperance, crowd your Division Rooms these long evenings. You have members enough, and if they would all turn out punctually to the meetings, each taking a warm heart with him, what ennobling counsels, what lofty resolves, what efficient action, would be the result.—N. Y. Organ.

Items of News.

☞ The New York Tribune of 20th inst., contains an article on the subject of building a Railroad from some point on the Mississippi river, to Sanfrancisco in California. It urges the great advantages to be derived by the United States from its construction, as the principal reason for its construction. Its practicability is regarded as settled; and its advantages as incalculable.

☞ The Normal and Model Schools of Toronto, Canada, were publically opened on Wednesday, the 24th ult. The buildings are spoken of as "large and commodious;" and are situated in the centre of eight acres of ground, designed for experimental purposes in Agriculture. It is to be regretted that the only obstacle seemingly now in the way of these excellent institutions, by which their complete success seems to be threatened, is religious bigotry and intolerance. "The True Witness," the organ of the Roman Catholics in Montreal, "holds the following language on the subject:

"We demand separate schools for our children, or else that we be not compelled to pay school rates. * * * True, this principle must lead to the breaking up of State-Schoolism altogether, and the introduction of the voluntary principle, but this is part of what we desire to see effected; not until State-Schoolism is broken, and entirely abolished can education be truly free, or delivered from the degrading shackles which "Jack in office" and his masters have imposed upon it, and still seek to retain."

Delirium Tremens.

Not a week passes in which one or more fellow-creatures do not die from this terrible disease in this city. Some of these cases are of painful interest; yet they produce but little sensation in the public mind. Last week, James Lynch, an Irishman, while under its influence, jumped overboard from one of our steamboats, and was drowned. He leaves a wife and three helpless children, destitute of money, and in a strange land without friends.

If there were fifty-two cases a year of hydrophobia in Cincinnati, all the dogs in the city would be slain without the benefit of clergy. More than twice that number have fallen victims to the bite of a serpent which is nourished and protected in more than 2,000 houses, for the express purpose of biting all who can be seduced to within its reach. Shall this serpent be destroyed? This is the Maine question. Who would not infinitely rather a dear relative would die of hydrophobia, than of delirium tremens; yet whose dear friend is safe in a city where there are two thousand vipers' nests? You cannot cross two squares without meeting some bloated wretch, in whose veins the fatal vice is not already doing its work of death upon the physical and intellectual man. How long, Oh Lord! how long shall these things be endured?—Cin. Organ.

A Temperance Meeting.

Question by the President—"Who goes for the Maine Law?

"I, says George Mayence, for it destroys the old license."

"I, says James Baker, for it pours out the liquor."

"I, says Tim Mintren, for it protects all the children."

"I, says Tom Morehouse, for it empties the poorhouse."

"I, says Charles Wilson, for it clears out the prison."

"I, says Jack Naylor, for it covers the sailor."

"I, says John Bungay, for it gives a good Sunday."

"I, says John Barnard, for there'll ne'er more be a drunkard."

"Three cheers," said the President, "for the Maine Law—the vote is unanimous."

How it Operates.

Said Hon. Neal Dow: "In one street in Portland there were four 'salooons,' nearly side by side; two of them are now clothing-stores, one is a temperance grocery store, and one is a store for the sale of clocks, in all their variety; thus illustrating the truth, that as men cease to spend their money for rum, they will buy more and better clothes and food, and will have the means to make all purchases necessary to the comfort of themselves and families.—The operation of the Maine Law, in Maine, demonstrates the truth of the declarations of temperance men, that poverty, pauperism and crime, result almost exclusively from the traffic in strong drinks; and at the end of five years, under the steady enforcement of this law, extreme poverty will be wholly unknown in the State, and pauperism and crime will almost entirely disappear."

All covet, all lose.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

Who can tell the Price?

"Eternal vigilence is said to be the price of liberty;" but who can tell the price of immortal souls that have been destroyed, directly and indirectly, through the agency and influence of the liquor traffic?—Who can tell the price of the groans and lamentations of the dying drunkard? Who can tell the price of the tears which have fallen from the mother's eye? Who can tell the amount of suffering which has been endured by innocent and helpless children? Who can tell the price of blasted hopes, of ruined character, of desolated homes, of wasted fortunes? Who can tell the costs of criminal prosecutions in this State for the last year, caused by the liquor traffic? Who can tell how many drunkards have been manufactured during the past year, and how many young men have formed intemperate habits during the same time? Who can tell how many drunkards have been KILLED in this State during the last year; how many hearts have been broken?

Citizens of Indiana, these are important questions—questions which should come home to you with great force and power. It is for you to decide, whether the blood and soul damning system of selling ruin, which has been so long under your sanction and guardianship, shall be continued or checked. Ye sovereigns of Indiana, are you willing to have your garments stained with the blood of drunkards still another year? or will you arise in your majesty and strength and wash away the stain? Do you not believe you are accountable to society, to your country, and to your God, for the manner in which you exert your influence? You will be held responsible if you do not put forth all your exertions this winter, for the purpose of obtaining a stringent and wholesome law, to stop the liquor traffic.

There are many persons who do not feel concerned about the cause of temperance, because they have no relations given to intemperate habits; yet they should remember that other persons have intimate and warm friends who are fast traveling to an infamous grave. And this thought should stimulate the indifferent to active vigilence in the great moral reform.

Let us muster our forces once more and go forth to do battle for the right, and endeavor to save our State from the desolations of rum! Let us have for our motto, "Eternal Vigilence," and our efforts will be effectual in sweeping from our midst the destroyer of human life. We verily believe that the day is not far distant when the melodious notes of Indiana's proud sons and daughters shall ascend up and mingle with the songs of those, who have already been redeemed from under the power and dominion of Bacchus in the eastern part of this great republic.

Indianapolis, Dec. 8. J. C. B.

Rum, the Parent of Crime.

A recent grand jury in New York made a presentment which is well calculated to make people think seriously on the policy of prohibiting the liquor traffic by law.—In their report, the following passage occurs:

"From the beginning to the end of the session, in every part of their duties, whether examining charges for crimes, or looking upon the physical and moral ruins at Bellevue Hospital, or those of Blackwell's Island, or upon the hundreds of little ones without a natural protector at Randall's Island—the Grand Inquest have had most powerfully impressed on their minds the conviction, that INTEMPERANCE is the fruitful source of most of the crimes and miseries of our city."

This presentment is signed by fifteen of the jurors, including one liquor-seller. A protest against it was drawn up and signed by the other five, four of whom are liquor sellers, and the other a ship-builder, in which they assert that no further law is required by the Legislature to reach and correct the evil complained of. Of course, it is natural for these four men to stand up for their own business; and it is certainly gratifying to see one liquor-seller out of five on a grand jury, testifying to the fact that "intemperance is the fruitful source of most of the crimes and miseries of the city." He, above all other men, ought to know best.

As a further evidence of the manner in which Rum rules municipal as well as State politics, we quote the following startling statement from the presentment:

"And what are those who have charge of our municipal affairs doing in reference to this frightful evil? Let the following statement auswer:

"In April last, His Honor the Mayor issued an order requiring the different Captains of Police to ascertain and report the character of every place within their respective districts where intoxicating liquors were sold, and whether they were kept open for business on the Sabbath.

"This was with a view to furnish data for the aid and guidance of the Aldermen and Assistants, who were to sit in May as Commissioners of Excise. The reports of some of the Captains were full, while others seemed to have paid little or no attention to the requirement. Large numbers of places were designated in these reports as 'Disorderly,' 'Very Disorderly,' 'Very Bad,' 'Resort of Idle and Rowdy Boys,' 'Resort of Prostitutes and Thieves,' 'Very Disorderly, especially on Sundays, and frequent fightings,' 'Balls and Dancing on Sundays,' 'Low House of Prostitution,' 'Pits for Dog Fights,' 'Resort for Black and White Prostitutes,' 'Band of Music and Dancing on Sundays,' &c.

"These reports, which are still in the Mayor's office, were placed before the Aldermen and Assistants, when renewed licenses were asked for, and which, to the disgrace of these men and the shame of the city, were seldom refused.

"In one ward there were licensed under these circumstances, two described as 'Resort for Prostitutes,' six 'Resorts for Prostitutes and Thieves,' one 'Resort for Black and White Prostitutes,' one 'Resort for Black and White Thieves,' five 'Houses of Prostitution,' one 'Resort for Thieves and Loafers,' three 'Keeps Women.' In another ward were licensed 'Resort for Short Boys and Thieves,' 'Resort for Black Thieves,' &c. In another ward one was licensed reported 'Disorderly, sold liquor to the boy that died,' (a most shocking case, as the court will remember, although the man was not indicted for the crime,) together with fifteen others of the worst character. In another ward, the number of houses of the same general character, was truly appalling; and the same may be said, to a greater or less extent, of nearly every ward in the city. It is well known, too, that there are several hundred rum-shops open for business in our city on the Sabbath, contrary to express statute, and yet no notice is taken of the fact, unless it may be in the way of encouragement and approval.

"The Grand Inquest cannot learn that any licenses have been revoked in consequence of the frequent riots and bloodshed which have occurred in some of these dens. In one case, a Captain of Police made such a representation concerning one of the houses in his District, as to cause the Mayor to send for the Alderman and Assistant, and to insist that the license be revoked, and it was revoked; but within one week, the Commissioners, without the concurrence of the Mayor, rescinded the order, and the license was restored. The Commissioners of Excise derive their powers from a State law, and the Grand Inquest can think of nothing so likely to touch the moral sense of such men as for the Legislature so to amend the act as to make such a glaring and direful abuse of their trust as has just been described, and as was most fully proved, a felony, and punishable as such."

It is time, indeed, for grand juries to take the liquor business in hand, when such infamous revelations as the above are made from official records. Does anybody pretend to say that such a system can be "regulated," or that anything short of prohibition can reform the monstrous evil?—Temperance Battery.

The Late Slaves.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemmon have been bountifully paid for their slaves, which became free by being transferred by their owners from a Slave to a Free State. Our down town merchants have raised $5,240 to compensate them for two boys, two women, and four infants, which certainly is more than they would have brought in any slave mart in the world. The slaves are free, the Lemmons are at least $2,000 richer for their loss, and our jobbers who gave the money will probably get it all back in the increase of their Southern business—so it is a good job all around. So let us all rejoice that it is all over.

But these poor untaught, destitute women, and helpless children, let us try to do something for them. The money raised to pay for them has gone into the pockets of others. Though valued at $5,000, they are as poor as though adjudged worthless. A hard winter is before us, and they need clothes, shelter, and food. Who will help give them a lift on the highway of responsible and independent life?

Friends of the wronged and needy! we can promise you no earthly return of the money you may give to these poor women and children. Their kinsmen have no patronage to bestow, for though they produce nearly all the cotton, rice, tobacco, and sugar, made in this country, they have little or none of it to sell, and very little of the proceeds, save coarse clothes and the plainest food doled out to them by retail. But the God of the wretched and the fatherless looks down upon them with infinite regard, and they are very probably as precious in His eyes as so many Lemmons and Lemmon-aiders who live indolently and comfortably out of the sweat and toil of the ignorant and lowly. Who will give $10, or $5, or even $1, for the relief and sustenance of these poor people? We will begin the list with $20; but let no one be delicate about going higher, for we shall take no sort of offence at it, even though it be swelled to $50. Do let us try to raise them $500 to-day, so that they may have it for a Thanksgiving present to-morrow.—New York Tribune, Nov. 24th.

MEMORIAL.

ADOPTED BY THE

GRAND DIVISION OF THE SONS OF TEMPERANCE,

AND THE

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Indiana:

The undersigned Citizens of Indiana, believing that the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits, to be used as a beverage, is a great moral, social, and political evil, pray you to prohibit the same.

The Constitutionality of the Maine Liquor Law.

Chief Justice Taney said: "If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, I see nothing in the constitution to prevent it from regulating and restraining the traffic, or from prohibiting it altogether."

Mr. Justice McLean said: "No person can introduce into a community malignant diseases, or anything which contaminates its morals, or endangers its safety."

Mr. Justice Catron said: "If the State has the power of restraint by licenses to any extent, she has the discretionary power to judge of its limit, and may go to the length of prohibiting sales altogether."

Mr. Justice Daniel said of imports that are "cleared of all control of the government:" "They are like all other property of the citizen, whether owned by the importer or his vendee, or may have been purchased by cargo, package, bale, piece, or yard, or by hogsheads, casks, or bottles." In answering the argument that the importer purchases the right to sell when he pays duties to the government, Mr. Justice Daniel continues to say: "No such right is purchased by the importer; he cannot purchase from the government that which it could not insure to him, a sale independently of the laws and policy of the State."

And Mr. Justice Grier said: "It is not necessary to array the appalling statistics of misery, pauperism, and crime, which have their origin in the use and abuse of ardent spirits. The police power, which is exclusively in the States, is alone competent to the correction of these great evils, and all measures of restraint or prohibition necessary to effect the purpose, are within the scope of that authority."

Thus all the Judges of the United States Supreme Court re-affirmed and corroborated the decisions of each subordinate State court, that the entire control of the sale of intoxicating drinks is within the legitimate province of the State Legislature. And this control is not limited to any mere regulations or partial restrictions, but extends to the entire prohibition, whenever the Legislature of any State thinks such legislation essential to public welfare.—Exchange.

The Prince of Criminals.

I am a criminal if I introduce into my neighborhood, anything which impairs the health of my fellow citizens.

Or if I do anything to corrupt the morals of society.

Or if I destroy the character or the life of a human being.

Or if I disturb the public peace.

Or if I take my neighbor's property without returning an equivalent for it.

Or if I invade the family circle, and weaken or destroy the relations of husband and wife, parent and child.

Or if I knowingly and wantonly expose my neighbor's house to the torch of an incendiary.

Or if I encourage licentiousness and debauchery.

Or if I nerve the arm of the highway robber.

Or if I sharpen the knife of the assassin.

If I am a liquor seller I do all of these things, and am therefore fairly entitled to the honorable appellation of the "Prince of criminals."—Organ of Temperonce Reform.

Russian Market for Wives.

On Whitsuntide afternoon, there are to be seen in the summer gardens of St. Petersburgh, the daughters of the middle class, ranged in long rows, dressed in their best, and often bedecked in costly jewels. Matrimony is the object of the display.—Young bachelors walk up and down the line of damsels, critically inspecting them as they pass. Should their eye indicate that they have made a choice, a match-making friend of the young lady's steps out of the rear rank, joins the would-be wooer, informing him of the girl's circumstances, of her family, dowry, of her housewifery qualities, &c., and obtains from him similar information concerning himself. Should they come to an understanding, the match-maker conducts her candidate to the mother, who introduces him to her daughter, invites him to her house, and a wedding is the most usual result of the acquaintance thus commenced. Some Englishmen may smile at this fact, but the cynical will declare that it is in reality by no means peculiar to Russia.—Ex. paper.

A wise man begins in the end, a fool ends in the beginning.

Statistics.

We give below the statistics of the rum traffic in the city of Trenton. The estimates are believed to be very nearly correct, and present an array of facts of startling import.

They should be carefully considered by tax-payers, and indeed by all who feel an interest in the real welfare of the community.

Considering the vast amount of evil engendered by the business, and that it has no redeeming quality whatever; and considering also its tendency to increase and develop most fearfully its malignant and pestiferous influence, the longer it is undisturbed, we urge our readers to reflect whether it is not a solemn duty enjoined on those who love their fellow men, to labor for its speedy overthrow.

There are at present within the limits of the city of Trenton, 15 places where rum is sold by wholesale; 28 licensed groggeries; 79 unlicensed, selling porter, ale, and strong drinks secretly: making 122 places where inducements are held out for men and youth to become drunkards—a number greater than all the butchers, bakers, and grocers, in a population of nearly 12,000!

Including the families and attendants, it is a low estimate to put down five persons to each establishment. This would make the number engaged in and dependent upon this traffic, in this city, 610—more than are engaged in any other single branch of business.

To support these 122 families will require $300 each annually—making altogether the sum of $16,300 for the support of a class of persons who render no equivalent whatever to the community, but who are so many leeches fastened upon the actual labor and industry of the citizens. Is it any wonder that we occasionally complain of "hard times?"

The 15 wholesale establishments sell an average amount of $20 a day, making.....	$375 00
The 28 licensed groggeries retail an average amount of $15 a day, making.....	420 00
The 79 unlicensed groggeries retail an average amount of $5 a day, making.....	395 00
Which summed up, makes a day's operation in the rum traffic, in this city.....	$1190 00

$7,140 a week, not including Sunday, and $371,280 a year! This appears to be almost incredible, and yet a little investigation will show that the estimates are below the mark.

THE POWER OF ORGANIZATION.—Individual efforts, when brought to bear in an organization, produce wonderful effects, and is forcibly illustrated in the history of the Sons of Temperance. On the 29th of September, 1842, our Order was commenced with sixteen members. At the end of the first year, this number had swelled to 1,500; at the summing up of the second year to 4,000; third year to 17,000! fourth year to 40,000!! and fifth year to 125,000!!! and now for the year 1852, we roll up as contributing members 230,000. This is the result of association—of organized effort. Brother, what have you done to swell this vast ocean? Roll on—roll on the mighty ball!—Southern Organ.

WHAT A CURSE!—The Grand Jury of New York city, in a recent presentment, informs us that during the year 1851, the number of commitments to the city prison amounted to 21,792; and that of this number 19,453 were intemperate persons. We quote a single passage from this presentment: "Looking at the statistics of the city prison, for the year 1851, we find that the most frightful cause of crime is the prevalence of intemperance. Nine-tenths of the commitments for the year were of intemperate persons; and of the remaining tenth, we are assured on good authority, a large proportion can be traced to the same cause."

A GREAT FACT FOR TEETOTAL LECTURERS.—"We can prove," says Baron Liebig, "with mathematical certainty, that as much flour or meal as can lie on the point of a table-knife is more nutritious than five measures (about eight or ten quarts!) of the best Bavarian beer; that a person who is able daily to consume that amount of beer obtains from it in a whole year in the most favorable case, exactly the amount of nutritive constituents which is contained in a five pound loaf of bread, or three pounds of flesh."—Letters on Chemistry.

Angry men seldom want woe.

Choice Gems.

A young man negligent—an old man necessitous.

All fools are not knaves, but all knaves are fools.

All that's said in the parlor should not be heard in the hall.

An Atheist has got one point beyond the devils, for they believe and tremble.

An hypocrite pays tribute to God, only that he may impose upon men.

An intemperate patient makes a cruel doctor.

An obedient wife commands her husband.

As good do nothing as to no purpose.

As a wise child maketh a happy father, so a wise father maketh a happy child.

As you are never sure of an hour, never squander away a minute.

Adversity flattereth no man.

Ask thy purse what thou shouldst buy.

At the gate which suspicion enters, love goes out.

A prudent woman is in the same class of honor as a wise man.

A liar is a hector towards God, and a coward towards men.

A spare and simple diet contributes to the prolongation of life.

A solitary life has no charms for an ambitious mind.

All virtues are in agreement; all vices are at variance.

Avarice is always poor, but poor by her own fault.

A wise man makes all his passions subservient to his reason.

Anger begins with folly, and ends with repentance.

Circular.

A State Temperance Convention will be held in the city of Indianapolis on Wednesday the 12th day of January, 1853.

All the friends of this great Reform—all the foes of that liquid poison which is yet drowning the intellects, darkening the hopes, desolating the homes and destroying the souls of thousands, are invited to come.

Yours in hope and effort for a prohibitory law.

EDWARD R. AMES,
CALVIN FLETCHER,
W. HANNAMAN,
W. C. THOMPSON,
J. R. OSGOOD,
CLEMENT E. BABB,
State Central Committee.

Acknowledgments

Hon. G. P. Buell, our worthy Representative in the next Legislature, hands us 75 cents for the Chart for one year.

Mr. T. B. Wilson, Kenawa, Ky., by the hand of Bro. D. B. Culley, hands us 75 cents for the Chart.

Mr. John Ford, by the hand of Mr. Donovan, hands us 75 cents for the Chart, for the use of his establishment under the "Wright House." We hope he will place it in the hands of each of his customers, and request him to read it before he suffers him to drink any of his poisonous liquids. This would, perhaps, lessen his gains, but he will sleep better after doing so.

Mr. Donovan hands us 25 cents for his son at Indianapolis.

DIED, on the 26th of November, 1852, at the residence of her Father, in Crown Point, Ind., MARIA L. BRAGG, in the 18th year of her age. She was a member of the Baptist Church in this place—united herself last winter. As parents, brothers, and sisterss, we mourn her loss, but we sorrow not, as those that have no hope; we trust she still lives in the land of the blest.

Her funeral was attended by a large circle of weeping friends; and a sermon was preached by the Rev. F. L. Hunt, from Hosea, 13: 14.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)....	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P., that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

The Age of Steam and Lightning!
MORRELL'S Eagle Book Works, 196 Fulton St., N. Y. Warehouse and Salesroom 25 Park Row.
BLANK BOOKS.

BLANK BOOKS, in greater variety and at lower prices than at any other Establishment in the country. Five Thousand Reams of manufactured Account Books constantly on hand, adapted to every market in the Union.

Half-bound Caps, per quire, 9 to 18 cents; Full bound, 15 to 22; and, in finer bindings, 25 to 50; Demys, Russia Bindings, 50 cents to $1 00; Medium Royal, and Super Royal Books in proportion

A New Feature.—All the Books furnished by this Establishment, which are 25 cents per quire and upwards, are beautifully PAGED, by a newly invented process, without charge Memorandum Books of all kinds. Wholesale and Retail Dealers supplied in any quantity, for cash or approved credit.

NEW MISCELLANY.

The Cheapest and Best of its Price yet Published.

A. MORRELL will issue every month, a volume of 150 pages of Choice Reading, useful and entertaining, by the best writers. Can be mailed to any part of the Union at Magazine postage. Single subscribers $1 50 per year; Four Subscribers for $5; and Ten Copies sent to one address for $10; being only One Dollar per year. All payments in advance.—Orders and Communications may be addressed to the office of publication, No. 7, Theatre Alley, or to the publisher, ARTHUR MORRELL, aug 11 25 Park Row, New York.

Divisions who wish Constitutions, or any other kind of printing done with neatness and dispatch, we would recommend them to Bro. Ohr. Bro. O is a practical printer, and a member of the Grand Division. C WOODWARD, G. S.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait in the Athenæum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq, the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq, after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 0–3m

Local and Traveling Agents Wanted.

FOR popular and useful Books just published—CALIFORNIA ILLUSTRATED, including a Description of the Panama and Nicaragua Routes, with 48 superb Tinted Lithographs, 234 pages, 8 vo Price $2. This work, by J. M. Letts, has been adjudged by the unanimous voice of the press to be the most elaborate, practical and intensely interesting volume that has yet been written upon this golden theme. Since the publication of Steven's Journal of Travels, no work has appeared that has created such a thrilling sensation. It is pre-eminently practical, and is interspersed with incident of the most amusing character. In the language of one of the city editorials, "it is a perfect daguerreotype of California, taken by the light of a noon-day sun." Also, Dr. Beach's great work on Medicine, The American Practice and Family Physician, 800 pages, 200 engravings, 8 vo. sheep. Price $5. Dr. Beach is at the head of the eclectic practice in this country.—Such was the demand, that eighteen thousand copies of this work were printed in one edition. Also, Dr. C. D. Hammond's work on the same principles of practice, Medical Information for the Million, or True Guide to Health, 12 mo, cloth, 528 pages, price $1 50 cloth, $1 paper covers, 4th thousand—Also, Woman in her Various Relations; containing practical rules for American Females, for their conduct in the detail of every domestic duty. Royal 18 mo.; red cloth, illustrated; 324 pages; price 63 cents. This work should be in the hands of every lady especially the young Such is its popularity that nearly three thousand copies have been sold in the region of New York alone within a very few months. Also a new and very useful article of Stationery for the preservation of valuable papers, &c., needed for reference, such as letters, invoices, &c. Its form is that of a scrap book, with leaves prepared for the reception of the article to be filed, thus superceding, with many advantages, the practice of binding. The retail prices as follows:

IMPROVED ADHESIVE LETTER, INVOICE AND MUSIC FILE.

Size.	Thickness.	Single.	Doz or more.
Cap,	250 leaves	$1 00	$9 00
Packet Post,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Letter,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Cap,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Packet Post,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Letter,	500 do	1 50	9 00
Bill,	500 do	1 00	9 00
Music,	80 do	1 00
Do half mor clo s	80 do	1 25
Do hf tur mor do	80 do	1 50

N. B.—Orders for peculiar sizes or styles of binding filled with despatch.

Special contracts made for large lots.

Orders for Books above advertised, with cash or postage stamps accompanying, will be promptly filled, prepaid to any part of the United States.

Address, ROBERT T. YOUNG,
(Successor to Wm. Holdrege,) No. 140, Fulton Street, New York.

Editors giving this advertisement two or three insertions entire, will be entitled to a copy of California Illustrated. nov 10–3w

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.
Manufacturers of
Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,
Of Every Size and Description,
Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.
CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.
Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.
Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2.00	per week,
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,
Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
Wm. Burnet, Jno. N Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11–1y

To Persons out of Employment!
BOOK AGENTS WANTED,
To Canvass for
New Pictorial, Standard, Historical, and Religious Works.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young persons of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid.

ROBERT SEARS, Puelisher,
sep 1 3m 181 William Street, New York.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

ATTENTION is respectfully solicited to the following facts and statements in regard to the above Agency;

Indianapolis being the centre and Capital of the State, accessible from all parts by means of the numerous railroads which concentrate within her borders—filled constantly with strangers from all parts of the country—presents one of the most available cities in the West, for the successful carrying out an Agency, such as below described:

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

To give efficiency to this most important branch of the Agency, the services of an energetic and responsible Attorney in each county of the State has been secured. This, in connection with the fact that the undersigned is himself a practical Lawyer, and has had several years' experience in this branch of the Agency in Ohio, affords a full guarantee that all business in this department will be attended to with fidelity and dispatch.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

To give efficiency to this branch of the Agency, the services of a distinguished and responsible Attorney and Counsellor, resident at Washington, and experienced in this department, has been secured

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Indianapolis, Ind.

Geo. Taylor, Esq., Attorney and Counsellor at Law, is connected with, and authorized to transact any business of the above agency. Office as above.

REFER TO

Hon. Isaac Blackford, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.
Hon. Samuel E. Perkins, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.
Hon Wm. J. Brown; Editor of State Sentinel.
John D. Defrees, Esq., Editor of State Journal.
Messrs. Ellis & Spann, Editors of Indiana Statesman.
Messrs. Elder & Harkness, Editors of The Locomotive.
R. R. Underhill, Esq.
Wm. Sheets, Esq.
C. B. Davis, Esq.

American and Foreign Agency,
CITY OF WASHINGTON, D. C.
Under the direction of AARON H. PALMER, Counsellor of the Supreme Court of the U. States.

The undersigned has been duly appointed sole Agent for Indiana of the above Agency, (the best in the Union,) and will give his prompt and faithful attention to all business confided to his personal management, requiring to be transacted in this State or elsewhere in the United States, or any part of the commercial world, through the principal office at Washington. W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
aug 11–1y Indianapolis, Ind.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.
CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,
Dealers in all kinds of
Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,
WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
DEALER IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps &c.
Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN
Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,
North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally june30 tf

A REGISTER

HAS been opened at the Real Estate and General Agency Office, Indianapolis, in which all persons can enter property for sale, with full description, price per acre, &c., without charge, (excepting disbursements for advertising,) unless a sale effected. Said Register will be at all times open to public inspection, and the advantage thus offered to owners of real estate for the prompt disposal of their property is far superior to all others.

Also, a Register for renting property has been opened under the same regulations as the above.
aug 11–1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Booksellers and Stationers,
No. 12, Washington Street,
june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.
C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

To Cure a Cold, with Headache and Soreness of the Body, take the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, and wrap up warm, to sweat during the night.

For a Cold and Cough, take it morning, noon, and evening, according to directions on the bottle, and the difficulty will soon be removed. None will long suffer from this trouble when they find it can be so readily cured. Persons afflicted with a seated cough, which breaks them of their rest at night, will find, by taking the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, they may be sure of sound, unbroken sleep, and consequently refreshing rest. Great relief from suffering, and an ultimate cure, is afforded to thousands who are thus afflicted, by this invaluable remedy.

From its agreeable effect in these cases, many find themselves unwilling to forego its use when the necessity for it has ceased.

From two eminent Physicians in

Fayetteville, Tenn., April 16th, 1851.

Sir:—We have given your Cherry Pectoral an extensive trial in our practice, and find it to surpass every other remedy we have for curing affections of the respiratory organs

DRS. DIEMER & HAMPTON.

To Singers and Public Speakers this remedy is invaluable, as by its action on the throat and lungs, when taken in small quantities, it removes all hoarseness in a few hours, and wonderfully increases the power and flexibility of voice.

Asthma is generally much relieved, and often wholly cured by Cherry Pectoral. But there are some cases so obstinate as to yield entirely to no medicine. Cherry Pectoral will cure them, if they can be cured.

Bronchitis, or irritation of the throat and upper portion of the lungs, may be cured by taking Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses. The uncomfortable oppression is soon relieved.

Rev. Dr. Lansing, of Brooklyn, New York, states: "I have seen the Cherry Pectoral cure such cases of Asthma and Bronchitis as leads me to beleive it can rarely fail to cure those diseases."

For Croup. Give an emetic of antimony, to be followed by large and frequent doses of the Cherry Pectoral, until it subdues the disease. If taken in season, it will not fail to cure.

Whooping Cough may be broken up and soon cured by the use of Cherry Pectoral

The Influenza is speedily removed by this remedy. Numerous instances have been noticed where whole families were protected from any serious consequences, while their neighbors, without the Cherry Pectoral, were suffering from the disease.

Salem, Ohio, June 11th, 1851.

Doct. J. C. Ayer:—I write to inform you of the truly remarkable effects of your Cherry Pectoral in this place, and in my own family. One of my daughters was completely cured in three days of a dreadful Whooping Cough, by taking it. Dr. Means, one of our very best physicians freely states that he considers it the best remedy we have for pulmonary diseases and that he has cured more cases of Croup with it, than any other medicine he ever administered.

Our clergyman of the Baptist Church says that during the run of Influenza here this season, he has seen cures from your medicine, he could scarcely have believed without seeing.

Yours respectfully, J. D. SINCLAIR,
Deputy Postmaster.

From the distinguished Professor of Chemistry and Materia Medica, Bowdoin College.

I have found the Cherry Pectoral, as its ingredients show, a powerful remedy for colds, and coughs, and pulmonary diseases. P. Cleveland, M. D.

Brunswick, Me., Feb. 5, 1847.

Dr. Valentine Mott, the widely celebrated Professor of Surgery in the Medical College, New York City, says:

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of 'Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,' which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

Cures of severe diseases upon the Lungs have been affected by Cherry Pectoral in such extreme cases as warrant the belief that a remedy has at length been found that can be depended on to cure the Coughs, Colds and Consumption which carry from our midst thousands every year. It is indeed a medicine to which the afflicted can look with confidence for relief, and they should not fail to avail themselves of it.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. oct. 6 3m

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852 ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

T. M. Nichols. J. F. Johnston.
NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.
june30 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1852. NO. 26.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.
Cuts double the above rates.
☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.
☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

☞ The circumstances which induced the writer of the following most touching and thrilling lines are as follows: A young lady was in the habit of writing for the Philadelphia Ledger on the subject of temperance. Her writing was so full of pathos, and evinced such deep emotion of soul, that a friend of hers accused her of being a maniac on the subject of temperance, whereupon she wrote the following lines:

Go feel what I have felt,
Go bear what I have borne,
Sink 'neath the blow a father dealt,
And the cold world's proud scorn;
Then suffer on from year to year,
Thy sole relief the scorching tear.

Go, kneel as I have knelt,
Implore, beseech and pray:
Strive the besotted heart to melt,
The downward course to stay,
Be dashed with bitter curse aside,
Your prayers burlesqued, your tears defied.

Go weep as I have wept
O'er a loved father's fall,
See every promised blessing swept,
Youth's sweetness turned to gall,
Life's fading flowers strewed all the way,
That brought me up to woman's day.

Go see what I have seen,
Behold the strong man bowed,
With gnashing teeth—lips bathed in blood,
And cold and livid brows;
Go catch his withering glance, and see
There mirrored, his soul's misery.

Go to thy mother's side,
And her crushed bosom cheer,
Thy own deep anguish hide,
Wipe from her cheek the bitter tear,
Mark her worn frame and withered brow,
The gray that streaks her dark hair now;
With fading frame and trembling limb,
And trace the ruin back to him,
Whose plighted faith, in early youth,
Promis'd eternal love and truth,
But who, forsworn, hath yielded up
That promise to the cursed cup;
And let her down, through love and light,
And all that made her prospects bright;
And chained her there, 'mid want and strife
The lowly thing a drunkard's wife;
And stamp'd on childhood's brow so mild,
That withering blight, the drunkard's child!

Go hear, and feel, and see, and know,
All that my soul hath felt and known;
Then look upon the wine cup's glow,
See if its beauty can atone;
Think of its flavor you will try,
When all proclaim, 'tis drink and die!

Tell me I hate the bowl,
Hate is a feeble word;
I loath, abhor,—my very soul
With strong disgust is stirr'd
When I see, or hear, or tell,
Of the dark beverage of hell!

MISCELLANEOUS.

Woman, Behold thy Son!

BY MRS. H. E. B. STOWE.

The golden rays of a summer afternoon were streaming through the windows of a private apartment where everything was the picture of orderly repose. Gentle and noiselessly it glides, gilding the glossy old chairs polished by years of care, fluttering with flickering gleam on the book-cases by the fire and antique China vases on the mantle, and even coquetting with sparkles of fanciful gayety over the face of the perpendicular sombre old clock, which though at times almost coaxed to the verge of a smile, still continued its inevitable tick as for a century before.

On the hearth lay outstretched a graat lazy-looking Maltese cat, evidently enjoying the golden beams that fell upon his sober sides, and sleepily opening and shutting his great green eyes, as if lost in luxuriant contemplation.

But the most characteristic figure in the whole picture, was that of an aged woman, who sat quietly rocking to and fro in a great chair, by the side of a large round table covered with books. There was a quiet beauty in that placid face—that silvery hair brushed neatly under the snowy border of the cap. Every line in that furrowed face told some tale of sorrow long assuaged and passions hushed to rest; as on the calm ocean shore the golden-furrowed sand show traces of storms and fluctuations long past.

On the round green-covered table beside her, lay the quiet companion of her age, the large Bible, whose pages, like the gates of the celestial city, were not shut all day, a few old standard books, and the pleasant rippling knitting, whose dreamy, irresponsible monotony is the best of music.

A fair girlish form was seated by the table; the dress bonnet had fallen back on her shoulders, the soft cheeks were suffused and earnest, the long lashes and veiled eyes were eloquent of subdued feelings as she read aloud from the letter in her hand. It was from "our Harry," a name to both of them comprising all that was dear and valued on earth, for he was "the only son of his mother, and she was a widow," yet he had not been always an only one; flower after flower on the tree of her life had bloomed and died, and gradually as waters cut off from many channels, the streams of love had concentrated in this last and only one.

And in truth Harry Sargeant was all that a mother might desire or be proud of. Generous, high-minded, witty, and talented, and with a strong and noble physical development, he seemed born to command the love of a woman. The only trouble with him was, in common parlance, that he was too clever a fellow; he was too impressible, too versatile, too attractive, and too much in demand for his own good.—He always drew company about him as honey does flies, and was indispensable everywhere and to everybody; and it needs a steady head and firm nerves for such a one to escape ruin.

Harry's course in college, though brilliant in scholarship, had been critical and perilous. He was a decided favorite with the faculty and students, yet it required a great deal of hard working and adroit management on the part of his instructors to bring him through without any infringement of college laws and proprieties; not that he ever meant the least harm in his life, but that some extra generous impulse, some Quixotic generosity, was always tumbling him neck and heels into somebody's scrapes, and making him part and parcel in every piece of mischief that was going on.

With all this premised, there is no need to say that Harry was an especial favorite with the ladies; in truth, it was a confessed fact among his acquaintances, that whereas dozens of credible, respectable, well-to-do young men, might besiege female hearts with all proper formality, waiting at the gates, and watching at the posts of the doors in vain, yet before him all gates and passages seemed to fly open of their own accord; nevertheless there was in his native village one quiet maiden, who only held in her hand the key that could unlock his heart in return, and carried silently in her heart the spell that could fetter that brilliant, restless spirit; and she it was of the thoughtful brow and down-cast eyes, whom we saw in our picture bending over the letter with his mother.

That mother Harry loved to idolatry.—She was in his mind an impersonification of all that was lovely in womanhood, hallowed and sainted by age, by wisdom, by sorrow, and his love for her was a beautiful union of protective tenderness with veneration, and to his Ellen it seemed the best and most sacred evidence of the nobleness of his nature, and the worth of the heart which he had pledged to her.

Nevertheless, there was danger overhanging the heads of the three—a little cloud, not bigger than a man's hand, rising in the horizon of their hopes, yet destined to burst upon them dark and dreadful in a future day.

In those scenes of college where Harry had been so indispensable, the bright poetic wine cup had freely circulated, and often amid the flush of conversation and the general excitement of the hour, he had drank freer and deeper than was best.—He said, it is true, that he cared nothing for it, that it never affected him, and all of those things that young men always say, when the cup of Circe is beginning its work with them. Friends were annoyed, became anxious, remonstrated, but he laughed at their fears, and insisted on knowing himself best. At last, with a sudden start and shiver of his moral nature, he awoke to a dreadful perception of his danger, and resolved on decided and determinate resistance.

During this period he came to Cincinnati to establish himself in business, and as at this time the temperance reformation was in the full tide of success there, he found everything to strengthen his resolution; temperance meetings and speeches were all the mode; young men of the first standing were its patrons and supporters; wine was quite in the vocative, and seemed really in danger of being voted out of society. In such a state of affairs, to seize a temperance pledge and keep it, became an easy thing; tempation was scarce presented or felt—he was offered the glass in no circle, met its attraction nowhere, and flattered himself that he had escaped so great danger so easily and so completely.

His usual fortune of social popularity following him, and his visiting circle became full as large and importunate as a young man, with anything else to do, need desire. He was diligent in his application to business, began to be mentioned with approbation by the magnates as a rising young man, and had prospects daily nearing of competence and home, and all that man desires: visions, alas! never to be realized.

For, after awhile, the tide that had risen so high began perceptibly to decline. Men that had made eloquent speeches on temperance had other things to look to; fastidious persons thought that matters had been carried too far, and ladies declared that it was old and threadbare, and getting to be cant and stuff, and the ever ready wine-cup was gliding back into many a circle, as if on sober second thoughts the community was convinced that it was unjustly belied.

There is no point in the history of reform, either in communities or individuals, so dangerous as that where danger seems entirely past. As long as a man thinks his health failing, he watches, he diets, and will undergo the most heroic self-denial; but let him once set himself down as cured, and how readily does he fall back into one self-indulgent habit after another, all tending to ruin everything that he has done before.

So in communities. Let intemperance rage, and young men go to ruin by dozens, and the very evil inspires the remedy; but when the trumpet has been sounded, and the battle set in array, the victory only said and sung in speeches and newspaper paragraphs, in temperance odes and processions, then comes the return wave—people cry enough, the community, vastly satisfied, lies down to sleep on its laurels, and then comes the hour of danger.

But let not the man who has once been swept down the hill of intemperate excitement almost to the verge of ruin, dream of any security for him. He is like one who has awakened in the rapids of the Niagara, and with straining oar and mild prayers to heaven, forced his boat upward into smoother water, where the drift of the current seems to cease, and the banks smile, and all looks beautiful, and weary from rowing, lays by his oars to rest and dream; he knows not that under that smooth water still glides a current, that, while he dreams, is imperceptibly but surely hurrying him back whence there is no return.

Harry was just in this perilous point; he viewed danger as long past, his self-confidence was fully restored, and in his security he began to neglect those lighter outworks of caution which he must still guard who does not mean at last to surrender the citadel.

PART II.

"Now, girls and boys," said Mrs. G. to her sons and daughters, who were sitting around a centre-table covered with notes of invitation, and all the et-ceteras of a party, "what shall we have on Friday night? Tea, coffee, lemonade?—wine, of course not."

"And why not, mamma?" said the young ladies; "the people are beginning to have it; they had wine at Mrs. A.'s and Mrs. M.'s."

"Well, your papa thinks it won't do; the boys are members of the Temperance Society, and I don't think, girls, it will do myself."

There are a good many persons, by-the-bye, who always view moral questions in this style of phraseology; not what is right, but what will "do."

The girls made an appropriate reply to this view of the subject, by showing that Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. had done the thing, and nobody seemed to make any talk.

The boys, who thus far in the conversation had been thoughtfully rapping their boots with their canes, now interposed, and said that they would rather not have wine, if it wouldn't look shabby.

"But it will look shabby!" said Miss Fanny. "Lemons, you know, are scarce to be got for any price, and as for lemonade made of syrup, it's positively detestable and vulgar. It tastes just like cream tartar and spirits of turpentine."

"For my part, said Emma, "I never did see the harm of wine, even when people were making the most fuss about it; to be sure, rum and brandy and all that, are bad, but wine—"

"And so convenient to get!" said Fanny; "and no decent young man ever gets drunk at parties—so it can't do harm; besides one must have something, and as I said, it will look shabby not to have it."

Now there is no imputation that young men are so much afraid of, especially from the lips of young ladies, as that of shabbiness, and as it happened in this case as in most others, that the young ladies were the most efficient talkers, the question was finally carried on their side.

Mrs. G. was a motherly woman, just the one fitted to inspire young men with confidence and that home feeling which all men desire to find somewhere. Her house was a free and easy ground, social for most of her acquaintance, and Harry was a favorite domesticated visitor.

During the temperance reform, fathers and mothers had given it their open and decided support, and Mrs. G., always enlisted for any good movement, sympathized warmly in their endeavors. The great fault was that too-often incident in the gentleness of woman, a want of self-reliant principle. Her virtue was too much the result of mere sympathy, too little of her own conviction. Hence, when those she loved grew cold towards a good cause, they found no sustaining power in her.—Notwithstanding, she was a woman that always acquired great influence over young men, and Harry had loved and revered her with something of the same sentiment that he cherished towards his mother.

It was the most brilliant party of the season. Everything was got up in faultless taste, and Mrs. G. was in the very spirit of it. The girls were looking beautifully, the rooms were splendid, there was enough and not too much of light and warmth, and everybody was doing their best to please and be cheerful. Harry was more brilliant than usual, and in fact he outdid himself. Wit and wine were the spirit of the hour.

"Just taste this tokay!" said one of the sisters to him; "it has been sent to us from Europe, and it is said to be a genuine article."

"You know I am not in that line," said Harry, laughing and coloring.

"Why not?" said another young lady, taking a glass.

"Oh, the Temperance pledge, you know; I am one of the pillars of the Order—a very apostle; it will never do for me."

"Pshaw! those temperance pledges are like the proverb, 'something musty,'" said a gay girl.

"Well, but you said you had a headache the beginning of the evening, and you really look pale; you certainly need it as a medicine," said Fanny. "I'll leave it to mamma," and she turned to Mrs. G., who stood gaily entertaining a group of young people.

"Nothing more likely," replied she, gaily; "I think, Harry, you look pale; a glass of wine will do you good."

Had Mrs. G. known all of Harry's past history and temptations, and had she not been in just the inconsiderate state that very good ladies get into at a party, she would sooner have sacrificed her right hand than to have thrown this observation into the scales, but she did, and they turned the balance for him.

"You shall be my doctor," he said, as laughing and coloring he drank the glass, and where was the harm? One glass of wine kills nobody, and yet if a man falls, and knows that in that glass of wine he sacrifices principles and conscience, every drop may be poison to the soul and body.

Harry felt at the time that a great internal barrier had been removed, nor was that glass the only one that evening; another and another and another followed; his spirits rose with the wild and feverish gayety incident to his excitable temperament, and what had been begun in the society of the ladies was completed at night in the gentlemen's saloon.

Nobody ever knew that one party had undone this young man, and yet so it was. From that night, his struggle of moral resistance was fatally impaired—not that he yielded at once and without desperate efforts and struggles, but gradually each struggle grew weaker, each reform shorter, each resolution more inefficient; yet at the close of the evening, all those friends, mother, brother and sister, flattered themselves that everything had gone on so well, that the next week Mrs. H. thought it would do to give wine at a party, because Mrs. G. had done it last week, and no harm had come from it.

In about a year after, the G.'s began to notice and lament the habits of their young friend, and all unconsciously to wonder how such a fine young man should be led astray. Harry was of a desperate and decided nature; his affections and his moral sense waged a fierce war with the terrible tyrant. The madness had possessed him, and when at last all hope had died out, he determined to avoid the anguish and shame of a drunkard's life, by a suicide's death.

Then came to the trembling, heart-stricken mother and beloved one, a wild, incoherent letter of farewell, and he disappeared from amongst the living.

* * * * * *

In the same quiet parlor, where the sunshine still streams through flickering leaves, it now rested on the polished sides and glittering plate of a coffin; there at last is the weary at rest. The soft, shining grey hair was still gleaming as before, but deep furrows on the worn cheek, and a weary, heavy languor hanging over the pale, peaceful face, told that those grey hairs had been brought down in sorrow to the grave. Sadder still was the story on the cloudless cheek and lips of the young creature bending in quiet despair over her. Poor Ellen! her life's thread, woven with those beloved ones, was broken.

* * * * * *

And may not all this happen? nay, does it not happen to young men amongst us every day, and do they not lead in a thousand ways to sorrows like these?

And is there not a responsibility on all, that say they ought to be the guardians of the safety and purity of the other sex, to avoid setting before them the temptation to which so often and so fatally manhood has yielded. What is a paltry consideration of fashion, compared to the safety of sons, brothers, and husbands?

The greatest fault of woman is slavery to custom, and yet who but woman makes custom? Are not all the usages and fashions of polite society more her work than man's? And let every mother and sister think of the mothers and sisters of those who come within the range of their influence, and say to themselves when in thoughtlessness, as they discuss questions affecting their interests, "behold thy brother!" behold thy son!"—Cin. Gazette.

ELOQUENT WORDS.—Twenty-six years ago Mr. Webster uttered the following words in Faneuil Hall, in relation to the death of Adams and Jefferson. How applicable to his own case! Nothing more eloquent can be found in the English language:

"A superior and commanding human intellect, a truly great man, when heaven vouchsafes so rare a gift, is not a temporary flame burning bright for a while, and then expiring, giving place to returning darkness. It is rather a spark of fervent heat, as well as radiant light, with power to enkindle the common mass of human mind, so that when it glimmers in its own decay, and finally goes out in death, no night follows, but it leaves the world all light, all on fire, from the potent contact of its own spirit."

STATE LIBRARY INDIANA

TEMPERANCE CHART.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 22, 1852.

☞ We have received a communication from the Grand Worthy Patriarch, which shall appear in the next issue.

☞ We have received a number of communications, which the crowded state of our columns will not permit us to publish. Some, indeed, are too long, and contain too little that has not been said before.—We hope those who write for the Chart will study condensation, as otherwise they will shut themselves out of our columns. We have more respect for the public than to presume upon its patience so far as to give it again and again what every orator Ringle-tub has been repeating for the last twenty years. The substance of what has been said to us in the communications referred to, is, that in different parts of the State, the temperance cause is doing very well, and is, as we have long been informed and believed, an excellent cause. We have thus taken the trouble to condense some twenty pages of foolscap sent to us from different quarters; and feel assured that our readers will be obliged to us for the information.

☞ We have received several very urgent requests to send the Chart on the old terms. To do this, however, we have no authority whatever, unless we choose to become responsible to the Grand Division for twenty-five cents on each copy thus sent to subscribers. We have now a dollar and a half sent from two places, by men who must have known the decision of the Grand Division before they advanced their money. The cash awaits their order.

The following, which we received from a brother at Oakland, contains the philosophy of the low rate system:

"You ought to send on the Chart to the subscribers at this office at the club rates. The brethren are poor, but will pay when they get their produce to market. They are laboring manfully for the cause of temperance, and you should lend them the aid of the Chart. So send it on; you nor the Grand Division will lose anything in so doing; they are much mortified at the manner they have been treated."

We hope our brethren will remember that the Chart, at seventy-five cents, does not more than clear expenses; and surely no man can desire to read at the cost of other people. To the brethren who are "laboring manfully in the cause of Temperance," we say, work on!—it is both the duty and pleasure of every good citizen to labor in so good a cause. But we cannot see how it follows from that, that the only Temperance Organ in the State should starve to death! We hope the brethren will think that it costs money to publish a paper, and not withhold the "material aid" because it was found necessary to increase the price in order to sustain the enterprise.

To all who subscribed before the change, the Chart will be sent until the expiration of their time, at the old rates.

Lectures to Young Men.

The Rev. Mr. Maxwell, of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, opened a course of lectures to young men, on the evening of the 12th inst. There was quite a large attendance, although, so far as we are informed, there had been no previous announcement of his design through the press. There were not, however, so many of that class to whom the course is more specially designed to be addressed, as we would have been pleased to see present. We hope that our young people will not fail hereafter to avail themselves of this means of improvement, so innocent, delightful, rational, and important. It is cheaper and better than hundreds of others upon which time and money are expended without thought and without stint. Only think of the money wasted, the time lost, good habits perverted and evil ones contracted, every winter in this city, by attending on such disgraceful humbugs as the "Madame Blanches," "Nigger Minstrels," "Fakirs," "learned pigs," and "fat babies," that turn our heads up-side-down and drain us of our cash, at pleasure. We are sure, if our people will but give this subject a moment's reflection, they will hereafter treat these appeals to their gullibility as they ought to be treated, by letting them support themselves.

The next lecture of Mr. Maxwell's course will be delivered on the evening of the 26th inst., at the Chapel of his Church.

It is our intention to lay a synopsis of these lectures before our readers, from time to time. The synopsis of the first lecture will appear in our next.

☞ A young man named Henry Quinn, aged about 18 or 19 years, was killed in an affray near Taylorsville, Bartholomew county, on the 12th inst., by Henry Carter. The parties, with six or seven others, were under the influence of liquor, and quarreling. Carter used a knife, with which he killed Quinn. The liquor that caused the above act was obtained in Brown county. Carter had been arrested, and was awaiting his trial before Judge Lawton, at the time our correspondent wrote. —Locomotive.

By reference to the communication of "Rechab" in this week's Chart, it will be seen that this is the third man who has been murdered in Bartholomew county this winter, by whisky—should Carter be hanged, he will make the fourth; and the tax-payers of the county will foot the bill for this wholesale butchery. We have, also, received an account of two other murders by the groggery-keepers of Switzerland county, within the last few weeks. Tax-payers of Indiana, think of these things! Think of them, ye who claim to be philanthropists and Christians! Are any of you represented in the next Legislature by men who have stained their souls with blood of men in this way? Let it be the last time!

The Democratic Review, vs. The Maine Liquor Law.

The Democratic Review has seen proper to give the whole weight of its influence to the cause of dram-selling and drunkard making; and has thereby rendered it a part of the duty of every friend of a prohibitory law, to notice its reasons against such law. In the March number of the present year, it attacks the Maine Liquor Law, and indeed all who are engaged in the current Temperance Reform, with a degree of acrimony altogether unbecoming its position as a leading literary and political organ, From this article, it is plain, that its opposition to that law is due to no technical objection, but is aimed at its spirit and object. Regarding it in this light, we feel it to be our duty to notice the leading objections urged against a law prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

The first reason urged by the Review is couched in these words: "We condemn the principle involved in this measure, as regards its expediency." This condemnatory sentence is uttered without an accompanying reason, as though the editor was a man in authority, whose sentence of condemnation need only to be pronounced, to destroy its object. If our faith were stronger than, we are sorry to say, it is, in the source whence this sentence emanates, we might acquiesce in it, and yield the point in controversy. But while the evils of our present system are so enormous, so manifold, and so palpable, we shall hardly be satisfied with the ipse dixit of the Editor of the Review against any measure proposed in good faith for their abolition. The remote prospect, that, if the liquor traffic is abolished, our people will betake themselves to the use of Opium as its substitute, is not a sufficient argument to deter us from advocating the passage of a law that shall put an end to the evils of intemperance. We know not what must be his notions of expediency, who can deny the expediency of terminating by suitable legislation, the existence of a system which entails upon our country a greater amount of suffering, loss of life, commission of crime, and expenditure of money, than all other causes together. When all the ends of government are reversed; and suffering, not happiness; barbarism, not civilization; slavery, not liberty; shall become its avowed objects, the manifest propriety of this objection of the Review, will be admitted by all. Until then, however, we can not conceive that this doctrine will become popular save in the empire of him whose peculiar characteristic it is to be the "Father of lies," and "the enemy of all Righteousness." Not a citizen of that empire of darkness and crime, but that will chuckle-out, to hear the learned Editor of the Review, gravely defending a position so pregnant with advantages to them.

Again: "We have, moreover, no faith in its final moral success." No wonder, indeed, that a man who denies the expediency of abolishing the liquor traffic in a government whose professed objects are, "to establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity,"—should arrive at the conclusion, that the "final moral success," of a measure calculated to dry up effectually and forever the fountains of drunkenness is doubtful. It is in keeping with the foregoing objections, and well worthy of the far-sighted philosophy of its author. Grant, however, that its "ultimate moral success" were doubtful, what can we loose by the experiment. There is no doubt of the "immoral success" of our present system. We know that it gives rise to nine out of ten of our crimes; that more than seven out of ten of our paupers are created by it, that, but for it, our Coronors would seldom be called on to hold an inquest; that near a fourth of our Lunatics become so, through the means which it furnishes; and that a very large proportion of our idiots, is cast upon the world without mind, from the same cause. Need we speak of the hell of evil passions and practices which it has created, where, had it never existed, the virtues and the joys that make heaven an object of desire and delight to the pure good, would have reigned supreme. Away with your foolish cant about "moral success!" if you did not fear that, you are too dull to comprehend a reason.

But hear the Review further: "We are constrained to declare unconstitutional the attempt thus to lay the iron hand of a gigantic governmental control upon the conscience and habits of a whole people." This is final. Who dare question the validity of this objection. It comes from a source high, indeed; but as it stands unsupported by a single reason, and as many of the most eminent Judges of the Federal and State Courts have given their opinions on the other side, we hope we shall not be deemed worthy of death for high treason, for daring to doubt or question its propriety. But really would it not sound just as sensible to hear a man talk of the unconstitutionality of our laws against murder, larceny, perjury, and other high crimes? Is it not exceedingly unjust and unconstitutional to lay the hand "of a gigantic governmental control on the conscience and habits of a whole" gang of murderers, robbers, and thieves? To this conclusion we are led, by the whole article of the Review, on the Maine Law. That we do not do the Editor injustice, let the following definitions of different species of liberty, found in the same article, testify.—Thus: "Civil liberty is the constitutional RIGHT TO DO WRONG;" the "liberty of the press is the power to publish wicked and pernicious docrines," and "the freedom of speech the power to speak them;" and so of the rest.

On the whole we can but regret that the world has laid so long in darkness. The fate of those, to whom the world has long looked up with reverence for its notions of civil liberty and constitutional law, is hard beyond measure. All their labor was thrown away, and the glory which it won for them is paled before that rising luminary of the age—the present Editor of the Democratic Review. Already the stars of a past night begin to grow dim. Let us see.—There's Paley, who must give place to clearer light. He had no more sense than to teach that—"civil liberty is the not being restrained by any law, but what conduces in a greater degree to the public good." Who has not learned now, that it is "the Right to do wrong." Let Blackstone hide his head and cease to proclaim, that "Civil liberty is natural liberty so far restrained by human laws, as is necessary and expedient for the general advantage of the public." What a dolt! Why did he not know that "civil liberty is the Right to do Wrong." Kent, too, was no wiser than others, and well deserves to be rebuked for his stupidity. After wasting a long life-time in study, he thought that "civil liberty consisted in being protected and governed by laws made or assented to by the representatives of the people, and conducive to the general welfare;" and never once dreamed, perhaps, that it was the "Right to do Wrong." Thank fortune, the day has broke at last; and although we loose many of our night visions in its light, there is surely no evil-doer in the land that will not hail it with delight and gratitude, for to each it brings the promise of the fullest gratification of his passion for evil-doing. How the murderer and thief, the kidnapper and pirate, will rejoice when assured that every effort to shut them in prison, or hang them for their practices, will hereafter be regarded by the Democratic Review, as an infraction of his civil liberty—"his right to do wrong." What miserable monuments of ignorant and dark ages, are our jails, our penitentiaries, our court-houses, and even our laws. But we are too fast. Our laws are necessary in order to enable us to understand when we are exercising the rights secured to us by civil liberty,—in other words, when we are doing wrong, since in that consists our rights.

But the subject is too grave for ridicule, and we turn from it. It is surely not the least wonderful circumstance connected with this attack on the cause of Temperance, that such a man as its author should have found his way into a position so importrnt to the public, as that which has enabled him to bring reproach upon the once excellent Review which he conducts so badly. Like the fly in the amber, we find nothing wonderful either in the gentleman or his position; but it is a matter of wonder how he got into that position. In his proper place he would be well enough, but where he is, he appears to great disadvantage.

We always regret to see a man who knows nothing of liberty, throwing up his hat at the mention of its name; for we feel assured that such an one is ever ready to become an instrument in the hands of the first ambitious leader who may ask his aid in overthrowing the rational liberty we enjoy. But for him we feel pity also; for his ignorance is an excuse for his folly. We, however, detest him who, knowing better, would teach men to look downward to the brute creation for their notions of liberty. There can be no safety so long as such counsels are followed. Let men cease to grow frantic at the name, and rest contented with the possession of true liberty, where it is enjoyed; and, where it is not yet possessed, guided by the steady sober lights of experience, let them seek it, and it will be found of them.

Local Items.

Social Order.

The Social Order of Temperance has been re-organized, and has instituted a plan of operations for the winter. The first meeting of its appointment was held in the basement of Wesley Chapel on last Wednesday evening, and was ably addressed by the Rev. B. F. Crary, who held up the wickedness of the whisky traffic in all its forms, in the strong light of truth. The necessity of right voting, as well as right thinking and speaking, was powerfully insisted on.

There was not a large attendance; but we hope, now that the ice is broken, that a more general attendance will be had at every subsequent appointment. The next meeting will be held on this (Wednesday) evening, at 7 o'clock, in the lecture room of the Fourth Presbyterian Church. Let all the friends of Temperance be present, to give their countenance and aid to this great cause.

The "Coffee Society" met as usual, on Sunday evening a week ago, at old Butsch's, and, as usual, had a fight for the entertainment of the company. These fights take place, we are told, under the special patronage of the lady (?) members. They are next thing to Spanish bull-fights.

Cast no dirt into the well that hath given you water.

Cast not the helve after the hatchet.

Items of News.

A great fire occurred at Sacramento, in California, in which 2,500 houses were burned down, and $10,000,000 worth of property destroyed. A number of lives were lost.

The steamer "City of Pittsburgh" was burned at Valparaiso, on her passage to California, a short time since. The passengers, 160 in number, were left without anything but the clothes they were wearing.

It appears from recent observation, that over three thousand slaves have been landed in different parts of Cuba, direct from Africa, in the last few months. Thus, in direct violation of the laws of the civilized world, is a piratical and inhuman traffic still kept up. We are glad to learn that the British Government has already taken steps to put an end to such cruelty. We hope she may be successful.

The Maine Liquor Law has become the law of Vermont. This fact, we are sure, will waken emotions of delight in the hearts of all friends of humanity everywhere.—In the Eastern States, it has been hailed as the precursor of the ultimate and complete triumph of the temperance cause.

The tone of the Austrian Government Press is said to be quite friendly to Louis Napoleon, and the re-establishment of the Empire.

The Caffir war still rages in South Africa.

The French Empire is re-established, and Louis Napoleon Bonaparte is Emperor, under the title of Napoleon III, with power to regulate the succession, in case he have no direct and legitimate descendants, in which case the dignity is hereditary. So ends the farce of French Republicanism, even in name.

Power of Individuals.

Mr. Gilfillan, in his book on the Bards of the Bible, has the following beautiful thought on the power of individuals when engaged in behalf of Truth. We commend it to the serious consideration of the young men of our State, whom the seductive blandishments of popular favor may tempt with the mean and filthy bribe of present preferment, to depart from the path that leads to true greatness and enduring renown. Whenever the cause of the Right promises least, and that of the Wrong threatens most, to triumph, we recommend the thought here set forth to all as a cure for despondency—a talisman against the spell of temptation:

"We have here a striking proof of the power which units, when placed on the right side—that of God and truth—usually exert over the masses of men. As the figure one is to cyphers, few or many, which range after it, so is the hero, the saint, the poet, the prophet, and the sage, to their species. One man enters, thirty-four years ago, the Western Metropolis of Scotland; sits quietly down in a plain house, in the northwest suburb, and writes sermons, which speedily change his pulpit into a battery, and memorize every Sabbath by a moral thunderstorm. Private as pestilence, comes another, five years later, into London, and his wild cry, lonely, at first, as that of John's in the desert, at last startles the press, the parliament, the court, the country without, the throne within, and it is felt that the one man has conquered the two millions. Nay, was there not, two thousand years ago, from an obscure mount in Galilee, heard a voice, saying, 'Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven;' and has not that voice, though clouded by opposition, choked in blood, crushed under the gravestone, at length commanded the attention, if not yet the obedience of the world? Let no one say in despair, 'I am but one;' in his unity, as in the unity of a sword, lies his might—if his metal be true, his singleness is strength—he may be multiplied, indeed, but he cannot be divided. Minorities, and minorities of one, generally do the real work of mankind."

Humiliating Thought.—A few friends will go and bury us; affection will rear a stone and plant a few flowers over our grave; in a brief period the little hillock will be smoothed down, and the stone will fall, and neither friend nor stranger will be concerned to ask which one of the forgotten millions was buried there. Every vestige we have ever lived upon the earth will have vanished away. All the little memorials of our remembrance—the locks of hair encased in gold, or the portrait that hung in our dwelling—will have ceased to have the slightest interest to any living being.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 10, 1852.

BROTHER EDITOR:—In order that your readers may be posted up in regard to temperance in this section, I send you the following items for publication. Columbus was once considered beyond the pale of temperance hope, but in the last six years the laborers in the cause have wrought a mighty change.

Some two years ago, the Legislature passed a law prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors in the corporation, if, at the annual corporation election, the people should so vote. At the last election, the vote stood just two to one in favor of temperance. And I might further add, that at least three-fifths of the voters in Columbus would to-day lift up both hands for the "Maine law."

Our law, together with public sentiment, has driven all respectable men from the trffic, and although the "critter" is still sold here, yet it is done by men that respect not the laws of God or man, who keep their grog in closets and cellars, and deal it out to the pitiable inebriates who hover around these haunts of iniquity like buzzards around their carrion.

During the last three weeks they have killed, or, as the citizens here say, murdered two of their customers. One got drunk, ran on the railroad track, and was killed by the cars; he was not killed dead, but mangled so that in doctor bills and funeral expenses, he cost the county about $125. The other got drunk, and died in a ware-house, and had likewise to be buried at the expense of the county. Our citizens are awaking from their lethargy, and say these murder-shops must be closed.

Look out for a good delegation from here at your convention. We fully appreciate the importance of State conventions, and mean to be with you.

Yours, in L., P., and F., RECHAB.

For the Temperance Chart.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 13, 1852.

BRO. GORDON:—As this is an important period in the history of the temperance reform, allow me, through the columns of the Chart, to suggest a plan to the Divisions of our State for circulating memorials for presentation at the coming session of our Legislature. Let us in the first place have one form of memorial. Let every Division appoint a committee on memorials, whose duty it shall be to canvass the township in which said Division is situated, and present a petition to every voter. Solicit him to sign his name. and lend his influence to the great reform; if he will not, put his name on an Anti list, with his objections. Let the Divisions pay said committee a reasonable sum for discharging this duty. Prepare these memorials, and bring them up to the State Temperance convention. In districts where there are no Divisions, will be found men who will co-operate in the work, so that a thorough canvass of the State may be expected.

Our efforts, together with the ladies who will petition, (for they always act well their part,) will form a petition worthy of presentation to the Legislature, and which will no doubt receive a careful consideration, and, we way hope, be the means of ridding our State of the dark cloud of intemperance, and our statutes of the black curse of legalizing murder.

Yours, L. MONTGOMERY.

From the Organ of Reform.

Capital Punishment--The Cause of Crime.

The heart of the philanthropic and the finer sensibilities of the moral and religious among our citizens, have been subjected within the last few days, to the trial, chagrin, mortification and humiliation, consequent upon the stern execution of the laws of our land upon one of our citizens who had, under the influence of that which "biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder," in a rash moment of drunken madness or frenzied desperation, goaded on by real or imaginary wrongs, committed an act for which he has dearly paid the dread penalty attached to the perpetration of homicide. On Friday last, Lecount, the murderer of Clinch, in accordance with the sentence of the Criminal Court of Hamilton county—in presence of a private and select party who always enjoy such scenes of human misery as among the rare luxuries of life—was hurried off to "that bourne whence no traveler returns," with all the weight of the accumulated crimes of forty years against God and man pressing heavily upon his soul.

While we mourn in sorrow for the unfortunate individual whose crime has thus been expiated at the altar of public justice, and have a tear to drop in view of the sad fate of the widow and orphan, whose reputations for the future must necessarily be spotted with the disgrace of the husband and father; yet, at the same time, under all the circumstances of the aggravated nature of the crime, we cannot but rejoi e that the laws have been faithfully executed. Whatever may be the various and conflicting opinions among our friends, as to the justice or necessity of capital punishment, all will concur in the sentiment, that it is essential to the peace, safety, harmony and good order of society, that all unite in an inflexible determination that the laws enacted by our chosen representatives shall be enforced to their utmost demands.

But let us ask, in the name of justice, of mercy, and of outraged humanity everywhere, whence comes the painful and melancholy necessity of the law thus violently taking away that which God alone hath given, and which He alone should take? Where shall we look to find the fountain whence springs such sad alternatives—such mournful legal tragedies, as has thus been enacted—in secret though it was—in our very midst? Where? Let the unfortunate victim himself, in his last will and testament, answer the question. In a clerical interview with the unfortunate man a few hours before the fatal drop, he is reported to have said: "WHAT CRIMES I HAVE EVER COMMITTED HAVE BEEN DONE UPON PASSIONATE IMPULSE, FIRED IN EVERY CASE BY RUM, THE DEVIL TO WHICH I OWE THE IGNOMINIOUS FATE WHICH NOW AWAITS ME."

A more withering rebuke, a more biting sarcasm, a stronger argument, a deeper condemnation, we consider ourselves incapable of making against the liquor-traffic and the fashionable indulgence of the intoxicating bowl, than is contained in these last and dying words of the culprit.

They afford an argument in favor of the enactment of a law by our Legislature during its present session, embodying the principles of the celebrated anti-liquor laws of the States of Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, and Minnesota Territory—enactments righteous in their conception, just in their provisions, and thus far salutary in their operation. It is a legislation of which these States may justly be proud. These laws are their "crowns of glory and diadems of beauty;" and if those States are justly celebrated in the annals of our country for striking the first blow in the Revolution which resulted in the freedom of the colonies from the tyranny of the British king, how much more will they in all time to come be cherished and admired by all true friends of man, for thus striking the first blow in the great moral revolution which shall result in the freedom of all from the damning, soul-destroying effects of Intemperance!

The Maine Law must be Ohio Law before another year rolls round, or else public sentiment is most erroneously interpreted. It must be done—the People of the State, in their sovereign majesty, have willed it to be done. The decree has gone forth—the handwriting is upon the wall, in characters too legible to be misunderstood.—We reiterate, what we have heretofore so often asserted, that the only feasible, just, constitutional and proper remedy for the evils arising from Intemperance—the only efficient means of beating back the overwhelming avalanche of crime resulting from the sale and consumption of the accursed distillation—is the enactment of a law to prohibit the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors within the boundaries of our State.

If it is a true maxim in therapeutics, that "an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure," why should it not be equally as true in political economy, that one law which shall effectually prevent crime, is worth more than a thousand laws to punish it.

Most assuredly, statutes to protect society from crime are of more real value to community than all the penal laws ever enacted, from the bloody code of Dracus down to our own more humane and liberal statutes. Humanity, moved to tears at the work of degradation and death which Intemperance has strewn around her on every side, in deep and heartfelt commiseration at "man's inhumanity to man," calls aloud upon our legislators throughout the length and breadth of this heaven-favored "land of the free and the home of the brave," and demands at their hands enactments which in their operation shall tend to prevent crime—thereby literally rendering laws to punish offenders a dead letter upon our statute books, and thus preserving the world from the repetition of such sad spectacles as that which called forth these few remarks.

We again call upon all friends of Temperance to prepare themselves for the coming contest. Ohio expects every man to do his duty. Let us give one united effort to throw off the stultifying incubus on society, and remove forever the cancerous excrescence from the body politic.

We have a deep interest in the result of this mighty contest for the right, and an abiding faith in the virtue and intelligence of the people. Let the vital principles of the Maine Law be the test question in all future election canvasses. "Tell it in Gath and publish it in the streets of Askalon," that the State of Ohio—the third in the constellation of the Republic—must be redeemed from the thraldom of Intemperance! Let our banners be spread to the breezes of heaven, with mottoes written with the blood of the ten thousand victims of the poisoned chalice of Intemperance in years gone by, in letters so large that he who runs may read—DOWN WITH THE

MEMORIAL.

ADOPTED BY THE

GRAND DIVISION OF THE SONS OF TEMPERANCE,

AND THE

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Indiana:

The undersigned Citizens of Indiana, believing that the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits, to be used as a beverage, is a great moral, social, and political evil, pray you to prohibit the same.

WHISKY TRIBE!—TOTAL ABSTINENCE FOREVER!

Victory will crown our efforts just so sure as truth, under the God of Truth, is always mighty and will prevail. Then, and not till then, can the good people of our noble State live in peace, "sitting under their own vine and fig-tree, with none to make them afraid." Then will the infernal merchandize of intoxicating drinks be regarded in its true and proper light, and those who now thrive on the crimes of others, will meet with that indignant condemnation which their unholy calling so richly deserves—a disgrace and a by-word among men.

Mr. Wesley on the Liquor Traffic.

We give below an extract from Mr. Wesley's sermons on 'the use of money,' which shows that that distinguished reformer entertained, a century ago, precisely the same views of the manufacture and sale of of "drams," that are now entertained by the hundreds of thousands of our fellow-citizens who contend for the passage of the Maine Liquor Law. And they are just such views as all men, not under the influence of strong drink, always do, and always will entertain of the business:

"Neither may we gain by hurting our neighbor in his body. Therefore we may not sell anything which tends to impair health. Such is, eminently, all that liquid fire commonly called drams, or spirituous liquors. It is true, these may have a place in medicine; they may be of use in some bodily disorders; although there would rarely be occasion for them, were it not for the unskilfulness of the practitioner.—Therefore, such as prepare and sell them only for this end, may keep their conscience clear. But who are they? Who prepare them only for this end? Do you know ten such distillers in this county? Then excuse these. But all who sell them in the common way to any that will buy, are poisoners general. They murder the people by wholesale, neither does their eye pity or spare. They drive them to hell like sheep, and what is their gain? Is it not the blood of these men? Who then would envy their large estates and sumptuous palaces? A curse is in the midst of them: the curse of God cleaves to the stones, the timber, the furniture of them! The curse of God is in their garden, their walks, their groves—a fire that burns to the nethermost hell! Blood, blood is there: the foundation, the floor, the walls, the roofs, are stained with blood! And canst thou hope, O thou man of blood, though thou art 'clothed in scarlet and fine linen, and farest sumptuously every day'—canst thou hope to deliver down thy fields of blood to the third generation? Not so; for there is a God in heaven: therefore thy name shall soon be rotted out. Like as those whom thou hast destroyed, body and soul, 'thy memorial shall perish with thee!'"

Our Opinion exactly.

Gov. Hunt, of New York, in descanting on the State prison punishments, says: "Punishment by shower-bath is inhuman, unwarranted by law, and it should be abandoned." This barbarous mode of punishment exists in the State's prison of Ohio, as well as in other States, and we have ever regarded it as an abominable outrage. Serious if not fatal consequences have often resulted from its administration.—The convict is lashed tight to a post, so as to be unable to move a limb, and then a stream of cold water is let fall upon his head from some distance above, and continued just as long as an inhuman and cold-blooded overseer may think fit. We maintain that the poor wretches in the Penitentiary ara, or should be, under the the protection of law, and that those having them in charge have no more right to inflict such a cruel punishment for disobedience, than they have to put them upon the "rack," or apply the "thumb-screw," or hang them up by the neck. The barbarities and cruelties inflicted in the State's Prisons of our land, are a reproach to a civilized age, and we are glad that such men as Gov. Hunt are looking into this matter.—Organ of Reform.

SONS, TO THE RESCUE!—The politicians having got through with their labors in making a President, we hope the Sons will take the field and push on the temperance cause to a glorious triumph, and whenever they succeed in turning out Prince President Alcohol, a shout of joy will ascend to heaven, such as no political victory ever called forth.—Organ.

Better do it than wish it done.

Avow your Principles.

Always be ready to avow your principles of action. Scorn concealment. Put out your true colors to the gaze of men and angels. There is a false prudence, a mock modesty, which inculcates the opposite method. It discourages confession, as savory of ostentation, and would have us leave the world to infer the existence of virtuous principle from our conduct. In most instances, this is but a poltroon's expedient to avoid responsibility, to save convenient position for treachery or evasion. It is well and safe to stand committed to the right, that the world may know, in advance, where you will be found in the day of trial; and it is a reflection upon a good man's intelligence or integrity to have his opinions and principles forever unsettled or in doubt. Society has a right to know what it may expect from him, and justly suspects him of interested and dishonest aims, when he chooses to remain undecided and uncommitted till suffrage has announced the safe way.

Educated men are the natural sources and guides of popular opinion, and they are bound to stand forth boldly, to battle with prejudice, and breast the inundation of passion, though at some risk of being swept away by its fury. The principles of the educated. active, influential men, of every community, generally become its public sentiment. This living embodiment and oppression of reason, truth, and righteousness, acts upon the multitude with vastly more directness and efficacy than books of morals and religion; and as it constitutes the most effectual method for the formation and vigorous maintenance of a sound public sentiment, so it is briefly relied upon for that function. On this account it was that the laws of Athens held that any citizen was an enemy to the State who remained a neutral in any important crisis or question of general interest. The Redeemer of the world has given to this equitable principle the sanction of religion, and it is only they who confess him before men, whom he will confess before the angels in heaven.

Let every one who would not become a mere puppet and time-server, beware of feeling more solicitude for promotion than he does for his principles. If they are to be put down, it is a misfortune and a snare to rise, and he should blush and suspect himself a knave who is conscious of grudging the sacrifice which it may cost him to be an honest man. No valuable ends, besides those of selfish or profligate ambition, can ever be secured by such dishonorable success; and any but a weak and unscrupulous man will prefer to bide his time, and wait for more auspicious days, when God, whose attributes ever side with the right, will pluck its drowned honors from the deep, and make the conscientious and the brave sharers in its triumphs. Whoever covets promotion while his principles are under the ban, must fall back upon the expedients and resources of party, which is always framed and held together by compromises in which principle is sacrificed to policy. Into this turbid maelstrom, from which virtue and conscience never come forth without a stain, good, but ambitious men, of facile morality and feeble purposes, are ever ready to plunge. Dr. Olin.

RUM MONSTROSITY.—The Cincinnati Commercial gives us the following story of brutalism, which is enough to make one blush for his kind, and renewedly vow "eternal hate" to that which transforms man into such a fiendish brute:

A married man in this city, who has been for several years past greatly addicted to drinking and abusing his wife, went to his residence in Elm street recently, and after threatening to kill her, began, according to custom, to hunt about for liquor.—He finally found a bottle of what he supposed to be whisky, when his wife, who had been watching him, rushed toward him, and dashed the bottle from his hand, whereupon he struck her bleeding to the floor. He afterwards found that the liquor he intended to swallow, was corrosive sublimate dissolved in alcohol. A second more, and he would have quaffed the fatal poison. She who preserved his life he felled like a wild beast to the earth, and when informed of her effort to save him, observed, with fiendish barbarity—"She deserved a beating at any rate, and it could not come amiss."

A wise man's thoughts walk within him, but a fool's without him.

A wise and good man is never less alone than when alone.

Choice Gems.

A man's strongest passion is generally his weaker side.

A wise man endeavors to shine in himself, a fool to outshine others.

A faithful friend is the medicine of life, and his excellency is invaluable.

A gentle reply to scurrillous language is the most severe revenge.

A great fortune is a great slavery, and thrones are but uneasy seats.

Backbiting oftener proceeds from pride than malice.

Bachelors' wives and maids' children are well taught.

Be a friend to thyself, and others will be so too.

Be frugal of your time, but not at the expense of your health.

Be lively but not light, solid but not sad.

Be in peace with many, nevertheless have but one counsellor of a thousand.

Be not as a lion in thy house, nor frantic among thy servants.

Be prudent, but not crafty.

Better is a portion in a wife than with a wife.

Better come at the latter end of a feast than the beginning of a fray.

Better have an old man to humour, than a young rake to break your heart.

Beware of a reconciled enemy and an untried friend.

Borrow not too much upon time to come.

Bought wit is best, but may cost too much.

Breaking your faith may gain you riches, but never get you glory.

Bring your line to the wall, not the wall to the line.

Buyers want a hundred eyes, sellers none.

By others' faults wise men correct their own.

Care will kill a cat, yet there's no living without it.

Charity and pride have different aims, yet both feed the poor.

Children have wide ears and long tongues.

Cleanliness is both decent and advantageous.

One fact in regard to Cholera has not been told. While a few persons, of both sexes, who were perfectly temperate, died of cholera, yet in most cases, we believe, they were very feeble—had overtaxed their bodily powers—had business which led them to spend much of their time in some very sickly quarter, where the disease seemed to have originated—or had been imprudent in regard to their diet.—These cases, however, were few. Very many, it is true, of the prudent and temperate, were attacked with more or less severity, but were promptly relieved by proper medical treatment. There were some who made use of liquor as a preventive; but whether it was useful as such, we leave to our medical men to say. But the important fact to which we would call attention is, that of the members of the different temperance orders, in this city, not one, so far as we can learn, has died the past season of cholera. We cannot but think there is some significance in such a fact as this.—Rochester Jour.

Circular.

A State Temperance Convention will be held in the city of Indianapolis on Wednesday the 12th day of January, 1853.

All the friends of this great Reform—all the foes of that liquid poison which is yet drowning the intellects, darkening the hopes, desolating the homes and destroying the souls of thousands, are invited to come.

Yours in hope and effort for a prohibitory law.

EDWARD R. AMES,
CALVIN FLETCHER,
W. HANNAMAN,
W. C. THOMPSON,
J. R. OSGOOD,
CLEMENT E. BABB,
State Central Committee.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas. Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

The Age of Steam and Lightning!

MORRELS Eagle Book Works, 196 Fulton St., N. Y. Warehouse and Salesroom 25 Park Row.

BLANK BOOKS.

BLANK BOOKS, in greater variety and at lower prices than at any other Establishment in the country. Five Thousand Reams of manufactured Account Books constantly on hand, adapted to every market in the Union.

Half-bound Caps, per quire, 9 to 18 cents; Full bound, 15 to 22; and, in finer bindings, 25 to 50; Demys, Russia Bindings, 50 cents to $1 00; Medium Royal, and Super Royal Books in proportion

A New Feature.—All the Books furnished by this Establishment, which are 25 cents per quire and upwards, are beautifully PAGED, by a newly invented process, without charge Memorandum Books of all kinds. Wholesale and Retail Dealers supplied in any quantity, for cash or approved credit.

NEW MISCELLANY.

The Cheapest and Best of its Price yet Published.

A. MORRELL will issue every month, a volume of 150 pages of Choice Reading, useful and entertaining, by the best writers. Can be mailed to any part of the Union at Magazine postage. Single subscribers $1 50 per year; Four Subscribers for $5; and Ten Copies sent to one address for $10; being only One Dollar per year. All payments in advance.—Orders and Communications may be addressed to the office of publication, No. 7, Theatre Alley, or to the publisher, ARTHUR MORRELL, aug 11 25 Park Row, New York.

Divisions who wish Constitutions, or any other kind of printing done with neatness and dispatch, we would recommend them to Bro. Ohr. Bro. O is a practical printer, and a member of the Grand Division. C WOODWARD, G. S.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent

PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait. in the Atheneum. Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq, the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott. Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq, after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 0–3m

Local and Traveling Agents Wanted.

FOR popular and useful Books just published—CALIFORNIA ILLUSTRATED, including a Description of the Panama and Nicaragua Routes, with 48 superb Tinted Lithographs, 234 pages, 8 vo Price $2. This work, by J. M. Letts, has been adjudged by the unanimous voice of the press to be the most elaborate, practical and intensely interesting volume that has yet been written upon this golden theme. Since the publication of Steven's Journal of Travels, no work has appeared that has created such a thrilling sensation. It is pre-eminently practical, and is interspersed with incident of the most amusing character. In the language of one of the city editorials, "it is a perfect daguerreotype of California, taken by the light of a noon-day sun." Also, Dr. Beach's great work on Medicine, The American Practice and Family Physician, 800 pages, 200 engravings, 8 vo. sheep. Price $5. Dr. Beach is at the head of the eclectic practice in this country.—Such was the demand, that eighteen thousand copies of this work were printed in one edition. Also, Dr. C. D. Hammond's work on the same principles of practice, Medical Information for the Million, or True Guide to Health, 12 mo, cloth, 528 pages, price $1 50 cloth, $1 paper covers, 4th thousand—Also, Woman in her Various Relations; containing practical rules for American Females, for their conduct in the detail of every domestic duty. Royal 18 mo; red cloth, illustrated; 324 pages; price 63 cents. This work should be in the hands of every lady especially the young Such is its popularity that nearly three thousand copies have been sold in the region of New York alone within a very few months. Also a new and very useful article of Stationery for the preservation of valuable papers, &c., needed for reference, such as letters, invoices, &c. Its form is that of a scrap book. with leaves prepared for the reception of the article to be filed, thus superceding, with many advantages, the practice of binding. The retail prices as follows:

IMPROVED ADHESIVE LETTER. INVOICE AND MUSIC FILE.

Size.	Thickness.	Single.	Doz or more.
Cap,	250 leaves	$1 00	$9 00
Packet Post,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Letter,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Cap,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Packet Post,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Letter,	500 do	1 50	9 00
Bill,	500 do	1 00	9 00
Music,	80 do	1 00
Do half mor clo s	80 do	1 25
Do half mor mor do	80 do	1 50

N. B—Orders for peculiar sizes or styles of binding filled with despatch.

Special contracts made for large lots.

Orders for Books above advertised, with cash or postage stamps accompanying, will be promptly filled, prepaid to any part of the United States.

Address, ROBERT T. YOUNG,
(Successor to Wm. Holdrege,) No. 140, Fulton Street, New York.

Editors giving this advertisement two or three insertions entire, will be entitled to a copy of California Illustrated. nov 10–3w

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer,
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't.
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11–1y

To Persons out of Employment!
BOOK AGENTS WANTED,

To Canvass for

New Pictorial, Standard, Historical, and Religious Works.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young persons of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid.

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
sep 1 3m 181 William Street, New York.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

ATTENTION is respectfully solicited to the following facts and statements in regard to the above Agency;

Indianapolis being the centre and Capital of the State, accessible from all parts by means of the numerous railroads which concentrate within her borders—filled constantly with strangers from all parts of the country—presents one of the most available cities in the West, for the successful carrying out an Agency, such as below described:

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

To give efficiency to this most important branch of the Agency, the services of an energetic and responsible Attorney in each county of the State has been secured. This, in connection with the fact that the undersigned is himself a practical Lawyer, and has had several years' experience in this branch of the Agency in Ohio, affords a full guarantee that all business in this department will be attended to with fidelity and dispatch.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

To give efficiency to this branch of the Agency, the services of a distinguished and responsible Attorney and Counsellor, resident at Washington, and experienced in this department, has been secured

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Indianapolis, Ind.

Geo. Taylor, Esq., Attorney and Counsellor at Law, is connected with, and authorized to transact any business of the above agency. Office as above.

REFER TO

Hon. Isaac Blackford, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.

Hon. Samuel E. Perkins, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.

Hon Wm. J. Brown; Editor of State Sentinel.

John D. Defrees, Esq., Editor of State Journal.

Messrs Ellis & Spann, Editors of Indiana Statesman.

Messrs. Elder & Harkness, Editors of The Locomotive.

R. R. Underhill, Esq.

Wm. Sheets, Esq.

C. B. Davis, Esq.

American and Foreign Agency,

CITY OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Under the direction of AARON H. PALMER, Counsellor of the Supreme Court of the U States.

The undersigned has been duly appointed sole Agent for Indiana of the above Agency, (the best in the Union,) and will give his prompt and faithful attention to all business confided to his personal management, requiring to be transacted in this State or elsewhere in the United States, or any part of the commercial world, through the principal office at Washington. W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
aug 11–1y Indianapolis, Ind.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

WILLIAM HANNAMAN,

DEALER IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally june30 tf

A REGISTER

HAS been opened at the Real Estate and General Agency Office, Indianapolis, in which all persons can enter property for sale, with full description, price per acre, &c., without charge, (excepting disbursements for advertising,) unless a sale effected Said Register will be at all times open to public inspection, and the advantage thus offered to owners of real estate for the prompt disposal of their property is far superior to all others.

Also, a Register for renting property has been opened under the same regulations as the above.
aug 11–1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,
june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange Also cents and half cents, upon payment of freight on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

To Cure a Cold, with Headache and Soreness of the Body, take the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, and wrap up warm, to sweat during the night.

For a Cold and Cough, take it morning, noon, and evening, according to directions on the bottle, and the difficulty will soon be removed. None will long suffer from this trouble when they find it can be so readily cured. Persons afflicted with a seated cough, which breaks them of their rest at night, will find, by taking the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, they may be sure of sound, unbroken sleep, and consequently refreshing rest. Great relief from suffering, and an ultimate cure, is afforded to thousands who are thus afflicted, by this invaluable remedy.

From its agreeable effect in these cases, many find themselves unwilling to forego its use when the necessity for it has ceased.

From two eminent Physicians in

Fayetteville, Tenn., April 16th, 1851.

Sir:—We have given your Cherry Pectoral an extensive trial in our practice, and find it to surpass every other remedy we have for curing affections of the respiratory organs

DRS. DIEMER & HAMPTON.

To Singers and Public Speakers this remedy is invaluable, as by its action on the throat and lungs, when taken in small quantities, it removes all hoarseness in a few hours, and wonderfully increases the power and flexibility of voice.

Asthma is generally much relieved, and often wholly cured by Cherry Pectoral. But there are some cases so obstinate as to yield entirely to no medicine. Cherry Pectoral will cure them, if they can be cured.

Bronchitis, or irritation of the throat and upper portion of the lungs, may be cured by taking Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses. The uncomfortable oppression is soon relieved.

Rev. Dr. Lansing, of Brooklyn, New York, states: "I have seen the Cherry Pectoral cure such cases of Asthma and Bronchitis as leads me to beleive it can rarely fail to cure those diseases."

For Croup. Give an emetic of antimony, to be followed by large and frequent doses of the Cherry Pectoral, until it subdues the disease. If taken in season, it will not fail to cure.

Whooping Cough may be broken up and soon cured by the use of Cherry Pectoral

The Influenza is speedily removed by this remedy. Numerous instances have been noticed where whole families were protected from any serious consequences, while their neighbors, without the Cherry Pectoral, were suffering from the disease.

Salem, Ohio, June 11th, 1851.

Doct. J. C. Ayer:—I write to inform you of the truly remarkable effects of your Cherry Pectoral in this place, and in my own family. One of my daughters was completely cured in three days of a dreadful Whooping Cough, by taking it. Dr. Means, one of our very best physicians freely states that he considers it the best remedy we have for pulmonary diseases and that he has cured more cases of Croup with it, than any other medicine he ever administered.

Our clergyman of the Baptist Church says that during the run of Influenza here this season, he has seen cures from your medicine, he could scarcely have believed without seeing.

Yours respectfully, J. D. SINCLAIR,
Deputy Postmaster.

From the distinguished Professor of Chemistry and Materia Medica, Bowdoin College.

I have found the Cherry Pectoral, as its ingredients show, a powerful remedy for colds, and coughs, and pulmonary diseases. P. Cleveland, M. D.
Brunswick, Me., Feb. 5, 1847.

Dr. Valentine Mott, the widely celebrated Professor of Surgery in the Medical College, New York City, says:

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of 'Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,' which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

Cures of severe diseases upon the Lungs have been affected by Cherry Pectoral in such extreme cases as warrant the belief that a remedy has at length been found that can be depended on to cure the Coughs, Colds and Consumption which carry from our midst thousands every year. It is indeed a medicine to which the afflicted can look with confidence for relief, and they should not fail to avail themselves of it.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING: in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. oct. 6 3m

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

T. M. Nichols J. F. Johnston.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,

SURGEON DENTISTS,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.
june30 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1852. NO. 27.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines.) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Massachusetts Life Boat.

The Two Incendiaries.

A fire alarm! The cry of "Fire!"
Swells on the night air, higher, higher!
Touched by the lightning, every bell
Swings in its tower, the tale to tell;
Forth rush the firemen, one and all,
At duty's or at danger's call,
The peril and the praise to share:
Their engines play—their torches flare—
The light of the devouring fire,
Reflected from the church's spire,
Piercing the cloud with ruddy glow,
Tells of the ruin wrought below.

Why sounds that midnight tocsin dread?
Why towers that column, black and red,
That, leaning to the leeward, shows
The way that the destroyer goes?

Let your imagination stretch,
And you shall see a dastard wretch,
Skulking away from human sight,
And, wrapped up in the cloak of night,
Putting a loco foco match
Where he is sure the blaze will catch;
That, when the crowd is thither drawn,
He may, before "the peep of dawn,"
With his light fingers, force a loan
From others' pockets to his own.
What are to him the larum bell,
The fire-wrapped roof, the dreadful yell
Of horses roasting in their stalls,
Of firemen crushed by tumbling walls?
What are to him the crash and din
Of slates and rafters falling in,
The shrieks of houseless females flying,
The feeble gasp of children dying,
And the loud wailings of despair,
That load the suffocating air?
What are all these to him?—his turn
By them is served—so—"Let 'em burn!"

What is all this to him! Why, sir,
He wakes up people, and they stir,
And, if thay catch the villain, he
Is tried and hanged;—or used to be.
Laws may, but justice does not, alter;
He 'scapes, though he deserves the halter,
And, were he doomed to it again,
The people all would say—"Amen!"

And yet—now coolly let's inquire—
What does this villain set on fire? [ble," Boards, shingles, timber, "wood, hay, stub-
The body's life—an empty bubble—
"A vapor, that appears" a day
Or hour, "then vanisheth away"—
That's all! The incendiary felon
Does nothing more we need to dwell on.

But, he that fills his neighbor's cup
With liquid fire, is burning up,
Not edifices framed of wood,
Not princely mansions, fair and good—
But that for which such mansions rise:
The heir apparent of the skies,
MAN, who from heaven derives his birth—
Man, God's vicegerent here on earth:
A house, that only God can build—
A temple, with his Spirit filled—
A tenement, indeed, of clay,
That holds its dweller for his day,
A house that falls in time to dust,
As other earthly dwellings must,
But one that holds, if not burnt down,
Tee heir of an immortal crown!
But, let the fire that fills the cup,
Be, in that house, well kindled up,
And strength, and peace, and pure desire,
And manly purpose, feel the fire;
And Reason stumbles on, and gropes
Darkling 'mid smouldering joys and hopes;
And Faith, and every upward aim
And heavenward impulse, feed the flame;
And childhood roams in tatter'd rags,
And Virtue falls, and Courage flags,
And haggard Want makes Earth his bed,
And homeless Hunger-begs his bread,
And sottish Dullness mopes along,
And maniac Mirth bawls out his song,
And Frenzy stands, with ghastly stare,
And Madness rends his matted hair,
And Murder stabs his weeping bride,
Then dies himself, a Suicide!

And yet, what is all this to him,
Who fills up to its sparkling brim
The glass that glows with liquid fire,
Drowned in whose poisonous depths expire
Wit, Wisdom, common Manhood even,
All earthly joy, all hope of heaven?

Aye, to his inmost self, says he,
"Well, what of that?—What's that to me?
"What is to me the depth of woe,
"That follows where my liquors flow?
"So long as I the match can get,
"So long as I the fire may set,
"So long as I can have my way,
"So long as those who drink will pay,
"So long as they will serve my turn,
"What is't to me how much I burn?
"So long as they with bank-notes cram
"My pockets, I don't care a damn—
"So long as they my coffers swell,
"Let the poor devils go to hell!"

These two Incendiaries stand
Before you, neighbors, torch in hand;
Each plies his trade, each fills his purse—
Tell me—which of them is the worse?

MISCELLANEOUS.

Original Revolutionary Incident.

The New Haven Courier gives the following account of the siege of Yorktown, in 1781, which has never before been in print, and illustrates the difference between theory and practice:

With Hamilton, Knox, and others, there were present behind a redoubt of hogsheads and pipes of sand, about 400 American troops. A general order had been given, that when a shell was seen, they might cry out a shell—but not to cry a shot, when a shot was seen. The reason of this distinction was, that a shell might be avoided, but to cry a shot would only make confusion, and do no good. This order was just then being discussed, Col. Hamilton remarking that it seemed unsoldier-like to halloo a shell, while Knox contended the contrary, and that the order was wisely given by Gen. Washington, who cared for the lives of the men.

The argument thus stated, was progressing with a slight degree of warmth, when suddenly, spat! spat! two shells fell and struck within the redoubt. Instantly the cry broke out on all sides, "a shell! a shell!" and such a scrambling and jumping to reach the blinds and get behind them for defence. Knox and Hamilton were united in action, however differing in words, for both got behind the blinds; and Hamilton, to be yet more secure, held on behind Knox, (Knox being a very large man and Hamilton a small man.) Upon this, Knox struggled to throw Hamilton off, and in the effort rolled him towards the shells. Hamilton, however, scrambled back again behind the blinds. All this was done rapidly, for in two minutes the shells bursted, and threw their deadly missiles in all directions. It was now safe and soldier-like to stand out.

"Now," said Knox, "now what do you think, Mr. Hamilton, about crying 'shell?' But let me tell you not to make a breastwork of me again." Dr. Monson added, that on looking around, and finding not a man hurt out of more than four hundred, Knox exclaimed, "It is a miracle!"

PAUPERISM IN ENGLAND.—From a recent English work, "Pashley on Pauperism and the Poor Laws," we glean the following facts:

The number of persons in England and Wales who receive parish relief, at some time during the year, is three millions.—The number receiving relief throughout the year is one million. Out of this million, the number of able-bodied adult male paupers—men willing and physically able to earn their daily bread, but unable to obtain employment—is upwards of three hundred thousand. The number of pauper children, under the age of 16, who are entirely dependent on parish relief, is 350,000. During the last century, the population has increased, in the proportion of 3 to 1; but the pauperism of England has increased in the proportion of 8 to 1. A hundred years ago, the outlay in the relief of the poor was a little more than two shillings a head on the whole population; it now amounts to nearly six shillings.—How much of this pauperism is chargeable to intemperance? Seventy-five per cent!

Borrowed garments never fit well.

Beautiful Extract.

The following extract is from an address delivered by Governor William Bigler, of Pennsylvania, at the dedication of the Spring Garden Institute, Philadelphia:

"To place within the reach of every citizen the means of intellectual improvement, should be regarded as one of the highest purposes of government; and certainly no more sacred obligation can devolve upon the parent than to educate the child. The cultivation of the moral and intellectual faculties of the people elevates and dignifies their social condition, and capacitates them for self-government.—This moral training of the people is desirable in any country, but it is especially so in a country like ours, where each citizen is invested with a certain degree of sovereignty, by means of which he exercises the high prerogative of choosing his own guardians of public affairs, and thus makes the impress of his will on the policy of government. In other countries, where the masses are looked upon as mere 'hewers of wood and drawers of water' for those who have reached the head of civil affairs by hereditary succession, the moral condition of the masses has much less influence upon the movements and upon the stability of the government. But in this republic, where so much depends upon popular will, influenced by popular intelligence—where the distinctions of blood and title do not exist—too much sacrifice cannot be made by the citizen and the government to promote the cause of education.

"And especially should the means of ducation be placed within the reach of the poor and helpless. Talent which would otherwise remain obscure, is thus brought to light and practical use. Nature, in bestowing her gifts, is not confined to the ranks of the distinguished and opulent.—Her bounteous hand is restrained by no contracted limits. Talent and genius of the highest order are often found in the most humble ranks of society. But what rich treasures of these faculties are lost for want of the means of cultivation—smothered by the chilling hand of poverty, or extinguished by the paralyzing influence of bad examples or bad moral training.—How beautiful and how true the poetic sentiment, which was impressed upon my mind in my school-boy days:

"'Full many a gem of purest ray serene,
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its fragrance on the desert air.'"

Beautiful Figure.

Two painters were employed to fresco the walls of a magnificent cathedral.—Both stood on a rude scaffolding, constructed for the purpose, some forty feet from the floor. One of them was so intent upon his work, that he became wholly absorbed, and in admiration stood off from the picture, gazing at it with intense delight. Forgetting where he was, he moved backwards slowly, surveying critically the work of his pencil, until he had neared the very edge of the plank upon which he stood.

At this critical moment his companion turned suddenly, and, almost frozen with horror, beheld his imminent peril; another instant, and the enthusiast would have been precipitated upon the pavement beneath; if he spoke to him, it was certain death—if he held his peace, death was equally sure. Suddenly he regained his presence of mind, and seizing a wet brush, flung it quickly against the wall, spattering the beautiful picture with unsightly blotches of coloring. The painter flew forward, and turned upon his friend with fierce imprecations; but startled at his ghastly face, looked shudderingly over the dread space below, and, with tears of gratitude, blessed the hand that saved him.

So, said a preacher, we sometimes get absorbed in looking upon the pictures of this world, and, in contemplating them, step backwards, unconscious of our peril, when the Almighty dashes out the beautiful images, and we spring forward to lament their destruction, into the outstretched arms of mercy, and are saved.

☞ The number of adults in Virginia who cannot read or write, is 80,000—twenty thousand more than in 1840; and the number of children whose parents are unable to send them to school is upwards of 38,000.

An old Paris paper has the following significant remark: "The Americans and English educate their children in the fear of God and the love of money.

Good Taste

The following very happy and equally true sketch is from the London Quarterly:

"You see this lady turning a cold eye to the assurances of shopmen and the recommendation of milliners. She cares not how original a pattern may be, if it be ugly—or how recent a shape, if it be awkward. Whatever fashion dictates, she follows one of her own, and is never behind it. She wears very beautiful things, which people generally suppose to be brought from Paris, or at least made by a French milliner, but which as often are brought from the nearest town, and made up by her own maid. Not that her costume is either rich or new—on the contrary she wears many a cheap dress, but it is always good. She deals in no gaudy confusion of colors, nor does she affect a studied sobriety; but she either enlivens you with a spirited contrast, or composes you with judicious harmony. Not a scrap of tinsel or trumpery appears upon her. She puts no faith in velvet bands, or gilt buttons, or twisted cordings. She is quite aware, however, that the garnish is as important as the dress; all her inner borders and headings are delicate and fresh, and should anything peep out which is not intended to be seen, it is quite as much so as that which is. After all, there is no great art either in her fashions or her material. The secret simply consists in knowing the three unities of her dress—her own station, her own age, and her own points—and no woman dresses well who does not. After this we need not say, that whoever is attracted by the costume will not be disappointed by the wearer. She may not be handsome or accomplished—but we will answer for her being even-tempered, well-informed, thoroughly sensible—a complete lady."

STATISTICS OF MUSCULAR POWER.—Man has the power of imitating every motion but that of flight. To effect these, he has, in maturity and health, sixty bones in the head, sixty in his thighs and legs, sixty-two in his arms and hands, and sixty-seven in his trunk. He has also four hundred and thirty-four muscles. His heart makes sixty-four pulsations in a minute, and therefore three thousand eight hundred and forty in an hour, ninety-two thousand one hundred and sixty in a day. There are also three complete circulations of his blood in the short space of an hour.

In respect to the comparative speed of animated beings and of impelled bodies, it may be remarked that size and construction seem to have little influence, nor has comparative strength, though one body giving any quantity of motion to another, is said to lose so much of its own. The sloth is by no means a small animal, and yet it can travel only fifty paces in a day; a worm crawls only five inches in fifty seconds; but a lady-bird can fly twenty million times its own length in an hour. An elk can run a mile and a half in seven minutes; an antelope a mile in a minute; the wild mule of Tartary has a speed even greater than that; an eagle can fly eighteen leagues in an hour, and a Canary falcon can even reach two hundred and fifty leagues in the short space of sixteen hours. A violent wind travels sixty miles in an hour; sound, eleven hundred an forty-two English feet in a second.—Bucke.

CONSCIENTIOUS.—Dr. Johnson, when in indigent circumstances, as was not unfrequently the case, was offered a rectory if he would enter into orders. But this great man, sensible, as is supposed, of the asperities of his temper, declined it, saying, "I have not the requisites for the office, and I cannot in my conscience shear the flock which I am unable to feed." Well would it have been for the Church of Christ, had all who have entered her ministry been equally conscientious.

But 'tis almost useless at this time of day to talk about conscientiousness in the leaders of the Church. "Plaze yer Riv'rence," said Paddy to the parson one day on his tithe-collecting tour, with a posse of constables to assist him, "plaze yer Riv'ronce, Judy's jist been put to bed of her tenth child—hadn't ye better take that, too?" With a holy look of clerical contempt, the parson ordered the robbery wagon to drive on. He had just taken the tenth pig—tenth babies not being canonical. Poor Paddy! no wonder thou rebelest. But we forget—'tis the "Church of Christ;" and the Church can do no wrong.

It is said that persons who drink rain water exclusively don't take the Cholera.

Good Night.

Good night is but a little word—
Yet beautiful, though brief,
And falls upon the gentle heart,
Like dew upon the leaf:

Love's farewell note of tenderness
Upon affection's chords:
The clasp that knits the daily chain
Of kindly deeds and words:

A verdant olive-branch of peace
Upon our pillows prest,
Shedding its graceful fragrance round,
Before we sink to rest.

A Warning to Young Politicians.

We quote the following beautiful paragraph from the Dedham Democrat:

There have also been tides among the champions of slavery, and her great props are silently but rapidly decaying. The leaders of her cohorts are falling thick and fast. Two years have passed away since John C. Calhoun, her most philosophic and persistent defender, every fibre of whose being was fermented with love of slavery, was gathered to his fathers.—Only four months ago, Henry Clay, her greatest parliamentary support, and the most practical and able champion she ever had, slept the sleep of death. And now the inexorable messenger has come into our very midst, and taken one she could illy spare, her most valuable advocate and defender. Would to God we could apply to him the highest of all eulogiums, which Lamartine pronounced upon Wilberforce, that when he ascended to the bosom of his God, he stood before Him holding in his hands the broken fetters of millions of his fellow-men. God forbid that while we are compelled to remember his two years advocacy of slavery, we should forget his thirty years advocacy of freedom. But this is a theme of melancholy and touching interest. Into the sanctuary of death I must not enter. To use the language of the departed Statesman, always apt and always expressive, the past is secure—the good that he has done will live forever, and over the evil we will as far as possible cast the mantle of charity. With his personal and private life we have nothing more to do; but with those public acts which we believe to be wrong, we will in the future as in the past, maintain an attitude of eternal hostility. Never was a bad cause bereft of so much strength in so short a time, and never was there one less able to spare it. That which is Slavery's loss is Freedom's gain.—Exchange.

I HAVE NO TIME TO STUDY.—The idea about the want of time is a mere phantom. Franklin found time in the midst of all his labors to dive into the hidden recesses of philosophy, and to explore the untrodden path of science. The great Frederick, with an empire at his direction, in the midst of war, on the eve of battles, which were to decide the fate of his kingdom, found time to revel in the charms of philosophy and intellectual pleasures. Bonaparte, with all Europe at his disposal, with kings in his ante-chamber, begging for vacant thrones, with thousands of men, whose destinies were suspended on the brittle thread of his arbitrary pleasures, had time to converse with books. Cæsar, when he had curbed the spirits of the Roman people, and was thronged with visiters from the remotest kingdoms, found time for intellectual cultivation. Every man has time, if he improves it as well as he might, and can reap a three-fold reward. Let mechanics then make use of the hours at their disposal, if they want to obtain a proper influence in society.—They are the life-blood of the community; they can, if they please, hold in their hands the destinies of our republic; they are numerous, respectable, and powerful; and they have only to be educated half as well as other professions, to make laws for the nation.—N. Y. Mirror.

ABSOLUTE DEATH.—A man named Death, still a resident in Ohio, formerly lived in Cincinnati, where he sold liquors. Over the door of his store was the sign of "Rectified Whisky," and directly under was his name, "Absolute Death." An old lady from the country, with her son, a hearty lad, was one day quietly wending her way through the street in a wagon—the sign caught her eye. "Stop, John!" She read it. "'Rectified Whisky, Absolute Death.' That's a fact! Johnny, let me out! there is one honest whisky-seller in Cincinnati—I want to see what he looks like."—Olive Branch.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 29, 1852.

Advertise.

It gives us pleasure to call the attention of the business public to the advantages of advertising in the Chart.—There is, perhaps, no paper in the State that has so large a circulation; and its readers are generally just the right kind of men. To all who desire to have their business cards widely circulated over the State, we are confident the Chart offers inducements with which those of few other papers can compare. There is not a county in the State where it is not taken. We hope these advantages will not be overlooked, by those who desire to advertize.

The advertising columns of the Chart are under the entire control of Mr. Ohr, the publisher, who may be found at any time at the Locomotive Office.

Statistics.

Next week we shall lay before our readers a statement of facts and figures, showing the amount of liquor imported into this city, so far as it can be ascertained.—Most of these statistics were searched out by Calvin Fletcher, Esq., whose efforts to disseminate information among the people in reference to the liquor traffic, are worthy of the cause on which they are so generously bestowed. Our facts were not complete, or we should have had them before our readers in the present issue.

The New York Tribune.

We are regularly in the receipt of the Tribune, which the Editor generously sends us in exchange for the Chart. To say that its columns are always full of useful and interesting matter, would only be to repeat what is admitted, wherever it is known, by all—and it is known everywhere. Those who desire a cheap, valuable and manly political journal, cannot do better than to subscribe for the Tribune.

RATES OF THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE.

Single copy	$3 00
Two copies	5 00
Ten copies	20 00

RATES OF THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE.

Single copy	2 00
Three copies	5 00
Eight copies	10 00
Twenty copies (to one address)	20 00

☞ We take pleasure in referring our readers to the communications of Brother Sage and the Rev. Lee Roy Woods, in this issue. They contain many valuable suggestions, well worthy of the consideration of the friends of temperance; and even the enemies of that cause may derive a useful hint from the melancholy fact which serves as the foundation of Bro. Sage's letter.

It is full of instruction for the temperate drinker, who reposes securely over an abyss of ruin more horrible than he dreams of; for it points as a finger-board to the end of his career. Every day brings nearer to that disgraceful goal the simpleton who plays with the deadly reptile, without an apparent consciousness of his danger; and soon, like Lee Rogers, he may be expected to be found dead. No matter where he dies, his death will be the same; and whether an earthly inquest shall determine how he died or not, in the estimation of the grand inquest of Heaven he will be found guilty of self-destruction.

It is also suggestive of a valuable thought to the tax-payers of the State. They have to meet the expenses of the inquest and funeral in all such cases; and should the widow and orphans of the deceased fall as a charge on the charity of the county, they will have to foot the bill. In this county we have had four inquests—all due to the same cause, drunkenness—within the last nine months. The cost of these has been little, if any, short of one hundred dollars, which the people, of course, have had to pay. Yet we have men still engaged in propogating the cause of these murders and expenses; and hundreds of others, who deny our right to put an end to them by a suitable law.

In all these cases, one of two positions is assumed by every citizen of the State in reference to these murders and the incidental taxation. He either consents to these taxes, or he does not. If he does, that assent involves him in the guilt of the murders out of which they arise. If he does not, then he is unjustly taxed against his will, and has a right, just as our Revolutionary fathers had to oppose British oppression, to labor for the removal of such iniquitous taxation. Let all who do not intend to stain their souls with human blood, nor sink tamely down to the condition of slaves, put forth their whole power to remove both the taxes and the crimes out of which they arise, from the State.—It is our business to see that we are not taxed to build up princely fortunes for men whose daily business it is to commit deliberately and intentionally the high crime of murder.

The Temperance Convention Again.

We hope our readers will not deem us importunate in regard to the approaching Temperance Convention, if we again and again call their attention to the necessity of making it all that the friends of humanity desire and expect it to be. It demands the attention and calls for the earnest aid of every friend of Temperance the whole State over. It must not fail, either in numbers, intelligence, or that high moral purpose, without which no good government was ever established or maintained. We want men—the men of Indiana; (for thank God, we yet have men in Indiana;)—to represent every nook and corner of our State. Let them come in spirit and power, with the determination to destroy the power of the spirit, against which we wage war.

By the way, do not forget the statistics we mentioned week before last. Bring up the facts and figures, and let us shut the mouths of demagogues who are eternally harping on the high taxes under which our people groan, and who are yet mean enough to cringe to the vilest passions of the human heart, and fawn for a smile or a vote from the basest of the human race. Let these supple puppets, which are made or unmade by a breath, feel that the time has come when the State "has no further need of their services." Let them learn that a virtuous people, rightly informed in regard to its government, needs not the aid of vicious tools to consummate its purposes. If public servants will not stand upon the vantage ground to which popular favor has exalted them, and become the leaders of public opinion in all that purifies and elevates, let them feel that hereafter their position only serves to hold them up to the scorn of all good men.

In addition to the facts already specified, we desire that delegates to the convention will ascertain the amount of capital invested in distilleries within their respective districts, together with their numbers, and, as nearly as may be, the number of gallons of spirits manufactured by each. In this way we can begin to estimate the srength of our adversary;—a knowledge of which is essential to our success.

Lecture to Young Men.

BR REV. MR. MAXWELL.

SUBJECT—The right formation of character.

After a brief introduction to the course the lecturer defined and illustrated the meaning of the term Character as follows:

"Character, in its primary meaning, is the mark or engraving made by cutting on stone or other hard substance—the image or superscription on a coin; the device on a seal, &c.

"And so the marks and qualities which distinguish material objects, constitute their character in distinction from other objects—as weight, hardness, solidity, &c. constitute the character of a stone, in distinction from a cork which has other marks and qualities.

"And so we elevate the word, till we apply it to intelligent beings and designate by it, the moral image and superscription of a man. We see on men marks, qualities which, in their combination, we call their character. As you take two coins and examine their superscriptions, and from them determine their value and name, so the qualities, the traits, the moral marks of a man determine his value, in other words his character.

"It is not reputation; that is what others think of us—it has much of conjecture in it—its source is hearsay, and it may not agree with facts, for a man may by a course of deception get a reputation he does not deserve. Character lies in the man—it is the mark of what he really is. It would be precisely in accordance with the primary meaning of the word to suppose you, each of you, carried on your forehead a diamond, on which a device, an inscription was being wrought day by day, which should be an exact index to your thoughts, feelings, and spirit; and which all could see. You are each having such a character inscribed upon you, not engraven, it is true by art or man's device, not visable in one sense, and yet, known and read of all men—which will remain and be exhibited for or against you at the judgment day."

Having thus set his subject before his hearers, he observed: 1. "We are not born with characters." Character is not a faculty of the mind, but a result of free moral action—the out-growth of inward propelling forces—outward shaping influences. True, we are born with germs of character, to which it bears the same relation as the oak to the acorn. The tendency of these germs is, however, to evil unless corrected. This, he said, was not debatable ground, being in accordance with scripture teaching. The exigency arising from this original bias, has, however, been provided against in the divine plan, so that this wrong development can be counteracted and reversed.

2. "A character of some description will be formed whether you will or no.

"The tendency to development, to action in the human being is irrepressible—you may as well lay your hand upon the stars in their courses, or make a dark lantern of the sun, as attempt to restrain this out-growth. The human mind is the most powerful engine in creation, and when it is once set on the track of existence and the motive power turned on at birth, there is no longer a question whether there shall be development, progress in some direction or other; the simple thing we have to do is to direct that motion aright. The helm is put into our hands and we are called upon to decide what port our vessel shall enter. As the play of every wave on the shore of the ocean is shaping the configuration of that shore—carving and scolloping the rock, bearing away the soil, rippling and curling the sand, throwing up the sea weed, shells and spars—signals of wreck and death—so does every flush of thought leave its tracery upon the soul—every swelling of passion—every movement of desire—every beat of the pulse of healthy action, every outward influence even, shape, mould, and engrave, and throw up a residrium there, till character becomes as broadly marked as the headlands of the shore."

3. "The character first taken on, is usually the lasting one." This truth has become a proverb in all languages. "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined."

"The very rocks have had their youth, their formation periods, their seasons of impressability—then the leaf, the delicate fern, the shell, left their impress, or the monster of the deep, made his bed among them, and the soft impressable matter passed into rock, and rock it remains, with all its wonderful records unimpaired, and not a line of the delicate traces the leaf left there has been obliterated. We open the volume now, and read the history of creation as if the thousands of years that have elapsed only took us back to yesterday. But mind is more enduring than the rocks, and while it is, in its forming periods, as melted wax to receive impressions, it is as adamant to hold them. And as earth retains the clear impress of her Makers footprints where He walked in her youth time, but now in the indurated hardness of age, seems to retain no trace of his goings, so almost every event leaves its inscription upon us in our early years, while manhood and maturity are almost strangers to change, at least, those which are deep and radical."

4. "Character is the result of determination—is formed by a leading determination." It is presented to the mind of every one to choose what his character shall be. It might be thought that there are some exceptions to this rule, in the case of those "who have" so little definite shape that their characters can scarcely be said to be formed at all.

"There are such, and they remind one of the thistle-down that travels only just as the wind puffs it, and that is just as well one side up as another; they point as the wind blows—so do a peacock's feathers; they are the straws of human kind, which the current bears unresistingly along—the insects which flutter in the sunbeams—the butterflies which pass from flower to flower without purpose; they render no service to their fellow-creatures, for you cannot even draw a moral from them. But even such are not, in truth, exceptions to my remark. For them to determine to be something, would require such a stretch of exertion, that from sheer laziness they determine to be nothing, because that is a thing that will determine itself; they choose the easiest thing, on the principle that the lazy man ran down hill, because, he said, it was easier to let himself run than to walk. But such are not exceptions to my rule. There is not enough to such to form even a negative quantity."

5. "You have the power to be whatever you wish to be." * * * * "The mind's capacity to sink is measured only by its capacity to rise. If there is a bright zenith of glory, there is as dark a nadir of guilt and woe. But it will be each one's own fault if he sounds those depths. No one can soothe himself, or flatter his own vanity, by attempting to throw the blame on fate or destiny, as if he were bound by an iron decree, and could not help himself. There is, no doubt, many a scapegrace, whose importance is magnified in his own estimation by supposing himself the special mark at which all the divine decrees are aimed—the object of pursuit by an evil destiny. These martyrs of destiny are generally wonderfully complacent, but wofully deceived. You have nothing to do with fate, or destiny, or decrees. Duty is yours, decrees belong to God; they are all, to you, in an unknown region, which you cannot approach, from which you are excluded by the Supreme Intelligence. The Divine decrees are rules for the Divine guidance, and not for the guidance of human action."

He did not mean to say that all could be what they desired, in intellectual energy or power of mind; but that there was no bright eminence of Virtue, which was not within the reach of all. Thus the names of some men, on the page of history, are as fragrant flowers on a desert roadside. "A Howard, a Wilberforce, a Washington, or, in humbler life, a Harlem Page and Mrs. Fry, are examples of greatness more by the force of goodness than of intellect. The heights they sat on are within your reach."

6. But in order to act intelligibly in forming your determination, you want a standard of character—a pattern; and what shall you choose for this? Not the mere hero, the mere scholar, nor the mere man of the world, can furnish you this pattern; for "self is their centre, and self their circumference." He then said, he dare not point to a less perfect embodiment of it, than that set up in the Divine law—than that which we see in Him who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life. This character must be studied in the Bible, for there only are found "those great principles which must lie at the foundation of every good character. There, too, must be learned what spirit should be cultivated; the companions with whom we may safely associate; and directions as to the conduct which the lives of all should exemplify.—And finally, there must be learned the nature of that hope, which has so powerful an influence in elevating, purifying, and forming the character aright.

We conclude this hasty, and, we are sorry to add, imperfect synopsis of the lecture, by the following extract:

"Thus in our Savior's life and teachings we discover the principles we should adopt, the spirit we should cultivate, the companions we should choose, the conduct we should exemplify, and the hope we should cherish. These principles, this spirit, this conduct, this hope, will constitute a character fitted for heavenly society. And here, even, while struggling with the ills of this life, these principles will be a girdle of strength to you—such spirit and conduct, breast-plate and shield—and such a hope, a crown for your heads, which will brighten till it dazzles in the effulgence that blazes from the Throne of God."

☞ A gentleman asked a country clergyman for the use of his pulpit for a young divine, a relation of his. 'I really do not know,' said the clergyman, "how to refuse you—but if the man should preach better than me, my congregation will be dissatisfied with me afterwards; and if he should preach worse, I don't think he's fit to preach at all."

Harmless mirth is the best cordial against consumption of the spirits; wherefore jesting is not unlawful, if it trespasseth not in quantity, quality, or season.—Fuller.

FISHY.—Miss Gilmore was courted by a man named Haddock. "I only want, love," said he, "one gill more to make me a perfect fish."

Local Items.

SOCIAL ORDER.—The meetings of the friends of Temperance according to previous arrangement, were held in the lecture room of First Presbyterian Church on Wednesday evening, and on the street in front of Harrtson's Store, on Saturday. The speaking was well done up, particularly the address of the Rev. Mr. Maxwell at the former.

The next meeting will be held in the Fourth Presbyterian Church, on this (Wednesday) evening. Addresses may be expected by Hon. Judge Parsely; and John L. Ketchum, Esq.

Sad Accident.

It is our painful duty to record another shocking accident, which occurred on last Friday morning, at the bridge over Pleasant run, on the Madison railroad. The freight-train started before daylight, and the engineer consequently could not perceive that the trussels of the bridge had been washed out during the night. The locomotive and five cars immediately behind it were consequently precipitated into the run—a distance of some twenty feet. The water being still some ten or twelve feet deep, the locomotive was entirely submerged; and Mr. Horace Bacon, of this city, Henry Johnson, the engineer, and the fireman, whose name we have not ascertained, were carried down with it, and killed. The bodies of Bacon and the fireman have since been taken out, horribly crushed; but the engineer has not been found. None of the other hands were injured, although most of the cars composing the train were thrown off the track.

About the same time on Friday morning another accident similar to the above occurred on the Lafayette road, at Crooked Creek, the bridge over which gave way when the locomotive came upon it, precipitating it into the stream, and killing the fireman on the spot.

☞ Who has not felt the deep truthfulness and force of the following beautiful extract from the essay of Carlyle "on the signs of the times?" To much of the religion of our country, it is, we are sorry to say, justly applicable. Comes it not home to the doors of all who professing to love God, show by their whole lives that they have no love for man? How many professing people are right willing and ready to serve God, because that demands no sacrifice, as they suppose, of their accumulated good things; while their love for their neighbors, if we judge from their actions, is for their cash and not for their persons? Let those who have acquired wealth by gambling, grog-selling, and theft of other kinds, and afterwards become pious without restoring their ill-gotten treasure, bethink themselves, before they insult Heaven with their prayers. We have high authority for saying that such offerings will not be accepted. They are not the genuine currency of Heaven, and though they may pass among men who cannot pierce the disguises of hypocrisy, they will not fail to be rejected, when presented to Him who looks through all disguises, upon the heart. But hear Carlyle:

"To what extent theological Unbelief, we mean intellectual dissent from the Church, in its view of Holy Writ, prevails at this day, would be a highly important, were it not, under any circumstances, an almost impossible inquiry. But the Unbelief, which is of a still more fundamental character, every man may see prevailing, with scarcely any but the faintest contradiction, all around him; even in the Pulpit itself. Religion in most countries, more or less in every country, is no longer what it was, and should be,—a thousand-voiced psalm from the heart of Man to his invisible Father, the fountain of all Goodness, Beauty, Truth, and revealed in every revelation of these; but for the most part, a wise, prudential feeling grounded on a mere calculation; a matter, as all others now are, of Expediency and Utility; whereby some smaller quantum of earthly enjoyment may be exchanged for a far larger quantum of celestial enjoyment. Thus Religion, too, is Profit; a working for wages; not Reverence, but vulgar Hope or Fear. Many, we know, very many, we hope, are still religious in a far different sense; were it not so, our case were too desperate: But to witness that such is the temper of the times, we take any calm observant man, who agrees or disagrees in our feeling on the matter, and ask him whether our view of it is not in general well-founded."

Items of News.

England.—A resolution declaring Free Trade the definite commercial policy of England, passed the House of Commons by a vote of 468 to 53.

Lord Byron's daughter, Ada, Countess of Lovelace, is dead.

France.—The vote for the Empire was cast on the 21st and 22d November, and from the pains taken to get the voters to the polls, it is thought the majority, as well as vote, will be large, even beyond all former precedent.

South America.—The press of Chili urges the subject of religious toleration.—The clergy still oppose it.

The military force of Chili, in all, numbers 2,993 men.

Sandwich Islands.—Considerable excitement prevails at Honolulu, growing out of the proposition to negotiate for the acquisition of the Islands by the United States. The Polynesian speaks of putting them under the protection of some powerful State as the only alternative left them, in case such an emergency is pressed upon them.

Mexico.—This unfortunate country is now the theatre of general rebellion and revolution, which is headed by the French Count Rousset Boulbon, who has declared Sonora independent and annexed to France.

Our relations with Cuba seem to be taking a more benign direction than recently.

It is rumored that France has taken possession of the peninsula of Samna.—This, as might be expected, gives rise to considerable excitement and bluster among those who indulge the spirit of filibustering.

Correspondence.

Resolutions adopted by Princeton Temple of Honor, No. 27.

Whereas, The liquor traffic, with all its attendant evils, is greatly increasing in this community, the present laws being altogether inadequate to suppress such traffic—their open violation being an every-day occurrence; therefore

Resolved, That the traffic in intoxicating liquors is a great evil, and we deeply regret its great increase in this community.

Resolved, That no law less stringent than the "Maine law" is sufficient to suppress such traffic, and as temperance men and advocates of virtue, we will use all honorable means to procure such a law.

Resolved, That it is our inalienable right and our duty to petition our Legislature—to urge them earnestly, to enact a law that will protect us from the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That the course of our last Legislature, on this subject, was a total disregard for the wants of their constituents, and a proof that they, with some honorable exceptions, were not the sort of legislators to enact laws for a sober and virtuous people.

Resolved, That a general mass meeting of the friends of temperance and virtue be held in this place at some early period, and that a suitable person be procured to address the meeting.

Resolved, That four members of this body be chosen, to make each one appointment in the country, and attend, with whatever assistance they can obtain, read the Maine law, with any remarks they may choose, and circulate a petition for a similar law.

Resolved, That he who is unwilling to do what he can, for the advancement of temperance principles and procuring prohibitory laws, is unworthy the name of "A Templar," and his connection with this institution is an injury to the temperance cause.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the editor of the Temperance Chart, and also to the Democratic Clarion, for publication.

J. H. Graff, W. C. T.
Willis Howe, W. R.

For the Temperance Chart.

"Coroner's Inquest.—An inquest was held in Cotton township, [Switzerland Co.,] about two miles north-west of Jacksonville, on the 27th of November, 1852, over the body of Lee Rogers, found dead in the woods of Wm. Dickason, Jr. Verdict of the jury, that said Rogers came to his death in consequence of exposure, resulting from the excessive use of ardent spirits. Timothy W. Graham, Coroner."

Citizens of Indiana! the above is another argument, among thousands which happen in our State yearly, in favor of a law to prohibit the sale of alcoholic liquors to be used as a beverage. Lee Rogers I have known for several years; he was a kind husband and father, a good citizen, and had not been for his love of spirituous liquors, would have been an ornament to and a useful member of society. Some fifteen years since, he was a resident business man in Rising Sun, with some three or four thousand dollars, but, like too many others, he contracted the habit of using spirituous liquors to excess, and for the last few years, he has been a poor man and a confirmed inebriate, and has at last died from the effects of liquor. Had there been a law twenty years ago, upon the statute book of our State, prohibiting the sale of alcoholic liquor to be drank, Lee Rogers would not have contracted the habit of drinking it, and he would not have died a drunkard.

Tell me, you who advocate the use of this damning stuff to be poured down the throats of your neighbors, how are you to offset the evil done in this one case to the family of Lee Rogers? I ask you to bring forward the good that Alcohol has done in the world, and let us compare notes, and see if it has done more to benefit mankind than it has evil in this one single case. Dare you say it has ever saved the life of one individual, where nothing else would?—and yet it has killed its thousands, and will continue to kill, as long as it is used as a beverage! Deny it, if you can!—Who, in the eyes of strict justice, is chargeable with the death of Lee Rogers? Is it not the man who sold him the liquor, knowing, as he certainly did, the habits of his victim?—for rumor says it was his near neighbor that furnished him the jug-full that was found by the side of his lifeless body! Would it have been greater murder if he had furnished him arsenic or a loaded pistol, with full knowledge that he would swallow the one, or blow out his brains with the other? Not a whit! and yet the one is so common that it elicits hardly a remark, but let either of the others be done, and the whole community would rise up as one man, and say, hang the murderer—he is not fit to live upon the face of the earth!

How long, fellow-citizens, will you permit these murderous acts to be perpetrated in our midst?—for it is you who are guilty, as well as he who furnishes the murderous weapon; for you permit it, by allowing the law to remain which licenses men, for less than thirty pieces of silver, to deal out that which kills all who drink the poisonous draught—and whether you believe it or not now, the time will come when you will see it to your sorrow, if you do not arise in your strength, and use your efforts to have a prohibitory law placed upon the statute book of our State. Will you not do it, not only for your own sakes, but for the sake of your children, who are soon to take your places upon the arena of life? I conjure you, as you love your own happiness, as you love your own offspring, as you love the well-being of the community in which you live, as you wish for the well-being of our otherwise happy land, to consider well this subject, and then act in view of the judgment bar of God, where you and I must sooner or later appear!

P. S. Sage.

Allensville, Dec. 11, 1852.

For the Temperance Chart.

Louisville, Dec. 17, 1852.

Bro. Gordon:—Inasmuch as you have seen proper to publish a former letter of mine, I take the liberty of making another suggestion. I am truly glad to see the call for a State convention of the friends of temperance, to meet in your city. I hope it may be one worthy of the cause and the occasion. To make it such, every temperance organization in the State should at once adopt measures to be represented by the most efficient men they can send; and in order to have such, every Division of the Sons, every Temple, and every Section of Cadets, and also every organization of the Social Order, should adopt measures to meet the expenses of such representation. This is but right. If we have men to leave home, family, business, &c., to attend to matters in which we are equally interested, we ought by all means to pay the way; and will any Division or Temple hesitate to do so? Do not the friends of alcohol sacrifice liberally of their cash at the "shrine of Bacchus?" Have they not employed it by the "thousands," in order to defeat the friends of reform, in Maine and elsewhere? And shall we be less liberal than our foes?

One strong ground of my confidence in the certain triumph of our cause, is, that "the working men of the country are with us"—their hearts are in the matter. But they have their families to provide for, and they are really not able to lose the time, and meet expenses too; but let their expenses be met, and they will be there. We need them, and we must have them. They constitute the main prop of our glorious enterprise, and once the working men of Indiana will it, they will find the way to rid themselves of "Barleycorn," and all his curses.

And then let each temperance organization instruct their representative to go for a clear and distinct prohibitory law. Let us at once plant ourselves on the ground we intend to occupy, and ask our Legislature for that which we want, and which we are willing to accept, and in this way we will show plainly to the whole community what we are aiming at, and at the same time ascertain our means of accomplishing our end. * * * * *

I expect to be at the Convention, if life and health are spared.

Yours truly, Lee Roy Woods.

MEMORIAL.

ADOPTED BY THE

GRAND DIVISION OF THE SONS OF TEMPERANCE,

AND THE

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Indiana:

The undersigned Citizens of Indiana, believing that the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits, to be used as a beverage, is a great moral, social, and political evil, pray you to prohibit the same.

Spirituous and Malt Liquors made in the United States.

A table compiled from the Census returns, gives the product of spirituous and malt liquors in the United States, during the year 1850. From this table we learn the amount of capital employed during that year exceeded $8,000,000, and over 42,000,000 gallons of whisky and "high wines" were produced, besides 6,500,000 gallons of rum, and 1,177,924 barrels of ale. Of this vast river of liquid fire annually poured forth, the States of New York and Ohio produce about one-half.—As the present agitation of the question of prohibitory law gives a particular interest to the subject, we publish the statistics referred to:

State.	Capital invested.	Barrels of Ale, &c.	Gals. of Whisky & high wines.	Gals. of Rum, &c.
Maine,	$17,000	—	—	22,000
Vermont,	7,000	800	—	—
Mass.,	457,500	25,800	120,000	3,786 000
R. Island,	17,000	3,900	—	—
Conn.,	15,500	—	130,000	1,200
New York,	2,535,900	644,700	9,231,700	2,418,800
N. Jersey,	409,655	35,750	1,250,530	—
Penn.,	1,719,960	189,581	6,543,810	—
Maryland,	247,100	26,580	787,400	—
Virginia,	100,915	5,500	879,440	—
N. Carolina,	21,930	—	153,030	—
S Carolina,	3,475	—	43,960	—
Georgia,	7,150	—	60,450	—
Alabama,	500	—	—	3,000
Louisiana,	3,500	8,000	—	—
Kentucky,	168,805	18,500	1,491,745	—
Tennessee,	68,125	—	657,000	—
Missouri,	288,900	44,850	939,400	—
Ohio,	1,262,974	96,943	1,865,150	—
Indiana,	321,950	11,005	4,639,900	—
Illinois,	303,400	27,925	2,315,000	—
Michigan,	139,425	10,320	690,900	—
Iowa,	19,509	—	160,600	—
Wisconsin,	98,700	31,320	127,000	—
N. Mexico,	7,300	—	42,000	—
Utah,	3,000	300	—	—
Dist. Col.,	12,000	1,350	—	—
Total,	8,334,254	1,177,924	42,133,955	6,500,500

The amount of opposition which laws similar to that enacted in Maine are likely to meet with, is indicated by the capital employed in the manufacture of ale and spirits in the various States. In Maine, for instance, where a prohibitory law has been enacted, but $17,000 of capital was invested in 1850, and only 220,000 gallons of rum manufactured; while in New York, over two and a half millions of capital was employed in the manufacture of 9,231,700 gallons of spirits, 2,438,800 gallons of rum, and 644,700 barrels of ale. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, it will be seen, are also largely interested in these products.

These formidable statistics show the magnitude of the evil sought to be abated, and the great labor it will require, as well as the fearful amount of intemperance yearly provided for. We have not at hand the statistics of brandy and gin importations for 1850, or we would give them in this connection.

Beautiful Incident.—A writer in the Times, having been at Marshfield, tells of two young elm trees standing side by side on the farm, which were planted there by a father's hand, in memory of the loved children who preceded him to the spirit world. One morning, a few months ago, Mr. Webster had been missing from his study an hour or more, when he made his appearance with two small elm trees and a spade in his hands. Summoning the attendance of his son, he went out upon the lawn, planted the trees, and then turning to Fletcher, said in a subdued voice as he turned away, "My son, protect these trees after I am gone; let them ever remind you of Julia and Edward." Their sear and falling leaves now seem to typify participation in the mourning which marks this scene of sorrow.

A Liquor-ish Joke.—One of the coolest jokes of the season has been perpetrated by the liquor-dealers of New York, in raising the prices of wines and brandies on account of the short vintage in Europe. Those fellows are a jolly set, to be sure, or they never would have been guilty of such downright waggery in this hot weather. Those jolly old coves know a little better than any one else that the vineyards of France and Germany have about as much to do with the potables sold in this country, as sarsaparilla root has to do with the "purifying" fluids that are vended under its name. A short crop of grapes would have as little influence upon the production of wines and brandies in the United States, as a short crop of terrapin upon the manufacture of mock-turtle soup.

☞ A little girl is now on the way to this country who is considered a perfect violinist. Her name is Camille Nerso; she is only eleven years old.

Every may-be hath a may-not-be.

Fascination of the Wine Cup.

It will ever be a wonder to us—the fascination there is about the habit of drinking liquor. Upon an ocean strewn with wrecks, on whose dark waves no beacon of hope has ever gleamed, the young launch out. A drunkard dies to-day: to-morrow another reels into his vacant place in the bar-room: his boon companions deprecate the man's folly with glass in hand. A murderer stands to-day upon the scaffold, and points out the cause of his ruin and crime: to-morrow another drinks until mad, and commits a fresh murder. To-day, a husband and father beggars his wife and children, and dies a maniac's death: to-morrow a fresh score step over his fresh grave, and court the same death. The fanaticism of darkest Heathendom has nothing like it. The Hindoo mother casts her babe into the Ganges; but she is honest—she yields her heart's treasure to secure the favor of the guardian Deity: the Christian, civilized drunkard, immolates wife, children, and self, that he may drink. Some lacerate themselves with hooks: our citizens blot out their moral and physical beauty, and wear, voluntarily, shackles that gall both body and soul. The heathen casts himself down, and is crushed as the ponderous wheels of his deity roll along: the Christian destroys himself by inches—by a slow process of years—offering his vitals to the beaks that rend in the rumshop, and dragging down others to the sacrifice. The heathen worships the serpent whose fangs are red with the life of his child at the hearth: the Christian, too, is a serpent worshiper—the poison of the serpent runs and hisses in his own veins, but the mad wretch keeps the foe sacredly at the stricken hearth-side, ready to strike down the innocent and the pure who may chance within reach. Children, whose fathers sleep in drunkard's graves, laugh and drink, as their fathers have laughed and drinked. There is a pathway whose end is infamy and death, yet how eager men are to travel it!

Who Sold that Rum?

We learn from the Tribune of Saturday, that Mrs. O'Brien, at 180 Elizabeth street, was induced by a drunken woman, her relative, to get some more rum from a grocery near by; that they both got drunk, and were very noisy, though it was midday; that Mrs. O'Brien soon after fell upon the floor with her infant in her arms, and smothered it to death; and the child and its mother were found in this position, the child dead and the mother perfectly stupefied with liquor.

Upon such an awful case of infanticide as this, the Coroner ought to have inquired and reported to the public, of whom she got the liquor; whether he was licensed, and by whom; whether he had reason to know the intemperate character of the woman, and the tendency of the rum to produce such results; how many more grog-shops there are within five minutes walk of the house; and how much of this vice and crime and suffering would not have been known if the Maine law was in successful operation, and whether the public good demands so many facilities for intemperate mothers to get drunk and smother their infants to death. Instead of anything like this, the jury rendered a verdict of "death by suffocation, by being overlaid by its mother, who is supposed to have been intoxicated; the result of culpable neglect on the part of the mother."—Do not we need temperance men for Coroners?—New York City Alliance.

Old Age.—There is a quiet repose and steadiness about the happiness of age, if the life has been well spent. Its feebleness is not painful. The nervous system has lost its acuteness. Even in mature years, we feel that a burn, a scald, a cut, is more tolerable than it was in the sensitive period of youth. The fear of approaching death, which in youth we imagine must cause inquietude to the aged, is very seldom the source of much uneasiness. We never like to hear the old regretting the loss of their youth. It is a sign that they are not living their lives aright. There are duties and pleasures for the aged, and the wise will follow them. They will neither regret the loss of youth, nor affect to be younger than they are.—When men, they will not dress as boys, nor compete with them. When matrons, or matron-like maids, they will not dress like girls. When young women, they will not be childish, and play piping tones by way of enchantment. To be happy, we must be true to nature, and carry our age along with us.

Choice Gems.

Close thine ear against those that open their mouth against others.

Conduct, resolution, and courage, perform great things.

Confine your tongue, or else it will confine you.

Covetous and envious men are never at rest.

Covetousness never judges anything unlawful.

Craft must have clothes, but truth loves to go naked.

Death hath nothing terrible in it, but what life hath made so.

Death is the wish of some, the relief of many, and the end of all.

Debt is the worst poverty.

Decency and decorum are not pride.

Delight in, and frequent the company of good men.

Discreet wives have sometimes neither eyes nor ears.

Do good with what thou hast, or it will do thee no good.

Do in the hole as thou wouldst do in the hall.

Do nothing to-day that you will repent of to-morrow.

Eaten bread is forgotten.

Error is alway in haste.

Everybody's business is nobody's business.

Every fool can find faults that a great many wise men can't remedy.

Every heart hath its own ache.

Every moment of time is a monument of mercy.

Every one can tame a shrew but he that has her.

Examples do not authorize a fault—Vice must never plead prescription.

Experience is the best adviser, but it is better to learn by others than our own.

Objections.—'Why,' says one, 'destroy the liquor? Why not keep it for other purposes?' Because it is not wanted for other purposes. Besides, this is the penalty, and the only penalty, that has ever been effiicacious towards sustaining the law and the rights of the people.

'But,' says another, 'why not sell it, and give the money to the poor?' The poor, said a ragged by-stander, have had enough of it; let it go.

But what a waste? How much more a waste to be drank by the ground, than to be drank by men? If men bought it and paid their money for it, and then drank it, there would be a waste; waste of money, waste of health, waste of morals, and often, waste of soul. Let it all perish; and two millions of dollars, now spent upon it, all be saved and expended upon other objects, and then it will be seen where is the waste, and where the gain.

☞ It is said that the tract of land lately ceded to the United States by the Sioux Indians, is about 800 miles long, by 140 broad—making 112,000 square miles, or more than twice as much as the whole of New England. The whole district is made up of the most fertile land in the world, and will, ere long, be among the most productive and valuable portions of the republic.

Circular.

A State Temperance Convention will be held in the city of Indianapolis on Wednesday the 12th day of January, 1853.

All the friends of this great Reform—all the foes of that liquid poison which is yet drowning the intellects, darkening the hopes, desolating the homes and destroying the souls of thousands, are invited to come.

Yours in hope and effort for a prohibitory law.

Edward R. Ames,
Calvin Fletcher,
W. Hannaman,
W. C. Thompson,
J. R. Osgood,
Clement E. Babb,
State Central Committee.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

We are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P., that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

---

The Age of Steam and Lightning!
MORRERL'S Eagle Book Works, 196 Fulton St., N. Y. Warehouse and Salesroom 25 Park Row.

BLANK BOOKS.

BLANK BOOKS, in greater variety and at lower prices than at any other Establishment in the country. Five Thousand Reams of manufactured Account Books constantly on hand, adapted to every market in the Union.

Half-bound Caps, per quire, 9 to 18 cents; Full bound, 15 to 22; and, in finer bindings, 25 to 50; Demys, Russia Bindings, 50 cents to $1 00; Medium Royal, and Super Royal Books in proportion

A New Feature.—All the Books furnished by this Establishment, which are 25 cents per quire and upwards, are beautifully PAGED, by a newly invented process, without charge. Memorandum Books of all kinds. Wholesale and Retail Dealers supplied in any quantity, for cash or approved credit.

NEW MISCELLANY.

The Cheapest and Best of its Price yet Published.

A. MORRELL will issue every month, a volume of 150 pages of Choice Reading, useful and entertaining, by the best writers. Can be mailed to any part of the Union at Magazine postage. Single subscribers $1 50 per year; Four Subscribers for $5; and Ten Copies sent to one address for $10; being only One Dollar per year. All payments in advance.—Orders and Communications may be addressed to the office of publication, No. 7, Theatre Alley, or to the publisher, ARTHUR MORRELL, aug 11 25 Park Row, New York.

Divisions who wish Constitutions, or any other kind of printing done with neatness and dispatch, we would recommend them to Bro. Ohr. Bro. O is a practical printer, and a member of the Grand Division. C WOODWARD, G. S.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10–3m

Local and Traveling Agents Wanted.

FOR popular and useful Books just published—CALIFORNIA ILLUSTRATED, including a Description of the Panama and Nicaragua Routes, with 48 superb Tinted Lithographs, 234 pages, 8 vo Price $2. This work, by J. M. Letts, has been adjudged by the unanimous voice of the press to be the most elaborate, practical and intensely interesting volume that has yet been written upon this golden theme. Since the publication of Steven's Journal of Travels, no work has appeared that has created such a thrilling sensation. It is pre-eminently practical, and is interspersed with incident of the most amusing character. In the language of one of the city editorials, "it is a perfect daguerreotype of California, taken by the light of a noon-day sun." Also, Dr. Beach's great work on Medicine, The American Practice and Family Physician, 800 pages, 200 engravings, 8 vo. sheep. Price $5. Dr. Beach is at the head of the eclectic practice in this country.—Such was the demand, that eighteen thousand copies of this work were printed in one edition. Also, Dr. C. D. Hammond's work on the same principles of practice, Medical Information for the Million, or True Guide to Health, 12 mo, cloth, 528 pages, price $1 50 cloth, $1 paper covers, 4th thousand.—Also, Woman in her Various Relations; containing practical rules for American Females, for their conduct in the detail of every domestic duty. Royal 18 mo.; red cloth, illustrated; 324 pages; price 63 cents. This work should be in the hands of every lady especially the young Such is its popularity that nearly three thousand copies have been sold in the region of New York alone within a very few months. Also a new and very useful article of Stationery for the preservation of valuable papers, &c., needed for reference, such as letters, invoices, &c. Its form is that of a scrap book, with leaves prepared for the reception of the article to be filed, thus superceding, with many advantages, the practice of binding. The retail prices as follows:

IMPROVED ADHESIVE LETTER, INVOICE AND MUSIC FILE.

Size.	Thickness.	Single.	Doz or more.
Cap,	250 leaves	$1 00	$9 00
Packet Post,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Letter,	250 do	1 00	9 00
Cap,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Packet Post,	500 do	1 50	15 00
Letter,	500 do	1 50	9 00
Bill,	500 do	1 00	9 00
Music,	80 do	1 00
Do half mor clo s	80 do	1 25
Do hf tur mor do	80 do	1 50

N. B.—Orders for peculiar sizes or styles of binding filled with despatch.

Special contracts made for large lots.

Orders for Books above advertised, with cash or postage stamps accompanying, will be promptly filled, prepaid to any part of the United States.

Address, ROBERT T. YOUNG,
(Successor to Wm. Holdrege,) No. 140, Fulton Street, New York.

Editors giving this advertisement two or three insertions entire, will be entitled to a copy of California Illustrated. nov 10–3w

---

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.
Manufacturers of
Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,
Of Every Size and Description,
Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.
CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.
Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.
Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,
Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different sets of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11–1y

To Persons out of Employment!
BOOK AGENTS WANTED,
To Canvass for
New Pictorial, Standard, Historical, and Religious Works.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young persons of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid.

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
sep 1 3m 181 William Street, New York.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

ATTENTION is respectfully solicited to the following facts and statements in regard to the above Agency;

Indianapolis being the centre and Capital of the State, accessible from all parts by means of the numerous railroads which concentrate within her borders—filled constantly with strangers from all parts of the country—presents one of the most available cities in the West, for the successful carrying out an Agency, such as below described:

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

To give efficiency to this most important branch of the Agency, the services of an energetic and responsible Attorney in each county of the State has been secured. This, in connection with the fact that the undersigned is himself a practical Lawyer, and has had several years' experience in this branch of the Agency in Ohio, affords a full guarantee that all business in this department will be attended to with fidelity and dispatch.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

To give efficiency to this branch of the Agency, the services of a distinguished and responsible Attorney and Counsellor, resident at Washington, and experienced in this department, has been secured

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Indianapolis, Ind.

Geo. Taylor, Esq., Attorney and Counsellor at Law, is connected with, and authorized to transact any business of the above agency. Office as above.

REFER TO

Hon. Isaac Blackford, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.

Hon. Samuel E. Perkins, Judge of the Supreme Court for the State of Indiana.

Hon Wm. J. Brown; Editor of State Sentinel.

John D. Defrees, Esq., Editor of State Journal.

Messrs. Ellis & Spann, Editors of Indiana Statesman.

Messrs. Elder & Harkness, Editors of The Locomotive.

R. R. Underhill, Esq.

Wm. Sheets, Esq.

C. B. Davis, Esq.

American and Foreign Agency,
CITY OF WASHINGTON, D. C.
Under the direction of AARON H. PALMER, Counsellor of the Supreme Court of the U. States.

The undersigned has been duly appointed sole Agent for Indiana of the above Agency, (the best in the Union,) and will give his prompt and faithful attention to all business confided to his personal management, requiring to be transacted in this State or elsewhere in the United States, or any part of the commercial world, through the principal office at Washington. W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
aug 11–1y Indianapolis, Ind.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.
CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,
Dealers in all kinds of
Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass. Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,
WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
DEALER IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.
Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSON
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN
Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,
North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

A REGISTER

HAS been opened at the Real Estate and General Agency Office, Indianapolis, in which all persons can enter property for sale, with full description, price per acre, &c., without charge, (excepting disbursements for advertising,) unless a sale effected. Said Register will be at all times open to public inspection, and the advantage thus offered to owners of real estate for the prompt disposal of their property is far superior to all others.

Also, a Register for renting property has been opened under the same regulations as the above.
aug 11–1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Booksellers and Stationers,
No. 12, Washington Street,
june30 1v INDIANAPOLIS, IND

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

To Cure a Cold, with Headache and Soreness of the Body, take the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, and wrap up warm, to sweat during the night.

For a Cold and Cough, take it morning, noon, and evening, according to directions on the bottle, and the difficulty will soon be removed. None will long suffer from this trouble when they find it can be so readily cured. Persons afflicted with a seated cough, which breaks them of their rest at night, will find, by taking the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, they may be sure of sound, unbroken sleep, and consequently refreshing rest. Great relief from suffering, and an ultimate cure, is afforded to thousands who are thus afflicted, by this invaluable remedy.

From its agreeable effect in these cases, many find themselves unwilling to forego its use when the necessity for it has ceased.

From two eminent Physicians in

Fayetteville, Tenn., April 16th, 1851.

Sir:—We have given your Cherry Pectoral an extensive trial in our practice, and find it to surpass every other remedy we have for curing affections of the respiratory organs.

DRS. DIEMER & HAMPTON.

To Singers and Public Speakers this remedy is invaluable, as by its action on the throat and lungs, when taken in small quantities, it removes all hoarseness in a few hours, and wonderfully increases the power and flexibility of voice.

Asthma is generally much relieved, and often wholly cured by Cherry Pectoral. But there are some cases so obstinate as to yield entirely to no medicine. Cherry Pectoral will cure them, if they can be cured.

Bronchitis, or irritation of the throat and upper portion of the lungs, may be cured by taking Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses. The uncomfortable oppression is soon relieved.

Rev. Dr. Lansing, of Brooklyn, New York, states: "I have seen the Cherry Pectoral cure such cases of Asthma and Bronchitis as leads me to beleive it can rarely fail to cure those diseases."

For Croup. Give an emetic of antimony, to be followed by large and frequent doses of the Cherry Pectoral, until it subdues the disease. If taken in season, it will not fail to cure.

Whooping Cough may be broken up and soon cured by the use of Cherry Pectoral

The Influenza is speedily removed by this remedy. Numerous instances have been noticed where whole families were protected from any serious consequences, while their neighbors, without the Cherry Pectoral, were suffering from the disease.

Salem, Ohio, June 11th, 1851.

Doct. J. C. Ayer:—I write to inform you of the truly remarkable effects of your Cherry Pectoral in this place, and in my own family. One of my daughters was completely cured in three days of a dreadful Whooping Cough, by taking it. Dr. Means, one of our very best physicians freely states that he considers it the best remedy we have for pulmonary diseases and that he has cured more cases of Croup with it, than any other medicine he ever administered.

Our clergyman of the Baptist Church says that during the run of Influenza here this season, he has seen cures from your medicine, he could scarcely have believed without seeing.

Yours respectfully, J. D. SINCLAIR,
Deputy Postmaster.

From the distinguished Professor of Chemistry and Materia Medica, Bowdoin College.

I have found the Cherry Pectoral, as its ingredients show, a powerful remedy for colds, and coughs, and pulmonary diseases. P. Cleveland, M. D.

Brunswick, Me., Feb. 5, 1847.

Dr. Valentine Mott, the widely celebrated Professor of Surgery in the Medical College, New York City, says:

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of 'Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,' which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

Cures of severe diseases upon the Lungs have been affected by Cherry Pectoral in such extreme cases as warrant the belief that a remedy has at length been found that can be depended on to cure the Coughs, Colds and Consumption which carry from our midst thousands every year. It is indeed a medicine to which the afflicted can look with confidence for relief, and they should not fail to avail themselves of it.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. oct. 6 3m

---

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

T. M. Nichols. J. F. Johnston.
NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.
june30 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1853. NO. 28.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

Part of an Address delivered before the Social Order of Temperance,

BY REV. MR. MAXWELL.

The following note of Mr. Maxwell to Mr. Robert Dempsey, Secretary of the Social Order, has been placed in our hands:

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 30, 1852.

SIR:—I herewith forward you a portion of the address I had the honor to deliver before the Social Order of Temperance. If the committee deem it worthy of publication, it is at their disposal.

Respectfully yours,

GEO. M. MAXWELL.

* * * It is not my present purpose to attempt to paint for you a picture of the drunkard's woes, the drunkard's sorrows, and the drunkard's crimes—nor to descant in a general manner upon the evils brought into the world, and perpetuated by the use of alcoholic drinks. These subjects are already familiar to you; to some possibly, by experience, to others, by description, so far as description can convey an adequate idea of them. It is my wish to speak on a subject more practical in our present circumstances.

To him who has but half an eye, even if that is a glass one, it must be manifest that a change has been going on in society for the last few years—a change scarcely less than that caused by the sun's rising upon the darkness and damps that before enveloped the earth. An overwhelming flood, that was bearing down the father's pride, the mother's hope, the widow's support, and the young wife's trusted one, by thirty thousand a year, into a grave that is the surest entrance to the world of despair, has been in some measure checked, and many of its victims rescued from its dark bosom; a song is now heard in many a hovel as well as mansion, but it is not the song of drunken revelry, it is the song of thanksgiving. The tear now starts from the eye of the wife and mother, but it is not the scalding tear that comes forth from the fountain of grief—it is the tear of joy, the dumb speech of a heart too full for utterance.

In witnessing such a change as this, we wonder, admire, and adore. We wonder at the greatness of the power that could effect such a mighty reformation; we admire the adaptation of that power to the object to be accomplished; we adore the goodness of God, who put such a power in operation.

But such is the case with all extensive moral reformations, it must win its way gradually overcoming obstacle after obstacle, till it bursts over the earth; like the advancing light of the morning—now streaming suddenly across a plain; now slowly coming down a mountain side and lighting up the valley below, and then shooting over the next hill top, till mountains and their deepest gorges are glowing beneath its vertical rays.

It is my purpose to notice some of the hindrances in the way of the more rapid advance of this enterprise—

I. And foremorst among these, I notice artificial distinctions in Society.

You will consider me quite wide of the mark here perhaps, for you will answer me that we have no such distinctions, and if we had, they could not hinder the Temperance cause. But let us look at this matter a little before we decide.

It is true we have no such distinctions as exist under monarchies; we have no titled nobility to take off our hats to; we have no lords to drive with insolent hoof over us; but still are there not fast growing distinctions, which in their maturity will be even more insolent and insufferable than the titled nobility of the old world? Distinctions not founded on merit or solid worth, but on brainless pride, blown up almost to bursting with a sense of its own importance; an aristocracy, if I must use the word, which carries its chief mark in the quality of the cloth it wears, that looks with growing contempt upon any one that labors, upon any one whose hands are browned and toughened by toil. The nucleus of this class are those who have some wealth, without sense enough to use it aright. Then around these, as flies around molasses, gather the lazy fop, the gentleman loafer—the elegant man of unknown profession, who lives one never knows how, but yet always lives at the top of the fashion. Such have any thing to do with labor? Dare to wheel their own barrow, or be seen with a bundle, bag, or burden? Shocking! they would be disgraced forever. Is there no such class as this in our city? I believe there are specimens of all sorts, ages, and genders, and such men and women are the things that tempt us most powerfully to believe that creative power and wisdom has made a mistake, having put together machines which are found upon experiment to be good for—nothing.

Far be it from my heart to wish by word or act, to do anything to set one class in society at variance with another. I would be the last to encourage that leveling spirit so much abroad, which would bring every thing down to its own debased standard. I have no such intention, and my actions shall never have such a tendency. True merit, moral worth, integrity, and honesty will have an influence, and ought to have an influence far beyond their opposites. What I object to, is that those who are most likely destitute of all these qualities, with most likely every detestable quality in vigorous development, should set themselvs up as an upper circle—as those—

> For whose sake all nature stands,
> And stars in courses move.

Perhaps they have some property which an honest hard working Father, shoe-maker or blacksmith left them—and now forsooth they are too good to soil their delicate fingers with any useful employment. Are there none such? What is labor that any one should regard it as not respectable? 'Tis the million man power that keeps the machinery of society agoing, and without which these exquisites, too good to do anything useful, would perish sooner than impertinent flies and musquetoes in December. Look at me and answer, you brawny-limbed, broad chested mechanic! What can you do?

"What can I do? I can take the iron and steel in my fingers and twist it into an iron horse, that will go snorting through the land, dragging his burden of grain or merchandize or human freight after him.

> "Those fleshless arms whose pulses leap
> With floods of liquid fire,"

Are stretched forth only at my bidding. I can build a floating palace, and put a heart into it, whose every beat will send it up stream against wind and tide and in face of every element, to pour the productions of every nation at your feet. I can make a harness for the lightning and give you the reins. I build your machinery, instinct with all but life and human intelligence, that plies its unwearied strength, one moment to draw out the silken thread till it rivals the attenuation of the gossamer—next to crush beneath its strength the hardest steel; now, with the most delicate nicety, it performs the finest operations of art with a precision that defies human skill, or wields its mighty arm to produce effects man could never have produced. I rear your dwellings and your temples for worship. I fashion your splendid carriages, which roll you along in security and ease. What do I do? Do without me, and you would lodge under a tree, eat with your fingers, plough with a sharp stick, chop wood with a stone hatchet, and make your coats of fig leaves—that is what you would do, if I did nothing."

Now, which deserves to compose "the upper circle," if there is to be one--this hard working, clear minded, honest hearted mechanic, with his tidy wife and neat smiling children at home, or the pretending fop who has never been suspected of doing any thing useful yet?—who, if a merchant buys a stock of goods on credit, and then expects his business to take care of him, while he entrusts it to clerks, and smokes his cigar in all lounging places. Perhaps as a sort of title page to himself, he has an attorney's sign suspended from the side of some door, while he in the mean time reads more of Byron and Bulwer than of Blackstone, and practices more on the streets, delighting the ears of simpering belles with flattering compliments and choice culled scandal.

Now I desire to see all estimations of men founded on merit, on solid worth. Let a man be rated in the scale of our estimation as God rates him, as nearly as we can, ascertain that, and then we shall have no artificial distinctions.

Now, how do such pretensions hinder the Temperance cause?

Much every way. In the first place, do you find these individuals who compose this upper circle, giving their influence actively to promote this cause? Oh no! not they. There are a great many reasons why they should not—as an almost universal fact the influence of such is against this cause, against it openly and against it secretly, with all the power they can command.

And again, it is the influence of this class, that is most powerful to keep open and support the fashionable drinking places, where the young and thoughtless are taught to take the first step to ruin. And these more fashionable saloons I regard as the most powerful engines of destruction existing among us. True they may not give a man the last push that topples him over into a drunkard's grave; but their allurements meet the young man ere his principles are formed upon that sure foundation which will enable him to endure temptation; they meet him when his mind is easily influenced, and by a slight inclination then from the right way may shape his course forever. How often is the young man brought into a position where he sees two paths opening before him; the one leading in the end up the heights of glory, the other down the steeps of despair.—Here now is perhaps the pivot of his destiny—the weight of a feather upon him at this juncture may decide. If a man steps forth now, and by the weight of his hand simply, inclines him into the wrong path, this first wrong impression, which starts him in the wrong way, has immeasurably more guilt attached to it than the last kick which is only sent after him as he plunges down the pit of destruction. Oh, these so called respectable fashionable drinking places, they are without hyperhole the recruiting stations of the pit! Into these the unsuspecting are drawn, and there they are enlisted for a war upon their own eternal happiness, a war upon God, a war upon virtue. And who are the chief supporters of these fashionable drinking places? Who so good customers usually, as these who style themselves the fashionable, the upper circle?

And then it is this class also, whose influence is mainly instrumental in keeping up the wine drinking custom, from which our land most unhappily is not yet freed. When they meet they must have wine; not an assembly can there be of them, but Satan must come also among them. Wine, manufactured, fellow citizens, most likely in your own city, from whiskey, cider, logwood, nux vomicum, and other poisonous drugs—the wine must flow in, that the wit may flow out, for without some such artificial stimulant their social gatherings are dull indeed. But so long as these wine drinking customs are kept up, we can no more remove the evils of intemperance than you could remove the small pox from your city, while men were going about with vials of it in their pockets, pedling it to every one they might meet.

And besides, what choice epithets are bestowed upon temperance men by this class of persons. The mischief is, they wield a tremendous influence in every society. Men are so smitten with admiration for any thing that pretends to greatness; and we are all so much afraid that we shall not be admitted into the first circle, that we would not offend one of these exquisites for the world; and the young man who is just about to come out and make his entrance into society, feels that he must pay special court to this class if he wishes to get along at all. Let one of them but sneer at a Temperance society, and how many stand ready with open mouths to drink in the words and applaud. Let them but insinuate that it is a vulgar place, that no respectable men go there, and its doors are at once avoided by how many. Now it takes a considerable degree of moral firmness to endure a sneer, and many a man, I am sorry to say, will pay more attention to the sneers of a fool than to the counsels of a wise man.

But there is still another point whence these false views of respectability act against our cause.

Many a young mechanic, or laborer, feeling that he is shut out by his labor from this, so called upper circle, is led to seek society wherever he can find it, and giving himself up to the guidance of chance he is most likely to find his society in the bar room or grocery; and here his downward course will begin. Learning from the words and actions of others that labor is not respectable, he gets discouraged, don't care, becomes idle, drinks for the want of something better to do. Seeing that others look down upon all work, he begins to look down upon himself, because he has to work; and loosing self respect he is a ready tool for the devil to do his work with. Oh what consequences of death and ruin flow from setting up a false standard of respectability. I respect the man whose sweat drops wash his gains from all dishonesty, and I despise the man who despises honest toil, as I would one who despises his own mother. Is that heart any the less warm and true, that beats under the coat a little thread bare, and not, perhaps, in the latest fashion? That countenance any the less open and honest, upon which the sun has looked? His grasp any the less hearty, whose hands are calloused by the plough, the plane, the trowel, or blackened at the anvil? Whenever a young man who has fallen into courses of idleness and dissipation, attempts to reform, I despair of his success, unless he forsakes his idle ways and pursues at once some healthful employment. So long as he is idle he is on the devil's ground.

And, finally, I may say this false estimate of respectability and standing has a tendency to keep down the poor inebriate whenever he attempts to rise from his degradation. If he casts a longing glance upward, and finds the doors of society closed against him, he will be likely to fall back discouraged. Now, we have lived long enough to see a refutation of the opinion that the inebriate is no longer a man; that the fire of alcohol has so burnt out his human nature, that there is no more soul in him than in the old tea kettle which warms his water for his toddy. It has been shown to us that he has a soul, and oftentimes a great one; and that, instead of passing him by, we should reach out to him the Samaritan's hand. Some men I believe are mean enough to be perfectly safe from the temptations of the devil; they will never be drunkards, for it takes more raw material to make a drunkard than there is in some men.

But we have already dwelt too long, I fear, on this topic; I pass to notice another hindrance.

II. The false dignity and comparative indifference of a large class of those who are most influential in community.

It is a sublime spectacle to see a whole population swaying and surging under the agitation of a great subject. There is sublime power concentrated in the united voice and arm of an aroused people. Such a spectacle the sun looked upon when it saw our Revolutionary Fathers banded together for the vindication of our national liberties. And in order to carry any great moral enterprise, we must have such union, such determination, such combined efforts.—And as Nelson, on the morning of his last battle, hoisted to the mast-head of his ship, these brief but mighty words—"England expects every man to do his duty"—so we, in our encounter with Alcohol, must fling out from the mast-head of our good temperance ship, as our watchword, "we prosper only as every man does his duty." But what is this we see? A portion of the most influential in society stand aloof from a cause which requires that every shoulder should be set to it. "Why stand ye here idle all the day long? Go, work in my vineyard."

But here one imagines that he will compromise his dignity, if he co-operate actively with a temperance organization.—Dignity! What is dignity? A corporosity that will weigh two hundred and fifty?—Not that precisely. What then? A feeling that puts on a stiff cravat, a high collar, takes all the joints out of the back, throws up the arms on the breast, and whispers in the ear—"you are the people, and wisdom will die with you?" A something which sets all day, and watches the weathercock of popularity, to see which way it points, and then trims its sails accordingly? This must be the dignity that cannot go to a temperance meeting. I have supposed that true dignity was that nobleness or elevation of mind which consists in a high sense of propriety, truth and justice, with an abhorrence of all mean and sinful actions. And I think so still. It is something then which we are to bear within us—something which does not consist in time, place or circumstances, and which is by no means compromised by engaging in a work of benevolence which may call for our co-operation. A man may stop to pull a sheep out of a ditch, and not in the least lower his dignity. "How much better then, is a man than a sheep!" It was not beneath the dignity of Infinite Majesty to stoop to save the lost. And is the servant above his master? I have observed that the only men who are afraid of lowering their dignity by helping the unfortunate, are those who have no dignity to lower. True dignity is something we shall take to heaven with us, if so happy as to reach that bright world; but we shall not take it with us, if it is only something worn on the outside, as a bald man wears a wig.

And equally discouraging is the indifference of others who are capable of exerting a great influence. Indifference on a great moral question, I cannot reconcile with a profession of Christianity. The social law that binds us all, our Savior enshrined in these words—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." This law makes us our brother's keeper. It is a part of our social existence. Our brother has a right to claim a certain supervision at our hands, so far as we are capable of securing to him the blessings he needs—protection, when assailed—succour, in distress—support, in weakness—instruction, when ignorant;—in a word, the means of happiness for this world and the next. The constitution of God and the law of the Bible has placed him under our social and moral keeping. Our ability to do him good, is the rule and limit of our duty. And you can tear yourself away from this law and constitution, and roll yourself up in your own porcupine covering and remain guiltless, no more than you can tear your body, limb from limb, and still have each part retain its vitality and action. Am I right here? Then, my hearers, how shall we estimate the indifference of those who, having influence, will not exert it?—who see their fellow-men staggering upon the brink of a drunkard's hell, but put forth no hand for their rescue? If you pass a neighbor's house on fire, and do not give the alarm, would not your fellow-men call you to an account? More, if the cry comes to you, that there are some perishing in the flames, and you pass quietly on—what then? The execrations of an outraged humanity would hunt you from the earth. But here you can see a man put a torch to his passions, which will burn up character, respectability, the soul itself, and not even dash the brand from his hand. You can look with indifference upon the form of one whose countenance is already gleaming with the fires of damnation, who will soon throw himself upon the funeral pile of his hopes, and appear drunk at the bar of God! And you have no heart to pity, and no hand to help.—Shame on such human nature! The drunkard's dog pities him, and feels all that his brutish heart can feel; yes, even till the tear-drops will roll from the poor brute's eye;—but man has no pity for his brother man!

> "Christians, view the day
> Of retribution. Think how you will hear
> From your Redeemer's lips the fearful words,
> Thy brother perishing in his own blood,
> Thou sawest * * He was in prison
> To vice and ignorance, nor didst thou send
> To set him free. O! ere that hour of doom,
> Whence there is no reprieve, brethren, awake
> From this dark dream." * *

Beautiful Extract.

VIRTUE has resources buried in itself, which we know not, till the invading hour calls them from their retreats. Surrounded by hosts without, and when nature itself, turned traitor, is its most deadly enemy within, it assumes a new and a superhuman power, which is greater than nature itself. Whatever be its creed—whatever be its sect—from whatever segment of the globe its orisons arise, virtue is God's empire, and from His throne of thrones He will defend it. Though cast into the distant earth, and struggling on the dim arena of a human heart, all things above are spectators of its conflict, or enlisted in its cause. The angels have their charge over it—the banners of archangels are on its side; and from sphere to sphere, through the illimitable ether, and round the impenetrable darkness at the feet of God, its triumph is hymnod by harps, which are strung to the glories of the Creator!—E. L. B. Lytton.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 5, 1853.

The Grand Lecturer.

Judge PARSLEY will not be able in consequence of ill health, to lecture in the southern portion of the State for a few weeks to come.

We are now able to announce the following appointments, viz:

Edinburg,	January	6th,	1853.
Franklin,	"	7lh,	"
Greenwood,	"	8th,	"
Lebanon,	"	9th,	"
Strawtown,	"	10th,	"
Lafayette,	"	17th,	"

After spending a week there, he will proceed to Attica. He requests the brethren in Lafayette and Attica to publish appointments for him, at such places and times in their respective counties, as may be thought best. He will spend a week in each county.

☞ To-morrow the Legislature of Indiana meets in the Capitol, to consult together, and devise ways and means to promote the prosperity and happiness of the people. A glorious object, truly! and we sincerely hope they will adapt their means to its accomplishment. If they do, and we are not without faith, we shall soon hold a glorious jubilee over the demolished ruins of alcohol.

Little & Wigam's Hotel.

These enterprising gentlemen having completed the addition to their Hotel, gave the corps editorial, and quite a number of other friends, an invitation to dinner on Christmas. Among others, it was our good fortune to be there, to enjoy their hospitality and excellent fare; and we must say, that we have never had greater cause to be satisfied with both, on any occasion in our life. This is the uniform testimony of all who at any time stop there. In all the variety of dishes of different kinds set before us, (and there were more than we had time to count,) we saw nothing like intoxicating liquors present. This was a testimony to the character of the house, befitting the spirit of the times. We bespeak for the house a liberal patronage on the part of all strangers who may visit our city during the winter.

Importation of Spirituous and other Liquors into Indianapolis.

From January 1st to Dec. 17, 1852, by the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad.

According to our promise last week, we shall now present the facts and figures in relation to the importation of spirituous liquors into this city by the Madison and Indianapolis railroad. It will be seen by reference to these figures, that our importations in that line have been extremely heavy—quite sufficient to excite alarm in the minds of all good citizens in reference to the consequences. If these importations did any good—if those who do not drink did not get along as well as those who do, there might be some apology offered for the importers and their customers; as it is, they stand without excuse. But here are the facts:

Sp't'us liquors,	In barrels,	84,600 gallons.
	In casks,	12,500
	In hf-bbls.,	4,620
			101,720
Ale.....	In barrels,	6,680
	In hf-bbls.,	1,100
			7,780
Wine, in baskets,.....			112
Total, of Spirits, Ale and Wine,			109,612

Now we have indubitable evidence that these importers, through the process of "Rectification," double the quantity of spirituous liquors above named. This alone would give us, for sale here, at least two hundred thousand gallons of spirits.—How much liquor is obtained from other quarters, we are not able to determine; but it is certain there is considerable.

As we have stated, many of our importers take these liquors through a process known among the craft as "rectification," whereby every gallon is doubled, before their consumers are entitled to touch, taste or handle. This, of course, demands water, and if the process ceased with the simple dilution, it would certainly be a benevolent one. But the strength and power of the liquors to intoxicate must be preserved, or they would lose their credit. Accordingly, the due degree of pungency and potency is attained by adding a sufficient quantity of Cocculus Indicus, and other deadly drugs. We remember to have known one vender of liquors, who was in the habit of keeping up their strength, by collecting and throwing into the barrel the ends of cigars and chews of tobacco cast away in his grocery by his customers. One of these, to our knowledge, purchased one of his empty barrels, and upon sawing it in two, discovered that he had been drinking the juice of well-masticated tobacco. That a similar practice is followed by some of our city poisoners, we have no doubt. We hope their customers will think of it, when about to swig down their poisons. It will certainly add to the relish of the delicate beverage.

But we desire to call attention to the estimated cost to our people of these importations. A good financier has calculated the cost of the liquors brought here, at about $100,000; but as the quantity is doubled by the process of rectification, their cost to the consumer would be increased in the same ratio. This would give for liquors the enormous sum of $200,000. Then comes the time lost by the consumers, in drinking and being drunk; and, at a low estimate, say a dollar a day, for the time, more than $25,000, in addition to the cost of the liquors, is thus lost to the consumers of our city and county, every year. No wonder some are accumulating princely fortunes, while others are dying paupers! No wonder some are building magnificent mansions, while the men whose hard-earned dimes aid them in doing it, are unable to live in the meanest cabin of the suburbs!

People of Marion county, look around you! Who are getting rich with a rapidity beyond all honest precedent? Who are getting poor in the same ratio? Answer these questions for yourselves; and then act for or against the liquor traffic, as your self respect, patriotism, and philanthropy, may prompt.

Coroner's Inquests.

There have been held in this (Marion) county, since 1846, twenty-five coroner's inquests over the bodies of dead persons. Fourteen of these were cases where the death was directly attributable to the use of intoxicating liquors; and in many cases the jury found that such was the fact.—We have a list of the names of those who have been thus killed, that certain gentlemen (?) of our county might become members of the upper circles of society. These gentlemen and their friends tell us, too, that it is every man's own business whether he drink or not. But when we remember that for each one of these inquests we have to pay the sum of $25, it seems like it is our business to put an end to a practice so expensive. Here is the sum of $300, paid within the last five or six years by the people of our county, for what might have been better dispensed with—in other words, for licensed murder.

We have a few remarks on inquests, which we shall present in our next.

Coroner's Inquest.

Eli Heaton, Esq., held an inquest over the body of J. C. Cails, in Washington Township, in this County, on the 21st ult. The verdict was, that "having been highly intoxicated, the day and evening before, and while endeavoring to make his way home, after night, he became disabled and fell into a pond of water, and perished of cold." So, citizens of Marion county, there is another of your fellow-citizens murdered by some sneaking whisky seller. Why did not the jury say who he is, that we might record his crime as it is recorded in Heaven against him?

Local Items.

The Cause in Indianapolis.

The meetings of the Social Order in this city are gradually gaining in strength and interest. The friends of Temperance here manifest a very determined spirit to continue to urge the good cause forward until it shall finally and completely triumph—an event to which, whether far off or at hand, we all look with the utmost confidence.

The meetings during the last week were of the highest interest. The first of these was held at the First Presbyterian Church, on Sabbath evening, at which Rev. Jno. A. McClung delivered a powerful discourse to the young men of the city, urging upon them the duty of total abstinence, in a manner which we know will not fail to produce a deep and lasting impression upon all who heard him.

The meeting on Wednesday evening at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, was addressed by John L. Ketcham, Esq., Rev. Mr. Long, and Hon. E. H. Parsley. Mr. Ketcham's address was a clear, forcible, manly effort, well calculated to keep alive the right feeling where it exists, and inspire it where it does not. We heartily wish all our office-hunting, weathercock politicians could have heard it; for we are certain it would have shamed them out of their unprincipled jugglery, or they must be contemptible beyond redemption. We regret exceedingly that Judge Parsley should have gone out of his way to cast stones at our worthy Governor; for we have confidence that there is no man in the State more desirous of the triumph of our holy cause than his Excellency. We confidently look to his message to prove that we are right in our estimate of his position on this momentous subject. He has had ample opportunity to witness the destructive consequences of intemperance. He knows that it kills, and how it kills.—He has seen its victims fall. He has witnessed the ruin and woe that it leaves wherever its blighting touch has been felt. He has seen the widow's tear that it has caused to flow. He has heard the famished orphan's cry, forced out by the destroyer, and we know that he has a heart to feel for all the pangs it inflicts—and may we not hope he has a hand to do for their relief? He is a man, a Christian man, and the Governor of a Christian commonwealth, and we cannot see how he can avoid discharging a duty which is so eminently calculated to add lustre to his official station, and illustrate the benign religion of Him "who gave his life a ransom for all," as would necessarily be the suggestion from his Excellency to destroy by legislative enactment the destroying angel of intemperance.

There were some other expressions in Judge Parsley's remarks which had better remained unsaid. We do not think it proper to use, by way of illustration, an idea too indelicate to be uttered as our own. Otherwise, his observations were exceedingly judicious, and very well said.

It was announced that the next meeting would be held in the Baptist Church on this evening, (Wednesday,) January 5th. Also, that Rev. L. H. Jamison would bring the subject of Temperance before his congregation, at the Christian Chapel on Sunday evening next, at early candle-lighting.

☞ The Masonic celebration on Monday evening was altogether all that we could have desired it to be. Notwithstanding the badness of the evening, there was a good turn-out of the fair. Dr. Hunt's address was an able one, strongly impressing upon the fraternity the dnty of temperance. The supper was good, and in good taste, and the speeches that followed worthy of the occasion and the associations it called up. The company was entertained to a late hour by the very best kind of music. The whole affair was highly honorable to the Order—and entirely a Temperance affair, too.

REVERENCE FOR THE AGED.—A gentleman once passing through a village, happened to see a poor, feeble old woman let her stick fall, and stand a moment in perplexity, not knowing whether she dared to stoop to pick it up, or attempt to reach her home without it. Just by the spot where the accident happened, a group of boys were playing marbles; some of them took no notice—others rudely marked the poor woman's distress; but one kind-hearted lad threw down his marbles, ran to her assistance, and helped her into her house.

She thanked him, and said—"God Almighty's blessing be upon you for your kindness to a poor woman!"

The gentleman saw and heard the whole, and made inquiry after the lad, in whom he felt deeply interested. He found that he was already in the Sabbath School, and, in all probability, had learned the Scriptures that inculcate reverence for the aged. From that time, he had him instructed in writing and accounts at an evening school; when old enough, assisted in apprenticing him; and, in course of time, had the satisfaction of seeing him a respectable and flourishing tradesman.

I recollect his mentioning the circumstance to his wife, as soon as he came home; he then said he thought that boy discovered the rudiments of a good character, and that he should be greatly disappointed if he did not turn out one whom it would be a credit and satisfaction to have put forward in life; after years fully proved that his opinion was correct. This, and some other circumstances, led the gentleman to make many remarks on the treatment the aged should receive, and which I endeavored to preserve.—Ex.

Keep it out of Politics!

We say we will not keep it out of politics. It shall be brought into politics.—The Whigs discard Temperance; the Democrats discard it; there are men of the Free Democracy who would discard it.—The two former parties discard it from policy, and they would have the Free Democrats adopt the same conservative policy. With our consent it shall never be.

It must be one of the principal elements of the Free Democracy. It is a pretty story, that we should be all alive for the black man, and forget and neglect our wives and children, who are daily kidnapped by a tyrant, who has not half the sympathy of the worst slaveholder in the South. Nay, the rum-God has no heart at all. He pulls his victims only one way to disgrace, poverty, misery, death, and hell; and never relents until they are out of the reach of hope and mercy.

An attempt is now making to deliver our people from these terrible tyrants. If the politicians would not side with them, we would make quick work of it. But they say, "Let that matter alone! At least but say, 'you are against dram-shops and for the Maine Law.' Slide over the matter! We want votes. Dwell on the fugitive slave law, and make the Maine law an incidental topic!" Now we have no ears for any such counsel. We place the Maine law first, if there is any first about it. It is our slavery, and if a man will not provide for his own, he is worse than an infidel.

Slave laws license men to kidnap each other and treat them as brutes. Rum-license laws authorize men not only to embrute, but to kill by slow fires and send themselves to perdition, to dehumanize fathers and mothers who shall bring up their children in want and beggary, and qualify them to educate other children in villainy, and scatter crimes and poverty around them, and undermine society.

We will smite slavery with all the powers God has given us; but we will smite the rum tyrant first, because he is in our homes, among our families and friends.—He has directly grappled in with us, and our business is with him, no less than with slavery; nor will we let him go until he ceases to live.

Since Whigs and Democrats have discarded the Temperance element, the Free Democracy must endorse it, or fall into defeat and disgrace.—Carson League.

Higher!

Higher! it is a word of noble meaning, the inspiration of all great deeds—the sympathetic chain that leads, link by link, the impassioned soul to its zenith of glory, and holds its mysterious object standing and glittering among the stars.

Higher! lisps the infant that clasps its parent's knees, and makes its feeble essay to rise from the floor—it is the first inspiration of childhood—to burst the narrow confines of the cradle, in which its sweetest moments have passed forever.

Higher! laughs the proud school-boy at his swing; or as he climbs the tallest tree of the forest, that he may look down upon his less adventurous companions with a flush of exultation, and abroad over the fields, the meadows, and his native village. He never saw so extended a prospect before.

Higher! earnestly breathes the student of philosophy and nature; he has a host of rivals, but he must eclipse them all.—The midnight oil burns dim, but he finds light and knowledge in the lamps of heaven, and his soul is never weary when the last of them is hid behind the curtains of morning.

And Higher! his voice thunders forth when the dignity of manhood has invested his form, and the multitude is listening with delight to his oracles burning with eloquence and ringing like true steel in the cause of freedom and the right. And when time has changed his locks to silver, and world-wide is his renown—when the maiden gathering flowers by the roadside, and the boy in the field, bow in reverence as he passes, and the peasant looks to him with honor—can he breathe forth from his heart the fond wish of the past?

Higher yet! he has reached the apex of earthly honor, yet his spirit burns as warm as in early youth, though with a steadier and paler light, as if it would even borrow wings and soar up high to heaven, leaving its tenements to moulder among the laurels he has wound around it, for the never-ending glory to be reached only in the presence of the Most High.—Literary Miscellany.

Woman's Mission.

BY ALICE GREEN.

How important is the mission of woman, and yet how few appear to understand or feel the responsibility of the position she occupies. It appears to be the general opinion that if a lady has received a fashionable education, and can figure well in the parlor, and equally well in the kitchen, if occasion requires, that is all that is necessary, and if to this a moderate share of beauty is added, it is enough to constitute her a paragon. Now all this is necessary and proper, but is there not something more for her to do? Were we placed here merely to occupy space, to "while away the hours," or assist in "driving dull care away," to captivate the mind, or charm the senses? Is this the extent of our mission in this sin-fallen world?—Shall we say, because we may never enroll our names among the great and illustrious ones of earth, that "ours is a limited sphere of action?" True, we may none of us be a Luther, a Wesley, or a Whitfield, a Washington, a Bolivar, or a Kossuth, a Newton, a Franklin, or a Fulton; it is not in our province to occupy the Presidential Chair, nor speak in Congressional halls; but is not ours a more glorious mission?—one which angels might look down and smile upon? It is ours to educate our future statesmen—ours to guide the youthful mind in the ways of wisdom and true piety, to instil a love of good and hatred of evil into those minds from which the future laws of our nation are to emanate. As the first rudiments of children's education ever devolves on woman, let us remember that what is learned in youth is seldom, if ever, forgotten—that "as the twig is bent the tree is inclined." We are to a certain extent exerting an influence which will be felt by this nation and the world, long after we have passed away, and our names are forgotten; yet our influence which we now exert will still be felt, either for good or evil. Eternity alone can reveal how much weal or woe has been disseminated through the world by woman's influence in regard to the proper or improper education of youth. Let us not think, then, that ours is a limited sphere of action, though we may not win laurels or worldly honors; though we may never reach the temple of fame, nor revel on the summit of the cloud-capped hill of science, yet we may win brighter laurels than these. We should not seek for wordly aggrandizement; ours is a holier mission. There is much for us to do—let us not be idle in this great "field of action," but "let us work for some good, be it ever so lowly; labor, all labor, is noble and holy." Let us, with "hearts entwined, aspire to raise our being higher." If there is not enough for us to do in the home circles, let us go forth into the world—minister to the sick and suffering, comfort the bereaved, cheer the sad, encourage the desponding, relieve suffering humanity wherever we find it—for this is a part of our mission. Nor is this all: we may assist in carrying the light of eternal life to those that are in heathen darkness; let us be "armed by faith, and winged by prayer," and there is no undertaking too great for us—and though there be much of bitterness mingled in our cup of life, and we meet with many discouragements and disappointments, let us "cast our bread upon the waters," assured "it will return to us after many days." Let us do what our hands find to do, with our might, and we shall gather for ourselves the laurel of peace, and receive a crown of immortality.—Literary Miscellany.

DOUGLASS JERROLD'S IDEA OF CONSERVATIVES.—There's a sort of men in the world that can't bear any progress. I wonder they ever walk, unless they walk backwards! I wonder they don't refuse to go out when there's a new moon—and all out of love and respect for that "ancient institution," the old one. But there were always such people, and always will be. When lucifers first came in, how many old women, staunch old souls, many of them worthy to be members of Parliament—stood by their matches and tinder boxes, and cried out, no surrender!" And now many of these old women, disguised in male attire, go every day about at public meetings, professing to be ready to die for any tinder box question that may come up! Yes, ready, quite ready to die for it; all the readier, perhaps, because dying for any thing of the sorts gone out of fashion.

Gossiping and lying go together.

CARRIER'S ADDRESS

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE

TEMPERANCE CHART.

JANUARY 1, 1853.

How wonderful is Time!
Forever changing, yet unchanged forever!
In ev'ry moment dying to regain
In each succeeding moment a new life,
And leaving years with all their memories,
Like mile-stones on the road, to tell mankind,
In all the Future, where his steps have been!
To-day he seems, as when the new born stars
In beauty and celestial light first walked
Their untried paths through trackless fields of space.
Still fall his muffled steps, like silent dews,
Or as the light that streams upon the earth
From the far orbs that smile serene in heaven:
And tireless still, as in his primal hour,
Ere Sin had poisoned Earth, and whet his scythe
To mow her dupes.
But, Oh! how sadly changed,
Since then, are all things else save Time!
Each year has borne within his arms, to Death
The pure, the beautiful, the good, the great,
And, in the voiceless dumbness of the grave
Locked up the springs of noblest thought forever:
And not a year, since Time was born, hath gone
To join the buried Past, more rich in names
Whose memory shall never die, than that
Which pass'd away last night.
The world hath lost
Its leaders, and their new-made graves demand
The tribute of our tears. O let us weep
That Ashland's sage is gone to the dark tomb
Whose damps have marr'd his god-like form, and hush'd
The burning pathos of his voice, that spoke
To vindicate the Right, to shame the Wrong,
And spread the genial light of truth abroad
O'er all the earth, as none had spoke before—
As none may speak again. But weep anew,
Another name, the world has learned by heart,—
New England's peerless son demands thy tears,
America. For him of Marshfield weep,
For in his tomb is lost a mind unmatched,
To whose high touch nought seemed impossible;
And in whose manly speech undying thought
Has found a home where it may dwell secure,
In all the changes of Time's coming years,
Immortal and unchanged. Our jewels, these!
And lost—nought, save the fullness of God's love,
Can e'er restore such wealth.
They had their faults!
The matchless sun, supreme in light, has his—
Dark spots are on his face; but who is heard
For these, to speak against the sun? The gem
May have its specks, but shall we fling it by,
Because of these? Let none the sun contemn,
Nor speak severely of the diamond's speck
Until he gives the world a model, just
And faultless. Let him teach the sun to blush
By spotless virtue, bid the diamond pale
By being in himself without a flaw.
But in our tears for these, there is a joy
That lifts the soul from earth, and bears it up
To that far clime where Virtue is immortal;
For ever round the good man's tomb appears—
In blended brightness mingled, Earth and Heaven,
E'en as the sea and sky meet and embrace,
In mutual light, when Phœbus sleeps upon the wave.
But earth has tears unmixed with smiles; and grief,
That is denied the cup of joy. Deep woe
And sorrow brood o'er withered hopes, and joys,
Born but to perish. Deep is the widow's grief
Whose stay is fallen; wild the orphan's wail
For those beloved ones who sleep in death,
In death, dishonored by a drunkard's fame.
No ray falls from the source of light, to paint
Hope's rain-bow on the burning tears they shed—
For them, no wreath of promise decks the grave;
But clouds and deepest gloom hang thick as night
Along the vista of their unborn years.
Lives still the blood-flecked wretch, who scatters death,
And woe, for gold, in all the walks of life?
Yes, in our midst he lives; and walks the streets
Clad richly in his blood-stained robes—crime-won
From hapless widows, and their orphan brood—
Made widows, orphans made, by murder foul,
Himself the murderer. O let him feel
The punishment of Cain! Deep on his brow,
As in his heart, let murderer be written,
That all the world may know the hypocrite,
E'en when he kneels, and offers pray'r to God:
And as he walks the streets, or prays, or sleeps,
Let one eternal hiss make music to his ear,
And echo through his soul forevermore,
Saying: "Thou art a murderer?"
But Hope
Now wooes me from the dreary Past, to years
Bright with the sacred light of Truth and Love,
While Purity's white banner waves on high
O'er all the ransomed earth triumphantly.
E'en now, Morn springs exultant in the East,
And, by the brightness of its rising beams,
Foretells a day unclouded and serene.
Then, in its light, the viper brood of Hell
That nestles in our lovely land, shall die
Beneath the heel of Righteousness and Truth;
Then man, wherever found, shall be man's friend
And brother—bound by the ties of sacred LOVE;
In PURITY kept pure; and ever watched
By high FIDELITY, with sleepless care.

MOMENTS OF MELODY.—I remember once strolling along the margin of a stream, in one of those low, sheltered valleys on Salisbury Plain, where the monks of former ages had planted chapels and built hermits' cells.—There was a little parish church near, but tall elms and qnivering alders hid it from sight, when all on a sudden, I was startled by the sound of the full organ pealing on the ear, accompanied by rustic voices, and the willing choir of village maids and children. It rose, indeed, "like an exhalation of rich distilled perfumes." The dew from a thousand pastures was gathered in its softness: the silence of a thousand years spoke in it. It came upon the heart like the calm beauty of death; fancy caught the sound, and faith mounted it to the skies. It filled the valley like mist, and still poured out its endless chant, and still it swells upon the ear, and wraps me in a golden trance, drowning the noisy tumult of the world.—Hazlitt.

LAUGHABLE.—There is nothing so truly blameable as the excess to which the opening of that safety-value of our mirth is often carried in company. No lady who entertains the wish to be considered sensible, intelligent, or polite, will ever allow her laughter to border on the boisterous, or indulge in such an unguarded detection of our neighbor's ridicule. To a sensitive mind, there is nothing more galling, more mortifying, than to imagine ourselves the object of such abullition. We all know that a smiling countenance drops cheerfulness into hearts but a moment before filled with sorrow, but laughter is at best but a silly display of one's own ridicule.

PRETTY WOMEN.—Of all other views a man may in time grow tired; but in the countenance of woman there is a variety which sets weariness at defiance. "The divine right of beauty," says Junius, "is the only right a man can acknowledge, and a pretty woman the only tyrant he is not authorized to resist."

☞ As the season is with us, when all are liable to the afflictions that follow colds seated on the throat and lungs, we should keep in mind that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the proper remedy for these diseases, and that it seldom fails to cure.

☞ One of the most important female qualities is sweetness of temper. Heaven did not give to woman insinuation and persuasion in order to be imperious; it did not give them a sweet voice to be employed in scolding.

Idleness is the mother of mischief;—the moment a horse is done eating his oats, he turns to and gnaws down his manger.—Substitute labor for oats, and virtue for manger, and what is true of horses is equally true of men.

FUN.—So necessary is fun to the mind that a philosopher says that if you should build school houses without play-grounds, nobody would get beyond short division in a life time.

The story of a man who had a nose so large that he could not blow it without the use of gunpowder, has turned out to be a hoax.

☞ The happiness of a wife, and the cultivation of a vine, depend on the care of a man.

☞ There are things modest men should never undertake—to borrow money or to study law.

☞ "I shall die like a hero," said the coal when it was being consumed, "for I shall mix with the ashes of the grate."

☞ In extra polite circles the night-mare is now termed "the nocturnal horse of the feminine gender."

Good works will never save you, but you can never be saved without them.

☞ What we learn in our infancy remains forever.

MEMORIAL.

ADOPTED BY THE

GRAND DIVISION OF THE SONS OF TEMPERANCE,

AND THE

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Indiana:

The undersigned Citizens of Indiana, believing that the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits, to be used as a beverage, is a great moral, social, and political evil, pray you to prohibit the same.

The Ruined Family.

BY L. A. GOBRIGHT.

It is a matter of surprise that, notwithstanding the frequent exhibitions of the deplorable effects of intemperance, there is not a more determined effort to suppress the evil. The narration of scenes of suffering touch the heart, our sympathies are awakened, but our interest is not always sufficiently aroused to the calls of humanity. A kind deed may be ill requitted by the person benefitted, but the reward of a good conscience—the knowledge that we have done our duty—sweetens our repose and confers joys ineffable.

We have heard much of hospitality—of that description which proffers the wine-cup. Without a design to corrupt, the tendency is disease and death. As we would shun the smiles of the hypocrite, with the concealed dagger, so should we the blush of the liquid that at last "biteth as the serpent, and stingeth like the adder."

In the interior of Virginia, in a mountain district, resided a gentleman, much respected by the neighboring population. His house was the abode of hospitality, and his generosity was unbounded. The choicest liquors were always set before his guests, who failed not to partake of them. Nor were there visits unfrequent. Happiness, like the sunbeams, shed its light around. There was never a thought of the morrow, and the axiom was—"Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow ye die."

The gentleman had a lovely wife, and a little girl, who sweetly lisped the name of "Mother," when he reached the meridian of his imaginary happiness. With his fondness for sociality and drink, by the time the daughter attained to womanhood, his fortune was expended. He had, however, bestowed upon her a good education, which fitted her to adorn polite society, and the possession of which is far better than silver and gold.

The progress from moderate drinking to an excess, is often slow but certain. And, without further remark, and with an indisposition to weary the reader, we will at once say that the gentleman was now reduced to the condition of a confirmed, worthless drunkard! There was no friend to counsel him—probably because it was supposed the disease had advanced beyond the reach of a remedy.

We must, however, except the wife—she who was ever interested in her husband's welfare. Her importunities, however, were received with rudeness.

The bloom upon her cheek had faded into ashy paleness, and her voice now for him possessed no music. The luxury of wealth in the once hospitable abode, was now supplanted by its opposite!

Many were the sorrows which the faithful woman experienced. At the close of a Saturday afternoon, the husband had returned from the village tavern, staggering to the door, and more than usually inflamed with drink, he seized his wife, who advanced to welcome him, and hurling her from him with bitter curses, she fell upon a stone. The concussion was severe, and the result of the outrage the bursting of a blood vessel. Neighbors who had witnessed the proceedings, conveyed her to bed, but in vain were remedies applied. In the course of a few short hours, and before the dawning of the Sabbath day, the spirit departed for the abode where the weary are at rest."

The daughter, who was on a visit to a relative, arrived in time to hear the last sigh of her expiring mother. Long, long did her lips press those of her dear departed mother. Her shrieks did not even arouse the drunkard, who was locked in stupid slumber. Suddenly the poor girl started from the corpse, with hair dishevelled, and exclaimed with a wild laugh—

"Mother—I'll meet you again!"

Her reason had fled! She was a maniac!

And what became of the drunkard? In response to the question, the inquirer was told that in the church-yard near by rested the remains of the murdered wife. At early dawn and at the day's decline, he visited the green hillock as a pilgrim to a holy place—there to sorrow over the tragedy which he had enacted—to weep o'er dust unconscious of his tears, and of his heart's sore agony! On the approach of men, he would flee to the woods, and was not known to hold converse with mortal.

And where is the girl? In the Insane Asylum of Virginia she has her abode.—A visitor to that institution experienced the melancholy privilege of gazing upon the almost skeleton form of what was once so lovely. With attenuated fingers she frequently seized the grating, while her dark blue eye dwelt on vacancy, and with a voice melting to pity she would exclaim—"Mother—I'll meet you agatn!"

Thus was a family ruined by the intemperance of one who should have been the protector; and another warning is added to the dark list, which, like a cloud stands out in bold relief in the beautlful, clear sky of TEMPERANCE.

The Female Heart.

There is nothing under heaven so delicious as the possession of pure, fresh, immutable affection. The most felicitous moment of man's life—the most ecstatic of all his emotions and sympathies, is that in which he receives an avowal from the idol of his heart. The springs of feeling, when in their youthful purity, are fountains of unsealed and gushing tenderness—the spell that at once draws them forth, is the mystic light of future years and undying memory. Nothing in life is so pure and devoted as a woman's love. It matters not whether it be for a husband, or child, or sister, or brother, it is the same pure unquenchable flame, the same constant and immaculate glow of feeling, whose undeniable touch-stone is trial. Do but give her one token of love, one kind word, one gentle look, even if it be amid desolation and death, the feelings of that faithful heart will gush forth as a torrent in despite of every bond or mercenary tie.

More priceless than the gems of Golconda is the female heart, and more devoted than the idolatry of Mecca is woman's love. There is no sordid view or qualifying self-interest in the feeling. It is a principle and characteristic of her nature—a faculty and infatuation which absorbs and concentrates all the fervor of her soul and all the depths of her bosom. I would rather be the idol of one unsullied and unpracticed heart than the monarch of empires. I would rather possess the immaculate and impassioned devotion of one high-souled and enthusiastic female than the sycophantic fawning of millions.

"Nil Desperandum."

No, never! Every cloud has a silver lining; and He who wove it knows when to turn it out. So every night, however long or dark, there shall yet come a golden morning. Your noblest powers are never developed in prosperity. Any bark may glide in smooth water with a favoring gale; but that is a brave and skillful oarsman who rows up stream against the current, with adverse winds, and no cheering voice to wish him "God speed." Keep your head above the water; let neither sullen despair nor weak vascillation drag you under.—Heed not the poisoned arrow of sneaking treachery that whizzes past you from the shore. Judas sold himself when he sold his master; and for him there dawned no resurrection morning! 'Tis glorious to battle on with a brave heart, while cowering pusillanimity turns trembling back.—Dream not of the word "surrender!"—When one frail human reed after another breaks, or bends beneath you, lean on the "Rock of Ages." The Great Architect passes you through the furnace to purify; the fire may scorch, but it shall never consume you; He will label you "FINE GOLD." The narrow path may be thorny to your tender feet; but the "promised land" lies beyond! The goal of Hope may be seen with the eye of faith; your hands yet grasp them; your eyes revel, from the mountain top, over the green pastures and still waters of peace. You shall yet unbuckle your dusty armor, while soft breezes shall fan your victor temples. Nil desperandum.—Olive Branch.

DEAN SWIFT was once traveling through one of the rural parishes some leagues from London, and introducing himself to the parson as a member of the same profession, was invited to partake of his fraternal hospitalities. The Dean consented, and accompanied the parson to his church the next morning, and there had the satisfaction of hearing one of his own sermons preached by an ignorant "Bible banger," without a hint or a word of acknowledgement. When the services were over, the Dean asked the preacher how long it took him to write such a sermon. "Oh!" said the minister, "I wrote that in two hours." "Did you, indeed?" said the Dean, in reply; "why it took me over two weeks to write that very sermon!"

Gratitude preserves old friendship, and procures new.

Choice Gems.

Face to face the truth comes out.

Fair and softly goes far in a day.

Faith is the foundation of justice, and justice the stay of a State.

Fancy surpasses beauty.

Fame is as difficult to be preserved, as it was at first to be acquired.

Fear may keep a man out of danger, but courage only can support him in it.

Feather by feather the goose is plucked.

Few envy the merit of others that have any of their own.

Few hearts that are not double—few tongues that are not cloven.

Few things are impossible to industry and skill.

Fish and guests smell at three days old.

Folly, as well as wisdom, is justified by its children.

Fools may sometimes give wise men counsel.

Forget your own good deeds, but not another's.

From fame to infamy is a beaten road.

Gain got by a lie will burn one's fingers.

Galled horses can't endure the comb.

Gaming, like a quicksand, swallows up a man in a moment.

Getting is a chance, but keeping a virtue.

Give a dog an ill name, and his work is done.

Give things their right color, not varnish them over with a false gloss.

God giveth his wrath by weight, but his mercy without measure.

Good counsel makes a proud man and a fool angry.

☞ "No right to interfere with my business," says the liquor-seller.

"But," says the temperance man, "you are making drunkards, and thereby making them bad members of society, and thus endangering my 'inalienable right' to security of person and property."

"But it is not every man who drinks that becomes a drunkard," says the vender.

"True!" says the temperance man; "nor does every keg of powder that is kept in a store where goods are sold, and fire is kept, explode and kill folks, but the apprehension of danger that it will do so, is considered just ground for preventing you by law from keeping it there. I occupy the same dwelling with you: you have as good a right to use your part of it as you please, as I have mine; but neither has a right so to use our part, as to expose the building and inmates to destruction. Well, as citizens, we are all exposed to injury from whatever injures society—we are all in the same building—sharers in the good or evil arising from a good or bad government. If drunkards are made, as they will be—as they always have been—and drunkards commit crimes, and the expenses of courts and jails will follow—paupers will be made, and pauper expenses will be the consequence, and all the community, myself with others, must pay them. I have no right to interfere with the business of drunkard-making, have I?—Temp. Journal.

Acknowledgments

Received of W. W. Tyler for the Chart, for W. West at Cambridge City, for one year; and for R. Willson for 4 months, at Raysville, $1 00.

Of D. Wright, Indianapolis, 25 cts.

Of Wm. Sims, Utica, per H. Ohr, 75c for Chart for one year.

Of Miss L. A. Griffith, Leesburg, O., per John H. Ohr, 25 cents for Chart four months.

Of Anna M. Smith, Indianapolis, 75c.

Of Hon. D. S. Gooding, Greenfield, 75 cents.

Of C. Sherman, Rushville, $3 00 for 4 copies.

Of Mr. Axtell, $1 25 for the Chart for distribution.

Of S. A. Johnson, Indianapolis, 75 cts.

Of I. N. Craig, Indianapolis, 75 cts.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P., that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

---

The Age of Steam and Lightning!

MORRELL'S Eagle Book Works, 196 Fulton St., N. Y. Warehouse and Salesroom 25 Park Row.

BLANK BOOKS.

BLANK BOOKS, in greater variety and at lower prices than at any other Establishment in the country. Five Thousand Reams of manufactured Account Books constantly on hand, adapted to every market in the Union.

Half-bound Caps, per quire, 9 to 18 cents; Full bound, 15 to 22; and, in finer bindings, 25 to 50; Demys, Russia Bindings, 50 cents to $1 00; Medium Royal, and Super Royal Books in proportion.

A New Feature.—All the Books furnished by this Establishment, which are 25 cents per quire and upwards, are beautifully PAGED, by a newly invented process, without charge. Memorandum Books of all kinds. Wholesale and Retail Dealers supplied in any quantity, for cash or approved credit.

NEW MISCELLANY.

The Cheapest and Best of its Price yet Published.

A. MORRELL will issue every month, a volume of 150 pages of Choice Reading, useful and entertaining, by the best writers. Can be mailed to any part of the Union at Magazine postage. Single subscribers $1 50 per year; Four Subscribers for $5; and Ten Copies sent to one address for $10; being only One Dollar per year. All payments in advance.—Orders and Communications may be addressed to the office of publication, No. 7, Theatre Alley, or to the publisher, ARTHUR MORRELL, aug 11 25 Park Row, New York.

Divisions who wish Constitutions, or any other kind of printing done with neatness and dispatch, we would recommend them to Bro. Ohr. Bro. O is a practical printer, and a member of the Grand Division. C WOODWARD, G. S.

CIRCULAR---PLEASE TO READ THIS.

AGENTS WANTED.

New Books of Permanent Value.

Office of Sears' Pictorial Works,
Removed to 181 William St. New York, 1853.

Dear Sir:—If entirely convenient and agreeable to you, we would be much pleased to secure your valuable influence on behalf of our PICTORIAL FAMILY WORKS. We publish a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a high moral and unexceptional character, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprize and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union wherea right honest and well-disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the populaton.

☞ Among your relativas or acquaintances, it is probable you may be able to send us the name of a respectable, energetic, and faithful man, who will carefully canvass your vicinity. If you are willing to do this, we shall duly appreciate your efforts, and cheerfully reciprocate the favor in any way that you may suggest. By looking over the list, you will perceive that there is no sectarianism in our publications they are designed for all, and must have an unprecedented sale when brought home to the firesides of the people.

☞ We solicit orders from the Trade, Teachers, and School Committees for Books, to whom we furnish our own publications, and those of all the publishers in the country, on the most liberal terms.

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell "SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Any person wishing to embark in the enterprize, will risk little by sending to the Publishers $25 for which he will receive sample copies of the various works (at wholesa.e prices), carefully boxed, insured, and directed, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for his trouble. With these, he will soon be able te ascertain the most saleable, and order accordingly.

LIST OF OUR PICTORIAL WORKS.

		Retail Price.
The Pictorial Family Bible (Large Quarto.) - - - -	1450 pages.	$6 00
Sears' New and complete History of the Bible, - - - -	700 "	3 00
Sears' New Pictorial History of China and India, - -	600 "	2 50
Thrilling Incidents of the Wars of the United States, - - -	700 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Description of the United States, - - -	608 "	2 50
Sears' Treasury of Knowledge and Cyclopedia of Science and Art,	512 "	2 50
Sears' Scenes and Sketches of Continental Europe, - - -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Description of Great Britain and Ireland, -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Family Annual (212 Engravings) - - -	368 "	2 00
The History of Palestine, - -	230 "	1 00
View of New York.—This Engraving is on a sheet, 47 by 19 inches and ought to sell rapidly, -		50
Sears' Information for the People,	600 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Family Instructor, - - - - -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial History of the American Revolution, - -	450 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Sunday-Book, -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Bible Biography, - -	500 "	2 50
Sears' Wonders of the World.—Second Series. - - - -	540 "	2 50
Remarkable Adventures of Celebrated Persons, - - -	410 "	1 25

To those who intend to engage in the circulation of our books, we would urge the present as the most favorable opportunity which has occurred in many years. Our sales are largely increased beyond those of preceding years; our agents are more generally successful, and the future offers still more extensive prospect for trade than even the seasons which has passed.

The two elegant volumes lately issued by us on "China and India;" the "Incidents in the United States Wars," and a new and revised edition of our "Pictorial Description of the United States," for 1853, enlarged and improved, corrected by the late Census, with full descriptions and correct illustrations of the Gold Regions, &c., we offer to canvassers, with the confidant assurance that they are as popular and elegant, and as intrinsically valuable, as any books now offered in the country.

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS

Are decidedly the best books that agents can employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great Republic. There is not a city or town in the United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable.—They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle—got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but such as an agent of good principles will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly, by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid. ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, jan 5 1t 181 William Street, New York.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSON

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,

june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

T. M. Nichols. J. F. Johnston.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,

SURGEON DENTISTS,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer,
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor

John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick.

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

Wm. Burnet, President.

S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't.

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,

Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.

aug 11-1y

To Persons out of Employment!

BOOK AGENTS WANTED,

To Canvass for

New Pictorial, Standard, Historical, and Religious Works.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young persons of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid.

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,

sep 1 3m 181 William Street, New York.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent

PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.

WILLIAM G. STEEL,

Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.

nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,

Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

WILLIAM HANNAMAN,

DEALER IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently despaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many r medies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,

JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.

Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen. Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili
Rt. Rev. Ed. Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archbishop Pursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

---

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,

Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,

oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1853. NO. 30.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.
Office—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:
Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75
☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines.) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.
Cuts double the above rates.
☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.
☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Brookville American.

The Inebriate.

BY M. LOUISA CHITWOOD.

He sat by the lonely window,
He heard the pattering rain,
With a low and musical murmur,
Fall on the broken pane;
And his heart went back in fancy,
To his boyhood hours again.

Cottage, garden, and meadow,
Forest, flowers, and hill,
Valley, streamlet, and dingle,
River turning the mill—
All in a sweet confusion,
His lonely heart did fill.

Alas! the recollection,
Of hours too sweet to stay,
Fell over his heart, like the rumble,
Of the heavy yellow clay,
Falls over a loved one's coffin,
Whom death hath borne away.

He hears a sigh beside him,
One of childhood's gentle sighs,
And he sees his youngest daughter,
With loving and tearful eyes—
"Father," she murmurs softly,
And kindly he replies.

"Father, ah! be not angry,
I've come to plead to-day,
Oh! cast the tempting wine cup,
Forever more away;
'Tis luring you to darkness,
For which there is no day."

"My child, so long in darkness,
I've groped my weary way.
So long I've walked in the shadow,
I've ceased to think of day—
But for your sake gentle pleader,
I'll try to turn away."

But alas! the fiend-like tempter,
Alas! for the vice of wrong,
It led him again in the shadow,
With stern hand, cold and strong—
And again with the crowd he mingled,
With laughter, jest and song.

One night in the gloomy winter
He turned from the revel wild
For a voice thrilled through his spirit
A whisper low and mild,
It seemed in its gentle cadence
Like the sweet voice of his child.

He knew that the hand of sickness,
Was on her fevered cheek,
That her head upon the pillow,
Fell heavily and weak—
That she scarce could lift her thin hands,
That she scarcely now could speak.

He returned then stepping softly,
Beside the lonely bed,
He pillowed upon his bosom,
In tenderness her head—
With a heart too full for utterance,
Not a syllable he said.

But his tears fell fast and glittered,
Like dew on her golden hair,
The sweet tears of repentance,
How blest, thrice blest they were—
For a load was on his spirit,
Love struggling with despair.

"Father she whispered, father
I soon must from you go,
Soon will the grey haired sexton
Shovel the crusted snow
Aside, and my grave be fashioned,
In the church yard damp and low.

But bright wing'd angels hover;
Over my head to-day,
They will bear me softly, softly,
Through the clear blue sky away—
I do not fear the churchyard,
The coffin and the clay.

Yet let me plead, my father,
Before I pass the door,
Opened alone for the angels,
When life on earth is o'er—
Turn from the sable shadow,
To the sunlight clear once more."

Her voice ceased here, but pleading
Still were the beautiful eyes,
And her trembling lips grew paler,
And her breathing changed to sighs—
While her white hands clasped together,
Sought for the sweet replies.

They were made—the vow was spoken,
A smile o'er her features stole,
The "silver chord was loosened,"
And "broken the golden bowl"—
From the folds of sin and darkness,
Was lifted another soul.

Mt. Carmel, Indiana.

LIBRARY INDIANA INDIANAPOLIS

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Thrilling Incident.

The first settlers in Maine, found, beside its red-faced owners, other and abundant sources of annoyance and danger.

The majestic forests which then waved where now is heard the hum of business, and where a thousand villages stand, were the homes of innumerable wild and savage animals.

Often at night was the farmer's family aroused from sleep by the noise without, which told that Bruin was storming the sheep pen or the pig sty, or was laying violent paws upon some unlucky calf—and often, on a cold winter's evening, did they roll a larger log against the door, and with beating hearts draw closer around the fire, as the dismal howl of the wolf echoed through the woods.

The wolf was the most ferocions, bloodthirsty, but cowardly of all, rarely attacking man, unless driven by severe hunger, and then seeking his victim with the utmost pertinacity.

The incident which I am about to relate, occurred in the early history of Biddeford.

A man, who then lived on the farm now occupied by Mr. H——, was, one autumn, engaged in felling trees at some distance from his house. His little son, eight years old, was in the habit, while his mother was busy with household cares, of running out into the field and woods around the house, and often going where the father was at work. One day, after the frost had robbed the trees of their foliage, the father left his work sooner than usual, and started for home. Just by the edge of the forest he saw a curious pile of leaves—without stopping to think what had made it, he cautiously moved the leaves, when what was his astonishment to find his own darling boy there, sound asleep! 'Twas but the work of a moment to take up the little sleeper, put in his place a small log, carefully replace the leaves and conceal himself among the nearest bushes, there to watch the result.

After waiting a short time, he heard a wolf's distant howl, quickly followed by another and another, till the woods seemed alive with the fearful sounds.

The howls came nearer, and in a few minutes a large gaunt, savage looking wolf leaped into the opening, closely followed by the whole pack. The leader sprang directly upon the pile of leaves and in an instant scattering them in every direction. Soon as he saw the deception his look of fierceness and confidence changed to that of the most abjeet fear. He shrank back, cowered to the ground and passively awaited his fate; for the rest, enraged by the supposed cheat, fell upon him, tore him to pieces and devoured him on the spot.

When they had finished their comrade, they wheeled around, plunged into the forest and disappeared; within five minutes from their first appearance not a wolf was in sight. The excited father pressed his child to his bosom, and thanked the kind Providence which led him there to save his dear boy.

The boy, after playing till he was weary, had lain down and fallen asleep, and in that situation the wolf had found him and covered him with leaves until he could bring his comrades to the feast; but himself furnished the repast.—Biddeford Journal.

From the Advocate and Home Circle.

The Law we Need.

Legislation in reference to the Liquor Traffic is not a new thing under the sun. From the earliest days of our Colonial history, down to the present time, the law-making power has busied itself in framing statutes for the restriction, regulation, or prohibition of this traffic, but never for its encouragement. Almost every other branch of trade has been encouraged by special legislation; this, never. Even in those days of comparative ignorance, when the essential properties of alcohol were but imperfectly understood, and the belief was well-nigh universal, that spirituous liquors were, to the laboring man especially, a necessary beverage, there was an equally general consciousness that they were liable to great abuses, of most dangerous tendencies, and that their indiscriminate sale was inconsistant with the public good. Restrictive legislation was resorted to, in the hope that the traffic might thus be purged of its abuses, relieved of its evil tendencies, and made a minister of benefits only, to the community. The sale was vested exclusively in the hands of "men of good moral character," while to drunkards and minors even the licensed dealer was not permitted to sell, on the supposition, probably, that neither would make a discreet use of it. Our fathers were in earnest in this restrictive legislation. Their demand that the traffickers should be moral, recognizing his responsibility to his fellow-men and to his God, meant all that it implied. It was not a mere form, destitute of a vitalizing spirit. As a matter of fact, no man of known irreligious character, under our early license laws, could be permitted to sell intoxicating drinks. The character of the seller was regarded as the best guaranty against the abuses of the traffic. Had the Colonial government seen, as we now see, that what they deemed the abuse of the traffic was an inseparable adjunct of it,—that alcoholic liquors, so far from being either necessary or useful as a beverage, were alike evil in themselves and their tendencies,—that intemperance, and the vices which it engenders, are the inevitable consequences of the liquor traffic, no more to be dissociated from it than the shadow is from the substance; and that the whole business of manufacturing and vending these beverages is therefore oppugnant to the interests of society, fruitful in misery and crime and in violation of fundamental morality; their policy of regulation would have been exchanged for prohibition, and drunkenness never have become the overshadowing crime that now it is. We must not forget, furthermore, that what was wrong in the legislative policy of our fathers, resulted from false ideas of the necessity of alcoholic drinks. They legislated upon the assumption, now universally scouted by scientific men, that these beverages were useful and necessary to such a degree as would render their abandonment undesirable, if not impossible.—Yet they sought to carry the principle of restriction to the point of security to society against the evils of drunkenness. We seek to do no more than this; but contented that with the advancing intelligence of the age, our legislation should exhibit a corresponding advance.

Two points are well nigh universally conceded; first, that the liquor-traffic is a proper subject of legislation; and second, that the aim of legislation should be to secure society against the evils flowing from the traffic. If these evils are casual, accidental, then regulation may be the true policy: if they are inherent, inevitable, then prohibition is clearly demanded. We avow ourselves the advocates of the latter policy; and if the friends of the former object to it, it is incumbent upon them to disprove the facts that justify it.

1. Whenever the traffic has prevailed for a sufficient period of time to develop its tendencies, intemperance, to a greater or less extent, has prevailed as a consequence. We challenge the world to adduce a single instance in disproof of this broad assertion. Ransack the ages, the barbarous as well as the most civilized; explore communities the most debased and the most enlightened, and you shall not find the solitary exception to this rule. We do not mean that this effect will be seen in one month, or two, or six, whenever the traffic is established;—but that its tendency is always in that direction and that time is only requisite to prodcce the result indicated. This result may be hastened or retarded by other influences; education, social refinement, pride of character, a prevalent religious sentiment, may defer it; but sooner or later the traffic will claim its victims. The public sentiment that can even tolerate it, is too feeble in virtue to snatch the deluded and unwary from its infernal sorceries. The history of every community where it has been able to sustain itself, give melancholy confirmation of the truth of our assertion, and illustrates anew the deceptive nature of alcoholic drinks. "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

2. The appetite for intoxicating liquors which the traffic supplies, (and always creates) is an artificial appetite; and it is a characteristic of all artificial appetites that they gain strength in proportion to their indulgence; every concession to them increases the imperiousness of their demands, till, not too unfrequently, they become absolutely uncontrollable. This is their tendency; that they do not always attain complete sway over their victims, is happily true; but true, not because the appetite is not a tyrant which aims at the subjugation of the man, but becanse good influences also struggle for the mastery, and sometimes prevail. But it is always unsafe to violate physical laws, for outraged nature sternly exacts the penalty. Our religious teachers warn us that a second sin is always easier of commission than the first,—that with every recurrence of transgression the cnnscience loses something of its sensitiveness, and the proclivity to evil becomes greater. So is it, emphatically, with the man who indulges in alcoholic drinks. His first glass prepares the way for a second; each succeeding indulgence adds something to the probability of its repetition; the appetite is formed, desire increases as the power of resistance diminishes; a morbid condition of the stomach is induced; an unappeasable craving for fiery stimulents, itself a disease, ensues; and by a process so natural that it seems almost inevitable, the once moderate drinker becomes a confirmed sot, and the ruin that began with the first social glass finds its consummation in the completed drunkard. The process which we have thus briefly described, involves the whole philosophy of drunkenness, and this philosophy explains why it is that intemperance, always, everywhere, results from the established traffic. So manifest is this, that it is scarcely a figure of speech to say, that to license the sale of intoxicating beverages, is to license drunkenness and the inumerable evils that flow therefrom.

3. The usual law that "the demand creates the supply," is reversed in the liquor traffic. Here emphatically, the supply creates the demand. If it were possible to convert every drunkard and every moderate drinker, to-day, to the principles of total abstinence, a single grog shop left unclosed in the community, would be sufficient, either to tempt them back to their evil habits, or to debauch the appetites of others, sooner or later, and lead them step by step to ruin. Every city and village in the land furnishes, or has furnished illustrations of this truth. While the traffic is tolerated, intemperance is a necessity. The presence of Satan in the Garden of Eden was not a more sure precurser of the fall of our first parents, than is the establishment of a tippling-shop, the foreshadowing of the shames and agonies of intemperance.

Our selection then is, between the suppresssion of the traffic, and the continuance of drunkenness, with all the vice and wo, and poverty, and premature death that it involves. Can we hesitate in our choice? In view of the five hundred thousand of our countrymen who are literally staggering to the retributions of eternity; of the fifty thousand graves which every year yawn for the victims thrust prematurely to their dark embrace; of the sad record of folly and crime, written in tears and blood, or of anguish and despair, voiced in groans and shrieks and lamentations, wrung out from suffering hearts by the potencies of the cup, can we refuse to say, "this murderous business shall cease, if there be law on earth or justice in Heaven."

Aye, Law! That will reach it, when nothing else can. "Moral suasion" is impotent where there is no moral sense. Even when successful, in the case of the individual, it only withdraws one from the traffic to make room for another, more unscrupulous and less responsible; more greedy of gain, more deaf to the cry of wretchednesss, and caring less for the remonstrances of men, and the denunciations of God.

We shall consider this subject further in subsequent numbers.

The Wife's Eloquence.—A woman has her husband's fortune in her power, because she may, or she may not, as she pleases, conform to his circumstances.—This is her first duty, and it ought to be her pride. No passion for luxury or display ought for a moment to tempt her to deviate in the least from this line of conduct. She will find her respectability in it. Any other course is wretchedness itself, and inevitably leads to ruin. Nothing can be more miserable than the struggle to keep up appearances. If it could succeed it would cost more than it is worth; as it never can, its failure involves the deepest mortification. Some of the sublimest exhibitions of human virtue have been precipated suddenly from wealth and splendor to absolute want.

Then a man's fortunes are, in a manner, in the hands of his wife, inasmuch as his own power of exertion, depends on her. His moral strength is inconceivably increased by her sympathy, her counsel, her aid. She can aid him immensely by relieving him of every care which she is capable of taking upon herself. His own employments are usually such as to require his whole time and his whole mind. A good wife will never suffer her husband's attention to be distracted by details to which her whole time and talents are adequate. If she be prompted by true affection and good sense, she will perceive when his spirits are borne down and overwhelmed. She, of all human beings, can best minister to his needs. For the soul her nursing is quite as sovereign as it is for corporeal ills. If it be weary, in her assiduity it finds repose and refreshment. If every enterprise be dead and hope itself almost extinguished, her patience and fortitude have the power to rekindle them in the heart, and he again goes forth to encounter the toils and troubles of life.

Streams Influence.—Could men see distinctly the streams of influence which daily, and hourly, and steadily, flow out from their conduct in all directions, blessing or withering their friends, their children, their relatives, their neighbors, and all with whom they come in contact, how much more watchful and circumspect would they be than they now generally are. When we come to examine the constitution of society, we shall find ourselves surrounded by an atmosphere of influence, in which every element is in constant vigorous retraction. Here man speaks, and eloquence is heard; he desires, and art becomes his handmaid; he defines and resolves, and law reigns; he reasons, and philosophy ascends her throne; he unites his will with the will of his fellow-men, and a world of his own appears. Every action draws after him a train of influences. Every individual is a centre, constantly radiating streams of influence. From the first moment of his active existence, his character goes on daily and hourly, streaming with more than moral influence. A power which operates involuntarily—for though he can choose in any given case what he will do, yet he cannot choose what influence it will have. It operates universally, never terminating on himself, but extending to all within his circle, emanates from each of these again as from a fresh circle, and thus transmitted on in silent yet certain effect to the uttermost parts of social existence. It is indestructible; not a particle is ever lost, but the whole of it is taken up into the general system; it is always in operation somewhere. And the influence which thus blends and binds him up with his race, invisible and impalpable as it is, is yet the mightiest element of society.

Constitutionality of the Maine Law. The power of rum is developed to perfection wherever it has brought the Judiciary to bow to its behests. The right of the State Legislature to restrict and annihilate a trade in alcohol as a beverage, has been approved by the greatest Jurists and the highest Courts of the nation. Danial Webster a few years ago, attempted to get a contrary opinion from the Supreme Court of the United States, at the instance of the liquor sellers of Boston, and failed.—Nevertheless, it seems that the Supreme Court of New Hampshire has overruled their liquor law as unconstitutional—a fact which only proves the necessity of carrying this war, as we should do all other reforms, into the judiciary. A corrupt Judiciary is the chief political curse of this country. Honesty on the bench, as well as in all other offices, is wanted more than learning or talents.—Carson League.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 19, 1853.

State Temperance Convention.

It is not in our power to present the proceedings of the Convention in the Chart of this week, from the fact that the committee of revision appointed to prepare them, have not yet done so. They will appear in our next. Meanwhile we take pleasure in saying to the friends of Temperance throughout the State, for their encouragement, that for numbers, abilities, and moral force, it was inferior to no public body which it has fallen to our lot to be acquainted with. It was cheering to see the unity of feeling and action that prevailed. Resolutions were unanimously adopted which, at our last Convention, were voted down almost unanimously; and we venture the assertion, that if another Convention is held next winter, some propositions which could not pass now will be supported with equal unanimity.

The Convention was in session from Wednesday morning 9 o'clock, until Friday morning 11 o'clock; and, during all the time, a feeling of a character truly fraternal prevailed among the members, all of whom went away pledged to renew their battle with the friends of drunkenness and ruin, with new energy and zeal.

It has been said by some, against us, that we failed of our duty in not informing the public in our last issue, of the place where the Convention would meet. In answer, we say that we did not know for some days after our paper was made up, and in form,—nor could we ascertain; for we believe it was not known even to the Central Committee. We are not a prophet, and could not tell.

The End Justifies the Means.

Do not be startled, kind reader, at our caption; for we are not going to advise an anti-whisky rebellion, or enter into a conspiracy for the demolition of the powers that be, or do any other wrong act in order to bring about a triumph of our principles. But is it not so? Does not the end justify the means in the every-day life and practice of our people? Look around you, and tell us who are the honorable men—the sought-after of the land! Is it the poor man, who toils that he may live honestly, and eat his bread in the sweat of his face? Do you see the man whose whole life has been an exemplification of the highest self-denial, the purest virtue, and the most fearless truthfulness—especially if he is poor—in any of the high places or brilliant circles of society? Alas! such qualities are not an end with our people, and they will not employ them as a means to anything beyond them.

Has a man been eminently successful in getting money—no matter how—he becomes at once the pet of society? Perchance he grew rich by grog-selling or grog-making—perchance by gambling—or, rising higher and approaching more nearly to the line of virtuous action, he may have acquired his wealth by out-and-out stealing, or by uttering counterfeit bank-notes to the innocent and ignorant—no matter, if he only be rich, he is par excellence an honorable man. He visits and is visited by other honorable men, who show their sincere estimate of his worth by hunting and persecuting, even unto strange cities, the poor wretch whom he (the wealthy grog-seller or gambler) has robbed of his all, and thereby forced either to steal or starve. Had the scales of fortune only balanced differently, and the poor man become the rich one, and the rich man the poor one, no one need be told that this righteous public opinion would have shaped its judgment according to the result, and doomed the honorable gentleman of to-day to a felon's cell in the penitentiary. That is all so natural, that it would have done itself, even in this our "City of Churches." But then the reflection must be peculiarly delightful, one would think, to the wealthy, whose wealth is thus their only passport to public favor. We commend it to them as a most excellent and certain guide to self-respect. Just let them them think: "Had I only been unfortunate in my business of grog-selling or gambling, all these my present and particular friends would have condemned me to the penitentiary by one voice, for the crime of being unsuccessful in my efforts to plunder my victims." We say, think of it! and then hold up your heads and look honest men in the face. Of course you can!

But why do we this thing? Why is the wealthy villain esteemed better than the poor villain, and treated better than the poor honest man? Why are the retired gamblers and grog-sellers of our country, who are now feeding and fattening on the wealth which they have filched from far better men than themselves, whom they have robbed and driven into the penitentiary or the grave, esteemed more honorable than their victims? It is because Mammon has become our God—his gifts the end and aim of our lives—and the end with us justifies the means employed in its attainment.

We would not say these things, if they were not true; and we cannot withhold them because they may be unpalatable.

American Manual, or the Thinker, &c.; by Joseph Bartlett Burleigh, L. L. D.—The above is the title of a neat and valuable little book of some three hundred and forty pages, well filled with highly interesting and useful matter. It is designed to aid the young in acquiring early and easily habits of thinking quickly and correctly; and, if we may be allowed to express an opinion, formed upon a very hasty perusal of its contents under circumstances somewhat embarrassed with other business, it is well adapted to that purpose. Besides the aid designed to be conferred upon the young, it will undoubtedly be a highly useful book to all those who do not possess either the inclination or the opportunity to peruse any of the more extensive and elaborate works which we possess on government, and especially upon the constitution of our own peculiar form of government. It contains a clear but brief view of the most probable origin of government, the laws regulating the intercourse of nations, and a glance at the rise, establishment, and character of our own constitution.—It also points out the duties and responsibilities of voters, jurors, and civil magistrates. It would be superfluous to speak of the importance of disseminating information among all classes, and particularly the young, on these topics. We sincerely hope it will be justly appreciated and widely employed as a school book, in our State; for we regard it as well calculated to promote the happiness of the people, by enabling them to understand and understandingly to appreciate the institutions under which they live.

For sale by Davis & West, of this city.

Temperance Hotels.

It is a singular and significant fact that we have no Hotel in our City, professedly true to the principles and cause of Temperance. This is to be regretted; because it enables the infamous venders of intoxicating liquors to fatten on the unwilling patronage of temperance men, who, could they do better, would scorn to give aid and comfort" thus to the enemies of all good, and the supporters of all evil. We do not know but that there are houses kept on strictly temperance principles; but if they are such, their proprietors have not as yet avowed it. If there be such, let it be avowed; and then let the friends of temperance support them; if there be none such, surely it is high time some friend of the cause was engaged in building one; or if there be no friend who alone desires, and is able to do it, let a joint stock company be formed, money raised, and house built. Something of this kind is due the friends of temperance who are compelled to stop with a man who scruples not to destroy life and all that we deem most sacred for a consideration too pitiful to name.

We respectfully suggest then that if there is a single Temperance house in the city, the proprietor avow it publicly; and we know he will loose nothing by the avowal. If there is not one, of course, gentlemen, you will hold your peace. Some places there are in our city, that are not Temperance houses; and for the information of those who may desire to know it, we may quietly hint that the temperance character of any Hotel is not insured nor above suspicion that keeps a miserable doggery in its cellar. Temperance men had better not stop there.

Social Order.

This body is still going on with their meetings, both on the streets and in the churches. No very decided manifestations of great success have as yet characterized these efforts; but we hope still for improvement. One of the greatest sources of regret to us, and undoubtedly of discouragement to the friends of reform, is, that the ladies do not so much as deign to show themselves at our Wednesday evening meetings—a few only excepted. If our city is taken and overrun by the whisky-sellers, let the ladies not complain of those who strive, without their assistance, to prevent so great an evil.

On Sunday evening, the 9th inst., we attended at the Christian Chapel to listen to Mr. Jamison's address on the subject of intemperance, and the necessity of providing for its entire abolition. He showed conclusively that the making and vending of intoxicating liquors as a beverage were at war with the individual, with society, and the State; and that our relations were such, that as citizens, as members of society, as Christians, and as men, we were bound to oppose the whole business in all its forms, and vote for its immediate and complete prohibition. After he had concluded, Mr. O'Kane said, that the first question ever asked on the earth was, "where art thou?"—and the second, "where is thy brother?" These questions were still addressed in their order to every man by his Maker. Each must answer for himself first, then for his brother.—Cain said, in answer to the second, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and so still says the grocery keeper. It was at first the language of murder—it is still the language of murder.

Disgraceful.—We are credibly informed that one of the ministerial officers of our county was so very drunk a few nights ago, at a wedding in the neighborhood, that his friends had to carry him to bed. Let the Christian people of Marion county remember this fact before they fill their offices with such men in the future. By electing such a man, Christians and temperance men who voted for him did more for the cause of intemperance than they can undo in the whole term for which such officer is elected, by all their speeches and prayers against it. Shame on our county!

County Conventions.

We would respectfully, but earnestly, suggest that the friends of Temperance hold in each county a convention immediately, and require their representatives in the late State Temperance Convention to report on the condition of the cause in the State at large. This they will be able to do without difficulty at this time; but should a few weeks or months be allowed to go by, before any such meetings are called, many of the most important facts learned at the State convention, and almost all the zeal it inspired in those who attended it, will be lost. Just now is the time to meet, and set the ball in motion. It will be more difficult at any subsequent time, and should, therefore, be attended to without delay. Let there be a rally in every county, and let the whole State move simultaneously in this great work. Let the enemies of our cause see that we are in earnest, and there will soon be a revival in the minds and hearts of our friends that will carry all before it. Our country, our fellow-men, are entitled to a great effort at our hands; and it must be made. Let us go to the battle, determined to "Strike till the last armed foe expires;

Strike for our altars and our fires;
Strike, for the green graves of our sires,
God, and our native land."

He that subdues his carnal lusts, may keep himself untainted by any other.

Drunkenness---Inhumanity of Doggery-keepers.

Passing down Seventh street on Monday evening, we witnessed a scene of drunkenness, which should cause the most obdurate heart to feel sorrowful in view of the degradation of his fellow man. A man who, from his appearance, was in the flower of youth, was found lying in the ditch by the side of the pavement, in a state of beastly intoxication. He was picked up by his benefactors and laid with his breast across a rail, and while some held him by the heels, others carried the rail, and in this situation marched towards the watch-house, where their unfortunate victim might find a shelter from the inclemency of the night.

Our sympathy being enlisted in behalf of this wretched man, we made some inquiry concerning him, and learned that he had been drinking in a certain coffee-house near where he lay, and that the heartless monster who kept it, after having drugged him with his liquid fire until money and wit were gone, and being ashamed to exhibit the product of his labor to those who came in, had thrown him out into the street, and left him to the mercy of the cold night!

How long, O! God, shall these monsters be permitted to work such ruin upon thy creatures? How long shall they continue to do the devil's dirty work by destroying God's handy-work? Surely, in the great day of retribution, when God makes inquisition for blood, He will press to the lips of such persons the bitterest dregs of the cup of his trembling.—Organ of Temperance Reform.

The Massachusetts Maine Law.—[An Extract from Rev. Mr. Stone's Thanksgiving Sermon, Park Street Church, Boston.]—The law commends itself because its principle is sound. Not that the law in all its details is perfect. This is not urged.—There may be slight errors in detail, but as a prohibitory act against the use of liqcor as a beverage, it is sound. The law does not interfere with the use of liquor for mechanical and medicinal purposes.—No, it furnishes all that is needed; but it does provide for the check of the hurtful use of liquor. The man who sells liquors has rights, but he knows the evil effects of the liquor he sells. He is not in a desert; he is in a community, and must govern himself accordingly. Were he in a desert, he might walk with elbows akimbo, but in our crowded streets he cannot thus walk. In the desert he might smoke his pipe, but in our city he must yield to other persons' likes and dislikes, and refrain from the use of the weed, or the law will make him.—He can choose his own occupation, but he is not in the desert, and must not build a gunpowder mill next to my house. No, he must remember the rights of his neighbors. So in the sale of intoxicating drinks: he is not in the desert, and should have no right to ruin and destroy those about him by pouring down their throats poison. He has no right to cause his government to erect prisons, watch-houses, and lock-ups. He has no right to scar the land with forty thousand graves every year, to make widows and orphans by thousands, and send misery and death into numberless families. The law does not go farther than it should, does not leave its proper sphere, when it puts in operation its engine to prevent such injuries to the public. It might as well be said that the laws against duelling, gambling, murder, leave their proper spheres, as to say the law against the sale of liquor is not just to the rights of the community. It has been decided by the best jurists that there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent the passage of a law to restrain entirely the sale of liquor. And as to the seizures and demolition of intoxicating liquors, it has been decided that a State has a right to destroy what is brought into it prejudicial to the health or morals of its people. The law is sound, and its framers have not gone beyond their right.

A Startling Truth.—It was stated at a public meeting not long since, in reference to the city of Montreal, that fifteen of the wealthiest families in that city, have been destroyed by intemperance. A few years ago their aggregate property had amounted to $800,000; now they have disappeared, root and branch, solely thro' the influence of intoxicating liquors. A list of fourteen other families, whose aggregate fortunes amounted to $1,000,000 have disappeared from the same cause.—Another list of five hundred and seventeen families, once wealthy, in the same city have lost their entire property in the same way.

What a sad commentary on the sale and use of intoxicating drinks is here given us, and yet what is true of Montreal, is also true of every town and city where the traffic exists. Wherever the cause has a being, there are inseparable with it these effects, and the latter can no more be separated from the former, than can death and its victim. And as well may we attempt to stay the ravages of the grim demon, by placing laws of regulation on our statute books, as to prevent the dread consequences of the liquor traffic by a like course.

The Home Circle.

Happy is the man and blessed is the woman who can appreciate the joys and the endearing commingling of congenial spirits in the privacy of the home circle! What is the dress circle opera to them?—What to them are the allurements of the circle of flatterers who gather around the rich and the prosperous in the day of their prosperity, but who are sure to retreat precipitately at the first appearance of adversity? What are the circles into which restless men and gossiping women divide themselves, in comparison to the home circle, alone with the duties of which are mingled all the holy influence of affection, mutual confidence, mutual love, and reliance for protection.

To the wife, who has before her continually the speaking memorials of her duty to them and to her Creator, surely no outward circle of pleasure or amusement can claim greater attentions, or can give higher gratification, than those which she may enjoy at home.

And to the husband, what are the refinements of the political circles, or of any of the numerous circles into which communities are divided and subdivided, if for their sake he has to abandon and relinquish all the purer charms of his own fireside? Alas! how many there are to whom we could appeal for evidence that the first sources of all their sorrows and disappointments are traceable to the neglect of their own firesides!

Not, indeed, to render more poignant the regrets of those who no longer love home, or families, or friends, but rather to do what we can to save those who are reeling on the brink of the precipice, and preparing to launch into some one of those eddying circles which scarcely ever relinquish their embraces, until, perhaps, the unthinking victim sinks into the vortex which leads rapidly to destruction.—Cin. Organ.

A Man Scalped.—On Saturday last, as the train was passing at a rapid rate, near Sciotoville, an object was seen ahead, lying in close contact, if not really on the rail. The engineer and conductor discovered it in time, but thinking it was nothing but a hog! took no precaution to check the speed of the locomotive, when dashing on at full speed, they discovered the object to be a man, or at least in the shape of one. Every effort was made to stop, but on she went, amidst the most intense excitement, right over him to all appearance. Very soon a halt was effected, and on going to him it was found that the wheel had just scalped him, without injuring the skull. He was too drunk to walk, and had doubtless fallen down in the position in which he lay. Thoroughly aroused by the close rub which the iron horse had given him, and partly sobered by the profuse bleeding of his wounded scalp, the brute expended his rage in curses, and blackguard abuse of those who were kindly engaged in carrying him to Sciotoville for shelter and attention. Justice requires us to say, that the liquor seller who furnished the means of intoxication to this man, had done his full part towards making a quick finish of the work of death. One inch more, and another would have been added to the host whose blood cry out for vengeance against the business.—Life Boat.

Seizures of Liquors,—Several seizures of intoxicating liquors have recently been made in Chelsea. Constables Martin and Merriam visited a building near the United States Marine Hospital ground, on Park street, on Wednesday, and seized a quantity of the ardent belonging to John Walsh. The complaint was made by officers connected with the Hospital, in order to rid that institution of a temptation too strong to be resisted by the invalid seamen who are there under medical treatment. On the 8th inst., a patient by the name of William Smith, of Eastport, Me., died quite unexpectedly, and his symptoms and post mortem examination indicated that he had taken something of a highly stimula-character; and one patient saw Smith, on the day previous to his death, in Walsh's house, drink a glass of brandy with pepper in it. On Thursday, the same constables with another warrant made a descent upon a building occupied by Mrs. Eliza Atwood, and seized barrels, kegs, demijohns and jugs of all kinds of intoxicating liquors, and safely lodged "the spirits in prison" in the lock up on Division street. The complainants in this case were Messrs. Nehemiah Boynton, J. S. Dillingham and Samuel Basset, Jr. They also entered the domicil of Patrick Tiernon, and brought away a jug of intoxicating liquors.—Chelsea (Mass.) Telegraph.

A farmer finding a dozen of his men idly stretched out on the ground, offered a dollar to the one who was the laziest of the lot. Eleven jumped up, each claiming to be the laziest dog in the universe. The dollar, however, was awarded to the twelfth, who, when it was tendered to him, murmured out, "can't you put it in my pocket-book?"

He that too much refines his delicacy, will always endanger his quiet.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

MR EDITOR:—Presuming that a short communication from my humble pen, for the Chart, would not be altogether an unacceptable offering, I set me down to the ever pleasing task of advocating the "onward" movements of our glorious Temperance enterprize. And I set out with a quotation from the Hon. Robert D. Owen's late speech in favor of "The School Bill." It is a gem of priceless value and equisite beauty; and could I attach a golden pen, dipped in liquid fire, to a blazing Sun-beam and had adequate skill and power to wield it, I would transcribe it across and athwart "the blue arch of ether" in characters of "living light," as large and as fair as the moon, "to be known and read of all men," approved and admired by "all the babbling Tribes of Earth." Here it is, read it every body:

"A public man has two duties, and one of them is often shamefully neglected.—When popular opinion, after full enquiry, after careful examination, after sober second thought; deliberately settles down upon any great decision; it is the duty of the People's representative to carry out its decree. But it is a duty quite as imperative; though thousands are too indolent or too faint-hearted to fulfill it, to inform, to instruct, to direct public opinion; when, for a time reduced by demagogueism or misled by prejudice, it strays from the right path. He merits in no sense, the character of a Statesman, who supinely suffers his bark at all times, to float along with the current of the hour, let it carry him where it will. The good of our race,—nay a decent sense of self-respect—bids us from time to time, to pull sturdily at the oar, against the current; till the tide changes, and we have the satisfaction to feel that we have aided to lead, when it would have been wickedness, or weakness to follow."

Now, Mr. Editor, aint that rich and worthy its honored author? If our Legislators and public men generally, would act out this principle and apply it to the great Temperance question, how soon would distilleries and tippling houses, those bitter fountains from which eminate the poisonous streams of death and desolation—of want, crime and wo, be sealed up forever, or be so modified and managed as to be disarmed of all their terrors. That day will arrive, and happy, thrice happy he who shall accellerate the ushering in of its glorious dawn. I stake my all upon it, and never were my hopes more sanguine than now. True, too many alas say we ought not legislate this great evil out of the land, Legislators are afraid to touch it. Others say it should be done, but not yet, the people are not ready for it; and every Liquorite and every Loafer throws up his cap and joins the chorus—not time yet. And yet these Temperance advocates have the assurance to set themselves up as the only true friends of the cause. They may think so, but Oh! how sadly mistaken!—Suppose our Legislators instead of voting down all stringent laws, and then returning home to their constituents—ransack all creation to find argument and reason to sustain their votes, thus strengthening the hands and cheering the Liquorites; yes, if instead of this, suppose our Legislators every man of them, would roll up his sleeves and go into these reform measures with a cheerful heart and a willing mind, according to the letter and spirit of my quotation—"lead off rather than be lead," and on their return among the sovereigns, justify their votes by argument and reason, does any reasonable man doubt that the measure would be sustained? What, when every member of the Legislature should advocate it, I tell you, sir, it would not only be sustained but triumphantly sustained now, and would have been years ago. It may appear an impossibility, but when all take hold of it, they will find it easy. The following anecdote is to the point:

A Northern Minister preaching to a colored audience down South gave out a common metre hymn. A Darkie struck up a long metre tune; the preacher sung out: "It is a common metre hymn, it won't go in that tune." "O never mind Brodder, (said the sable Chorister,) when we all get hold of him we make him go." And sure enough they took it through with grace and ease.

I tell you sir, when we all take hold of him we make him go and no mistake. Be sure that you are right and then "go ahead," is a glorious motto. Why, sir, our late State Convention took definite action upon scores of important measures never dreamed of by the people; then they appointed a committee to draft an address to the people of the State, vindicating their course, and urging their constituents to sustain their official acts. And why not do so upon the all engrossing subject of Temperance? More especially as memorials are piled up before them "in heaps" asking for these things. Aye, why not? Let our present Legislature do its duty, and blot out this great iniquity from our Statute Book, and the people will en masse come up gloriously to the rescue. I repeat that day will come and will not tarry; you and I, sir, may close our work and labor of love and die without the sight, but our children and those who succeed us in "the grand drama of human life" will keep the ball rolling until the world is redeemed, and intemperance with all its bitter woes blotted out and "numbered among the things that were." And as an evidence that the rising generation are right upon this great question, I herewith enclose to you the private musings of an interesting young lady of my acquaintance at the stranger's grave. They were not intended for the public eye, and I have no doubt that my fair young friend will chide me for the liberty I have taken, but my apology is, it is too good to be lost—such a light should not be "hid under a bushel." She handles her subject without gloves, and that is the good of it. Perhaps she would have changed the phraseology a little had she ever thought of its going to press; but I dare not touch it. It is her private musings and I have ventured to make them known. The young people of my acquaintance are generally all right upon the great Temperance question; and hence my hope and hence my pleasure. "God speed the pure cold water cause," is the closing sentence in a letter from my son in California. Amen, and Amen.

Your old Friend,

A. J. COTTON.

Manchester, Dec. 6, 1852.

Liquor Law in Rhode Island.

The Mayor of Providence sends the Advocate of that city the following statistics, which are of importance as exhibiting the working of the new system there:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Providence, Nov. 4, 1852.—To oblige a large number of citizens, who have made inquiry touching these matters, I present the following statistics:

Committals to the watch-house for drunkenness and small assults growing out of drunkenness, from July, 19, to Oct. 19, 1852, (the first three months under the new liquor law,) - - -		177
Committals for corresponding months of last year, - - - -		282
Committals for one month immediately preceding the operation of the new Law, - - - -		153
Committals to the county jail from July 19, to Oct. 19, 1852, (the first three months under the new liquor law,) for State offences, -	77
For city offences, - - -	32	110
Committals to the county jail for the corresponding months of last year, for State offences,	110
For city offences, - - -	51	161
Committals to the county jail for one month preceding the operation of the new liquor law, for State offences, - -	40
For city offences, - - -	33	75

From these statistics it will be seen that the committals to the watch-house and county jail, for the first three months under the new liquor law, are one-third less than during the corresponding months of last year; and the average monthly committals for these three months are about 60 per cent. less than for the month immediately preceding.

On the first day of this month, there were but 114 paupers in the Dexter Asylum; being the smallest number of inmates at this season of the year, since 1845. The number of inmates on the 1st of November, last year, was 146, and that is precisely the average number, at that date, for the past six years.

The number of insane paupers, supported at the Butler Hospital, has also been considerably reduced. I have not, at this moment, the papers at hand, from which to give the exact statistics, but I can safely say, that the number is about one-fith less, (the present number being 44,) and the cost of their support the last quarter was three hundred dollars less than the average for each of the three preceding quarters. It is true that several were transferred from the Hospital to the Asylum, in the month of June last; but had not that transfer been made, the present number at the Asylum would have been so many less, and the contrast between this and former years so much the greater.

A. C. BARSTOW, Mayor.

Maine Law Movement--Politics.

The friends of Temperance in various sections are organizing for a vigorous reagitation of the Maine Law question, during the coming winter. We observe that meetings have been held in Allegheny, Beaver, Butler, Mercer, Lawrence, Lancaster, Centre, Chester, and other counties, and measures adopted to petition the next Legislature for the enactment of a prohibitory law, as the only thing that will satisfy the demands of the people. There is a manifest determination to have some decisive Legislative action this winter, and the politicians will be compelled to 'face the music.' Should the demands of the people be disregarded, however, and the rum influence again triumph, it is to be feared that the Temperance question will be introduced into the political canvass next fall, to the disorganization, and probably the destruction of existing parties.—Pa. Whig State Journal.

Intemperance and Education.

The religious and scholastic training of the child should be with the parent a patriot virtue. Parental authority should be rigidly guarded in the supression of all popular inducements to error, and if an evil exists beyond individual control the law must perform its office.

Is there an individual of elevated sentiment, to whom nature has confided the training of a child, whose solicitude is not increased to a fearful anxiety, in view of the public introduction to dissipation and vice? I appeal to any one of this class, if the present system of vending liquor at the corners of the streets—if the attachment of a bar-room to every place of recreation and amusement, fosters the development of domestic teaching, or affords any guarantee of a manly and virtuous maturity? Is it expected of the man who sells a draught of liquor to temper his avarice, by sympathy for the buyer? Is friendly remonstrance or parental admonition expected of him, upon whose every dollar, some sacrifice is engraved; who deals out the destructive portion though the hand of death deposits the dime?

Is there any security for youth, when the road to every school house and church is marked by some attraction to profligacy? There is a recklessness upon this subject which cannot be too harshly reprobated. Heads of families sustain by their patronage the medium of corruption to their children.

The wonderful and unfortunate precocity of the rising generation—the surprising transition from the nursery to the assertion of manly prerogative—the freedom of youth with age, is the result of outdoor agencies. Where is this familiarity more practiced or this hot-house germination more visible than in the bar-room? The boy, scarce let loose from his mother's apron strings, is as much a man in the bar-room, as the veteran of sixty.

Our system of education will never be perfect until the teaching of the schools, the moral and religious impressions of youth, are fostered by parental consistency and guarded by the law.

Vice must be individualized and its avenues suppressed. The schoolmaster must teach temperance—nay abstinence—with the alphabet, and the church, unmask its greatest enemy. The cold philosophy of Priest and Levite will not do while the wounded and dying people the road-side. The times demand of this great leader of reform—the church—a more practical application of its immense energies. Education is paralyzed while the hydra-headed monster stands ready to strangle every manly impulse, while the bar-room is licensed to stab the public virtue, and boldly confront—nay, intrude upon the house of God itself.—Mobile Register.

Unconstitutionality in Minnesota.

A paragraph is "going the rounds," stating that in a case of appeal, arising out of the seizure of liquor under the "Maine Law," in Minesota, the Chief Justice of the Territory delivered an opinion that the law is unconstitutional and cannot be enforced. This fact is stated without comment, and may give occasion for rejoicing among the opponents of the law in our State; but let them first examine the Justice's opinion. The following is a brief abstract of the points decided:

"1. That the legislative power being vested by the organic act in the legislative assembly and Governor, they had no right or authority to delegate it to any body of persons—not even to the people of the Territory.

2. That in the enactment in question, the legislature in effect attempted to transfer this power to the people.

3. That in so doing they acted beyond their authority and conferred no power upon the people, and consequently their acts were void.

4. That the people of the Territory could not in their eminent dominion reserve and exercise the power, inasmuch as the territories belong to the people of the whole Union, and under the Constitution of the United States, the ultimate sovereignty is granted to Congress. If it could be reserved it would have to be done by Congress, and not by the people of the Territory, who therefore derived no right from this source to pass this enactment, and therefore it never became a law, and cannot be enforced as such."

It will be seen that the whole of this decision relates to the manner of adoption of the law, and that the constitutionality of the act itself is not even taken into consideration. The territorial Legislature submitted the act to the people, and by the votes of the people it became, or was supposed to have become, a law; but the Chief Justice says the Legislature overstepped its prerogatives in submitting it to the people—hence it has never become a law. What ground there is for declaring that he has decided the law to be unconstitutional, we cannot discover. He has simply decided that the Maine Law has not been enacted in Minnesota—"only this and nothing more." So that however disastrously this decision may operate to the cause in Minnesota, it will carry no weight where the law has been enacted, or where its enactmet is proposed.

Will that portion of the press which has published the unqualified assertion noticed at the head of this article, confer simple justice upon the cause by publishing the facts in the case?—Fountain and Journal.

The Laughing Hyena.

A late writer observes:—The laugh of the hyena greatly resembles that of a maniac, and has a startling effect as it steals through the still night. even under our windows, which it approaches in search of food. The power of imitation given to these animals is very extraordinary; for they not only cry like the quadruped whom they wish to lure within their reach, but even seem to utter human sounds. The commandant of a fortress in Africa states that for several evenings he had been disturbed at his dinner hour by the laughter and screaming of the native women, who passed under the walls in search of water. He sent his sergeant to them, and requested that they would take some other path; they promised to obey. The next evening, however, the noise was heard again, which highly irritated the commandant, and he desired the sergeant to lie in ambush with a few men, and rushing suddenly out, secure the women, and bring them into the fortress. The men took their stations on the following evening, the laughing recommenced, and out they sallied—when, to their great astonishment, they only saw three hyenas standing in the path which had been frequented by the women, and so well counterfeiting their voices, that they could not have been detected but by sight. These hyenas are not very formidable, and will, at any time, rather fly from than attack a human being. These species of the hyena are very common in American menageries, but they are so subdued and powerless from constant confinement, and so fearfully watchful of the keeper's eye, that they never manifest any of the peculiar imitative sounds which characterize them in their native regions.

A DISAPPOINNMENT.—A citizen recently returned from London says the Mobile correspondent of the N. O. Delta, tells with much humor, of some equivoque that mingled in conversation he had with an English officer, who unknown to him, had served in Packenham's army.

"You have been, then, in America?"

"For a very short time, and it is long ago."

"Were you ever in New Orleans?"

"Not exactly in it—although once very near it."

"And did you not visit the city?"

"No they would not let me."

"Not let you!—why, how, and when could that be?"

"It was in 1814—and there was a large party of us, too, who intended to eat our Christmas dinner in the city—but though we were very warmly received, we could not accomplish our wishes. So we turned round and went to Mobile Point; but though we staid there some time, we did not find traveling in Alabama very tempting, so all concluded to return; and on the 1st of April, 1815, we left for home—the day selected for embarkation forming an appropriate finish to our fool's errand."

Here a sudden spasm of recollection struck the inquirer with the force of a galvanic battery.

A SHORT DIALOGUE.—"What is the object of government?"

"To protect the people in the enjoyment of their rights."

"Who formed it?"

"The people."

"Suppose the people find that the use and sale of a particular article tends to produce riots, and poverty, and death, and taxes, have they not a right to restrain its use?"

"Unquestionably."

"To what extent may they restrain it?"

"Obviously, if they have a right to make a law that shall diminish its sale one-third, because the public good requires it, they have the same right, for the same reason, to diminish it two-thirds, if they judge it necessary—and if the public good will justify an interference with any business, so as to diminish it one-third or two-thirds, the same reason will justify abridging it the other third—suppressing it altogether."

Our readers can make the application.—Rochester Temperance Journal.

THE MAINE LAW IN CANADA.—From information we have received, we are inclined to believe that when the Legislature meets in February next, it will enact a Prohibitory Liquor Law. The supporters of the measure in the House are both influential and numerous, and they are determined to press the matter through. We hope they will succeed. A large majority of the respectable inhabitants of the Province will help to sustain it, and after it has been put in force for a few years, the remainder will hold up both hands in its favor. In the meantime, let the friends of the cause be active in circulating petitions. There are hundreds in the country who have not yet attached their names to the Maine Law petition. Search them out, and forward their names to Quebec without delay.—Canada Christian Advocate.

Choice Gems.

He is unworthy to live, who lives only for himself.

He is truly wise who can endure evil and enjoy good.

He that always complains is never pitied.

He that blows in the dust, fills his own eyes.

He that finds a thing, steals it, if he endeavors not to restore it.

He that has no shame has no conscience.

He that listens after what people say of him, shall never have peace.

He that makes himself an ass, must not take it ill if men ride him.

He that is cheated twice by the same man, is an accomplice with the cheater.

He that hinders not a mischief when it is in his power, is guilty of it.

He that walks only by the light of Nature, walks in darkness.

He that is little in his own eyes, will not be troubled to be thought so in others.

He that doth not know that he is weak, is but weak in knowledge.

He that is slothful in his work, is brother to him that is a great waster.

He that scoffs at the crooked, had need go very upright himself.

He that has revenge in his power, and does not use it, is the greater man.

Hearts may agree though heads differ.

THE DRUNKARD realizes the fable of the Upas tree. Destruction is all around him. The house in which he lives descends with a quicker decay. The farm he manages forgets to bear the life-sustaining harvest, and is luxuriant only in briars and thorns; weeds choke out the grass in his fields; insects consume his orchards; his garden is smitten with barrenness; his fences fall, and lay open his crops to depredation; his cattle become like the "lean kine" of Pharaoh. If he is engaged in trade, his calculations always err; his means prove inadequate to the execution of his plans; he consorts with rogues and sharpers, who defraud him; he seeks to retrieve his fortunes by gaming or buying lottery tickets, and that is only a shorter course to inevitable ruin. If he be a mechanic, his right hand forgets its cunning; he frames a house whose parts will not go together. If a tailor, he spoils the cloth he would cut into garments. His work, of whatever kind it may be, ceases to be inquired after, and bears the lowest price in the market. In fine, whatever the occupation of an intemperate man may be, disaster attends him. His rashness upsets a stage; his negligence explodes a powder-mill or a steamboat; his foolhardiness wrecks a ship. Out of the countless millions of wealth which are every year cast into this ocean, a few dollars may fall upon the shallows or near the shore, and be reclaimed; the rest sink into unfathomable depths, and are lost forever.

THERE are annually, throughout Germany, 40,000 deaths from delirium tremens; in the Zollverin alone 360,000,000 quarts of brandy are sold and consumed, and in Hesse one-half the grain produced is used for distillation.

Acknowledgments.

J. S. Hester, one year's subscription, 75 cents.

Capt. N. Hayden, 75 cents.

H. H. Hall, Peru, 75 cents.

By A. Hough, Charlestown, on 10 copies, $5 00.

T. P. Jordon, 2 copies, $1 50; and 50 cents on subscription of D. Barnett, Salem, for last year.

J. M. Rogers, by Bro. Woodward, on 25 copies, Gosport, $12 50.

J. D. Stewart, Laporte, $1 00.

Capt. Milroy, Delphi, 75 cents.

Hon. Samuel Jones, 75 cents.

Hon. Theo. Wilson, 75 cents.

Hon. L. Shook, 75 cents.

Per Bro. Sage, for I. L. French, College Hill, Ohio, 75 cents.

Hon. Archibald Johnson, 25 cents.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

TRY

BROWN'S

COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT

MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

FOR THE CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, consequent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, and W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CIRCULAR---PLEASE TO READ THIS.

AGENTS WANTED.

New Books of Permanent Value.

Office of Sears' Pictorial Works.
Removed to 181 William St. New York, 1853.

Dear Sir:—If entirely convenient and agreeable to you, we would be much pleased to secure your valuable influence on behalf of our PICTORIAL FAMILY WORKS. We publish a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a high moral and unexceptional character, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprize and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well-disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Among your relatives or acquaintances, it is probable you may be able to send us the name of a respectable, energetic, and faithful man, who will carefully canvass your vicinity. If you are willing to do this, we shall duly appreciate your efforts, and cheerfully reciprocate the favor in any way that you may suggest. By looking over the list, you will perceive that there is no sectarianism in our publications they are designed for all, and must have an unprecedented sale when brought home to the firesides of the people.

☞ We solicit orders from the Trade, Teachers, and School Committees for Books, to whom we furnish our own publications, and those of all the publishers in the country, on the most liberal terms.

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell "SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Any person wishing to embark in the enterprize, will risk little by sending to the Publishers $25 for which he will receive sample copies of the various works (at wholesale prices), carefully boxed, insured, and directed, affording a very liberal percentage to the Agent for his trouble. With these, he will soon be able to ascertain the most saleable, and order accordingly.

LIST OF OUR PICTORIAL WORKS.

		Retail Price.
The Pictorial Family Bible (Large Quarto.) - - - -	1450 pages.	$6 00
Sears' New and complete History of the Bible, - - - -	700 "	3 00
Sears' New Pictorial History of China and India, - -	600 "	2 50
Thrilling Incidents of the Wars of the United States, - - -	700 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Description of the United States, - - -	608 "	2 50
Sears' Treasury of Knowledge and Cyclopedia of Science and Art,	512 "	2 50
Sears' Scenes and Sketches of Continental Europe, - - -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Description of Great Britain and Ireland, -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Family Annual (212 Engravings) - - -	368 "	2 00
The History of Palestine, - -	230 "	1 00
View of New York—This Engraving is on a sheet, 47 by 19 inches and ought to sell rapidly, -		50
Sears' Information for the People,	600 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Family Instructor, - - - -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial History of the American Revolution, - -	450 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Sunday-Book, -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Bible Biography, - -	500 "	2 50
Sears' Wonders of the World.—Second Series. - - - -	540 "	2 50
Remarkable Adventures of Celebrated Persons, - - -	410 "	1 25

To those who intend to engage in the circulation of our books, we would urge the present as the most favorable opportunity which has occurred in many years. Our sales are largely increased beyond those of preceding years; our agents are more generally successful, and the future offers still more extensive prospect for trade than even the seasons which has passed.

The two elegant volumes lately issued by us on "China and India;" the "Incidents in the United States Wars," and a new and revised edition of our "Pictorial Description of the United States," for 1853, enlarged and improved, corrected by the late Census, with full descriptions and correct illustrations of the Gold Regions, &c., we offer to canvassers, with the confidant assurance that they are as popular and elegant, and as intrinsically valuable, as any books now offered in the country.

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS

Are decidedly the best books that agents can employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great Republic. There is not a city or town in the United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable.—They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle—got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but such as an agent of good principles will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly, by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid. ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, jan 5 1t 181 William Street, New York.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

MAINE LIQUOR LAW.

Now in Press.

New Book for the friends of Temperance.

THE SENATOR'S SON; Or the Maine Law a Last Refuge. By Metta Victoria Fuller, author of "Fresh Leaves," &c., &c. This work will contain about 300 pages, 12 mo. on fine white paper, neatly bound in cloth Its object is to show the urgent necessity of adopting the Maine Liquor Law to stop the progress of Intemperance. To present the subject in the strongest light, the author has adopted the plan of showing under fictitious names the fatal progress and effects of this evil, and from her reputation as a chaste and powerful writer, a thrilling story may be expected. It will be issued about the 1st of January. Orders respectfully solicited. For further particulars address, post-paid,

TOOKER & GATCHEL,
jan 12 Publishers, Cleveland, Ohio.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Eckardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

Wm. Burnet, President.

S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,

Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,

june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent

PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Athenæum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it; and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole appearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon. John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Athenæum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits; furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

WILLIAM HANNAMAN,

DEALER IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili.
Rt Rev Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archbishop Pursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be warranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1853. NO. 32.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week.	- -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	-	25
" " for 3 months,	- - -	3 00
" " for 6 months,	- - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration,	-	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	- -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Gardiner (Maine) Fountain and Journal.

The Orphan Beggars.

FOUNDED ON FACT.

BY E. T. FARRINGTON.

Fierce blew the wind, and high uprose
In lofty drifts the chilling snows,
When in the bleak, deserted street,
With shiv'ring forms and half-clad feet,
Two little children stood before
A lordly mansion's lofty door.

BEGGARS.

Kind master, pray some pity show,
Nor bid us, weary, farther go;
Of your abundance spare a mite,
To shield us from this wintry night.
Our father died, and filled with woe,
Mother not long survived the blow;
No friends, no kindred, none have we:
Stranger, we crave your charity.

LANDLORD.

Imposters daily throng our streets,
And tales rehearse to all they meet,
Feigned tales, though fair, yet all untrue,
Of want and woe they never knew,
To cheat the simple, blind the wise,
And gain for laziness supplies:
Begone! ye vagrants, haste away,
Begone! I say, nor longer stay.

BEGGARS.

Nay, master, do not close your doors,
Hark! how the rising tempest roars,
Our shoeless feet, and tattered dress,
Are eloquent with our distress;
O! shelter us this bitter night,
And we, till breaks the morning light,
Will pray for blessings on the head
Of him who gives the orphans bread.

'Twas but a few short months ago,
That we were blessed with home;
We laughed and sported to and fro,
Nor ever wished to roam.
When father came from daily toil,
He'd press us to his breast,
And while he'd health to till the soil,
We were supremely blessed.

Dear mother's heart was full of bliss,
And when our prayers were said,
She'd say, "good night"—give each a kiss,
And lay us in our bed;
Then when at morn the rising sun
Into our window came,
We for our morning kiss would run,
And then to school and game.

But soon a change came o'er the scene—
Father grew fierce and wild;
Mother long strove her grief to screen,
Though oft through grief she smiled.
At last, upon one bitter night,
Our father came no more;
His corpse was found at early light,
Beside your tavern door!

Poor mother grew a maniac wild,
And in the mad-house died;
And I and Bub—poor little child!—
Beside her grave have cried.
But now the night is coming on,
And we've no where to go;
Then do not bid us yet begone,
For you have caused our woe.

Stung by the truth, the landlord turned.
The while his cheek with anger burned,
And, 'mid the tempest's deafening roar,
Forth drove these orphans from his door.
Though keen the blast, 'twas far more mild
Than heartless man to sorrow's child!
High rose the storm, and fierce that night,
But ere broke forth the morning light,
Those orphan boys, in death's cold sleep,
Beneath the drifts lay buried deep.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Independent.

A Boston Notion.

Boston is a city of notions, every body knows. America can show no other city so full of matured systems, useful contrivances and odd conveniences as this same Boston. The city maxim seems to be, that "there's a best way of doing all things." In public and domestic affairs, the "solid men of Boston" are not content with simple achievement, but they must have achievement by the best methods.

The latest illustration of this is their scientific way of giving a fire alarm, and calling out and guiding their fire department. A very simple matter, one would think, to raise the window sash and shout fire two or three times, and leave the alarm to spread. Every villager knows how to pull a bell-rope, and ring till he's tired.—Every New Yorker knows how to count the booming strokes of the big bells as they tell off their district number. A very simple thing! One way just as good as another, so long as a rousing alarm is started.

By no means. These Boston men have found out a best way.

If your houses take fire, and gets past domestic control, and you feel it necessary to appeal to the municipal authorities for help, do not be at all excited or alarmed. Do not make yourself red in the face, and hoarse with shouting. Put on your hat and run to yonder corner, where you see that little iron box fastened up against the wall; step into the store, ask quietly for the key, adding, "My house is on fire," by way of an apology for intrusion; now unlock the little iron door, and remembering that the longest way round is sometimes the shortest way home, obey the inscription and "turn six times slowly."—Your responsibility is ended. You've done all you need to. Boston will take care of your house. Shut too the little door. Hurry home or the engines will be there before you!

Every bell in the city and several more across the water are telling people where you live, and that your house is on fire. In other parts of the city men with glazed hats and brass trumpets may be seen running to these same little iron boxes; they seem to whisper a moment, then they listen and then they look very knowing, and slap the door to; and here they come, all pell-mell to your help. How much time has elapsed since you needed help! Perhaps three minutes. There is a best way of giving an alarm, that's a fact.

But how was it done?

That little iron box you opened was a telegraph station; you can see the wires where they come dowu through those two iron pipes into the box. The crank you turned is merely a contrivance that enables an inexperienced person to send the only message ever sent from this box—its own number. Just so a hand-organ enables the grinder to play one tune well, even though he be no organist.

You turned it six times. Once would have been enough, but six time over, and every time the same number, there could be no mistake. The central office knew in an instant of your distress.

Yes, but how did that make the bells ring all over the city, and East Boston too? Do they keep a sexton at every bell-rope all the time, ready to pull when any one telegraphs?

No. That would be full as bad as the New York plan of keeping watchmen up in the fire towers, on a perpetual look-out.—That would not be scientific enough for a "BEST" way. But you know a church clock strikes the hours without any help from the sexton except to wind it up. Just so the bells are rung for fire; in every steeple there is a machine like the striking train of a clock. These machines will strike several hundred blows each with their heavy hammers by being wound up once.

When you sent off your dispatch, it went direct to a third story room on Court Square and was read by a man whose business it is to attend to such messages. From this same room he can, by touching a key, send by another set of wires a current of galvanism to every steeple in the city. If you look, you can see those wires entering every steeple that holds a good bell. When this galvanic current passes into the several steeples, it circulates in each around a bar of soft iron, which instantly becomes a powerful magnet, strong enough to lift the detent that keeps the striking machine from running.

Now these machines are made so that they would strike one blow and stop, unless the magnet keeps the detent back and leaves the wheels unlocked and free to run. So this man in the little third story room by the Court House, (he'll show you how it is done if you will call upon him, for he is very courteous to visitors,) can, by pressing the proper knob or key, make the heavy bell-hammers strike any number he chooses. And he made them strike the number of your ward.

But how happened the engines and the firemen to come straight to my house?—There are two or three thousand houses in the ward.

The foreman of every fire company has a key to those useful little iron boxes, and so when he has got to the ward signified by the bells, he runs to the nearest box, and sends a private signal to the man in Court Square, asking "just where is the fire?" and then he listens while the answer comes back in little taps, one, two, three, four, &c., till he learns that the number of the very box you opened when you gave the alarm in the first place. Every box has its own number. The bells tolled the fireman what ward, and the telegraph taps whispered what station box the alarm came from.

I see. But is it worth all this trouble of wires and machinery and boxes and batteries?

Yes, indeed. Five minutes at the beginning of a fire are very precious. But oftentimes, so rapid is this system, an alarm will be given, bells rung, boxes consulted, fire found, hose procured and screwed to a Cochituate fire plug, and the fire extinguished, ere the family in danger are well awake. Many a time, the first thing a man kaows of his danger by fire, is that his room is flooded with water.

But this municipal telegraph is used for more purposes than one. In case of riot, the police captains can send for help to head quarters. To catch an absconding thief by setting guard at every railroad and steamboat, can be done in five minutes.—Then, too, very soon all the city clocks will be hitched together by these wires, and all of them go by one central pendulum, accurately, five hundred clocks, alike to a second!

Go it, Boston. We shall soon hear of newer notions still. The next move will be to introduce into every first class house city time as well as city water and city gas. Telegraphic time wires will be introduced just as now the water pipes and gas fixtures are. What a millenium of punctuality! Twenty thousand clocks ticking together! Yes, and next, we shall hear of a refinement of the fire system. Phillip's annihilators will be built into the walls, their nozzles just peeping out into the room. Convenient wires will be arranged so that a man waked at midnight by a smell of fire or a red light in his room, will only need reach out his arm to the fire knob, and pull it "six times slowly," and instantly that wakeful, watchful, handy man on Court Square will touch his wires, not to frighten sleep from all the city with his dinging bells, and quietly he'll touch the wire, and smash goes the acid bottles in the ambushed annihilators; phiz, squiz, fush-sh-sh, rushes out the humid, fire-destroying, life-preserving vapor. The unseasonable fire surrenders and goes out.—But long ere this, the solid man has rolled himsetf back into bed again, tucked the blanket snug about his chin and fallen asleep blessing the best, the very best, the Boston way of pntting out fires. B.

Parables and Fables.

THE RABBI AND THE DIAMONDS.—An Ishmaelite once sold a camel to Rabbi Simon, whose pupil led the animal home to the rabbi's house. On taking off the saddle, they found under it a collar ornamented with diamonds. "Rabbi, Raque," they exclaimed, "the blessing of God maketh rich," thereby expressing that God had given the diamonds to him. "Take back the diamonds to the man of whom I bought the animal," said the rabbi, "he only sold me the camel but not the precious stones." The diamonds were consequently returned to their owner, who was not a little surprised at it; but the rabbi had received the more precious ones—honesty and probity.

THE WISE TEACHER.—Under Herod the Great lived Rabbi Hillel and Rabbi Shamai, two celebrated sages, both the eminent founders of renowned academies in Israel. One day a heathen approached Rabbi Shamai as he was walking in the street, and addressed him thus: "I am desirous of becoming a Jew on the condition of your teaching me the whole law during the space of time that I can stand on one leg." Shamai, indignant at such derision, drove the scorner away with his staff. The heathen then went to Hillel, and accosted him with the same words.—Hillel at once declared his readiness to comply with the request, and said to him: "Do not forget this; that which does not please yourself, do not unto thy neighbor. This is the whole law, all the rest serves merely as commentary to this fundamental principle." The heathen thanked him, and went away, and became a good and pious man.

SELF DENIAL.—There was once a grey old rat who gathered his young ones about him, and thus addressed them:

"Ah, my dear children, the infirmities of age are pressing so heavily upon me, that I have determined to dedicate the short remainder of my days to mortification and penance, in a narrow and lonely cell which I have lately discovered; but let me not interfere with your enjoyments; youth is the season for pleasures; be happy therefore, and only obey my last injunction:—never come near me in my retreat! Bless ye, my children—bless ye all!"

With these affecting words, the old rat wiped his eyes with his tail, and by a great effort controlling his emotion, tore himself away.

Several days passed without his being seen, and at length his youngest daughter, moved more by filial affection than by the curiosity, which has so unjustly been charged as the failing of her sex, stole to her father's retreat—his cell of penitence and mortification. It was a "sell," indeed; for it turned out to be a hole, made by his own venerable teeth, in an enormous Cheshire Cheese.

MORAL.

Trust not him who magnifies the disinterestedness of his motives, or enlarges upon his sacrifices; for a thousand to one, he is either a babbling theorist or a studied hypocrite. It is the easiest of all things to preach action while reposing in a luxurious arm-chair, and to sympathize with shivering poverty, seen through the windows of a snug parlor. Hypocrisy will always make a merit of necessity, and clothe the veriest selfishness with the cloak of self-denial.

The Dignity of Labor.

It is an indication of idleness in any mind to be ashamed of work. It is to deny the law of Nature, for it is a universal mandate, written in the necessity of things, that "in the sweat of thy face" is everything great or valuable to be accomplished. We look as in vain, to witness the accomplishment of anything without the application of mental or physical effort. Where are the monuments of creative idleness? When are the triumphs of genius everlastingly at rest? They are not to be found in the past. History makes no record of them; they are not among the wonders of the present. The universe is void of all trace of them, for they are not, and have not been. All that dignifies history, or makes the present glorious, has been the same law of work.—What has not labor done? In fact, nothing has been done without it. It has builded our cities, flooded our navies, led our armies and governed the nation. It has stored the mind of the student, penned the inspiration of the poet, struck eloquence from the mute marble, given history an unforgetting memory, and thrown hues and speaking lines of life upon an inanimate canvass. All this and more has labor done. It has beautified life and made it tolerable. Without work, existence were a dull monotonous prolongation of days, with naught to mark the lapse of time but the rising and setting sun. Who covets the barren life full of ease, that has no manly struggles, no doubtful battle-fields, no generous thrills? Rather than to be doomed to such a Dead Sea fate, we would be thrown upon the billows in an eternal conflict, to alternate forever between triumph and defeat.—They whose lot is a lot of toil, in their madness often sigh for repose and careless indulgence of the opulent children of Mammon. But little do they think of the days vacant of incident, and the nights burdened with sleep, and the ceaseless return of the forms misnamed of pleasures. And too lightly do they estimate the luxury of genuine impulse, the consciousness of mighty passion, awakening the sublimity of life, and the proud and satisfying repose that comes with final triumph over temporary ills.

We have said there is a dignity in labor. Every one has felt it, who has lent himself earnestly at work. He has felt that his virtue was safest, when he had thrown about it the safeguard of honest, unwavering occupation. These are the moments of his most conscious pride.

It should be the part of education to inculcate the love of labor, the esteem of its reward and the supremacy of its law.—Were its true dignity appreciated, men would seek to make their children gentlemen by making them workers, rather than putting money into their purses. If idleness be an evil, then is the father's blessing too often a curse. Labor is not onerous when performed with an appreciation of its nature. It then becomes dignified and honorable, elevating man to his true position among the creatures of Omniscience. Neglecting this law, of his being, he becomes an idler in a universe of activity and energy. He sleeps till the crisis of a great destiny is past. He sells his birth-right for a day of inglorious ease.—He doffs the priestly garments of Nature, and puts on in its stead, the beggarly rags of an out-cast and a vagabond.

A Touching Sketch.

"AND SHE WAS A WIDOW."—A pale and pensive lady had just passed—she was clad in "the weeds of profoundest woe"—doubtless she is a widow.

A moment to imagine her history.—He whom she mourns has wooed her in her girlhood. There is a fragrant nook, where a rivulet gurgles, which she never remembers save with tears wherein love's best drama was performed by their fervid lips. They were wed at last. Months, perhaps years, departed—and then the shadows fell. He blessed her amid the marches of the night, and in the morning went out with the stars. The earth is laden with such histories.

She was blithe and merry once: She loved the customs of society, and adhered with a sort of piety to the maxims of fashion. Gay and happy was the world in which she dwelt. But it is changed now.

It is a mournful thing to carry a dead heart in a living bosom. It is a bitter thing for a lip used to dainties to feed on ashes. It is a fearful thing for the living to know that their only treasure is hid in the still and mouldy grave—beautiful life linked to corrosive corruption.

Her desires are written upon her meek face. Its expression translates her muttered yearning. She longs to join, in the distant and better country, him who has gone before.

The welcome hour is nearer than she thinks. They shall soon lay her beside her buried idol. How lovely will be that dying smile, when the prayerful lips shall close at the touch of death's cold finger. God grant that the drooping lily of earth may become a fadeless amaranth in heaven.

THE SNEERER.—There is a large class of people who employ themselves almost constantly by sneering at the efforts of others. Nothing done by a neighbor suits them. If you perform an act of charity, they question your motives; if you exhibit skill in your profession, they pretend to regard you an over-rated man; if you produce something decidedly meritorious, they ridicule and depreciate its worth; and if you originate a thought or machine, they declare you a plagiarist. In their estimation your writings are stupid, and full of tautology; your conversation unprofitable; the work of your hands valueless. And yet ask them to do what you aimed at, and failed in, according to them, and they have not even the ability to try. They are all, in fact, what they feign you to be, and unfit for every thing but fault-finding, crying down people of merit, and slandering worth. They are envious, jealous, and full of cant. Incapable of doing what you do, and therefore envious of your talent; too dull to command respect, and consequently jealous of what you receive; incompetent to produce a thought, and always ready to carp at what you express. They are of the race of Diogenes, without his ability; Cynics, without the merit of honesty of purpose. Heed them not, reader, they are harmless when treated with contempt; and if you ask where they are to be found, look around you—your circle of acquaintance will furnish one, no doubt, of the class.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 2, 1853.

☞ We are requested to say that the Central Committee have under consideration an address on the subject of a Prohibitory Liquor Law, which in due time will make its appearance.

☞ We have been furnished with several items of local intelligence of a personal character, which, however worthy the motives of those who furnished them, we think, had better be withheld until subsequent offences demand castigation.—Wherever reform is possible, we are willing to go all lengths in forbearance and mercy; and only are we anxious to render vice odious and contemptible when it has become defiant and incorrigible.

Social Order.

Last week we had two meetings of this Order. One at Wesley Chapel—the other at the United Brethren Meeting House. We attended the former and must say that we were highly gratified by the addresses delivered. Dr. Thompson presented the importance of Temperance Reform in a new and strong light; and, all in all, delivered an address equal in point of literary composition to the best we have had the pleasure to listen to in this city.—He was followed by the Rev. Mr. Whitten whose wit kept the audience in spasms of laughter for near an hour.

The next meeting of the Order will be held at the Christian Chapel on this (Wednesday) evening, at 7 o'clock.

☞ Why does the State Sentinel publish everything that can operate either directly or indirectly against the passage of a prohibitory liquor law, while it says never a word for its encouragement? We have no desire to provoke controversy, but simply to know for our own satisfaction. Why is it, Bro. Brown?—Temp. Chart.

We will accommodate our friend of the Chart with great pleasure. The people now look to the Sentinel for all the late and correct intelligence. All the late news on that subject have been against stringent legislation. The Maine law has been declared unconstitutional by Judge Curtis of the Supreme Court of the United States, and by the Supreme Court of the State of New Hampshire. Gov. Hubbard has been defeated in his election for Governor, before the Maine Legislature, on account of his advocacy of stringent laws. The Governor of Massachusetts, in his annual message, opposes such illegal enactments. All these things, as a faithful chronicler of passing events, we have noticed. Such items of news never find their way into the Temperance Chart, and other kindred prints. But for the Sentinel the people of Indiana would be in utter darkness on this subject. We hope you are answered, Doctor.—Sentinel.

We are right glad our neighbor of the Sentinel has answered us so kindly; but right sorry that he has not done it more satisfactorily. It is certainly a very recent thing, that "the people have begun to look to the Sentinel for all correct intelligence." It may be so, however. If it be, we suggest that they will have to look a long time for it, and may not see it at last. The editor certainly has not read the Chart, or he would not have charged that we omitted all items against the progress of prohibitory laws. We published a notice before the Sentinel of the decision of the Supreme Judges of New Hampshire; and, also of the decision against the law in Minnesota. The former contained the principles of Judge Curtis' decision, and we did not, therefore, notice that. The only remaining item then, is the notions of Governor Boutwell, and the recent defeat of Gov. Hubbard. The remarks of the former we thought too silly and shallow to notice at all; and that we were right, is clear from the majority vote of ten in the House of Representatives of Massachusetts against a repeal of the law. In regard to the defeat of Governor Hubbard we have hitherto said nothing, for no other reason than because we waited intelligence, that would enable us to know its cause. The Sentinel, without evidence, concludes that he was defeated for no other reason than his support of the liquor law. But was not his opponent in favor of the law? If whisky democrats, for the sake of whisky, sold their party to the whigs, it does not follow that the law is therefore in the minority. And even if Gov. Crosby sold himself for whisky votes, it does not prove our neighbor's position. If he did sell himself for such support, language has no term of opprobrium strong enough to express our contempt for him. It would be doing the meanest of all bargains—a political sale—for the meanest of all prices, whisky support.

But our brother only half answers us. We desire to know why he never finds any space for items on our side of the question? It is certainly not fair to treat the people who "look to the Sentinel for all the correct intelligence" only to the whisky side of intelligence. How does our brother know but that some of the very opinions he has recently been giving us, from Gov. Boutwell and others, are the echoes from different points of reflection, of his own out-speakings on former occasions. That is all very probable; for his influence, (being the source of correct intelligence,) must be widely felt. Had our friend, however, taken a different course and given his abilities and energies to the good cause of Temperance, how very different might have been the result of his labors.

In the end, we admit that it is quite probable that we lean over a little on the side of tetotalism. "But e'en that failing leans to virtue's side." But we think our neighbor goes over quite as far on the other side and no poet tells us that such a bevel is to virtue's side.

The Liberty of the Press.

Every true American is justly proud of his country. But what makes him so? It is not her rivers and her mountains, her lakes and her harbors. These are equalled or surpassed in other lands. Nor is it her cities, her commerce, her wealth or her military renown. These too have been surpassed by nations whose fame no just man will envy. Nor again is it her huge distilleries and those purlieus of hell—the groceries—whose errand is fraught with ruin and death to all that venture within their influence. These excite regret and shame rather than pride. But still Americans have just reason to be proud of their country and her institutions. There is no other land on the green earth where man is so well protected in all that is proper to him as man. Free thought, free speech, a free Press and free action are secured to the American people by their Constitution, and all the countless institutions which have arisen under and are protected by it. While these remain, no citizen of the United States need blush for his country; for they but tell of the millions of free hearts that cherish and maintain them. Take these away and who would not as leave be a Russian serf as an American citizen. It has been well said, that he who dare not think is a slave to his fear; and it is just as true, that he who thinks and yet dare not speak freely what he thinks, is a slave to the power that deters him. It matters not what form that power assumes, it controls a slave; and, if exerted for that purpose, it is just as much a slave-driving, despotic power, as that of the Emperor Nicholas of Russia, or that exercised by that contemptible bastard of Ignorance and Slavery, Lewis Napoleon, the present Emperor of the French.

It is greatly to be regretted that there are those even in Indiana, who seem to be willing to strike down free thought, by striking at its most efficient organ—a free press. It is still more to be regretted that some of these little men with little minds occupy positions which give their opinions prima facie some title to consideration if not to respect.

The recent effort in the House of Representatives to exclude from that body the "Locomotive," after a contract had been closed for it during the session, merely because its publishers dared to express opinions different from those entertained by that body in regard to the Hon. John Petit, is, to us, a bold manifestation of the same spirit that has silenced the press in France and Austria, or made it the contemptible organ of a despotism as contemptible. This we say without either approving or condemning the article of the Locomotive against our new Senator. It matters not what may be our private opinions on that subject; it is the work of other hands than ours either to oppose or sanction what may be said against him. But that our Statesmen should proscribe and muzzle the press, so far as they are able, because it dares give utterance to an honest opinion, even if erroneous, is quite a different matter. To be sure, we care little or nothing about the particular instance of injustice proposed to be committed by Mr. Chapin's resolution against the Locomotive. It is the principle which its adoption would have settled, and the consequences growing out of it, against which we beg leave to enter our protest. We can not see how the resolution differs, save in degree, from the arbitary acts by which despots have in all times hushed every expression inimical to their oppression. The same spirit that buds in a motion to proscribe the press, or any portion of it, for the manly utterance of an opinion differing from its own, would, if allowed to mature, reduce all thought, speech and action to its own narrow and pitiful standard. Nay, further, the same spirit would not rest quietly until every heart that dared throb with one manly aspiration had found its quietus in the dumbness of death. There is no difference, in kind, between a great and a little oppressor. But for circumstances which may stint the growth of the little fellow, he would soon fill the measure of the greatest. The difference is in degree, not in kind. The ambition of the toad was even greater than that of the ox; but his skin would not bear blowing up until he became as large. The attack on the Locomotive reminded us of the saying of the Poet:

> Could great men thunder as Jove himself does,
> Jove himself would ne'er be quiet,
> For every petty pelting officer would use Jove's
> Heaven for thunder.

If there was ever any good reason for taking the Locomotive, we do think there has been no occasion given on its part for the resolution to exclude it. Nor would we be understood to say that the House did wrong in taking it. It certainly is far more worthy of public patronage than the "Dutchblatt," which publishes, every now and then, articles reflecting upon the whole American people in far stronger and coarser terms than those employed by the Locomotive in regard to Mr. Petit.

We would respectfully suggest to the member from Tippecanoe, that he move to expel the "Dutchblatt" for calling the American people "perfidious yankees," and all such patriotic twaddle as that. It must be grateful to his feelings to give circulation to such abuse of seven out of ten of his immediate constituents. It is certainly both manly and becoming. But as he is perhaps unable to read the German, we forgive him, for he knows not what he does, in thus giving currency to bad morals in miserable German. This same "Dutchblatt" has done all it can, to establish in our country a German party far more exclusive and far more disgraceful to the head that conceived it than any other faction known even among those whose sympathies never extend beyond the limits of a faction. But the resolution was defeated, and its authors and abettors most signally rebuked. Its fall seemed to carry certain gentlemen down with it. For, in one instance, the audacity that supported, while there was a probability of adopting it, endeavored to crawl from under its ruins, when it had fallen upon him. Sic transit.

Our Benevolent Institutions.

We have received the Annual Reports of those who superintend these glorious institutions. It is delightful to contemplate their progress in usefulness during the few past years; and feel, at the same time, the assurance that under competent men to control them, as heretofore, their success must be complete. Time will not allow us to say more.

One fact, however, we cannot withhold, which is disclosed by the Report of the Physician to the Lunatic Asylum. It is this: There are SIXTEEN men there confined, and ELEVEN women, who have been made lunatics by the traffic in intoxicating liquors. The former produced their own ruin by indulgence in the bowl; the latter owe theirs to "man's inhumanity," arising from the bowl. These ELEVEN, at least, our laws have failed to protect.—Let our Legislative Committees visit the Asylum, see and contemplate these minds ruined by the sanction of our laws, and then return to their seats and vote against right legislation if they can. Take the case of these ELEVEN women. What law of Indiana has been violated in making them maniacs? None. It has been consumated on the contrary according to law. The law makers know that such consequences follow the liquor traffic wherever it is permitted. They permit it, having the power to put an end to it; therefore, they will this consequence of the liquor traffic and are responsible for it.—Get out of it, who can.

Our Senator and Ourself.

We were highly gratified that Mr. Hosbrook, our Honorable Senator, manifested his preference for our paper over either the Whig or Democratic organ on last Thursday, by openly requesting us to take a note of his great speech in favor of the proposition of Mr. Greathouse to increase the power of landlord's over their tenants. Pleased as we were with the compliment, we set ourselves eagerly about the duty it imposed, and have now before us the skeleton of that rare display of Senatorial eloquence. This skeleton we intend to fill up at leisure; and then we shall comply with the Senator's request and give it to the readers of the Chart, with remarks suitably illustrating its excellencies as a work of art. We regret that our space will not admit of it to-day.

Doubtless our readers were gratified with the sentence which we gave in our last, from the same Honorable Senator, in relation to the law regulating interest on money. That sentencc constituted the gist or quintessence of his speech on the subject; and must have given our readers an excellent idea of the moral and intellectual strength of its author. But both he and his friends have since informed us that that sentence was spoken ironically—that it was really intended to oppose the present law, fixing the rate of interest.—If so, we respectfully enquire whether the gentleman's vote, which corresponded with our interpretration of his speech, was also given ironically? Perhaps he had not yet let himself down from his ironical flight, and voted in the same spirit in which he had spoken. It will soon be said, that even oaths to support the Constitution, and faithfully to discharge the duties of office, are taken ironically, if such sublime examples should become popular. We respectfully suggest that as both the Senate and our reporter, (who is a gentleman of the fairest character and highest learning,) misunderstood the Senator, before becoming ironical hereafter he let his hearers know that the fit is about to seize him. This would save him from being misrepresented. He might learn an important lesson from the painter, who, to prevent mistakes, wrote under his pictures a short sentence explaining his design. Under one he would write: "This is a bear;" under another: "This is a wolf," &c. So let Senator Hosbrook, when he is done making a speech, inform his auditors which part of it is intended for a joke, which part is designed to be severe, and which part logical. Otherwise, we opine, he will always be and remain in his own estimation the victim of misapprehension and misrepresentation.

☞ A Report was made on Wednesday last in the House of Representatives, from a Special Committee, against the expediency of instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to use their influence to secure the passage of a law by Congress to prevent the importation of foreign liquors into the United States; and concurred in by the House. So much for that branch of the trade.

Proceedings of the State Temperance Convention.

[Concluded.]

The following resolution was moved by Dr. Jones, and adopted:

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of this State, be, and they hereby are respectfully requested to instruct our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States, to use their utmost efforts to procure the passage of a law entirely prohibiting the importation of intoxicating beverages into the United States.

The following resolutions were moved the Rev. Mr. Boyd, and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Convention that while many of the Ministers of the Gospel throughout the State are doing valiantly in the cause of Temperance; yet increased exertion on the part of the Clergy generally is deemed essential to success in the cause; and it is earnestly requested that they make the subject of Temperance a prominent topic in their public discourses.

Resolved, That any Minister of the Gospel who fails to use his influence to promote the cause of Temperance in his Congregation, is unworthy the confidence of an enlighted public, and is recreant to the cause of his Divine Master.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Hannaman, and adopted:

Resolved, That his excellency, the Governor, is entitled to the thanks of this Convention for bringing the subject of the destructive effects of intoxicating liquors before the present General Assembly, in his late Message, and expressing his "willingness to co-operate with the Representatives of the people in the adoption of any measure that will be calculated to remove this great evil from our land."

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the Corresponding Committee of the several Cogressional Districts, to procure efficient Temperance lecturers in the several counties of their respectives Districts as far as possible; to report to the Central Committee and Editor of the Chart, from time to time, the progress of the cause, giving statistical information, and encourage the circulation of Temperance journals, and as far as in his power look to the true interests of Washingtonian Societies, Social Order, Cadets, Daughters, Sons and Templars of Temperance in their respective Districts.

Resolved, That we recommend to the friends of Temperance throughout the State to hold County Temperance Conventions in each county of the State on the coming of our National Independence.

Resolved, That the State Central Committee call two State Temperance Conventions during the coming year, one of which shall meet at the city of Madison in September next, and the other at Indianapolis in January, 1854.

Convention adjourned, sine die.

J. W. GORDON,
SETH PLATTE,
S. R. JONES,
Secretaries.

A PATRIOT'S DEATH.—The records of ancient Greece and Rome do not exhibit a nobler instance of patriotism than is contained in the following inscription, found upon a grave stone at New London, Conn. No wonder our revolutionary fathers were invincible, while they were actuated by such motives as are here recorded:

"On the 30th of October, 1782, 4000 English fell upon this town by fire and sword; 700 Americans defended the fort for a whole day, but in the evening about four o'clock, the commander of the besieged delivered up his sword to an Englishman, who immediately stabbed him.—All his comrades were put to the sword. A line of powder was then laid from the magazine to the sea, there to be lighted and blow the fortress into the air. William Hotman, who lay not far distant, with three strokes of the bayonet in his body, said to one of his wounded friends who was still alive—"We will endeavor to crawl to this line and thus we will completely wet the powder with blood, and with the life that still remains in us, save the fort and magazine, and perhaps a few of our comrades who are only wounded." He alone had strength to accomplish this noble design. In his 30th year, he died on the powder that he overflowed with his own bood. His friends, and seven of his wounded companions, by that means had their lives preserved."

After this narrative are the following words in large capitals:

"HERE RESTS WILLIAM HOTMAN."

☞ The article on the "Dignity of Labor" in this issue is clipped from the South Carolina Advocate. It is surely time that we should do something to exalt labor when its dignity is spoken favorably of in South Carolina.

Ill will never speaks well, nor doth well.

Correspondence.

☞ The following beautiful poem—"THE DRUNKARD'S REMORSE"—was forwarded us by the gifted author for publication in the Chart. We hope it is only an introduction to many that are to follow. It will give us pleasure to be able to gratify our readers with many a rich production from one who so loves the cause of Temperance, and is so eminently qualified to aid in its advancement. We thank her for this favor, and ask that it be followed by others when convenient. She concludes a note that accompanied the poem as follows: "The cause of Temperance is a noble cause. One in which we should all labor. When the white wings of the Angel of Temperance shall be spread over the earth, what glorious sunlight and peace will follow. Blest cause! May God speed it, and hasten the glorious reform:"

For the Temperance Chart.

The Drunkard's Remorse.

BY M. LOUISA CHITWOOD.

I know that Death's river
Is darksome and wide,
And yet in my dreaming
She steals to my side,
With footsteps so noiseless,
My beautiful bride.

Her hand on my forhead
Is heavy and cold,
The night dews are soft
On the tresses of gold,
And the white robe how icy
And chilling its fold.

As a cloud floateth dark,
On the fair face of night—
So oft in the morning
When sun-beams are bright—
She glides like a shadow,
And shuts out the light.

Oh sweetly she sleepeth,
My beautiful one,
It needeth no marble,
No rose tree nor stone,
To point out the wreck
Of the heart I undone.

The blight of the drunkard—
The curse of that woe—
The wild words of sorrow,
The ebb and the flow,
Of the hopes in her bosom,
Are haunting me so.

I look on the wine cup,
'Tis tempting and fair,
But her eyes melting glances
E'en follow me there;
And the hands of Remorse
Close the gates of Despair.

I reap but the harvest
Of thorns I have sown,
My bosom is haunted
With wrongs I have done,
For the face is before me
Whose ruin I won.

Mt. Carmel, Ind.

For the Temperance Chart.

DILLSBORO', Ia. Jan. 20, '53.

DR. J. W. GORDON—Dear Sir and Bro: I am entirely unaccustomed to writing for publication. I cannot, however, deny myself the pleasure it affords me of communicating through the columns of the Chart the glorious news of one of the most interesting Temperance revivals, in this place, that I have ever witnessed.

Temperance was rapidly passing away as a thing that had been. The little Division of the Sons was tottering to its fall. We determined to make one more effort to revive our sinking cause. Our good Bro., M. M. Edwards, of Cincinnati, was invited to come and lecture for us. He came, and on the evening of the 14th commenced and continued until the 19th, during which time there were some 150 persons signed the Washingtonian pledge—14 were initiated into the Division, and 19 propositions have been received for membership, and 120 voters signed the Memorial to the Legislature for the passage of a law to prohibit the manufacture or sale of ardent spirits.

The Ladies, God bless them, always foremost in all good works, have given us another proof of their deep sympathy for suffering and bleeding humanity. They have held meetings and appointed Committees of themselves to visit the whisky-sties in our village and solicit the keepers of them to quit the business of drunkard and pauper-making. We are greatly indebted to them for the glorious results of this meeting.

On Wednesday evening one of the richest scenes was enacted that was ever my lot to witness. A grog-seller in our village asked the liberty of making his pitiful excuse, as he said, for selling grog for a living. He was cordially invited to the stand; gosh! you ought to have heard it. He said he had been living here a great while; married a wife here; had a large family; tried a good many ways to support them but could not; he now makes a good living; he had done all he could for the Temperance cause; he had proposed giving money for a Charter fee for a Division if they would meet at his house. In old times most every body drank whisky; a good old Baptist Preacher in his neighborhood kept whisky and would treat his neighbors and drink it himself, and preach every Sabbath; he had no gold watch to tell the time of day; had a mark on the door to tell when to go to meeting; and folks lived happy then; there was'nt men coming from over the ocean lecturing on Temperance, stirring up strife in the neighborhood, and raising mobs to send to his house to make him quit a lawful business; (meaning the ladies.) He had bought his license, and would sell as much whisky as he pleased, and twant any body's business.

Bro. Edwards, you know, is an Englishman, and this fellows allusion to foreigners coming here and getting up a mob to drive the good citizens of our place from their laudable business, was intended to excite the prejudice of the people against him; he succeeded in getting some half dozen fellows, who had been worshipping at the shrine of Bacchus, worked up to the highest state of patriotism, and when Bro. Edwards rose to reply it broke forth in two or three low and solemn whistles, which sounded as doleful as a whistle at a funeral. But a well-timed rebuke from Bro. Edwards caused their patriotic feelings to subside as fast as they rose, and they were soon in due bounds.

There was another prominent actor in this scene I should like to notice, but this is already too lengthy, and I must crave the indulgence of our Knight of the Mortar until another opportunity presents itself. A FROCKOBUS.

For the Temperance Chart.

Weekly Benefits.

The system of Weekly and Funeral Benefits, in the Order of the Sons of Temperance, has failed in a good degree, in accomplishing what was expected and desired, at the time it was adopted as a part of the policy of that Order. Much was then said of the necessity of a fund to aid worthy Brethren in sickness and distress, and there can be no valid objection to a fund of that kind; but from what is known, of the practical operation of the system, it may be safely affirmed, that where one dollar is paid to such worthy objects of charity, five dollars are paid to those who are unworthy.

The Members of the Order may be divided into two kinds: 1st. The true friends of the cause of Temperance, and 2nd, the true friends of Weekly Benefits. It has been suggested that there is yet another kind: The friends of Temperance and of Benefits; but as we have the highest and best authority, that "no man can serve two masters," it may safely be asserted that no such third kind exists. The true friends of Temperance are of the opinion that the Order was established to promote that cause, while the true friends of Weekly Benefits are as clearly of the opinion that it was established to pay benefits and for nothing else. The former, have heretofore freely paid their weekly dues into the common Treasury, with the hope and expectation of thereby promoting the good cause. In this they have been frequently disappointed; while the friends and recipients of benefits, have also paid their money into the same Treasury, with the hope and expectation of thereby promoting their own interest, in receiving it back again, with double or treble the amount. In this very many of them have not been disappointed.

The cause of Temperance, must inevitably sink to the earth, under the accumulated amount of disease, physical and moral, with which it is loaded down, and the Order will, eventually, be wholly destroyed.

Let us have a few facts and a little plain talk upon this subject, for it must be met sooner or later, and every day's delay, only aggravates the evil and increases the danger. One man conceiving that perhaps something may be made by abstaining from ardent spirits, and by weekly benefits, becomes a member of the Order, and thereby gives it the benefit of a frail and feeble constitution—another, perchance, gives it a pair of diseased lungs—another casts upon the Brethren and the Treasury a desperate rheumatism; a change in the weather, a north wind, a shower of rain, or wet feet, lays them upon their backs and gives them benefits from one to six weeks each, according to the hurry of the season, or the demand for labor; and what with feigned and real sickness, the Treasury is drained of its last dollar, while the cause of Temperance is wholly neglected. All that is here stated, hard and harsh though it be, can be sustained by the records and the facts. Such things have not only been done, but they are now being done all over the United States, when the Order has a full Treasury and pays benefits.

One Division in Indiana, having a full Treasury, and paying Benefits, $3 weekly in sickness, and $30 and $15 in Funerals, during the last three years, has paid six hundred and forty six doltars in Benefits—$218 a year. During the three years, the number of members, who actually paid their weekly dues, never exceeded a hundred, and at this time it is only forty-five. There is a nominal membership of seventy in all, but twenty five members are in arrears for dues, from two dollars to seventeen dollars each. This immense sum of money was paid in all to forty members; sixteen of whom have ceased to be members of the Order; three of the number have died. Of the thirteen who withdrew voluntarily, or who were expelled, nearly all are known to have violated Art. 2, either before or after they ceased to be members of the Order. To exhibit the system without calling names, we read from the record as follows: Mr. A. to save himself from delirium tremens joined the Order, remained 18 months, drew $9 in benefits, and resigned his membership; Mr. C. has received $30 benefits; Mr. D. $42; Mr. E. $48, and yet remain in the Division; but Mr. F. after receiving $39 was expelled for violating Art. 2, and it was ascertained and proven, that while he was in the receipt of weekly benefits, he was secretly drinking beer and other intoxicating drinks. Worthy Brother in distress! Mr. G. has received $30 and yet remains a member; but Mr. H. made up his mind to go to California, and that made him sick. He drew $12 of weekly benefits, then resigned his membership, and got drunk the same day! (A man of high moral principle say you.) Now as a fair set off to all this, the same Division during the same three years, has actually appropriated and paid out the sum of twenty dollars for the cause of Temperance—occasionally sending a Delegate to the Grand Division.

Of course, with such a condition of things, little is said or done, which is not in some way connected with the question of benefits; the canse of Temperance and its friends are at a sad discount, the Order has lost its moral power, and the place is literally floating in liquor.

In another Division in Indiana, a wealthy man, a member of the Order, drew his weekly benefits, $3 for several weeks in succession, while his disease was Delirium Tremens, and nothing else, and to heighten the enormity of the case, the attending Physician was a member of the same Division with the sick Brother!!

These are only a part of the wrongs and abuses, growing out of the system; and if any one doubts their truth, names and dates can be given for all that is here stated. What remedy should be adopted for such a condition of affairs? Abolish the whole of the present system, and instead of it, let each Division have a fund sacred to charity, to aid worthy Brethren and their widows and children in distress.

Many Divisions have ceased to be Temperance organizations, and under the legilimate result of this system of Benefits, have resolved themselves into badly managed and failing Health Associations, which will wholly fail whenever their treasuries are empty.

January 13, 1853.

A Question Answered.

We are often asked by good temperance friends, if we really "think that the temperance reform will ever triumph and the liquor traffic be done away."

WE DO. We never have seen the day or the moment we did not. Our faith is rooted in the very heart's core. In the darkest hour of our reverses, that faith has grown stronger. Years but add strength to the belief. We glory in that faith. It bears up in the battle and puts a soul in every blow. It lives and throbs within us. It is a beacon-light which glows unfalteringly by night and by day. We feel and know that Almighty God is with our armies, and toil with bright hopes against a gigantic power.

We are not mistaken—cannot be. We are as sure of a triumph ultimately, as that God lives. As GOD LIVES. To-day—to-morrow—years—ages hence; no matter; we shall triumph. Would to God that every temperance heart could be made to throb with the same sublime faith, and that our action in all the transactions of life will go upon record for or against our integrity. If we did not look for a day of redemption, we never again would rally around the old banner.

There is a great fault with our people. In some stirring time, we have a host of heroes. The occasion passes, as does their zeal. Do such people expect to revolutionize public sentiment in a day?

When we entered upon this work, it seemed to us that a principle so just must triumph after a brief struggle. We now look back upon history and find that every good principle has had its ordeal of conflicts and defeats. But truth has lived through all! Luther died, but his blows shivered a world-wide system of iniquity. A Hampden and Sidney died, but their names are scripture words in the history of struggling freedom, and their memories cherished where liberty is loved. Warren died as the first fury of the Revolutionary storm swept Bunker Hill with its sleet of death. But the shaft that overlooks the field of his martyrdom, bears up his fame to the clouds and its granite sides proclaim to a world that the principle for which he yielded his life, died not with him. Upon Calvary a Savior died ignominiously. The Christian religion has often grown dim at the stake and upon the rack. But to-day the story of his death is rehearsed where the broken altars of heathendom lie in ruins. So it has ever been. Right and Truth may be trodden in the dust, but never die.

Yes, good friends we know we shall triumph. No matter when. As God wills. All that live to-day may toil out their brief day, but will truth die with them? What an idea!

One has but to look back over the history of the Great Temperance Reformation, to gather brighter hopes and stronger faith. Its very reverses have been but the gatherings of the storm ere a fiercer bursting. Look upon that dark era in our countries history, when like an angel of death, intemperance sat undisturbed at its feast of blood in nearly every home—when not a beacon broke in upon the universal gloom. It is but a little while since, and yet what a change! How different the state of public sentiment. Hearts and homes enough have been blessed to reward us for ages of effort. Let every one for one moment reflect upon the blessing which the reform has scattered in its pathway, and he will step more proudly and look upward to God with a brighter faith.

Yes, God is in the work, and the rum traffic will fall. Every augury is against it. Its desperation, is but a frenzy of dissolution. The Spirit of the age—the voice of long injured humanity, is against it. Domestic and social happiness and peace, virtue and good order, and individual and national prosperity demand its extinction. Revelation is against it. It must die. Let all feel this, and work accordingly.—Cayuga Chief.

MEAGHER'S APOSTROPHE TO GOLD.—We are confident that our readers will peruse with interest the following sketch of that portion of Mr. Meagher's lecture in which he apostrophizes "filthy lucre." It is too noble to be lost, but it is not superior to the elevated and glowing tenor of his whole discourse:

"Gold, which has caused many a brain to ache, has blistered many a hand, broken many a noble heart, has wounded many a soaring soul, and clinging to it, has brought it to the dust; gold, which has bought the integrity of the statesman, and led his wisdom captive; gold which has silenced the tongue of the orator, and bought the flatteries of the past; gold, for which in the gay saloons of fashion, many a fair and noble girl has plighted the vow which has consigned her life to bitterness, and locked upon her radient neck the snake that swells her head with venom; gold, which has stolen into the councils of the struggling nation, has bred dissension among the chiefs, has broken the seal of her sacred secrets, has forced the gates of her strongest citadels, has bought the evidence which hurried her apostles to the scaffold, has bought the votes which made over her inheritance to others, and her glory to a strange people—gold, which has led the traitor to the garden, and with a kiss betrayed the Redeemer of the world—gold, which in so many shapes has stepped with a stealthy tread or rioted amongst men—which has been the fever, the madness, the despair—has been in turns and quick succession, the spy, the swindler, the perjurer, the assassin—the foe of innocence, the blight of beauty, the bane of genius; gold has become a fountain of life, and joy, and freedom—the serpent has been transferred into a blossomed wand. Lucifer has become the morning star. To you, the citizens of America, it must be pleasing, indeed, to behold a new republic rising up to share with you the labors and glories of a future, before which the conceit of the old world shall be humbled, and in the light of which humanity shall grow strong."

Novel Cure for Gin Drinking.

The wife of a collector of taxes in the neighborhood of Wrexham was in the constant habit of indulging very freely with the gin bottle when her husband was from home collecting the rates, thereby neglecting her household duties. Her husband having tried every experiment he could think of in order to cure her of this ruinous propensity, at last determined upon the following plan. Having to go some distance in the parish for which he collected rates, which would occupy a considerable portion of the day, he left instructions for his dinner to be prepared by 3 o'clock, and departed. In due time the business was transacted, and he wended his way homeward, where he arrived about the time named, with a keen appetite, when instead of finding a beef steak smoking hot, he found Annabella in a state of blissful unconsciousness in a corner of the bed. This was more than mortal man could put up with, and being determined to punish promptly, he forthwith had recourse to the mustard pot, and speedily applied a fine plaster to the soles of Annabella's feet. She was then allowed to finish her nap. In due course, and after sufficient time had elapsed for the plaster to accomplish the desired end, Annabella awoke having had her quantum of rest.—She arose to prepare to welcome her husband home, but upon placing her feet upon the floor, a loud scream was heard—Annabella had fainted with the pain occasioned by the bursting of the blisters.—This last experiment effected a radical cure for the present, and Annabella is at present a much more dutiful wife.—English paper.

Choice Gems.

Injury must never provoke a good man to do wrong.

Instructive ridicule often does more than reprehension.

Impudence is the constant companion of that monster Ingratitude.

It is a common plea of wickedness to call temptation destiny.

It is as difficult to preserve fame, as it was at first to acquire it.

It is better to reconcile an enemy than to conquer him.

It is common, says Tacitus, to esteem most what is most unknown.

It is safer to be humble with one talent than to be proud with ten.

It is wise not to seek a secret, and honest not to reveal it.

It is wrong to wish for death, and worse to have occasion te fear it.

It were base first to raise a confidence, and then deceive it.

It were no virtue to bear calamities if we did not feel them.

Just praise is only a debt, but flattery is a present.

Keep your shop, and your shop will keep you.

Knowledge is the treasure, but judgment the treasurer of a wise man.

Late ere I love, said Agustus, as long ere I leave.

Learn both how to receive and refuse a favour.

Learning is preferable to riches, and virtue to both.

Let reason go before every enterprize, and counsel before every action.

Liberality and thankfullness are the bonds of concord.

Little said is soon amended.

Listeners hear no good of themselves.

Live and let live.

Acknowledgments

Received of Z. Beson, J. Scott, J. E. Gray, H. W. Sherman, E. Hunt, R. Brown, Anderson Johnson, W. G. Pomroy, A. G. Preston, J. Allen, M. S. Robinson, Hon. D. Kilgore, Rev. J. W. Bishop, J. P. Menpert, W. W. Robeson, S. Scott, Rev. A. Wood, Jno. Baylan, N. Presley, T. C. Adams, J. Carlan, Dr. Huckleman, W. S. Schoonover, E. A. Tilson, Hon. H. Walker, A. D. Hornaday, A. S. Park, H. J. Shambre, C. B. Tilson, Jno. Killer, Harrison Dawson, R. G. Dunham, Hon. J. Struble, J. H. Montgomery, each the sum of 75 cents in full of one year's subscription to the Chart. And of Tanners' Creek Div. Sons of Temp., $1 50; Isaac E. Johnson on twenty copies, $10; Mt. Vernon Temp. of Hon. on two copies, $1; Eden Div. Sons of Temp. $3; of Geo. A. Rankin for two copies, $1 50; of Hon. Mr. Famesly and Hon. John Lemon, each 25 cents for Chart during the session of the Legislature; and of L. Carson of Lafayette 50 cents on the Chart.

LET ME ALONE.—So said a coffee-house keeper, in New Orleans, on the 27th of December last. He reminded us forcibly of a tavern keeper whom we knew. "Let me alone," said he, "I do not sell to drunkards; if I do not sell, some one else will, and I only sell to support my family." A year or two made it manifest that his bar had at least one good customer, as he ended his own days a drunkard, and in prison.—Southern Organ.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

TRY

BROWN'S

COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT

MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

FOR THE CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, consequent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CIRCULAR---PLEASE TO READ THIS.

AGENTS WANTED.

New Books of Permanent Value.

Office of Sears' Pictorial Works,
Removed to 181 William St. New York, 1853.

Dear Sir:—If entirely convenient and agreeable to you, we would be much pleased to secure your valuable influence on behalf of our PICTORIAL FAMILY WORKS. We publish a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a high moral and unexceptional character, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprize and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well-disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Among your relativas or acquaintances, it is probable you may be able to send us the name of a respectable, energetic, and faithful man, who will carefully canvass your vicinity. If you are willing to do this, we shall duly appreciate your efforts, and cheerfully reciprocate the favor in any way that you may suggest. By looking over the list, you will perceive that there is no sectarianism in our publications they are designed for all, and must have an unprecedented sale when brought home to the firesides of the people.

☞ We solicit orders from the Trade, Teachers, and School Committees for Books, to whom we furnish our own publications, and those of all the publishers in the country, on the most liberal terms.

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell "SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Any person wishing to embark in the enterprize, will risk little by sending to the Publishers $25 for which he will receive sample copies of the various works (at wholesa e prices), carefully boxed, insured, and directed, affording a very liberal percentage to the Agent for his trouble. With these, he will soon be able to ascertain the most saleable, and order accordingly.

LIST OF OUR PICTORIAL WORKS.

		Retail Price.
The Pictorial Family Bible (Large Quarto.) - - - -	1450 pages.	$6 00
Sears' New and complete History of the Bible, - - - -	700 "	3 00
Sears' New Pictorial History of China and India, - -	600 "	2 50
Thrilling Incidents of the Wars of the United States, - - -	700 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Description of the United States, - - -	608 "	2 50
Sears' Treasury of Knowledge and Cyclopedia of Science and Art,	512 "	2 50
Sears' Scenes and Sketches of Continental Europe, - - -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Description of Great Britain and Ireland, -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Family Annual (212 Engravings) - - -	368 "	2 00
The History of Palestine, - -	230 "	1 00
View of New York—This Engraving is on a sheet, 47 by 19 inches and ought to sell rapidly, -		50
Sears' Information for the People,	600 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Family Instructor, - - - - -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial History of the American Revolution, - -	450 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Sunday-Book, -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Bible Biography, - -	500 "	2 50
Sears' Wonders of the World.—Second Series. - - - -	540 "	2 50
Remarkable Adventures of Celebrated Persons, - - -	410 "	1 25

To those who intend to engage in the circulation of our books, we would urge the present as the most favorable opportunity which has occurred in many years. Our sales are largely increased beyond those of preceding years; our agents are more generally successful, and the future offers still more extensive prospect for trade than even the seasons which has passed.

The two elegant volumes lately issued by us on "China and India;" the "Incidents in the United States Wars," and a new and revised edition of our "Pictorial Description of the United States," for 1853, enlarged and improved, corrected by the late Census, with full descriptions and correct illustrations of the Gold Regions, &c., we offer to canvassers, with the confidant assurance that they are as popular and elegant, and as intrinsically valuable, as any books now offered in the country.

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS

Are decidedly the best books that agents can employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great Republic. There is not a city or town in the United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable.—They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle—got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but such as an agent of good principles will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly, by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid. ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, jan 5 It 181 William Street, New York.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, General Agent for the State of Indiana.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

MAINE LIQUOR LAW.

Now in Press.

New Book for the friends of Temperance.

THE SENATOR'S SON; Or the Maine Law a Last Refuge. By Metta Victoria Fuller, author of "Fresh Leaves," &c., &c. This work will contain about 300 pages, 12 mo, on fine white paper, neatly bound in cloth Its object is to show the urgent neceesity of adopting the Maine Liquor Law to stop the progress of Intemperance. To present the subject in the strongest light, the author has adopted the plan of showing under fictitious names the fatal progress and effects of this evil, and from her reputation as a chaste and powetful writer, a thrilling ttory may be expected. It will be issued about the 1st of January. Orders respectfully solicited For further particulars address, post-paid,

TOOKER & GATCHEL,
jan 12 Publishers, Cleveland, Ohio.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer,
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

Wm. Burnet, President.

S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't.

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,

Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,

june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent

PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott. Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D, Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.

WILLIAM G. STEEL,

Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,

Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851.

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would sufficate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Elward Hitchcock, M D. LL D,

J. C. Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter.
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili
Rt. Rev. Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archbishop Fursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1853. NO. 33.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Springfield Republican.

Adam's Ale.

Composed expressly for Jenny Lind, and sung by her, with unbounded applause, at the Hydropathic Celebration on Round Hill, previous to her departure for Europe.

BY OTTO GOLDSCHMIDT.

Old Adam, good man, whilst threshing, one day,
His crop of wild oats, exhausted and pale—
Bethought him of something to moisten his clay,
And what should it be but his own sparkling ale?

So he hies to a spring not far off from thence,
And dips with his hat, for want of a pail,
And sits himself down by the side of a fence,
And takes a long swig of clear Adam's ale.

Then at it again, he strikes with a will,
He whacks and he bangs—but what does 't avail?
He finds there's a void, which nothin can fill,
Not even a gallon of good Adam's ale.

What is it he wants? what now does he lack?
Is it Port, or Madeira, or Cogniac pale?
Is it rum, gin or brandy, or porter, or sack?
No! I'll tell you what 'tis,—it is A dam'sel.

He sees all creation, the little and big,
The gnat and the eagle, the sprat and the whale,
The frog and behemoth, the camel and pig—
All go in pairs, the male and female.

He pondered awhile, in quandary queer,
As he leans for a time on the top of his flail—
"I'd give a good dale just but for to see her,
That same purty cratur, och hone! A dam'sel.

"What pleasure, sure, 'twould be, to have her beside me,
To work wid, to walk wid, to ride or to sail,
To comfort, to cheer, to caress, or to chide,
Och! darlin, mavourneen! och hone! A dam'sel."

Distressed in his thoughts, and aweary in frame,
He lay down to rest by the side of a rail;
A "mighty deep sleep" all over him came,
And, from a gash in his side, what he wished, A damsel.

Mrs. Eve, with much skill, soon healed the wound,
By washing it off with pure Adam's ale;
And thus in this world 'twill often be found,
There's nothing like A dam'sel to cure Adam's ail.

☞ There has never been a patent medicine before the public so well deserving their confidence and patronage as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. No family should be without it, and those who have used it never will. See Advertisement.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Commonwealth.

The Good Merchant.

A PASSAGE IN EULOGY OF AMOS LAWRENCE.

From a Sermon on "The Means of Living, and the Ends of Life," preached at the Music Hall, Jan. 2, 1853.

BY REV. THEODORE PARKER.

Only two days ago there died in this city, a man rich in money, but far more rich in manhood. I suppose he had his faults, his deformities of character. Of course he had. It takes many men to make a complete man. Humanity is so wide and deep that all the world cannot drink it dry. He came here poor; from a little country town. He came with nothing—nothing but himself, I mean; and a man is not appraised, only taxed. He came obscure, nobody knew Amos Lawrence forty-five years ago, nor cared whether the handkerchief in which he carried his wardrobe, trudging to town, was large or little. He acquired a large estate; got it by industry, forecast, prudence, thrift.—He earned what he got, and a great deal more. He was proud of his life; honorably proud that he made his own fortune, and started with "nothing but his hands." Sometimes he took gentlemen to Groton, and showed them half-a-mile of stone-wall which the boy Amos had laid on the paternal homestead. That was something for a rich merchant to be proud of.

He knew what few men understand—when to stop accumulating. At the age when the summer of passion has grown cool, and the winter of ambition begins seriously to set in, when avarice, and love of power, of distinction and of office, begin to take hold of men, when the leaves of instinctive generosity fall off, and the selfish bark begins to tighten about the man—some twenty years ago, when he had acquired a large estate, he said to himself, "Enough! No more accumulation of that sort to make me a miser, and my children worse than misers." So he sought to use nobly what he had manfully won. He didn't keep

"A brave old house, at a bountiful rate,
With half a score of servants to wait at the gate."

His charity was greater than his estate. In the last twenty or thirty years, he has given away to the poor a larger fortune than he has left to his family. But he gave with as much wisdom as generosity. His money lengthened his arm, because he had a good heart in his bosom. He looked up his old customers whom he had known in his poor days—which were their rich ones—and helped them in their need. He sought the poor of the city and its neighborhood, and gave them his gold, his attention, and the sympathy of his honest heart. He prayed for the poor, but prayed gold. He built churches—not for his own sect alone, for he had piety without narrowness, and took religion in a natural way—churches for Methodists, Baptists, Calvinists, Unitarians, for poor oppressed black men, fugitive slaves in Canada; nay, more, he helped them in their flight. He helped colleges,—gave them libraries and philosophical apparatus. He sought out young men of talents and character, but poor, and struggling for an education, and made a long arm to reach down to their need, sending parcels of books, pieces of cloth to make a scholar's jacket or cloak, or money to pay the term-bills. He lent money when the loan was better than the gift. That bountiful hand was felt on the shore of the Pacific. He was his own executor, and the trustee of his own charity funds. He didn't leave it for his heirs to distribute his benevolence at their cost.—At his own cost, he administered the benefactions of his testament. At the end of a fortunate year he once found $30,000 more than he had looked for as his share of the annual profits. In a month he had it all invested—in various charities. He couldn't eat his morsel alone—the good man.

His benevolence came out also in smaller things in his daily life. He let the boys cling on beside his carriage—grown men did so, but invisibly; he gave sleigh-rides to boys and girls, and had a gentle word and kindly smile for all hemet.

He coveted no distinction. He had no title, and wasn't a "General," a "Colonel," a "Captain," or "Honorable,"—plain "Mister," "Esquire," and "Deacon," at the end.

His charity was as unostentatious as the dew in Summer. Blessing the giver by the motive, the receiver by the quicker life and greener growth, it made no noise in falling to the ground. In Boston, which scrupulously scrutinizes righteousness with the same eye which blinks at the most hideous profligacy, though as public as the street—even the daily press never accused his charity of loving to be looked at.

Of good judgment, good common-sense, careful, exact, methodical, diligent, he was not a man of great intellect. He had no uncommon culture of the understanding, or the imagination, and of the higher reason still less. But in respect of the greater faculties,—in respect of conscience, affection, the religious element, he was well-born, well bred, eminently well disciplined by himself.

He was truly a religious man. I do not mean to say that he thought as Calvin or Luther thought, or believed by Peter, James, or John. Perhaps he believed some things that the apostles never thought of, and rejected others that they all had in reverence. When I say he was a religious man, I mean that he loved God and loved men. He had no more doubt that God would receive him to heaven than that he himself would make all men happy if he could. Reverencing God, he reverenced the laws of God—I mean the natural laws of morality, the laws of justice and love. His religion was not ascetic, but good natured, and of a cheerful countenance. His piety became morality. The first rule that he took to his counting-house was the Golden Rule; he never laid it by,—buying, and selling, and giving, by that standard measure. So he travelled along, on that path which widens and brightens as it leads to Heaven.

Here was a man who knew the odds between the Means of Living and the Ends of Life. He knew the true use of riches. They served as material basis for great manly excellence. His tun of gold was a power to feed, to clothe, to house, and warm, and comfort needy men; a power to educate the mind, to cheer the affections, to bless the soul. To many a poor boy, to many a sad mother, he gave a merry Christmas on the earth, and now, in due time, God has taken him to celebrate Epiphany and New Year's day in Heaven!

Influence of Truth.

Among the manifold objects of pursuit, which have received any attention of men of the present day, there is none which is so pleasing to the mind, or affords so many opportunities for advancement in the moral and political world, as that of truth. Other pursuits may exert an ephemeral influence on the mind—may guide the thoughts, and control the physical efforts of individuals, and of society for a time; but this will eventually attract the attention of every man of sense; and that it may be acquired, for the sake of the consequences of its possession, all will direct their efforts in that channel which leads to its acquisition.

There are many circumstances attending every man's life, which, should not some power be brought to counteract their influence, would result in idleness, dissipation, and crime. The natural indications of the mind tend to such a result; and society which is composed of many minds, would promote this end, did not all the experience of the past prove that in such a state of affairs—namely, every man giving away to the impulses of passion—all society would be destroyed; all its attendant blessings fade away, as the flower of Summer before the withering influence of Autumn's cold blasts.

The great desire of a position in society, common to all, remedies the defect of the natural inclinations. The dark ages have passed away like a shadow over the rock, leaving no trace of their former existence. The light of refinement and learning have succeeded, as day to night, driving away the clouds of ignorance and error that darkened the horizon of life.—The philosophy of the past was that virtue that consists in power and wealth, and where these did not flourish it could not be. Such an error in philosophy has vanished before the light of revealed truth; and, in the present age, none can reach the standard of excellence or virtue, unless by the most persevering labor and sterling integrity. The haunts of crime must be unfrequented, property must not be thought common, virtue valueless, or religion hypocrisy. The mind must be instructed, the character formed after a true model, the mental and physical powers be brought into active exercise, before man can rise to his destined sphere.

Let society be subject to such a discipline, and the great end of life will be accomplished; false principles will fade away before the light of truth, as a mist before the influence of a summer's sun. Individuals will rise in the scale of being, and so society and nations. Refinement and religion will extend their influence and become prevalent—ignorance and error disappear. Freedom of thought will succeed, and nations, brought to a knowledge of their wrongs, will rebel from their present allegiance, and, like our illustrious fathers of '76, resolve to be free. Their efforts shall not prove fruitless; but, like them, they will succeed, and gain, as a fruit, of their labors, freedom of thought, speech, and the press, and a control over their own actions, so far as they do not interfere with the happiness and existence of others. Though error may, for a time, hold its sway, and, as in fallen Hungary, crush by her superior force, all the efforts of Truth to exist, yet the time will come when it shall yield to Truth—when all forms of tyranny shall be swept away as with the lightning's flash, and Freedom shall hang forth her ensign to the nations of the earth, and furnish to all people all its attendant blessings; for it is an axiom the world over that "Truth will triumph."

Such will be the improved condition of man everywhere, where an elevation of character is sought by the pursuit of truth, by a study to distinguish the real from the unreal, by deserting the haunts of idleness, dissipation and crime, for the temple knowledge, where refinement, religion, and freedom in harmony do dwell, affording to all who come within the compass of its influence and elysium of earthly happiness. Let then all, as they value success in life, the esteem of contemporaries, and their own happiness, seek to elevate their own characters, and that of those with whom they may meet in life, by a strict observance of truth—by ever keeping before them this above every other pursuit. For now, while such principles as those emanating from this source give an impulse to their labors, they will ever be encouraged to persevere simply from the thought; and when old age comes creeping on, as night does to day, and our days become overshadowed with gloom and doubt, the remembrance of our past lives will revive our drooping spirits, as water does the withering plant, and restore them to their former verdure.—Boston Waverly Magazine.

Mr. Perkins Perplexed.

"I can't see how it is! There's Tewksbury; he's been off again down to Newport, with his wife, two children and servant! Where under heaven he gets money to spend in this way is more than I can tell. He hadn't a cent when he began, five years ago. Look at him now—lives out of town, keeps a horse, drives in and out every day. His expenses must be large, yet he seems to pay as he goes. I hope there is nothing wrong about Tewksbury. Then look at the money he spends for advertising! Why, that is enough to ruin any man, I don't care how rich he is. I have been in business for thirty years, and I can't afford any of these things.—Wouldn't I look well taking my wife down to Newport, and starving there eight weeks?—eight weeks, indeed! I sent her on a cheap excursion, but I couldn't go myself—I can't afford it—don't take in money enough to do it. And then to see a man spend his money, just to let people see his name in the papers—and sending cards and bills all about the country. Tewksbury bleeds freely for his vanity, I must confess! They don't catch me in that trap, no how. It don't do no good; I got a lot of cards and bills printed five years ago, and there they are in the desk now. Nobody ever calls for them. And then I advertised four weeks in a newspaper—money thrown away—wasted.—Tewksbury is a fool, and he must fail sooner or later. I'm sorry for him—he was naturally a clever fellow. It must cost him more to advertise than all the money I take! I wish somebody would buy me out—trade is so dull.'

All he said about Tewksbury was true enough, with the slight exception that Tewksbury was in no danger of failing.—The very thing that Perkins thought would fail him, was that which kept him up. He began business with nothing but his brains; he let the people understand, through the newspapers of the country, where he was and what he had got to give them for their money, and he got a run of trade which is constantly increasing.—Perkins lost his business just as fast as his old customers died off or went off—he took no steps to get new ones, and the consequence is that he is just living upon what he made twenty years ago. He had better shut up his shop than to try and live in these times without advertising.—Reader, are you following in the tracks of our friend Perkins? If you are, either shut up your shop or pitch into this great public—if you don't do the latter your creditors will pitch into you and shut you up.

TOTAL DEPRAVITY.—We are a believer in the doctrine, after reading the following from the Cleveland Herald. May "that boy" have strength to hold out to the last!

"On Saturday—in the Lake Shore cars—we saw a specimen whisky-seller. He looked like a man who had drank up the profits of his own bar, and whose brain, like that of Seer Davis, was "porous as a sponge." He lived in Evans, and having been three days on a visit, or a 'bust' in Buffalo, was discoursing to a neighbor after this fashion: 'I'm losing dollars every day I'm gone, that cussed boy of mine is cussed crazy about cold water; when I'm off dern me if he don't pull the spigots out of the whisky barrels and the beer casks and let every drop run out. That church has spilt my boy, and I've kept him away from it for two years. If a man comes into the tavern after a glass of liquor that boy won't wait on him, but turns up his nose and leaves him. When I bring him up to Buffalo I have to cuss him to get him to eat a meal of victuals in a tavern where they sell liquor. That boy's crazy about cold water; but his old dad knows how to deal out the liquor. I've been brought before the court twenty-seven times—I always beat 'em, and I defy the town of Evans—it's a bold thing to dare the corporation—but I dare 'em; I want to sell liquor, and darn me if I don't.—The people say I'm a devil, but I will sell liquor. That boy is only sixteen years old, and he wants to be a lawyer; he's such a cussed fool about cold water, I'll send him to Connecticnt to be a lawyer.—I've whipped him almost to death to make him drink liquor, but that pesky meeting has ruined him and he won't!'"—Reader the above is literally true, (the oaths being omitted) and we doubt not the drunken brute of a fathar stated the truth in regard to the treatment of his boy who was 'so cussed crazy about cold water.'"

Rum, the Hangman.

Judge Edwards, in passing sentence of death upon James Doyle, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Connelly, in New York, employed the following language. Alas! for how many murders, both criminal and judicial, is Rum responsible!

"Unfortunately, you became the slave of an appetite which destroyed the better qualities of your nature, and stimulated and maddened your worst passions. The victim of your prey was a weak and defenceless woman. She was the widow of your deceased friend. You had long been an inmate of her family, and as she told you in the evening preceding the fatal event, she had always treated you with kindness. It appeared upon your trial, that, at a former period, you had been conscious of your infirmity, and that you had pledged yourself to a life of temperance and sobriety. But in an evil hour your resolution yielded. Even in your last fatal debauch, you declared that, when that was over, you would renew your pledge, but unfortunately that good intention came too late; and you now witness the fatal consequences. You have deprived a fellow being of her precious life—you have left her orphan children deprived of their dearest friend, protector and comforter that they can have upon earth. There is probably no one who at this moment regrets the fatal deed more than yourself, but, although we believe that your penitence is sincere, yet forgiveness is not our privilege. That must be sought from a higher power."

The area of the United States is 2,081,759,000 acres—population 23,257,498; of China, 330,829,000 acres—population 404,000,000; of France, 130,391,000 acres—population 40,000,000; of England & Wales, 37,000,000 acres—population 17,500,000; of Ireland, 20,400,000 acres—population 8,000,000.

Now, with such a comparison of territory and population, what ideas of national grandeur expand with the mind.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB.
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 9, 1853.

Rev. G. B. Jocelyn.

We had a very pleasant visit, during the last week, from our excellent Bro. Jocelyn, Editor of the Odd Fellows Magazine, a better monthly of its kind than which it would be extremely difficult to find, either East or West. He informed us, that he expects to travel through the State, during the spring and summer, in connection with the interests of his Magazine. That, however, cannot occupy all the time of so active and thinking a man as Bro. Jocelyn. We, therefore, most respectfully suggest to the friends of Temperance wherever he may go, that they employ him to speak for them. He is a man of fine attainments, and as a clear, forcible and eloquent advocate of our principles has few superiors. He will be able to satisfy all his Brother Sons, and Templars, that he is a brother worthy of confidence and esteem. We hope that a door of usefulness will be opened to him in this way, that will mutually benefit the cause of Temperance and our esteemed brother.

The Social Order.

This body still meets regularly on Wednesday evenings; and so far as we can judge is doing good service in the cause of Temperance. As announced in our last number, it met on last Wednesday evening in the Christian Chapel; but was not addressed as we expected by Mr. O'Kane, who was called away the day before to Lafayette, and was not able, from some cause or other, to return. There was, consequently, no regular speaker in attendance; and the meeting was consequently resolved into a social meeting in which all the brethren had an opportunity of speaking. We were not permitted to remain in the meeting until the conclusion, but are informed by those who were, that the friends of Temperance were greatly edified and encouraged.

The Order will meet on this evening, at the 1st Presbyterian Church, at7 o'clock, P. M. Good speakers will be in attendance. Let all the friends of the good cause be present.

The Legislature.

As yet no demonstration has been made, in this body, indicating what we may expect at its hands in the way of a Temperance law. Petitions we have had in abundance; and still they come from all parts of the State, and from all classes of people, praying for the passage of a prohibitory law against the whole business of making and vending intoxicating liquors. We have some hope that these prayers will not be disregarded; but we have also some fears.

We have been informed that the Bill prepared by Mr. Owen, at the last Session of the Legislature, is now before the Temperance Committees for their consideration. It is, in every respect, better than any law which the people of Indiana have yet had; but, in our estimation lacks many of the essential principles requisite to a good and effective law. Any law short of prohibition, lacks the great moral element of being right in principle, and must in the end fail of effecting its object. Our present law is a dead letter, because it has neither the respect of the good or the bad. The latter disregard it, the former despise it. It gives the sanction of legislative enactment to the liquor business on the one hand, and then addresses itself to the moral sense of community to enforce it against those who violate its provisions. For this purpose it gives us no witnesses whom the liquor-seller has not already corrupted until he regards it a point of honor, to screen the traffic, even at the expense of truth, by perjured falsehood.

$200 Reward!

During last week might be seen in many of the most conspicuous places of our city, in large and and startling characters, bills, promising the above reward. We stopped and read one of them; and then laughed at ourself for the folly of our labor; and laughed, too, not a little at the folly of the advertiser and of society—his employer. The money, thus proposed to be given, was to be dragged out of the people's pocket; and for what was it to be paid? Would you believe it? It really was so. That sum of money was to be be paid for the apprehension of four thieves, or men who were strongly suspected of being such. But how came they to be thieves, if they were such? They were not born thieves. God did not make them such. Our churches did not teach them to be such; public opinion never sanctioned such a career nor approved such a character. Who made them what they are? The man of drams—the whiskey fiend. That is the answer in nearly all such cases, which truth forces us to give. Thus, in our penitentiary, there are near 300 criminals, nine-tenths of whom found their way to that abode of crime, by first finding the path to the whiskey shop. Yet we have no advertisements posted for the whiskey vender—the creator of the crimes which we pay so much to detect and punish. Why not be consistent, and offer a liberal reward for the apprehension and imprisonment of the cause of these crimes? Why turn a whole batch of bailiffs loose after four poor criminals, while men of whose guilt theirs would not make even a tithing, are suffered to run at large in our streets, and wage a perpetual war upon society itself in all its departments? Why hunt the petty thief while in our midst dwells the manslayer in safety, affluence and honor? Why chase the common felon when the hyena, that preys upon widows and orphans, walks our streets at noon-day—so tame that decency is in constant danger of being soiled by contact. For shame, let us give over the pursuit of those wao fly to strange cities, and by honest, earnest and constant effort hunt down and destroy the wolves that dwell in our midst. Some of these, we know, burrow beneath, while others are domiciled above the ground; but no matter where they are, let us open their lairs to the light. Let us gather the skeletons of their victims—all fleshless though they may be—and if they can not live again, give them christian burial. And for Heaven's sake let us never rest until the vampire that has devoured them be staked to the bottom of his grave.

The State Sentinel.

Our Bro. of the "Sentinel" seems to think that every Democrat who voted for Dr. Grimes' resolutions, in the late State Temperance Convention, thereby sold himself, "soul and body," to the Whig party. On what grounds the editor bases his conclusion, he has not informed us; and, so remote is the conclusion from any thing contained in the resolutions, that no other man, than Mr. Brown, would, perhaps, have been able to make the deduction from the premises. It must, therefore, depend upon a suppressed premise, known only to the Editor. What that premise is, he has not deigned to inform us; but so far as we are able to guess, it must be the consciousness, on his part, either that his party is inseparably wedded to the whiskey traffic, or that it is his wish, that the nuptials between that infamous traffic and his party should be celebrated as early as practicable. That it is not the former, we feel authorized to say from the fact that there are as many democrats as whigs engaged in urging forward the Temperance Reform. It must, therefore, arise from the fulness of his own heart, or from something else, that we can not guess, and which he, as "the source of all correct intelligence," should give to his readers. Since there is nothing in the resolutions of Dr. Grimes, indicating that the democrats who voted for them sold themselves to the whigs, any more than the whigs sold themselves to the democrats, we deny that either committed any such base barter.

Dr. Grimes is a democrat. And shall such a man as he is, be told by a leading organ of his party, that he has sold himself, because he expresses a willingness to unite with men of any other party for the abolition of a greater evil than can be found in our State beside? Does the Sentinel think that the people of Indiana are such fools as not to see that whatever party names may have to do in the election of our State officers, they have little or no influence in directing the line of their policy. These parties were created with reference to our National Government, for purposes which in a great measure have ceased to operate on the public mind.—They never had, nor were they ever designed to have, the same power over State as national politics. Much less do they now retain any important relation to the weal of Indiana in her civil capacity. Let the people of Indiana, then, look to their own well being and happiness, regardless of what may be said by the interested, to divide and distract them.

Governor Wright has always been right in directing the attention of Indiana, to her own State policy, as the surest means of developing her resources, and making her the first among her equals, in this great confederacy. Let his wise recommendations be carried out; and those who come after us, will look with admiration and gratitude to his Administration as the period when our State first began to advance in the glorious career of progress that lies before her. But let us not stop our endeavors with little reforms. Let us go to the bottom; sound the depths of old abuses; clear away the accumulated rubbish of the dark years gone by; and, then, let us erect our temple upon a sound foundation, and dedicate it to the prosperity and happiness of a people true to themselves, and true to all the world beside. If such a labor of patriotism and philanthropy is a sale of ourself, "soul and body," to our political adversaries, we will gladly accept the bondage; and die under a chain that links the people of Indiana together in the bonds of a pure, exalted and happy brotherhood.

Soullessness of Selfishness.

It has been said of corporations, that "they have no souls." This is doubtless true; and we have sometimes been led almost to conclude that the individuals composing them are in pretty much the same condition. That such should be the case, is no great matter of wonder to us, at least with regard to those members who are employed to transact the business of such soulless masters. Continually acting as their calculating and unfeeling principal directs, the habit of being as calculating and unfeeling is soon superinduced upon the agent. It cannot be otherwise. Man was never made by his Creator to move as a mere machine, blessing or cursing those who come within its influence, without any reference whatever being had to his sympathies, or their sufferings. Yet such, in a degree, is the position of all those who act as the agents of a corporation. They have no power, as such, to evince the slightest regard for the sufferings they may inflict, for the feelings they wound, or for the continual little meannesses they may, at any time, be directed to do as a part of the ordinary drudgery of their condition. Hecatombs of human cattle may become sacrifices to their inordinate love of gain, but corporations shed no tears: their own human tools may be crushed beneath the hoofs of their iron horse, but they check not his career to collect the fragments. That is not part of the object of their organization. They are created—not by God, but by selfish man—for no other than selfish ends. Each soulless monster thus formed, acts only for itself. Not for the moral self—for it has no such self—but for the merest and lowest form of self. Its whole life is but one continuous struggle for money, money, only money; and what to it is the life of a man—nay, of hundreds of men—where their sacrifice will promote that object?

A bridge is swept away. Its tools, no matter whether human or otherwise, are precipitated into the stream, and crushed—the former killed, the latter broken. Other tools are immediately sent to remove the fragments. Carefully every timber, every nail of the shivered car, is sought out and husbanded; but the mangled fragments of a man, what are they worth, that a corporation should waste either time or money in searching them out? The breath once gone, the man is of no further use to it; for it looks not to humanity, but to itself, to find the end and aim of its action and being. Then quickly build the bridge again!—the locomotive, and all that is of value, is out, and what matters it whether we build on the human carcass or not! It has no worth now that the breath is gone. It can no longer add to the wealth of the master in whose service it has perished, by toil and suffering. These, with it, are over; and over, also, is its worth. What matters it now, that it was once the temple of the living God? Corporations have no such words in their vocabulary as God, obligation to him, or immortality. Out upon such figments of the imagination! It is a creature of time. Time is its immortality, and it has no aims beyond. Would that its consequences extended in duration no further than its aims.

But we have said that God never created men to be the soulless tools of such soulless masters. Nor did He. That He did not, is evidenced by the fact, that true manliness revolts at such a service; and when seduced into it, soon loses itself in the whirlpool of selfishness into which it enters. It is just that it should be so.—He who willingly lends himself to the consummation of ends not only opposed to, but subversive of, human weal, should feel himself chilled by the coldness he assumes.

But we did not begin to preach a crusade against Corporations—a labor of love, which, however necessary to be done, we decline at present. They are bad—very bad; but our peculiar vocation calls us to deal with what is still worse. The spirit of selfishness which actuates corporations, seems to be the mainspring of the lives of too many individuals who never had any connection whatever with corporations.—They seem to have reflected upon and adopted the idea, that by resolving themselves individually into little corporations—that is, little bodies with far less souls—they can consummate the end of their lives—get money—more readily than by cherishing and cultivating the little soul they have. It is wonderful to witness the operations of one of these little corporations. What cares it for the suffering it inflicts upon those around? It acts for itself. Not for a self that grows in others' growth, enjoys in others' enjoyments, and lives in others' life: but a self that increases on others' decay, enjoys in others' sorrows, and lives upon others' death. Such corporations are numerous almost as the sands of the sea-shore, or the stars of heaven. They jostle you on the side-walk, gaze at you through the windows, and woo you into their offices, that they may give you a practical knowledge of how utterly soulless such self-constituted corporations may become, and how perfectly adapted to the end of their creation. They are everywhere seen, but pre-eminently exemplified in the dealers in intoxicating liquors, who infest and curse our country. These men have assumed the corporate capacity.—That is, they have either killed or imprisoned their souls, (or perchance they never had any,) and resolved themselves into bodies politic. In this capacity, they can mangle human nature after the most cruel sort, and feel no remorse; for remorse is an emotion never known to the soulless.—The big burly oyster man on the one side of the street looks out from his den, and feels strengthened to know that the per diem of many a wise legislator will fatten his corporation; while nearly opposite to him may be seen the pale face of his competitor for cash and blood, and his colleague and rival in crime, bidding the simple turn in hither. And they obey his behest—never stopping to inquire when or how they shall come out, or whether they shall escape at all. The dens of these whisky corporations reek with crime and blood; but what care they for it all, so long as society renders its golden tribute for a return of evil, and only evil?

Has not society made wealth an end? Is it not one of the canons of the social state here, that wealth, no matter how acquired, gives to its possessor character and respectability? Nay, does not wealth conduct its possessor to the front seats in our public assemblies, both sacred and profane, while the poor sit far back, even under the gallery? We know this is the case even in many places in our own country. Can we say that even our glorious west is not already infected with this poison? And can we hope to disgrace the means, while we thus bow to the end? While the successful whisky merchant knows that we will receive him for the wealth his traffic produces, can we hope that we shall be able to give that traffic so bad a character as to shame him from pursuing it? What a climax of foolishness!

Obituary.

We have received information of the death of Bro. H. W. Foster, of Reddington Division, Sons of Temperance. He died on the 31st ult. His last days were spent in earnest endeavors to advance the good cause of temperance, by circulating memorials for signatures. In this labor of love, he was often reviled and cursed by the myrmidons of King Alcohol, but he returned blessing for cursing, and kindness for reviling. Although but a youth of 19 years, he seems to have acted nobly, in pursuing noble ends by noble means. He was buried in due form, by the Reddington Division, in company with Azalia and Regalia Divisions. An immense concourse of people is said to have attended the funeral services.

The Brother who sends us this mournful intelligence must accept as an apology for not publishing his letter, its length and the state of our columns.

Barnum on rum.—The New York Fifth Ward Temperance Alliance, held an enthusiastic if not a spirited meeting, at Metropolitan Hall, on Wednesday evening.—Among the conspicuous orators, was P. T. Barnum, Esq., of the Museum, who stated that in that city, there are more than 7,000 grog shops, and allowing that the expenditure in each averaged $10 per day, the aggregate in one year's time would be $25,550,000, besides the wholesale business. He offered, says the Sunday Atlas, if the city would give him that sum and stop selling liquor for one year, to pay all the city taxes, amounting to four millions; send every child to a good schol, present every family with a library of one hundred good books, three barrels of flour, and a silk dress to every female, old or young, a suit of broadcloth to every male citizen, old or young, and a ticket to the Museum for the whole year.

Charity Begins at Home.—One of the characters in which the late Charles Mathews used to delight his audience during his "at home," was that of an old Scotch lady, who was in the habit of inculcating the duties of charity into her grand children after the following fashion:—"My dears when I and your father and mother have finished our meals—when you have all eaten as much as you conveniently can—and when you have gorged the pig, the three cats and the parrot, then, my dear children, remember the poor.

Hall of Charleston Div. S. T., No. 156,
January 25th, 1852.

Whereas, it hath pleased an Allwise Providence to remove from our midst our beloved Brother, J. W. Long, therefore,

Resolved, That this Division deeply deplore the loss of our worthy Brother, who, by his connection with this Division from its earliest history, had greatly endeared himself to us, and that his loss is the more deeply felt by us from the fact that he is the second Brother that has been taken from among us, by death, since our organization as a Division.

Resolved, That we deeply and sincerely sympathize with his disconsolate widow, his relatives and friends in their great bereavement, in the loss of a kind and affectionate husband and father.

Resolved, That these proceedings be made a part of the permanent records of this Division, and that a copy of these resolutions, together with the benefit (thirty dollars) be forwarded to the bereaved companion of the deceased.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutians be forwarded to the Editors of the Temperance Chart and Jeffersonville Weekly Times, with a request that they publish the same.

By order of the Division.
ANDREW J. HAY, R. S.

☞ A man who cannot command his temper, his attention, and his countenance, should not think of being a man of business.

Sister Swisshelm says "that a man in regimentals always makes her feel as if somebody had lost a monkey."

No cross, no crown.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

Are They Accountable?

MR. EDITOR: As it seems to be the opinion of a good many worthy folks among us that liquor-sellers are not accountable for the mischief resulting from their business, I thought I would copy for publication a passage from an old law found in a certain book for which some of these same folks profess to have a great deal of reverence. One of the persons for whose special benefit I present it is a well-known dignitary who has recently expressed the opinion that the wretched victim of the liquor-seller's cunning and avarice should be set up as a mark for public scorn, and at the same time he seemed to think that the man, who had coolly robbed and ruined him should be permitted to escape. The passage is this:

"If an ox gore a man or woman that they die, then the ox shall surely be stoned, * * but the owner of the ox shall be quit: but if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned and the owner, also, shall be put to death."—Ex. XXI: 28, 29.

This is the law of the Creator of man; and is it not just and reasonable? Does it not also embrace a principle that would make the liquor-seller responsible? And should he not be held accountable by the laws of our land for all the consequences of his dreadful work? Surely he should; and, though he may ask, as did the first murderer, "Am I my brother's keeper?" yet he will be remembered when the Almighty makes inquisition for blood. And shall they escape who have countenanced him and strengthened his hands—those time-serving demagogues, who, if they notice his wickedness at all, do so only when they are done using him? S.

For the Temperance Chart.

The Rolling Prairie Temperance Society of Laporte County would respectfully address their fellow-citizens of the State of Indiana, urging them to immediate action on the momentous subject of the law, which we may expect soon to be enacted, regulating the traffic in spirituous liquors.

You will agree with us that intemperance is the withering, blighting, burning curse of our land—that the manufacture and sale of spirits, especially the retail business in the tippling houses, are the sources of its growth and perpetuation—and that the pusillanimous and temporizing course of past legislation on this whole matter, is a bitter reproach to this enlightened and progressive age. We, in common with yourselves, have been petitioning for the last fourteen years with no satisfactory results, and cannot see, in this time, that the cause has made any encouraging advance, and in consequence of this, the hands of many hang down.

But, friends of a common humanity, of progress, of true reform, this is no time to be letting down, no time for lethargy or supineness, but, as we believe, a most favorable crisis to put forth new and increased activities.

The Legislature must act in this matter, and if we would favorably affect that action, it must be now, and there is no time to lose. Let a bold advance be made from petition to instruction! As circumstances may favor, let meetings be called—large or small—and instruct the individual members of both branches of the Legislature. Then, if they or any of them, so instructed, fail to obey, let them, on their return home, be called to a public account, and thus let action be kept up until final success crown our efforts.

Why should petition, so long disregarded, still be the only resort, and especially of such as ask the course of afterwards submitting the law to the vote of the people at any general election? If our Legislature must assume this humiliating position, (of doubtful constitutionality,) let it not be on the prayer of the people; and let the vote be taken on the merits of the law alone, unconnected with any other election or other issues.

Courage, friends! The cause is strong in its own rectitude, strong in the affections of the good. The intelligence, the patriotism, the morality, the humanity, and the Christianity, of the State, of the nation, and of the world, are on our side. Ignorance, interested avarice, vice, immorality, the degradation and brutalization of our race, and the political demagoguery of the age, are against it. But shall that energy that ever ensures success be wanting?—And shall not a noble and enlightened zeal be once more aroused?

In closing this address, we would ask for this and similar papers, a place in the newspapers and periodicals of the State; and we invoke the influence of the press everywhere in favor of this cause.—In 1841 it was said that every periodical in the State was out in favor of temperance. May we not hope that they will once more with united force come up to the rescue.

By order of Society:

O. F. PIPER, Sec'y.

From the New Albany Tribune.

A Man Overboard.

A few days since, we were on our way to Cincinnati, on board that paragon of steamers, the Telegraph No. 2, than which no boat on the Western waters is better officered, or more deservedly popular. It was the dinner hour, and the long row of tables were crowded with ladies and gentlemen, who seemed to do ample justice to the rich viands and substantial fare with which they were loaded. Choosing to wait for the second table, when we should have more room and be less annoyed by the incessant clatter of knives and forks, we sat by the door of the ladies' cabin, quietly enjoying the scene, when all at once a wail of distress came up apparently from the after guards of the boat.—Presently a more piteous and heart-rending wail was heard, seemingly receding from the boat, and dying away in the distance, accompanied by the startling cry of "a man overboard!" This involuntarily brought us to our feet, and we rushed to the deck. Although but a moment had elapsed, the rapid headway of the boat had left the unfortunate man some hundreds of yards behind—but he was struggling manfully to keep his head above the waves, and bid fair to do so, until relief should be at hand. Capt. MCCLELLAND, ever prompt to the calls of duty, soon left the head of the table and repaired to the quarter-deck. Ordering the engines to be reversed, the boat was put back. In the mean time the yawl had been launched, and manned by three gallant oarsmen, who, pulling with a will, were rapidly nearing the drowning man, and for the moment hope was a tiptoe that he would be saved. But just before they reached him, he sunk beneath the wave and the waters closed over him. After reconnoitering for a few minutes without success, and without further hope of success, the yawl was ordered back, and the poor unfortunate victim was left to his fate.

Of the hundreds who saw the unfortunate man go down, no one seemed particularly to care for him. Among them there was no wife, no mother, no sister, brother, or friend, to shed a tear of regret over his untimely fate. Unwept, unhonored, and apparently uncared for, he was soon left far behind, perchance to become food for the fishes; while his immortal spirit was summoned unannealed into the presence of the God who gave it. Did we say there were none to care for him? Ah, go ask that widowed and heart-broken mother, who has long borne him up upon her prayers, why her heart is wrung with anguish? Alas, she has no longer a son.—Go ask that loving sister, whose heart has often bounded with joy to meet him, why those weeds? Alas, she has no brother, and her home is all desolate. Few men are so completely isolated from the world, and none so low in the scale of moral being, that kindred hearts are not riven at the news of their sudden and untimely end—and so it must have been with this unknown stranger, whose death it was our fortune to witness.

Feeling some interest in the unfortunate man, we inquired of some of the officers of the boat who and what he was? We could not learn his name, nor much about him, except that he had been on the boat but a few days, and that he was employed principally in sweeping the decks—that he was intemperate in his habits, and was very much under the influence of liquor when he fell overboard. Ah, there is the grand secret—he was but another of the thirty thousand victims who annually present their souls and their bodies a sacrificial offering to the rosy god. Would to heaven that every liquor seller in the land could have heard that wail of woe, with which our ears were greeted, when this, their unfortunate victim, went down to rise no more. We fancy it would have been a temperance lecture, such as they never heard before—one that should continually ring in their ears, haunting their day dreams, and disturbing their night visions—giving them no peace, day nor night, until constrained at once and forever, to abandon the life-destroying and soul-damning traffic.

In justice to the officers and owners of the mail line, it is proper to remark that intemperance is not tolerated on the part of any of the employees of the Company, and that no man can be permitted to hold a situation on either of the boats, who is not strictly temperate in his habits. The unfortunate man referred to above, was not a regular hand on the Telegraph, but only temporarily employed, upon duties involving no responsility or risk to the personal safety of others. It is very probable the officers of the boat knew not the extent of his intemperate habits, or he would not have been suffered to remain on board a single day.

Self-Reliance.

BY EMERSON.

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better, for worse, as his portion; that though the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground which is given to him to till.—The power which resides in him is new in nature, and none but he knows what that is which he can do, nor does he know until he has tried. Not for nothing one face, one character, one fact, makes much impression on him, and another none. This sculpture in memory is not without pre-established harmony. The eye was placed where one ray should fall, that it might testify of that particular ray. We but half express ourselves, and are ashamed of that divine idea which each of us represents. It may be safely trusted as proportionate and of good issues, so it be faithfully imparted, but God will not have this work made manifest by cowards. A man is relieved and gay when he has put his heart into his work and done his best; but what he has said or done otherwise, shall give him no peace. It is a deliverance which does not deliver. In the attempt his genius deserts him; no muse befriends; no invention, no hope.

Trust thyself: every heart vibrates to that iron string. Accept the place the Divine Providence has found for you, the society of your contemporaries, the connection of events. Great men have always done so, and confined themselves childlike to the genius of their age, betraying their perception that the absolutely trustworthy was seated at their heart, working through their hands, predominating in all their being. And we are now men, and must accept in the highest mind the same transcendent destiny; and not minors and invalids in a protected corner, not cowards fleeing before a revolution, but guides, redeemers, and benefactors, obeying the Almighty effort, and advancing on Chaos and the Dark.

What pretty oracles nature yields us on this text, in the face and behavior of children, babes, and even brutes? That divided and rebel mind, that distrust of a sentiment because our arithmetic has computed the strength and means opposed to our purpose, these have not. Their mind being whole, their eye is as yet unconquered, and when we look in their faces, we are disconcerted. Infancy conforms to nobody: all conform to it, so that one babe commonly makes four or five out of the adults who prattle and play to it. *

But the man is, as it were, clapped into jail by his consciousness. As soon as he has once acted or spoken with eclat, he is a committed person, watched by the sympathy or the hatred of hundreds, whose affections must now enter into his account. There is no Lethe for this. Ah, that he could pass again into his neutrality! Who can thus avoid all pledges, and having observed, observe again from the same unaffected, unbiased, unbribable, unaffrighted innocence, must always be formidable. He would utter opinions on all passing affairs, which being seen to be not private, but necessary, would sink like darts into the ear of men, and put them in fear.

Whoso would be a man must be a nonconformist. He who would gather immortal palms must not be hindered by the name of goodness, but must explore it if it be goodness. * * * *

What I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think. This rule, equally arduous in actual and in intellectual life, may serve for the whole distinction between greatness and meanness. It is the harder, because you will always find those who think they know what is your duty better than you know it. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

From the Lancaster Express.

Farmers and Prohibition.

BY P. COOMBE.

The farmers of this State will shortly be called upon to sign petitions to the Legislature in favor of Prohibition; and they should seriously consider whether their interest does not require them to do so.—Mr. Haldeman, in his "reasons why the Maine Law should not be passed," has most conclusively proved that the price of corn would not be seriously affected by Prohibition. He says, "the whisky made in this State is sold in the cities almost totally to alcoholic distillers. Alcohol is never drank, therefore a mere mite of the spirits is ever used as a beverage. The great demand for alcohol is purely for mechanical and medicinal purposes.

Here we have his own statement, and as he has been a distiller, and is familiar with the business, the farmer is bound to believe his assertion as correct. All fear of the reduction of the price of corn is relieved at once. Prohibition would not prevent distillation, except for drinking purposes. As but a mite of the whisky is used for drinking, then but a mite less of corn would be required. If so, how is the price of corn to be reduced by a prohibitory law? The friends of Prohibition are greatly indebted to Mr. Haldeman for his assistance in removing the objections of the farmers. The demand for alcohol for burning fluid and other purposes is constantly increasing, so that the mite lost in drinking would soon be made up, and the farmer will sell just as much corn with a prohibitory law, as he now does without it. This, in itself, should induce every farmer to sign a petition. The champion of the Liquor party has removed all difficulties from their way.

In addition to the view of the subject by Mr. Hadleman, I think it can be clearly shown that the farmer would sell more corn, beside other grain and produce, under a prohibitory law, than he now does. Let us look at this matter. Suppose the number of drunkards in the State to be thirty thousand, and that each man drinks one pint of whisky per day. They would consume 1,368,750 gallons per year. If a bushel of corn makes three gallons of whisky, then it requires 456,250 bushels, which at 50 cts., would amount to $228,-125. Here is the whole amount received by the farmer for the whisky drank by these men. On the other hand, suppose these men drank no whisky, what would be the result to the farmers? Every one knows that families of drunkards are poorly fed and clothed—that they are destitute of many of the conveniences of housekeeping, such as furniture, &c. If these men drank no whisky, they would not only earn more money, but their families would be better fed and clad. Their houses would be better furnished, and they would purchase a vast number of articles of which they now are destitute. It would require men to make and sell these articles, and more food to them and the drunkards' families. As the farmer feeds the whole, then he would be called upon to supply the increased demand. Suppose, therefore, for sake of illustration, that each drunkard, without whisky, would consume and cause to be consumed two barrels of flour more a year than now, this would make 60,000 barrels. Allowing four and a half bushels of wheat to each barrel, it would require 270,000 bushels; which at $1, would cost $270,000,—Again: suppose one-half—that is 15,000—of these men without whisky, kept each one hog more than now, and gave it five bushels of corn per year; this would require 75,000 bushels, which at 50 cents, would cost $37,500, Again: Suppose but five thousand kept one horse more each than now, and each fed but twenty dollars worth of hay and grain per year, it would amount to $100,000. The account would stand as follows:

Wheat sold without whisky,	$270,000
Corn fed to additional hogs,	$37,000
Hay and grain to do. horses,	$100,000
Total amount without whisky,	$407,500
Corn now used for whisky,	$228,125
Balance in favor of farmer,	$179,375

Here is a clear gain to the farmer without whisky, of one hundred, seveney nine thousand two hundred and seventy-five dollars per year. Admitting that but one instead of two barrels of flour more are consumed, which no one can dispute, still the grain would be over forty four thousand dollars. This is no idle speculation. As men become sober, they become prosperous and so does the country. More articles of convenience and luxury are required and more men to make and sell them. The farmer feeds the whole and the gain goes directly into his pocket. As the population increases, the provisions advance because of the demand. Prohibition would therefore be a gain to the farmer in dollars and cents. Besides this advantage, he would run no risk of his sons becoming drunkards or his daughters marrying intemperate men. He would lose less money than he now does by bad debts caused by intemperance, and in many other ways would prosper. Farmers, above all other men, should be in favor of Prohibition. Sign the Petitions, then, ye tillers of the soil, and Prohibition will repay you a hundred fold.

Moderate Drinking.

Moderation describes neither quality nor strength. The system of moderate drinking is as unfathomable as the abyss, and uncertaiu as the wind. It is the great deceiver of nations: promising health and long life, yet destroying more by its tendencies than war, famine, or the plague. It is a sweet morsel in the mouth, but gravel in the belly. It is the "A. B. C." of drinking; the picture-book, leading the young and thoughtless to the worst lessons of intemperance. It is a regular quack medicine, making splendid promises, but performing no cures, and yet demanding enormous pay. It is the starting-point to the work-house, the work-house, the prison, the asylum, the gazette, and the gallows. It is a light-fingered gentleman, who feels every corner of the drawer and to the very bottom of the purse. It is the first step in an inclined plane of rapid descent, smooth as marble, and slippery as glass, ending in an abyss of ruin. It is a beautiful serpent, whose fangs and deadly venom are concealed by the dazzling of its coils. It is hypocrisy personified, an affected outside sobriety, while all is agitation and uncleanness within. It is the landlord's birdlime, by which he secures his victims, and fastens them in cage. It is the entrance to a delightful avenue, lined with deceitful flowers, charmed with bewitching sounds, but ending in the caverns of the dead. It is an ignis fatuus, tempting its fated followers over trembling bogs, and tumbling them down a frightful precipice. It is the whirlpool of ruin in which thousands have sunk to rise no more. It appears as an angel of light, assuming a smiling countenance, but is in reality a demon of the bottomless pit. It is like a perpetual dropping, injuring man's constitution far more than occasional drunkenness. It is the birthday and birthplace of all the drunkenness we have in the land. It provides an army of reserve, to recruit the ranks of the 60,000 annually slain by strong drink. It is the body of union betwixt the publicans, drunken politicians, little-drop ministers, and all enemies to the cause of teetotalism.

Choice Gems.

Liberality is not giving largely, but giving wisely.

Life is half spent before we know what it is.

Look not a gift horse in the mouth.

Love thy friend with all his faults; none are without imperfections.

Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord.

Maids want nothing but husbands, and then they want every thing.

Make choice of your wife by the ears, not the eyes.

Make no enemies; he is insignificant indeed that can do thee no harm.

Make other men's shipwrecks thy sea marks.

Manners make a man.

Many come to bring their clothes to church rather than themselves.

Marriage has many pains, but celibacy has no pleasures.

Marriage leapeth up upon the saddle, and soon after repentance upon the crupper.

Masters should be sometimes blind, and sometimes deaf.

Men can better suffer to be denied than to be deceived.

Men may blush to hear what they were not ashamed to act.

Men take less care of their conscience than their reputation.

Moderation is commonly firm, and firmness is commonly successful.

More credit can be thrown down in a moment, than can be built in an age.

Most men employ their first years so as to make their last miserable.

Much religion, but no goodness.

Neither believe rashly, nor reject obstinately.

Neither look out far for troubles, nor be entirely unprovided for them.

Never accuse others to excuse thyself.

Never carry a sword in your tongue to wound the reputation of any man.

Never do that in prosperity whereof you may repent in adversity.

Never marry without love, nor without reason.

Never think of raising your reputation by detraction.

Never wade in unknown waters.

Next my friend I love my enemies, for from them I first hear of my faults.

Never wish a thing done, but do it.

Acknowledgments

Received of A. E. Hall, Daniel Kelso, Esq., Hon. Mr. Ferris, R. N. Lamb, Esq., Dr. Grimes, Hon. Mr. Richardson, and J. W. Gordon, each 75 cents for the Chart; of Jno. Daily and Hon. Mr. Glazebrook, each 25 cents; of His Excellency, Jos. A. Wright, $1 00; of D. B. South, $5 00 on ten copies; of J. A. Delano, for 2 copies, $1 50; and of G. W. Reynolds $6 00 on 12 copies of the Chart. This last letter did not reach us till the morning of the 4th inst., although written on the 9th of January.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee. $5 00.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, consequent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

CIRCULAR---PLEASE TO READ THIS.
AGENTS WANTED.
New Books of Permanent Value.

Office of Sears' Pictorial Works,
Removed to 181 William St. New York, 1853.

Dear Sir:—If entirely convenient and agreeable to you, we would be much pleased to secure your valuable influence on behalf of our PICTORIAL FAMILY WORKS. We publish a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a high moral and unexceptional character, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprize and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well-disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

☞ Among your relativas or acquaintances, it is probable you may be able to send us the name of a respectable, energetic, and faithful man, who will carefully canvass your vicinity. If you are willing to do this, we shall duly appreciate your efforts, and cheerfully reciprocate the favor in any way that you may suggest. By looking over the list, you will perceive that there is no sectarianism in our publications they are designed for all, and must have an unprecedented sale when brought home to the firesides of the people.

☞ We solicit orders from the Trade, Teachers, and School Committees for Books, to whom we furnish our own publications, and those of all the publishers in the country, on the most liberal terms.

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell "SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Any person wishing to embark in the enterprize, will risk little by sending to the Publishers $25 for which he will receive sample copies of the various works (at wholesale prices), carefully boxed, insured, and directed, affording a very liberal percentage to the Agent for his trouble. With these, he will soon be able to ascertain the most saleable, and order accordingly.

LIST OF OUR PICTORIAL WORKS.

		Retail Price.
The Pictorial Family Bible (Large Quarto.) - - - -	1450 pages.	$6 00
Sears' New and complete History of the Bible, - - - -	700 "	3 00
Sears' New Pictorial History of China and India, - -	600 "	2 50
Thrilling Incidents of the Wars of the United States, - - -	700 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Description of the United States, - - -	608 "	2 50
Sears' Treasury of Knowledge and Cyclopedia of Science and Art,	512 "	2 50
Sears' Scenes and Sketches of Continental Europe, - - -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Description of Great Britain and Ireland, -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Family Annual (212 Engravings) - - -	368 "	2 00
The History of Palestine, - -	230 "	1 00
View of New York.—This Engraving is on a sheet, 47 by 19 inches and ought to sell rapidly, -		50
Sears' Information for the People,	600 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Family Instructor, - - - - -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial History of the American Revolution, - -	450 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Sunday-Book, -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Bible Biography, - -	500 "	2 50
Sears' Wonders of the World.—Second Series. - - - -	540 "	2 50
Remarkable Adventures of Celebrated Persons, - - -	410 "	1 25

To those who intend to engage in the circulation of our books, we would urge the present as the most favorable opportunity which has occurred in many years. Our sales are largely increased beyond those of preceding years: our agents are more generally successful, and the future offers still more extensive prospect for trade than even the seasons which has passed.

The two elegant volumes lately issued by us on "China and India;" the "Incidents in the United States Wars," and a new and revised edition of our "Pictorial Description of the United States," for 1853, enlarged and improved, corrected by the late Census, with full descriptions and correct illustrations of the Gold Regions, &c., we offer to canvassers, with the confidant assurance that they are as popular and elegant, and as intrinsically valuable, as any books now offered in the country.

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS

Are decidedly the best books that agents can employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great Republic. There is not a city or town in the United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable.—They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle—got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but such as an agent of good principles will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly, by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid. ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, jan 5 1t 181 William Street, New York.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, General Agent for the State of Indiana.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN
Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,
North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.
Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer,
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week,
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different sets of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Booksellers and Stationers,
No. 12, Washington Street,
june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon. John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.
Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851.

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would sufficate me when I laid down. Having used many r medies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Elward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter.
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen. Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili.
Rt. Rev. Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archbishop Pursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.
Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind. by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING: in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of
Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,
WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be warranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY
BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by
jan 19 2m CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1853. NO. 34.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Office, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the London Leader.

The New Aristocracy.

A title once could only show
  The signs of noble birth,
And men of rank were years ago
  The great ones of the earth.
They deemed it just the crown should shrink,
  Before the cap and gown;
They thought it wrong the poor should think,
  And right to keep them down.

Those were the days when books were things
  "The people" could not touch;
Made for the use of lords and kings,
  And only made for such.
To work the loom, to till the soil,
  To cut the costly gem—
To tread the ground of daily toil
  Was quite enough for them.

Time was when just to read and write
  Were thought a wondrous deal,
For those who wake with morning light,
  To earn their daily meal.
The man a more submissive slave
  The less his head-piece knew;
And so the mass from habit gave
  Their birthright to the few.

Now look abroad, the light of Truth
  Is speeding far and wide,
And that which fills the English youth,
  Must shame our ancient pride.
'Tis mind alone can wield the sword,
  In spite of wealth and rank;
The artisan may face a lord
  With thousands in the bank.

We scorn not those of high degree,
  For so 'twere wrong to do:
But poorer men as rich can be,
  And quite as noble too.
The prince may act a gayer part,
  But he who works for bread
May have, perchance, a warmer heart,
  And p'raps a clearer head.

Then grieve not for "the good old times,"
  Behold a brighter day?
The causes of our fathers' crimes
  Are wearing fast away.
Before the Pen, the Press, the Rail,
  Must old opinions fall;
The mighty project cannot fail—
  Then aid it one and all.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Jones Family;

OR AN ESTIMALE OF MONEY.

It is sheer nonsense to contend that money does nothing towards raising a man's respectability in the world. Enough of this theory was verified in the Joues family. Jacob Jones was a poor, thriftless man, with a large family, who were put to great straits to get along decently, and everybody knew it; yet nobody knew anything against them but their poverty. He was a sensible man, well versed in politics, and could make as handsome a speech as Squire Driver, in any town meeting in Freehold; but then it was only "Jake Jones, the man who wan't worth a cent in the world." He might have held important offices in the militia, or been one of the Selectmen, but he was so poor, he was entirely overlooked.

Besides, this poverty was a great disadvantage to the family. The girls were always held below par, in consequence of their being brought up in an obscure way; and Mrs. Jones, their mother, never attained to any office in the sewing circle, or any charitable fair, simply because she could not mingle with aristocracy. Yet she was acknowledged to be a sensible woman, and every one pitied her because she was so poor.

The Jones girls never had a fair position in society, or they would have appeared as well as many others. They were rather marked as 'slab-sided, gawky girls,' with whom mothers evidently preferred their daughters should have but little intercourse, and they more especially feared lest their sons should be attracted by their faces, for they were pretty, notwithstanding their poverty; and Mrs. Driver herself declared, "if they only had money, they would appear as well as any ladies in the town;" but, as it was, they were only known as "Jake Jones' daughters, who lived in the small red house under the hill."

But Mrs. Jones was descended from an English stock. She used to say if she only had money to travel, she had no doubt but she could find out her pedigree! but this all went for "smart talk," until one day the public journal announced that 'the heirs of Lucretia Selden, if living, might hear something to their advantage by calling at —— street, No. 9.

Mrs. Jones was a Selden, and her mother's name was Lucretia—if so, a property of two hundred thousand dollars was her due from a bachelor uncle, as a bequest to the heir of his sister; and Mrs. Jones was her only child. It was hers, without mistake.

It would have been a curious chapter to have noted down the sayings of their old acquaintances when it was noised abroad that the Joneses had such a fortune.

Mrs. Smith said she "always thought that there was something above the commonality in Mrs. Jones; for her part, she had always been social with her, and treated her lady-like.

"But, mother," said Sophia, "you did warn me against associating with her daughters. You know you said they were awkward, uncouth girls."

"But, my dear it is not so—they are, in reality, very genteel, accomplished young ladies, and I have no objection at all to your visiting them, especially as such a good fortune has happened to them."

Jacob Jones soon set up a princely style of living. He built an elegant house, kept his carriage, hired servants, received a commission from the Governor as Justice of the Peace; the next year was the first Selectman of the town; and Dr. Bond eloquently urged his claims as Representative to our General Court, affirming, with great emphasis, that he "knew no man in town better calculated to represent its interests than Squire Jones."

This was the man who bolted out of meeting, rather than hear "old Jake Jones talk," a little more than a year ago.

And how the society of the Misses Jones was courted! 'Thomas, Richard, Henry,' the mother used to say, "if you are going to a concert or to a lecture, why don't you invite Carry or Sophia Jones to go with you? They are sweet pretty girls, and you would do well if you could push your way there. The squire, they say, is worth full two hundred thousand dollars, and that divided makes every child entirely independent.

They were no longer the slab-sided greenies, but the tall, graceful, handsome girls, who were dressed beautifully and conversed so sensibly. Didn't the Joneses laugh behind the door as they contrasted the past with the present! Then there was Micajah Jones, who used to play the big fiddle in the church, known only in those days as "Cage, the fiddler;" but since he had procured a handsome house organ, and had contributed a large sum for one in the church, he had assumed the cognomen of "Mr. Jones, our exquisite performer and organist—son of Squire Jones" the gentleman who received such a large property from England." The girls were always ready to sit in the choir now without crying—the organist was a noble-hearted fellow, and wasn't it a treat to borrow his quizzing glass to look at the strangers who happened to enter church?

By-and-by there was a new event talked about, for the affairs of the Jones were now the all-engrossing topic. Sophia was thought to be engaged to Mr. Tymphony, the village storekeeper. Nobody was certain of the fact, yet every one knew it would come out an engagement; and it was thought his "variety store" was enlarged with that view of the Squire's purse when suddenly, Mr. Blanken from the South, a wealthy cotton planter, carried her away, at ten days' notice, where slaves come at her beck and call, to do as she bids.

Another was soon after married to a speculator, who lived like a nabob, gave large entertainments, bought a summer's residence in Freehold, and made it a perfect paradise. Every one of the daughters "married well," as the phrase is, and never wanted for the warmest friends and admirers.

The Squire and his lady now occupy the broad aisle of the Episcopal church, and the bishop and rector always consult with him respecting church matters. He is father of the town, and marries more couples than the ministers, because people are pleased to have the knot tied in such elegant drawing-rooms, and Mrs. Jones invariably orders a glass of wine and a basket of cakes at the ceremony,

Cloyes, the barber, lives rent free in the small red house they occupied in the days of their poverty. The Squire remembers he used to shave him for nothing when his pockts were empty, and he follows the golden rule. Mrs. Jones has made several donations to her former milliner, and a poor woman, who used to help her, spring and fall, in her sewing; and not one of the family have assumed a purse-proud air since they came in possession of their property; consequently they are deservedly respected; and this shows plainly that they have common sense as a regulating medium, since they cast no reflections upon the former inattention of people in their days of poverty, which is an infallible method to make them feel that although money changed them in the estimate of others, the genuine merits in themselves remain unchanged. Yet, all the while, they are as conscious as others that money alone gave them their present position in society.

"Dear Papa, die Sober."

William Jones was a sad drunkard.—From comfort, his unhappy family were reduced almost to beggary, and his poor wife had ceased to hope for any change for the better. Drinking always debases the mind and renders it selfish and unfeeling. There was a time, when a better husband and father than Jones could no where have been found. But that time had long since gone by. So low had he sunk, that only a single human feeling remained, and that was the love he bore his youngest child, a dear little boy of seven years old. And it was the influence of Willy that at last saved him. Let me tell how this good result was brought about.

One evening Mr. Jones came home to his family, after having spent more than half of his day's earnings in drink, stupid as usual, with liquor. Even if there was a little cheerfulness among the members of his household, it always disappeared when he came. It so happened that Willy's sister was learning him a little song when the door opened, and in staggered the wretched father. Instantly their young voices were hushed; and so much was the child affected by this sudden darkening of the light which had for a little while shone through the clouds ever hanging over them, that he burst into tears and wept and sobbed bitterly.

Mr. Jones had heard the sweet voice of his youugest and best beloved child, blending with that of his sister, and had paused for a little while outside of the door to listen to sounds so new and strange in his dwelling. He could not but notice the sudden hush his presence produced; and when this was followed by the sobbing and crying of Willy, he felt disturbed. The child did not run to meet him as usual, and when he held out his hand and said—

"Come here, Willy, and tell me what's the matter with you."

Willy, though he tried to stifle his sobs, did not, at first, go to his father. At length, however, he was on his knee, and his sad, tearful face, nestled down upon his bosom.

"What made you cry, dear? Come, tell me." These words Mr. Jones repeated over and over again; and, at last, said—"why did you stop singing when I came in?"

The child was still silent.

"Why, Willy? Say."

Willy raised his eyes, still brim full of tears, to his father's face, and said, in a whisper that reached only his ears—

"We can't sing when you come!"

"Why not? I would like to hear you sing."

"We feel so bad that we choke right up."

"Why do you feel bad, Willy?"

"Because—because,—you never come home sober."

These words of Willy's, uttered in so sad a whisper, went to the heart of the father, like a nail in a sure place. He said no more, but, all in the evening, sat silent and thoughtful. And, what was stranger still, did not go out to spend an hour or two in the ale-house, as was his custom.—Willy sobbed himself to sleep in his arms.

On the next evening, unexpectedly to all, Mr. Jones came home to his family as sober as he had left it in the morning.—The children looked at him wonderingly; and their mother, hardly crediting her own eyes, became so agitated that she could hardly finish preparing the evening meal.

It was a glad time to all, when Mr. Jones declared, at the supper table, that he had signed the pledge. Mrs. Jones burst into tears and cried for joy; the older children's faces beamed with delight, and Willy, getting off of his chair, climbed into his father's lap, and putting his arms around his neck, kissed him, and then laid his head upon his breast. So touching an expression of the child's joy, deeply affected Mr. Jones; and made him more earnestly resolve never again to taste the maddening poison which had well nigh destroyed him, body and soul.

In a little while, every thing became changed in the home of Mr. Jones.—There were better food and better clothing for all. A hundred little comforts, to which all had been strangers, came in, one after another, keeping ever fresh in mind the blessed reformation that had taken place. The voices, attuned to cheerful songs, no longer trembled into silence when the father appeared; but rather took a gladder expression. If there was one of the children happier than the rest, it was Willy.

A pear or two made still more apparent the blessings of temperance. Mr. Jones had moved into a larger house, and bought new furniture. The children were all at good schools, and the oldest daughter was receiving lessons from a music teacher.—The mother, instead of being worn down by toil and sorrow, had now as much assistance as she needed in the family, and her face had ever a happy look.

About two years after Mr. Jones signed the pledge, he was taken down with a severe illness, which lasted many days, and brought him to the very brink of the grave. His family, as might be supposed, were in great distress. After the disease had abated, the sick man remained very low, and the doctor became anxious lest the enfeebled powers of his system should, instead of recovering themselves, become entirely exhausted.

Once, on visiting Mr. Jones, he said:—

"I think I will order a little brandy twice a day."

"I would rather not take brandy, doctor," replied the sick man.

"I am sure it will do you good."

"And I know it will do me harm, doctor. I have not tasted a drop of any kind of liquor for two years, and do not intend drinking any more as long as I live."

"I only order the brandy as a medicine, not as a beverage," said the doctor. "You stand absolutely in need of a stimulant.—Without something to quicken your vital system, I am seriously afraid that you will never be raised from this bed."

"While I, doctor," said the sick man with great seriousness, "am afraid that life obtained through the agency of brandy would be to me a curse instead of a blessing."

"Why do you say that?" inquired the doctor.

"Because one draught of that fiery liquid would awake a slumbering appetite, which I am fearful I could not control. I am a reformed man, doctor."

The doctor, after remaining silent for some time, said—

"I ought not, Mr. Jones, to disguise from you the fact that you are in a very critical situation. This disease, which I have succeeded in breaking, has left you so low that it is doubtful, if unassisted by some stimulant, nature will have power to rally. I am sure a tea spoonful of brandy once or twice a day, diluted with a little water, would be of great service. Life is too precious to be thrown away, when the means of saving it is at hand."

Willy, who scarcely ever left his father's room, was sitting upon the bed, listening with great attention to what the doctor was saying. Mr. Jones did not immediately reply. He closed his eyes and remained, evidently, in earnest thought for nearly a minute. He then said—

"Doctor, the life of the body is of but little value set against the life of the soul. I will not, to save the one, put in jeopardy the other. If I am to die, let me die sober."

The doctor seemed half offended at this, and replying a little coldly—

"Just as you please—"

Bade his patient good morning, and retired. On the next day, when he again called to see him, no improvement was apparent. But, on the contrary, it was very plain that the sick man was failing. His feet and hands were cold, and he lay in a half stupor.

Again tne physician proposed the use of a little brandy.

"Madam," he said to Mrs. Jones, "unless your husband will consent to take some stimulant, I see no hope of his recovery."

Distressed and bewildered, the poor wife knew not what to say or do. The life of her husband was precious to her, for since his reformation, he had been kind, provident and tender to all in his happy household. But, from the thought of putting brandy to his lips, which she knew must inflame his old appetite, her heart shrank with a sickening dread. For sooner would she see him in the grave than have him fall away again, for in such a fall there would be no hope. She answered the doctor's appeal not in words, but with tears.

The wet eyes of his wife appeared to arouse the sick man from a stupor that had crept over him. To leave her and the children alone and unprotected in the world was hard.

"Doctor," he said in a feeble voice, lifting his head and resting it upon his hand. "Doctor, tell me truly; do you not think there is great danger in one like me tasting brandy or any other intoxicating liquor?"

"There certainly is some danger," replied the doctor, "of having the old desire excited by so doing. But you must remember that the stimulant is given as a medicine; and it will be your duty as a man and as a christian to resist and control the morbid appetite, when you feel it."

"It is easy to say that, doctor, for one who has never been cursed with a drunkard's fiery appetite. But ——"

He murmured indistinctly the closing sentence.

"As your physician," said the doctor, after remaining silent for some moments, and he spoke in a firm voice, "I prescribe a tea spoonful of brandy, in an equal quantity of water. It is my duty to save life, and I see no other way."

"As your patient, then, I suppose I must submit," returned Mr. Jones, in a low desponding voice. "Life is precious for the sake of my wife and little ones."

As he said this, Willy, who had been on the bed, listening earnestly, since the doctor came in, crept forward, and throwing his arms around his father, murmured in his ear, yet so distinctly that all heard the words—

"Dear Papa! Die sober!"

Whether the child clearly understood the full meaning of his words or not, they thrilled through the hearts of all present. Instantly the sick man's arms were clasped about his boy, and he responded in a determined voice—

"Yes, if die I must, it shall be sober! I will not touch the accursed thing."

Better and safer than brandy, proved this heart warming and exciting stimulus. From that moment the vital powers of the invalid rallied, and in a few weeks he was well again.

A SENSIBLE SPIRIT RAPPER.—The editor of the Palmer Journal has been mixed with a circle of spirit rappers, and made a dollar and a half by the operation, as follows:

"We accepted an invitation to attend a sitting of a circle of spiritualists, the other evening, and were not a little surprised when the following message was spelled out to one of the company: 'Pay the Printer.' It was subsequently explained through a "medium," that the message was from the spirit of a delinquent subscriber, who owed us $1,50. Friends of the departed paid us the money without hesitation, and the joy of the relieved "spirit" was manifested by loud raps, tipping the table, &c.

INDIANA LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 16, 1853.

THE CHURCH JOURNAL.—The first number of this paper has reached our table, and we have glanced over its contents, which are both valuable and interesting. It is edited by clergymen of the city of New York, and published every Saturday by PUDNEY & RUSSELL. Terms, $2 50 per annum, paid in advance, or $3 00, if collected. Should it continue as it has begun, it will be a valuable auxiliary to the advancing cause of progress.

Senator Hosbrook.

It is due to Senator Hosbrook, as well as to ourself, that we should state, that a friend of his has made us acquainted with his true position in relation to the law regulating the interest on money. The Senator is personally hostile to the present law on that subject, and believes that an increased rate of interest would conduce to the good of the State by making the laws more respected, and money-lenders more honest. In these views he differs with his constituents, and being bound, as he understands his duty, to obey the will of his constituents, he voted against the proposition to increase the interest on money from six to ten per cent. He spoke his own views on the subject, and voted the views of his constituents. This renders the Senator's views and vote compatible with each other and with the principles of justice; and we cheerfully exonerate him from any censure. It is but proper, however, that we should say, that we have great doubt of the propriety of any political doctrine that places a representative in the attitude of our Senator. It certainly does not tend to fair dealing between the representative and his constituents, for them to require him to vote one way, while he does all he can to defeat his own vote. The doctrine of instruction, as applied in such case, is, in our estimation, of questionable morality, though acknowledged by the constitution.

A Heroine.

During last week, in that part of our city which lies west of White River Bridge, a scene might have been witnessed, that ought to shame the friends of the whisky traffic into silence. A Mr. Smith, formerly a worthy Son of Temperance, but who has been seduced from his fidelity to his pledge, has recently become very degraded. The principal agent in his ruin, is one WILLIAM SCHOOLCRAFT, who sells him the intoxicating liquid, reckless of the poverty and misery which he thereby inflicts on his helpless family. This poisoner of the public morality of the city, keeps a low doggery, through which he contrives to strip his customers of their cash; and, what is still worse, their manhood.—Smith, if we are correctly informed, is now nearly bankrupt in both. His wife is, consequently, that most perfect personification of misery on earth—a drunkard's wife. But though reft of all she most dearly cherishes, she is still possessed of a fearless soul, before whose glance the infamous Schoolcraft cowers. Goaded to desperation by the abuse of a maniac husband, and the cool and deliberate villany of his destroyer, Schoolcraft, she proceeded to the doggery on last Wednesday, the door of which she gently opened, and on seeing her husband there in a state of brutal intoxication, as gently closed again. In front of the door stood several boxes or barrels of coal. From these she selected her arms, and proceeded deliberately to demolish the windows of the dram-shop, causing the courageous Schoolcraft and his drunken companions to fly from the house, through the back door.

At length he acquired courage to beseech her not to destroy his property, urging the pitiful and lying excuse for the wrongs he had inflicted upon her, that he could not help it. She did not heed him until her work was accomplished, and then informed him, with the utmost coolness, that if he persisted in giving her husband liquor, she would burn his house to ashes. When she had given him this information, she left him. Such a scene ought to have awakened reflection and repentance even in a fiend; but it seems it had no effect on the brutal heart of Schoolcraft; for that same night, Smith returned home drunk, and seating himself by his injured wife, seized her by the neck with one hand, and drew an open dirk with the other, which he was in the act of plunging into her heart, when, by one of those efforts made only in desperate circumstances, she relieved herself from his grasp, and threw him on his back upon the floor. There she held him until the door was opened by one of the children, when she left him and escaped to a neighbor's house.

Is it possible that a wise Legislature will longer permit a traffic, whose legitimate results are such scenes as the foregoing? Will the State Sentinel contend that the existence of such suffering is necessary to the integrity either of the Whig or Democratic party? Has it come to this, in Indiana, that our women must look for protection against violence and outrage, only to their own right arms? Is that what you want, Mr. Brown?

The Legislature.

The House of Representatives has the Liquor Bill of Mr. Owen, of the last session, with some amendments thereto, now before it. We do not know what may be its fate. If it do not pass, a stronger would most certainly fail.

A proposition made by Mr. Milroy, of the House, to take one copy of the Chart to each member, till the end of the session, resulted as follows:

Ayes—Messrs. Bridges, Brothwell, Buell, Dodd, Dufour, Ferris, Goodman, Greene, Henry, Hammond, Harris, Hendricks, Hunt, Jennings, Lasselle, Martin, Maxfield, McDonald of Lake, McDonald of Sullivan, Milroy, Moss, Pratt, Read, Rian, Seawright, Service, Shumar, Steele, Stockwell, Struble, Walker of Laporte, Work, Yount, Torbet—37.

Noes—Messrs. Able, Ballard, Brecount, Bundy, Burnett, Donald, Donelson, Dunlavy, Emery, Farnsley, Ferguson, Fleming, Gentry, Gootee, Graham, Hamrick, Handy, Hicks, Hooper, Howell, Johnson, Jones of Boone, Jones of Jennings, Lemon, Lewis, Lines, Low, Manville, McCormick, McClure, McKinney, Parker, Peckenpaugh, Richardson, Rockafellar, Spencer, Scott, Shoemaker, Simpson, Stackhouse, Stevens, Taber, Thomas, Turpie, Underwood, Walker of Rush—46.

William Jewel Brown.

The editor of the Sentinel, unable to answer our article on the Resolutions of Dr. Grimes, drops them, and most ungenerously attacks the cause of Temperance through our political opinions. His article is personal, and in all its conclusions, false. Taking into consideration his history, the latter is not to be wondered at; and the defects of his early education fully account for the former. Having dealt in personalities so long—that he has become proof against the most pungent—he is ever ready to engage in a controversy, which, while it brings no wound to his sensibilities, may increase a reputation which none but devils out-right would envy. We know his forte, and thus preface what we have to say in regard to his attack upon us, in his last Friday's paper.

He infers that because we are a Whig, we are, therefore, base enough to sell the cause of Temperance, so far as we can, to that party, and "make a joint stock company of the two concerns." It would be doing injustice to our own convictions, to say that he is mistaken, when he gives utterance to such an insinuation. He knew, when he wrote it, that it was utterly without foundation in truth. The suggestion came from his own heart. We avoided touching the Sentinel, until urged to do so, by men who are both better and greater democrats than he conceives himself to be, unless indeed he has become a monomaniac on the subject of self-esteem. At last we did so, in the kindest and most respectful manner. He answered our enquiries only in part; and we just as kindly renewed them. He made no answer at all; but charged every democrat who voted for Dr. Grimes' resolutions, in the late State Temperance Convention, with selling himself "soul and body to the whigs." Against this charge we defended the hundreds of democrats who voted for those resolutions, and the editor, without attempting to meet our defence, and show its insufficiency, now turns round and charges us with being a whig. His logic is equally creditable to his ability, as his truth is to his morals. Both are perfect in their kind, and are essential elements of a character perfectly sui generis. We gladly throw our cause into the hands of the readers of the Chart, and leave it even to our democratic readers to say whether we have withheld the meed of praise from a democrat where it was due; or refused to attack a whig when opposed to the cause of Temperance. We do not fear that even the Sentinel can prejudice the jury into whose hands we thus commit our cause.

The allusion of the Sentinel to the Publishing Committee, is in keeping with the whole article. It displays the aptness of the editor at couching in low phrase insinuations yet lower. Its effect, however, upon us is neither fear of nor respect for its author. His shaft is pointless, and his bow powerless. But may we not retort his masked threat? Does he not fear that his press, which attacks a majority of the democrats of the State, as men who would sell themselves basely, may not always be, as it now is, the ostensible organ of the democratic party? May not some paper, true to democracy, without being false to the cause of Temperance and virtue, be soon established at the Capital of Indiana? We are no prophet, brother Brown, nor yet have we any particular information on this topic; but we do now predict that you will not always, nor even long, stand alone as the democratic organ of the State. You will necessarily force into existence another paper that will not pander to the liquor interest; and then, sir, you will find your patronage dwindle. But you will still find supporters among those whose support will conduce but little to your credit. Among the friends of the liquor-traffic, and its dupes and victims, there will still be those who will stand by you. The worst men of all parties—numerous, perhaps, in ours as yours—will become your allies and supporters, and, if we mistake not your tendencies, you need have no fear of a rival in their affections.

You are mistaken, Bro. Brown, when you charge "that we are itching to have a controversy with you." Our anxiety is rather to know your whereabouts on the subject of Temperance, than to provoke a controversy. We did not wish that under your professions of friendship for the cause of Temperance, you should, from day to day, give currency to all that the enemies of that cause might say against it. We were urged by men of all parties, and more particularly of your own, to draw you out on this subject; and, though our questions were not sufficient to do this, the resolutions of Dr. Grimes, a good democrat, came to our aid. Their principle, was the spear of Ithurial, whose touch transformed the hitherto apparently harmless toad into the devil, and the developments to which it has led, prove that all the while you were—

"Squat like a toad, close by the public ear,
Assaying by most devilish art, to teach
The organs of men's fancy, and with them forge
* * * * * * * *
Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires,
Blown up by high conceit's engendering pride.,'

We leave you for the present, with the wish, but we confess without the hope, that you may forsake a course that must ultimately lead to your abandonment by every friend you may now possess, whose friendship is not a dishonor to its object.

If you will fill your fancy, while you are in company, with suspicions of their thinking meanly of you; if you puff yourself up with imagination of appearing to them a very witty or profound person; if you discompose yourself with fears of misbehaving before them: or any way put yourself out of yourself; you will not appear in your natural color, but in that of an affected, personated character, which is always disagreeable.

A Monster.

The following letter was received by the Prosecuting Attorney of this county during the last month. It was read before the Temperance Convention; and we now give it to the readers of the Chart, that they may know how temperance fares in the town of Augusta, in Marion County, Indiana, at the hands of that monster, Jonathan Cropper, of that place. But read the letter, and talk about keeping temperance out of politics, if you can:

AUGUSTA, MARION CO., IND.,
January 2d, 1853.

SIR:—If you please, I want you to attend to a little piece of business for me.—There is a man in this town that keeps whisky to sell, and keeps my husband drunk day and night. He has not drawn a sober breath for two weeks, and it is getting worse every day. The neighbors advise me to have it broken up. They carry on so every night that nobody can sleep for them.

Whenever I say anything to the man, he swears he will take my life. He came into my husband's shop and picked up a piece of sharp iron, and run at me, and swore that he would run it through me; and then picked up a hammer, and throwed it after me, and swore he would knock my brains out. He said he would give my husband whisky to kill me and my whole family, and he has kept him drunk ever since. He was drinking there yesterday, and came home last night and throwed me out of bed, and throwed the stove down, and broke nearly everything in the room. To-day, about the time church broke, he picked up the shovel, and run every one out of the house. The people all stopped at the door, and looked in. He d—d them, and said if they would come in he would serve them the same way. JONATHAN CROPPER is the man's name that keeps him drunk. * * * * * It is the neighbor's wish for him to be attended to.

——— ———."

Read that letter, freemen of Indiana, and then ask yourselves what ought to be done with a traffic that leads to such consequences? Should you longer sustain it by sustaining men who make laws to protect it? The State is full of just such men as JONATHAN CROPPER. There is no whisky trafficker who is not willing to become as bad. What man is not ready to raise both hands and go to work, to consign such monsters of wickedness to the penitentiary, and to stamp a traffic, so fruitful of evil without any good, with the brand of felony?"

Intellectual Development of Woman.

From an address at the first anniversity of Farmer's College, by Rev. Daniel Tenney, of Oxford, we take the following extract:

It has long been a favorite subject of discussion with young men, whether the intellectual powers of the two sexes are equal. This is among the first and weightiest questions which agitate the village Lyceum—it is regularly proposed in the academy—and its merits are diligently canvassed by every Freshman class in college.

Bold, chivalrous youth! thus to sit as a judge upon his own merits, and proudly herald a victory, ere his modest competitor has been permitted fairly to enter the field. Let her but once stand on equal ground, trained and disciplined for the contest, and it may be that this self same youth, like one of Shakspeare's heroes, would become all at once "a coward on instinct!"

But these juvenile Ciceros seem to have forgotten that there is little fairness in the question. We know nothing of mind but from its development. We cannot judge of the original abstract strength of intellect. Its manifestations are the only means by which we determine its power, and these will be made only as there is opportunity. Mind will lie dormant, unless there is motive to awaken it. In respect to females, motives have never yet existed to any considerable extent. What they have done has been done by stealth or by accident. The stern lords of creation have frowned upon the delicate female attempting to grasp the noble truths of science.

"A woman," say they, "study pure mathematics! Her head filled with coefficients, logarithms, parabolas, and the infinite series! Oh, horrible! And then, to interest herself in Astronomy, and with masculine boldness look directly at the stars through a telescope! She is out of her sphere! A lady digging Greek roots! better far be exhuming some garden esculents, and seasoning them for her liege lord's palate!"

No fostering public sentiment has encouraged her. Delicate and retiring, she turns away from that dishonored notoriety, which is the result of literary eminence.—Men are stimulated to effort by a thousand influences to which woman are strangers. One generation acts on another.—A flood of intellectual has been poured on their path from the remotest ages.—They can hardly help being enlightened, whether they would or not. But with females it has rather been darkness visible. Their course you can trace back, as that of a river issuing from a dismal cave, and upon whose broad bosom the morning fog rests; here and there the sunlight bathes the adjacent hill-tops, but its deep waters are concealed beneath the clouds of vapor, and as you follow its windings to its source, and enter the opening cavern, even the grey and misty light disappears, and all is darkness. Thus the stimulus, which men feel as they look back upon the illuminated points of their history for four thousand years, is entirely wanting to woman, for to her there are no such illuminated points. Let us see if it is not thus.—Turning for a moment to Greece—polished, beautiful Greece—we shall find that even in that most favored portion of the earth, at the zenith of her glory, there was little to distinguish the woman from the brute. The Dorians attempted, indeed, to develope the understanding of females, but they did it at the sacrifice of individual character. The Spartan woman was trained for the State. Bravery, or a strong heart and ability to endure suffering in its fiercest forms, was the end of her discipline, from the cradle. "The rest of the Greeks," says Xenophen, "required females to sit in solitude and spin wool." A striking fact, in proof of the obscurity of Grecian women, is the very small number whose names are mentioned in history. Penelope, Helen, and a few others, have been advanced to an honorable place on the page of the historian and poet; but the great multitude live in deplorable ignorance; and that, too, in Greece!—in sight of the Parthenon!—on the banks of the Illysus!—in the walks of the Academy!

These were the country-women of Xenophen, Pericles, Plato, of Æschilus!—The artist could sculpture the female form in lines of beauty and grace, never before nor since rivaled. When some Helen or Venus was the subject, he carved for eternity. Yet the living, breathing form, or rather the intellect enshrined within it, was utterly neglected. The minds of thousands of free-born women in Athens, made to live when the solid Parthenon shall have crumbled to dust, received less attention than a chiseled dog—occasioned less solicitude than the cornice of a temple.

What was Socrates dreaming of? Why was not the divine Plato more sagacious? Why did not the practical Aristotle arouse his countrymen to this fatal deficiency?

In Rome, likewise, among the mothers, there was no conservative influence—no sound learning. We are soon, therefore, called to read of the decline and fall of the Roman Empire.

In the middle ages there was no favorable change. It is indeed true, that young ladies were the arbiters of taste and fashion. They were the judges of the laws of honor. They were worshiped at tilts and tourneys, but, alas! they could not read, nor write, nor spell!

We are accustomed to look to the ages of Queen Elizabeth, as hallowed by a bright constellation of female genius. It was so. Amid bloody wars, diabolical assassinations, and the meanest court intrigues which deform the pages of English history; these furnish a grateful digression. They make one page of that history pure and fragrant; but they are like half a dozen stars in a cloudy night. Their country-women generally were as ignorant of letters, and of the immaterial principle within them, as were the animals which they rode to market.

But in modern Europe, and in our own country, the stream is issuing from the cave, and the cloudy vapors are rolling off. Still, even here, there are serious deficiencies. It has been observed, that small girls in a primary school, as a general thing, have more active minds than their male associates, and are in advance of them in all their studies. In a few years, however, the order is reversed. At the age of sixteen or eighteen, the lads have gained upon the other portion of the school, in almost everything that constitutes a solid education.

☞ George Ticknor, the accomplished author of the "History of Spanish Literature," is preparing a memoir of Webster, which will be published expressly for the Massachusetts Historical Society.

☞ Hon. Edwd. Stanley of North Carolina, after the present session of Congress, it is said, intends to remove to California, where he proposes to practice his profession—the law.

☞ The skeleton of a cat and a rat, in excellent preservation, have been found in Gerard's crypt, London. The rat was firmly held in the mouth of the cat. It is thought they had lain there 500 years.

☞ The fat ox at the Kentucky fair, which took the first prize, weighed three thousand two hundred and fifty pounds.

Conservatives and Progressives.

BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

A pure Conservative, from principle, is one who desires to hold things as they are; saving only slight repairs and trivial imperfections. The circle of improvement, with him, is limited; the wisdom of successive ages has already filled it up.—There are no new ideas—they are only new to us. There are no new truths; those that seem so are only retired truths coming from their seclusion into public again. Religion is an orbed and perfect thing, and successive ages of thinkers have given it systematic forms that will never be improved. Philosophies are all old; modern philosophies are only new growths from old roots. Art has reached its height, and he who would see all that human hands can do, must turn backward. Society is a full moon; and all that wisdom should endeavor, should be to keep it from waning. That there is to be great advance in merely mechanical arts, he admits; and that some advantages may be plucked from the future, in the physical condition of men.

The Progressive, proper, regards the world as but a vast seed; and all human interests, but seed reforms, or germs.—Growth in the natural society, is not to him a pyramid, standing up from its vast base, thousands of years ungrowing and unchanged, but rather a banian tree, whose vast trunk, old as ages is yet growing, whose boughs are letting down new trunks for a wider growth, and whose glory it is to hold the frost by overlaying old growth with new, and preserving itself by perpetual change! These are the men who look for a life principle in everything. They believe that institutions, if alive, are constantly, although gradually changing, to meet new shapes of human want; they believe that customs must change; that philosophers are not chrystals, which God bounded by immoveable lines, and polished beyond the touch of art; but that they are the rude endeavors of men to speak truths, which, in full form, are unspeakable, they believe that it is better to go back to the original source of God, than forever to repeat the few notes which men have jottled down, and proudly called their systems.

A Conservative is then a man who believes permanence to be the law of things. The Progressive believes that development is the Divine idea of creation. These differences are either the result of education or constitutional peculiarities. Men endowed largely with self-esteem, feebly qualified by benevolence, and born to wealth or privileges, are predisposed to Conservatism. They are so well off that they hardly wish change. As to those not so well off—restless and rising—they are discontented persons, not fit to rise. If men are contented, what need of more?—If they are discontented, they are dangerous. In either case society should be stationary. It is from such that aristocracy springs. Men naturally born to privileges, and dreading all innovations that shall distribute to the many the rights which are enjoyed by the few. They have built them castles upon rocks, and they regard reformers as quarry-men, blasting out the foundations to get stone, forsooth, to build poor cottages.

The Rum Seller's Dream.

"Well wife, this is too horrid, I cannot continue this business any longer."

"Why, dear, what's the matter now?"

"O, such a dream, such rattling of men's bones, and such an army of starved mortals, so many murders, such cries, and shrieks and yells, and such horrid gnashing of teeth, the glaring eyes, and such a blazing fire and such devils. Oh! I cannot endure it. My hair stands on end, and I am so filled with horror that I can scarcely speak. Oh! if ever I sell rum again."

"My dear, you are frightened."

Yes, indeed, I am. Another such night I would not pass for worlds."

"My dear, perhaps——"

"Oh dont talk to me. I am determined not to have anything more to do with rum, any how. Don't you think Tom Wilson came to me with his throat cut from ear to ear, and such a horrible gash, and it was so hard for him to speak, and so much blood; and says he, "See here Joe, the result of your rum selling!" My blood chilled at the sight, and just then the house seemed to turn bottom up, and the earth opened and a little imp took me by the hand, saying, "Follow me." As I went, grim devils held out to me cups of liquid fire, saying, "Drink this." I dare not refuse. Every draught set me in a rage.—Serpents hissed upon each side, and from above reached down their heads and whispered "rum seller!" On and on they impelled me, through the narrow pass.—All at once he paused and said, "are you dry?" "Yes," I replied. Then he struck a trap door with his foot, and down, down we went, the legions of fiery serpents followed us, whispering "drunkard, drunkard." At length we stopped again, and the imp asked me as before, "are you dry?" yes, I replied. He then touched a spring; a door flew open; there were thousands of old worn out rum-sellers, crying most piteously, "Rum, rum, give me some rum!" When they saw me they stopped a moment to see who I was.—Then the imps cried out so as to make all shake again, 'Rum seller!' and hurling me in, shut the door. For a moment they fixed their ferocious eyes upon me, and uttered a united yell, "Damn him," which filled me with such terror that I awoke.—There, wife, dream or no dream, I will never sell another drop of the infernal stuff. I will not."—Olive Branch.

Effects of Spirits.

With respect to the employment of alcoholic stimuli of healthy men, under circumstances of ordinary labor, there can be no doubt whatever, and both science and observation teach us so, that they are totally unnecessary. If, however, the question be, whether there do not at times, arise circumstances in which extraordinary exertion is called for, and in which stimuli are serviceable, the answer must be, that certainly such circumstances do occur, but not nearly so frequently as is generally imagined: certainly not under what is usually called severe labor, for instance, as the harvest work of the agriculturist, the labor of the handicraftsman, or the mental toil of the professional man. A man engaged in bodily exercise is undergoing a regular course of stimulation; his will is stimulating the nervous system; the acting muscles are sending the blood more quickly through the capillaries and large vessels, and the heart must move more actively to keep pace with them, and transmit the quickly returned blood, loaded with effete matter, to be purified in the lungs. To preserve the balance, the respirations are increased and the stomach is stimulated to crave for nourishing food, which may supply the waste, not for alcoholic stimulant, which can only interfere with this beautiful series of changes and metamorphoses, but for vegetable and animal substance, containing albuminous and fibrinous principles, fitted to keep in repair the ever-wearing structure of man's body, and unstimulating fluid to supply his fluid waste. Surely here is stimulation sufficient without the aid of alcohol. All things are now in a state of excitement sufficient for health; to add to this must be to add to what cannot be good, and what must always inevitably do harm.—The nervous system excited by the will, and still further by the rapidly circulating blood, if further excited by alcohol, becomes wild, and therefore unsteady; the stomach pours forth its juice too rapidly, the healthy irritability of the viscus is destroyed, and the natural appetite of health and exercise impaired. The spirit enters the blood, and there its chemical properties come into play, to interfere with and derange the process of nature's laboratory.—Thompson's Temperance and Total Abstinence.

The Law Power.

It is in vain to have laws if the people despise them, and they will despise them of course if they cannot be enforced. The object of the Carson League is to put the Law Power in action for the destruction of the rum trade. If the law is to sleep over this terrible traffic as it has done, there is no use in having laws. Nay, we are far better without them, for they teach the people to be law-breakers and despisers.

The time has come to meet this issue.—The law must move or temperance must die out of the land, and our children, hopes, and happiness with it. Our light is abundant, and there is nothing before us but liberty or death. We have relied upon the pulpit, upon our Goughs, our Mathews and the like, and the burning wave swells higher and higher behind them.—They make a temporary impression only to be effaced by the returning wave—more labor and money has been expended on that class of agents than is needed to drive the rum shops out of the land ten times. And yet they answered their purpose, their only purpose. Their eloquence conquers where they go, but there has been no Carson League to enlist the legal and political instrumentalities to hold the territory they conquer and make their conquests secure. The people are being sick of such victories. Their arguments are stale. The people demand something else. They must enlist the monied, political, and legal powers, to hold the State as fast as it is conquered. Had our orators done this, it would have been clear of dram-shops long since. This must be done or all our money and labor is given to the winds.

The object of the League then is to give vitality and action to the law. It is useless to elect law makers, and excisemen, and other officers, if the law is a dead letter and exists only to be trampled on, and spewed upon, by rumsellers and drunkards. It is worse than useless, if we continue to elect them, as we have done, to the end, that the laws may continue to be outraged.

We can move the law power. Twenty-five cents on the thousand dollars of our temperance men will bring the laws out of the dust, restore law loving men to office, and secure the safety of our families. We pay now ten times that, to keep the law in disgrace, and to ruin our children. Let us form a League then, let us take hold of this enterprise like men, determined under God to save the land from these terrible wrongs,—Carson League.

John Potter and Robert Hall.

The following eloquent extract is from a Lecture delivered by Rev. J. West, of Brooklyn, N. Y., before the Institute in that city. Mr. West is a clergyman of the Baptist Church, but holding open communion views is not statedly ministering at present to any church. His thoughts are noble, as presented in this extract; and his language gives them fitting apparel:

It is remarkable, their difference in their suggestive law or tendencies. Hall, if in Egypt, would be likely to ascend the summit of the hoary pyramid, and look from the cloudy pinnacle on the wild scene below—the Nile and the desert; Foster to search for the charnel-house of the dead—the fragments of the past—ruins and skulls; handle them, and muse over them with an absorbed curiosity, as before a noble picture of art. The gloom of night or the solemn wilderness met his economy; the sea in a state of tempest met his aptitudes, when he could imagine it a mighty minstrel playing its wild music to the spirit of the storm, or the wail and agony of Nature over the calamities of the fall. Hall would look on them as Adam from the bowers of Paradise beholding the majesty and power of God in creation; not from some jagged cliff, amidst the perils of precipices. Each had the elements of grandeur; but with the one, it was grandeur in a state of disturbance; with the other, grandeur at rest. Each mind was an orb of magnitude, but Foster's path kept no parallel.

But there were two momentous matters in which they were kindred spirits, which no mortal estimate can give the worth of: each had a massive character of Christian integrity. It was well consolidated and built. Their purity was a white robe without a rent or a soil; we mean only as far as outward disgrace was in question, not as men in the sight of God. They stood where many fell.

In death they were not divided. There was something truly sublime in the dying moments of Robert Hall. When his afflicted wife asked him if he was dying, startled by his appearance, with a calm and divine firmness he answered, "Yes, it is death—death—death!" while his noble frame waved to and fro in convulsive agony. While child after child was borne from the room of the dying father, unable to endure the sight, the look, that last look he gave them when utterance was almost gone—the thousand thoughts that gathered into that eye, and lighted it up with beams of unutterable love just before it was about to close forever—was a spectacle of sublimity not often witnessed on the brink of dissolution in the experience of men. In some of the last throes of his mortal conflict, his arm rested on his physician's shoulder for support; he turned to him with a benign look to ask if his weight was burdensome; mindful to the last of the comfort of others. But the chief charm of this solemn hour—the last hour of a great man on earth—was the position he took of a poor creature, a sinful worm, looking to the cross of Christ for merit and mercy, only through that divine Sacrifice willing to take the place and assuming it of the most defiled of men; if He would put a sapphire crown upon the head of other worthies, he was content to leave his own, the lowest, at the feet of the Crucified.

Read This.

Samuel Cowpwithwait who was recently arraigned for sentence in the Court, in Philadelphia, spoke as follows:

"I would like to make a few remarks before the sentence of the Court has been pronounced. When I left the prison for my first offence, I resolved to live a correct life, and set up a small business. I avow here my innocence of any intent to take away the life of either of the persons I killed. It was nothing but the folly of youth in the first instance, and intoxication in the second, that have brought me to this. My object in speaking to your honor is particularly to express that I had no intent of killing this officer. I was drunk. This crime was by thoughtlessness and intoxication. Fate seems to be against me. That is all I have to say."

Ye who are engaged in dealing out intoxicating drinks, read the above, and let the words "I was drunk" ring in your ears until it shall drive you from your unholy traffic. And ye, young men, be careful how you tamper with the wine-cup lest, in the future you have to attribute the commission of murder to 'intoxication.'

The Report of the Chief of Police of New York, for the last year, shows that the whole number of arrests during the year was 6,176, and 4,941 persons were accommodated with lodgings in the Station Houses; 389 lost children were restored to their parents; 18 persons were rescued from drowning, and 30 fires were extinguished.

Crime in New York.

On Saturday night, the 11th inst., two men were murdered, says the Times, with the knife, in the fourth ward; another had his head cut open with an axe, and a fourth was probably murdered in Mulberry street. A fifth got into a spree, went into a groggery, called for liquor, which was refused, and in a struggle which ensued, in an attempt to eject the fellow, the proprietor was stabbed with a dirk, and will probably die of his wounds. Another case occurred the same night, where the mate of a schooner invited a colored man, one of the hands, to go with him on a spree; they went to a dance-house, and the mate induced his colored companion to take a seat among the fiddlers; which gave umbrage, and a general melee followed; they went into the street, and renewed the fight out-doors, when the negro, against whom the hostility was specially directed, being hemmed in by his assailants, drew a knife, stuck it into the neck of one of them, severing the jugular vein, producing instant death.—Another man named Corkin, had his skull broken by Charles Clancey, in a drunken affray, and in consequence had been in an unconscious state for three or four days, when the case was brought to the notice of the Police. This was all—or, rather, these were all, the effect of liquor.

At Five Points, in a melee growing out of a dispute as to the ownership of a dog, a notorious character had his skull cracked, and is doubtless dead. These are all the cases we have time to notice. The same paper, a daily, has a number of others.

We should think that every man in the city of New York, who has any regard for his own personal safety, or for the protection of his property, would be looking around in earnest for the cause and the remedy for these horrid murders and assaults. That the cause will be found in the worm of the still, and the remedy in the Maine Law, who can doubt?—Rochester Journal.

Boys.

Boys,—when they are boys—are queer enough. How many ridiculous notions they have, and what singular desires, which in after life change and shape themselves into characteristics! Who remembers when he would have sold his birthright for a rocking horse, and his new suit of clothes for a monkey? Who forgets the sweet faced girl, older than himself, against whose golden hair he leaned and wept his griefs away? Who recollects when the thought of being a circus rider appeared greater than to be president; and how jealously he watched the little fellows that wore spangled jackets and turned somersets, and prayed to become like them? If memory preserve not these caprices, or something similar, the boy is lost in the man. Happy visions, they come but once and go quickly, leaving us ever to sigh for a return of what can never be again.

LESSONS FOR PAYSICIANS.—Nearly three centuries ago, the philosopher Palissy thus remarked on the errors of medical men:—"Do you not think that it is a great blunder on the part of doctors to keep an unhappy patient shut up in a room, the windows close, the bed close, and forbid any one to give him air? When already the poor patient cannot get his breath, by reason of his malady, except with a great deal of trouble, you cause him to be furthermore shut up and smothered. See how you blunder; first, you rob him of his breath, and render him more melancholy than he would be made by his disease, through the foul odors which cannot escape, which pierce his brain, and aggravate his illness; and if you grant to me that air aids the expulsive virtue, and that no animals having lungs can live without air, then man, however whole and cheerful he may be, cannot live without air, still less can he do so, when he is sick; wherefore I say that you blunder in forbidding air to patients, when it is good, and not too cold, or moist or windy."

☞ The reported refusal of the Seminole Indians to emigrate according to the treaty, is confirmed by the Florida papers. They had deserted their villages, and were secreted in the swamps. The everglades are again to become the theatre of war.

☞ The Grand Duke of Tuscany announces the birth of his son, the Archduke Giovanni Nepomuceno Maria Annunziata Giuseppe Giovanbattista Ferdinando Baldassare Luigi Gonzaga Pietro Alessadro Zanobi Antonino.

☞ It is said that a petition to the legislature is in circulation in Syracuse to substitute for imprisonment now prescribed for seduction, a provision making the seduction itself a valid marriage, where the parties are unmarried.

☞ A man named William Haywood, living seven miles from Lexington, N. C., got drunk recently, went home and laid down near the fire. One of his hands dropped into the fire, and he not having sufficient power to remove it, it was burnt off nearly to the elbow.

Choice Gems.

Nobody can stand in owe of himself too much.

No man is wise or safe but he that is honest.

No people can be great who have ceased to be virtuous.

None knows the weight of another's burthen.

Nothing is easier than to deceive oneself.

Nothing will ever be attempted, if all possible objections must be first overcome.

Obedience is better than many oblations.

Of all virtuous works the hardest is to be humble.

One bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

One eye of the master sees more than ten of the man.

One good head is better than a great many hands.

One often repents of saying too much, but seldom of saying too little.

Only good and wise men can be friends; others are but companions.

Our own opinion is never wrong.

Omission of good is a commission of evil.

Our remembering an injury often does us more hurt than receiving it.

Our virtues would be proud if our vices whipped them not.

Pardon all where there's either sign of repentance or hope of amendment.

Plain dealing is a jewel, but they that wear it are out of fashion.

Point not at others' sports with a foul finger.

Ponder the path of thy feet; look well to thy goings.

Prepare for sickness in health, and for old age in youth.

Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.

Pride increaseth our enemies, but putteth our friends to flight.

Pride joined with many virtues chokes them all.

Princes may bestow preferments, but they cannot make men truly honorable.

Prodigality is ever attended by injustice and folly.

Promise little, and do much.

Prosperity is no just scale; adversity is the only balance to weigh friends.

HALL OF WASHINGTON DIV., No. 10, February 4, 1853.

WHEREAS, It hath pleased the Creator and Dispenser of mankind, to take from our midst our excellent Brother, NATHAN DAVIS; Therefore,

Resolved, That, in the death of our worthy Brother, this Division has lost an efficient member, and the cause of Temperance an uncompromising friend.

Resolved, That we cheerfully submit to this dispensation of Providence, believing that our loss is his gain.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the family and friends of the deceased in this their irreparable loss.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Division be tendered to Peoria Division, No. 15, (Ill.,) for their kind attention to the deceased during his last illness.

Resolved, That this preamble and these resolutions be published in the Temperance Chart.

J. C. BLAIN,
PETER WINCHEL, } Com'ttee.
THOS. CRAWFORD,

Let a person find out his own peculiar weakness, and be ever suspicious of himself on that side. Let a passionate man, for example, resolve always to show less resentment than reason might justify; then there is no danger of his erring on that side. Let a talkative man resolve always to say less than the most talkative person in the company he is in. If one has reason to suspect himself of loving money too much, let him give always at least somewhat more than has been given by a noted miser.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ———, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the ——— of ———, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the ——— Division, No —, Sons of Temperance, of the ——— of ———, to be located in ———, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the ——— of ———, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the ——— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the ——— of ———, to be located in ———, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ———, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the ——— Section, No. ———, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ———, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ———, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the ——— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ———, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

CIRCULAR---PLEASE TO READ THIS.

AGENTS WANTED.

New Books of Permanent Value.

Office of Sears' Pictorial Works,
Removed to 181 William St. New York, 1853.

Dear Sir:—If entirely convenient and agreeable to you, we would be much pleased to secure your valuable influence on behalf of our PICTORIAL FAMILY WORKS. We publish a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a high moral and unexceptional character, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprize and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well-disposed person can fail selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the populaton

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell "SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Any person wishing to embark in the enterprize, will risk little by sending to the Publishers $25 for which he will receive sample copies of the various works (at wholesa e prices), carefully boxed, insured, and directed, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for his trouble. With these, he will soon be able to ascertain the most saleable, and order accordingly.

LIST OF OUR PICTORIAL WORKS.

		Retail Price.
The Pictorial Family Bible (Large Quarto.) - - - -	1450 pages.	$6 00
Sears' New and complete History of the Bible, - - - -	700 "	3 00
Sears' New Pictorial History of China and India, - -	600 "	2 50
Thrilling Incidents of the Wars of the United States, - - -	700 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Description of the United States, - - -	608 "	2 50
Sears' Treasury of Knowledge and Cyclopedia of Science and Art,	512 "	2 50
Sears' Scenes and Sketches of Continental Europe, - - -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Description of Great Britain and Ireland, -	550 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Family Annual (212 Engravings) - - -	368 "	2 00
The History of Palestine, - -	230 "	1 00
View of New York.—This Engraving is on a sheet, 47 by 19 inches and ought to sell rapidly, -		50
Sears' Information for the People,	600 "	2 50
Sears' New Pictorial Family Instructor, - - - - -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial History of the American Revolution, - -	450 "	2 50
Sears' Pictorial Sunday-Book, -	600 "	2 50
Sears' Bible Biography, - -	500 "	2 50
Sears' Wonders of the World.—Second Series, - - - -	540 "	2 50
Remarkable Adventures of Celebrated Persons, - - -	410 "	1 25

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly, by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid. ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, jan 5 1t 181 William Street, New York.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, General Agent for the State of Indiana.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT

MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

FOR THE CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,

jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor

John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

Wm. Burnet, President.

S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE, Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.

aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,

june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macaulay, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS, N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.

WILLIAM G. STEEL,

Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.

nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.

M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig,
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851.

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,

JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,

Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.

Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter.
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili.
Rt. Rev. Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archbishop Fursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY

BROWN'S COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1853. NO. 35.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid

OFFICE.—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75
☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.
Cuts double the above rates.
☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.
☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Massachusetts Cataract.

BY MRS. J. H. HANAFORD.

AIR,—'Tis the last Rose of Summer.

'Tis the bright star of Freedom,
Now rising on high,
With hearts of rejoicing,
Her beams we espy.
No star beams so brightly
The blue heaven's o'er,
As Freedom's star, shining
On Liberty's shore.

We rejoice to behold thee,
Bright herald of day!
For we know that the darkness,
Is passing away.
O'er all our fair country,
May Freedom's star beam,
By hill, and by stream,
O'er mountain, and valley.

And soon may all shackles
Be sundered for aye,
And the slave enjoy freedom
Through life's earthly way;
Oh soon may true justice
By them be received,
For who can be happy
Of Freedom bereaved!

Nantucket, 1853.

Drink Water Only.

Drink water only! When the race,
With eager numbers fills the place,
The flags in streams excitant fly,
There comes a steed with crystal eye,
Like waves that gleam in forest pool,—
And every nerve is fed as cool,
Till jockeys mount and crowds retire,
And then they strain and blaze with fire.

Drink water only! When the shade
With day mature is softer made,
And kisses breathed upon the breeze
By bird notes answered in the trees—
Oh! softer, richer far they pour
Than twitter'd all the morn before,—
Yet none for wine hath ever sung,
But water thrills them, old and young.

Drink WATER only! Were it RUM,
Earth for mortals were not home,
For mothers, with a fondness known
To their calm, sober thought alone.
To children, stooping at the spring,
For childhood's eye and heart the thing;
But desert all, by legions cramm'd,
The den of devils and the damn'd.

Drink water only! and the will
To praise the Giver rises still:
He from the rocks young cavern leads
The sparkling crystal of the meads,
He at the river's shallow shore
The herd supplies that drank before,
He from his well divine will give
The water of which souls shall live.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Kitty's Resolve.

BY FANNY FERN.

It would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to tell why Kitty Gray looks so serious as she sits by her latticed window this bright summer morning. Is she not the undisputed belle of ———? Adored by the young men, envied by the girls, who try, in vain, to find out the spell by which she has monopolized all hearts? Has she at last, found one insensible mortal cold enough to resist all love's artillery? That would be a novelty for Kitty!) Has she detected a gray hair stealing in among her tresses, or an incipient crowfoot at the corner of her eye? Banish the thought at sweet eighteen!

Mirror never reflected back lovlier tresses, brighter eyes, a fairer brow, or more symmetrical form. The hand her cheek rests on is faultless, and her foot is as perfect as a model. Ah, Miss Kitty, you were cut out for a coquette, but spoilt in the making! Nature gave you a heart. You are neither making a female Alexander of yourself by sighing for fresh hearts to conquer, or considering profoundly, the fashion of your next ball dress. You have lived eighteen years in this blessed world, and your life has been all sunshine. Why not!

Beauty and wealth have made you omnipotent! but you are weary of your crown. My little queen has on her "thinking-cap;" and it becomes that sweet brow passing well. She wonders, "is this all of life?" Has a pretty woman nothing to do but to smile and look captivating, and admire herself? She might as well be a marble Venus in her dressing room! And then she casts her mental eye over the circle of her acquaintance. For aught she sees, they are quite satisfied with the same butterfly existence. Women frivilous; men on the coxcomb order, all but Harvey Fap, he is talented and intellectual; owns a soul; and is not dependent on a moustache or French boots, for happiness; he is refined in all his tastes, and a gentleman in the highest sense of the word. Can sing the soul out of you, and make time faster than any man you ever saw. (Alas! there must always be a "but!") Harvey, had one bad foible—and it was that that clouded Kitty's brow and saddened her heard. True, it had not, as yet, become a fixed habit, but where was the security for the future?

And so Kitty sat leaning her cheek upon her hand, and wondering if a woman's power—if her nice tact and delicacy was not bestowed upon her for something better than to further her own selfish purposes? Harvey was sensitive, proud and high-spirited—it must be a very gentle hand that would turn him back from that precipice. Could she not save him? She resolved to try, she would exert her power (for once) for some noble purpose.

———

It was a gay scene—that ball-room!—The fairy forms that floated down the dance, with flowing tresses and sparkling eyes, and snowy necks, might have bewildered the sober head of age. Soft entrancing music, brilliant lights, and the overpowering perfume of myriad sweet flowers, all lent their aid to complete the spell. Kitty shone, as usual, the brightest star of the evening. One cannot gaze long at a "star," without being dazzled; so how can I describe it? I can only say Kitty was irresistable. One minute you'd think it was her eyes; then, the little dimpled hand that rested on your arm; then her golden ringlets, or the tiny feet that supported that swaying graceful figure.—As to her eyes, whether black, or blue, or hazle, you could not tell. You only hnew it was very dangerous looking at them long at a time, unless you had made up your mind to surrender.

Well, Kitty had received her usual share of homage, with her usual sweet nonchalance—and now accepted the arm of a gentleman to the supper-table, where wit flew like champaigne corks, and hearts were lost and won with the celerity worthy of this progressive age! Harvey was as handsome as he well could be, and be mortal; in high good humor, and as felicitous as only he knew how to be, in saying a thousand brilliant nothings.

Kitty followed him with her eyes, and saw him, before long, retire to a side table, and, turning out a glass of wine, hold it to his lips. In an instant she was by his side!

"It is mine," said she, playfully, extending her little hand to grasp it; but there was a deep glow upon her cheek, and an earnest imploring look in her eye, that said more than her words and deepened the flush on Harvey's temples.

"As you will fair lady," said he with a slight shade of embarrassment, "but wherefore?"

"Oh, only a woman's whim," said Kitty. "You are no true knight if you cannot serve a lady without a reason."

"I'd serve you forever," said Harvey, as he looked upon her changing countenance.

"Then drink no more wine to night, unless I fill it for you," said she, smiling as she joined the dancers.

"Only a woman's whim!" Harvey didn't believe it. "How very lovely she looked! What could she mean. Could it be she thought him in danger? Had he gone so far, almost imperceptible to himself? Could Kitty think that of him?—Pshaw! it couldn't be," and he drew himself proudly up. "It must be some girlish nonsense—a wager, or a bet of some kind—but that imploring timid look! Oh! there was something in it after all. He couldn't be so tortured—he would know before he slept that night."

There's an end to all things and balls are no exception. Happy caviliers were performing the agreeable duty of settling refractory shawls upon round, white shoulders. "Rigoletres," were to be tied under pretty chins, and lace kerchiefs around swan like throats.

These interminable matters being concluded, Kitty accepted Harvey as her escort home. They talked about a thousand little nothings, about which neither cared, when Harvey cut it all short, very suddenly, with—

"Miss Gray, will you tell me frankly why you 'tabooed' that glass of wine?"

All Kitty's practical self possession forsook her. She hesitated a moment—she feared to wound his feelings. No! she would not falter; so she said in a clear, low voice, while her long lashes swept her cheek—

"Because I knew that to you it was a poisoned draught, and I were no true friend did I fail to warn you. You will not be vexed with me?" said she with winning sweetness, as she extended her hand.

Harvey's answer is not recorded; but it is sufficient to say that the secret of his high legal eminence is known only to the belle of ———.

Alas! that woman gifted with angel's powers, sent on an angel's mission, should be content with the butterfly life of a pleasure seeking fashionist!

———

From the Spirit of the Age.

Testimony of Great Men.

It is gratifying to know that the public mind is awake to the propriety of reforming the practice of drinking "ardent spirits" as a beverage. And certainly the friends of humanity, and lovers of good order and soberness ought to take advantage of the auspicious turn which the public sentiment is about taking, and do all within human power to further the cause of Total Abstinence, which has been so successfully set in motion.

We have to regret that there is a class of our countrymen whose great influence, comparatively speaking, is but feebly felt in behalf of this mighty work of reformation. I mean the distinguished Statesmen of the nation. But let it not be supposed that these patriotic souls, because they have been called to other fields of labor, are not with us heart and hand. They have seen with regret the calamity which has befallen the country they so much love; and have spoken against the shameful vice, in language which should never die.

Hear what the patriotic Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, said in old age, after the use of ardent spirits for the space of twelve months, as suggested by his friends for his health. "Gentlemen, the experience of many years has taught me that I can do without brandy, and the trial of its use for a single year has convinced me that if I continue it, I can by no means foresee what it will do with me."

Said Thomas Jefferson, "The habit of using ardent spirits by men in public office has occasioned more injury to the public service and more trouble to me, than any other circumstance which has occurred in the international concerns of the country, during my administration; and were I to commence my administration again with the knowledge, which from experience, I have acquired, the first question which I would ask, with regard to every candidate for public office, should be, 'Is he addicted to the use of ardent spirits?'

The Hon. Felix Grundy, United States Senator from Tennessee, gives it as his opinion that four-fifths of the crimes committed in the United States, can be traced to intemperance.

Says the Hon. Edward Everett, "I believe the poverty, out of the alms house, produced by intemperance, is greater, in the amount of suffering which it occasions, than the poverty in the alms-house."

Said the Hon. Daniel Webster, "Nothing less, certainly, can be said of it than that it is a great vice; and, in an extraordinary degree the parent and concomitant of other great vices. Doubtless more than other vices, this unfits the mind for the growth or cultivation of any plant of virtue. It strikes a blow, a deadly blow, at once, on all its capacities, and all its sensibilities. It renders it alike incapable of pious feelings, of social regard, and of domestic affection. One of its earliest visible consequences is a lessening of self-respect, a consciousness of personal degradation, an humbling conviction, felt by its victim, that he has sunk, or is sinking, from his proper rank as an intellectual, and moral being."

Says the Hon. Lewis Cass, "I have never tasted any ardent spirits, nor have I, at any time during life been in the habit of drinking wine. It is of course, almost useless to add that I know nothing of the effects of stimulating liquors upon the constitution, except by them in others. I have perhaps, during a portion of my life, been as much exposed as most men.—Having lived, since boyhood, in a new country; having served in the army during war, and having been led by official duties, to traverse almost all the western region north of the Ohio, and east of the Mississippi."

The Hon. William Wirt, late Attorney General of the United States, said: "It is no exaggeration to say, as it has often been said, that this single cause, (intemperance,) has produced more vice, crime, poverty, and wretchedness, in every form, domestic and social, than all the other ills that scourge us, combined."

Chief Justice Taney, in an important decision, says: "Every State may regulate its own internal traffic, according to its own judgment, and upon its own views of the interest and well-being of its citizens. If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce vice and debauchery, I see nothing in the constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating and restraining the traffic; or from prohibiting it altogether, if it thinks proper." Many others might be mentioned, who have given their testimony against the use of spirits, and publicly recommended total abstinence. Indeed we shall find by looking over the biography of the great men of every age, that those who possessed the clearest, and most powerful minds, were those who did not use spirits. Sir Isaac Newton, John Locke, Dr. Franklin, John Wesley, and Lord Bacon furnish striking illustrations of this truth.

G. W. B.

———

FEMALE INFLUENCE FOR TEMPERANCE.—We need more of female influence. What can surpass it? What tyranny of evil can stand before it? What law of fashion does not yield to its power? And why should it not be ours? Who suffers like woman? Who drinks to the dregs the cup of bitterness like the drunkard's wife? And who is often the drunkard's wife, but the delicately reared daughter of her who controlled the fashion, and would have wine in her parties. There is not a lady who sits before young men the intoxicating cup, concerning whom we may not say, Father forgive her; she knows not what she does. When the destinies of men are all unfolded in the final day, how many of the lost will reflect with anguish on female influence! We need it all for good, and none for evil. We need it in the nursery, where mothers can imbue the minds of children with temperance principles. We need it in childhood and youth, when a mother's example and a mother's warnings and kind motions are like a golden chain. We need it in society, in the social circle, and even in the business of life, wherever woman reigns supreme. Thanks be to God, that we have it so extensively throughout the land.—And now, if all respectable families would shut intoxicating drinks from their social gatherings, comparatively few of our young men would go to a drunkard's grave.

———

HAPPINESS.—The celebrated Dr. Mason Good in his lecture on "Human Happiness," remarks—

"No man can be happy without exercising the virtues of cheerful industry or activity. No man can lay claim to happiness that shall last through the fair sun of life without chastity, without temperance, without sobriety, without economy, without self-command, and consequently without fortitude, and let me add without a liberal and forgiving spirit."

Poor Inebriate!

We would say a word to you in kindness, for we are your friend, and would save you from the galling bondage in which you are enslaved. We know it is the work of the liquor-seller to persuade you he is your best friend, and the Temperance men your personal enemies. Let us try the two by that standard erected by immaculate wisdom and truth—"By their fruits ye shall know them."

Let us first see what are the "fruits" which the liquor-seller's friendship bestows upon yourself and family? First, it gives you redness of eyes, distorted visage, tattered garments, a disordered intellect, ruined constitution, and a debased character. On your family it entails misery, want and anguish unspeakable, overburdening her heart with grief unutterable, and settling like a pall of starless night upon her spirit and hopes for the future. To your children it ensures ignorance, degradation, ignominy and crime. Instead of a life of usefulness, honor and independence, the certainty of a career of dissoluteness, shame and pauperism lies before them, with the fair prospect of a termination in the prison, the penitentiary or at the gallows. For your hard-earned dimes, these are the "fruits" which the liquor-seller gives.

Let us look at the other side of the picture:

The Temperance man is your friend from no interested motive. He seeks not to take from your scanty living, but to place you in the high road to respectability, usefulness, and independence. To your wife, he would impart a cheerful smile to greet you in your incomings, and to linger like a ray of happy sun shine in your out-goings. He would fill her heart with pleasure and her dairy and larder with plenty. To your children he would give principle, education, and an unstained reputation, enabling them to take rank in society for honor, wealth and influence. In a word, he would "do you good, and not evil, all the days of your life," and lead you to that 'fountain for sin and uncleanness,' where you may be washed from guilt and pollution and prepared for a residence in the skies.

What think you, poor misguided, unfortunate fellow mortal, of the two portraits we have drawn? Ponder well, we beseech you upon them, and may God direct you to wise and happy conclusions.

[Spirit of the Age.

Beautiful Extract.

There is an even-tide in human life, a season when the eye becomes dim and the strength decays, when the winter of age begins to shed upon the human head its prophetic snows. It is the season of life to which the autumn is most analogous, and which it becomes; and much it would profit you, my elder brethren, to mark the instruction which the season brings.—The spring and summer of your days are gone, and with them not only joys they knew, but many of the friends who gave them. You have entered upon the autumn of your being, and whatever may have been the profusion of your spring, or the warm temperature of your summer, there is a season of stillness or solitude which the beneficence of heaven affords you, in which you may meditate upon the past and future, and prepare yourself for the mighty change which you may soon undergo. It is now that you may understand the magnificent language of heaven—it mingles its voice with that of revelation—it summons you to those hours when the leaves fall and the winter is gathering, to that evening study which the mercy of heaven has provided in the book of salvation. And while the shadowy valley opens, which leads to the abode of death, it speaks of that love which can comfort and save, and which conducts to those green pastures and those still waters where there is an eternal spring for the children of God.

☞ Professor Huss, one of the first physicians in Sweden, has recently published a book in which he proves that the Swedes are rapidly deterioating, both mentally and physically, and this state of things he attributes principally to the enormous amount of brandy used by them. Comfortable information for brandy-drinkers.

———

Uncle Tom's Cabin has already been translated into French, Italian and Spanish, and is advertised in Danish, Polish and Prussian.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 23, 1853.

Neff's Jewelry Store.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of E. W. Neff, watchmaker and jeweller, in our advertising columns. We advise all who want to purchase good and fine watches, or other articles of jewelry, to call on him; and we are certain they will desire to look no farther. Watches are cleaned and regulated, and engraving done at his store in a very superior style. His engraver, Mr. Evans, has few equals in the west—none in our city. Again we say, call on Neff.

Legislative.

The following is the vote of the House of Representatives ordering the Temperance Bill now pending before that body to be engrossed. It is the same in all its general features as the bill introduced into the House last session by Mr. Owen.—Here is the vote: AYES—Ballard, Bridges, Brothwell, Brown, Clark, Dodd, Donaldson, Druley, Dyer, Ferris, Ferguson, Freeland, Goodman, Green, Hammond, Harris, Hartley, Hendricks, Henry, Henton. Hooper, Hunt, Jennings, Lines, Martin, Maxfield, McCormick, McDonald, of Sullivan, McKee, Milroy, Moss, Orr, Parker, Pratt, Read, Rockafelter, Ryon, Scott, Seawright, Shelby, Shoemaker, Shuman, Simpson, Spencer, Thomas, Torbet, Underwood, Walker of Laporte, Walker of Rush, Wilson, Work, Yount—53.

NAYS—Able, Brecount, BUELL, Bundy, Burnett, Catlin, Chapin, Cooper, Donald, Dunlavy, Durham, Emery, Farnsley, Fleming, Gentry, Gootee, Graham, Hamrick, Handy, Hicks, Howell, Johnson, Jones* of Boone, Jones* of Jennings, and Jones* of Ripley, Laird, Laselle, Lemon, Lewis, Low, Manville, McClure, McDonald of Lake, McKinney, Peckenpaugh, PRICE, Richardson, Service, Stackhouse, Stevens, Stockwell, Struble, Sutton, Tabor,† Tanner—44.

* It will be noticed that the Jones family are all opposed to the Bill.

† Mr. Tabor is a Preacher, and a Baptist. He not only voted against the bill, but spoke more lustily in favor of the cratur than any of his compeers, not excepting Messrs. Able and Graham, who contended against the bill fairly and foully as though their drink, if not their meet, depended on the result of the vote. Fine specimens truly they are of whisky legislators.

Hon. William J. Brown.

Mr. Brown, the whisky organ of this city, is out in another article against us, which in two respects, at least, is worthy of attention. We allude to its falsehood, and doggerel embellishments. Otherwise, the article is altogether more decent, than, considering his character we had any right to expect. Knowing his history we looked for something that would not have derogated from his justly acquired reputation. We expected that he who had become famous in the lists of infamy, would not now have forfeited his title to that celebrity, by professing to be the friend of temperance and decency.—We expected that he, who in the presence of the representatives of the Union could negative a charge against his honesty by a very significant shake of the head, would have had the courage still to maintain a position in regard to the temperance reform, for which, for the last two years he has contended. It was but natural to suppose that the same falsehood, which betrayed his southern friends into his support on the floor of Congress, would have been followed by the same impudent audacity that then enabled him to stand up against the withering execrations of the men whom he had deceived. But we were mistaken. Recent experience has improved his caution, although it has left his antipathies to truth as strong as ever. He has learned that there are quarters in which his political duplicity is still remembered. His trip to Louisville, and reception there during the last year, have taught him that the consequences of one traitorous act may leave a stain "that all the waters of great Neptune's ocean can never wash out." With this lesson fresh in memory, he becomes more cautious, if not more honest. Having said this much in reference to his article in general, we shall now notice it in detail.

1st. The editor renews his charge, that we are attempting "to mislead and deceive honest democrats on the temperance issue, for the pnrpose of benefitting whiggery." Now, who is so ignorant as not to know that to repeat a falsehood, does not prove it to be true? Not Mr. Brown, to be sure. Something else is necessary, and he knows it; and seeks to find that something in what we say in reference to the establishment of a democratic paper in this city, that shall be true not only to democracy, but at the same time to temperance and virtue. The connection between his premises and conclusion here proves one of two things—either that Mr. Brown is incapable of reasoning rightly; or of telling the truth. Those who know him best will best be able to determine to which source we are to attribute his fallacies. General Bayley, of Virginia, once his friend on the floor of Congress, may determine that matter.

2d. He next speaks of our having boasted that we "would use up" the editor of the Sentinel, "as we did the democratic Senator from Marion." It is not our intention to raise a war with every idle and empty fabrication of the Sentinel; but so far as our making any such boast, is concerned, we deny it in toto. We have said, and still say, however, that we will not succumb to his falsehood. So long as he gives currency to all that the enemies of temperanee may say against it, we will speak of him as its enemy, and treat him as such. We will tear the mask from the face of its pretended friend, and present the horried features of this veiled prophet of iniquity, in all their native and acquired deformity. The term "use up" seems to haunt Mr. Brown's imagination, since he performed his splendid gyrations for the amusement of all the world, "and the rest of mankind," at the city of Washington, on the 12th day of December, 1849. Since then he has had a knowledge of its meaning. But we have no desire to pass through the details of that sickening and disgraceful drama,—again. He knows its effects—and must remember with pain HOW THE SPEAKERSHIP, HIS HONOR, AND A PROSPECTIVE CONNEXION WITH THE UNION OFFICE, WERE ALL SWEPT FROM UNDER HIM, BY ONE UNFORTUNATE SHAKE OF THE HEAD.—In mercy to you, Mr. Brown, we drop this subject; for it is enough to nauseate the stomach of every decent man in the Nation.

3d. It is quite too late now for the editor to claim to be the friend of Temperance, and temperance men. His history is too well known for him to receive any credit for such hypocritical pretences. It is still fresh in the memories of men here, how he once ran against the late Austin W. Morris, Esq., as the avowed liquor candidate for a seat in the Legislature. This too was eleven years ago, and long before the friends of temperance had proposed to enact a prohibitory law on the subject of the liquor traffic. Moral suasion was then as far as they went; but even then he was opposed to temperance, and was the avowed whisky candidate—riding in office, as it were, astride a whisky barrel.

It is not forgotten that his press groaned under his miserable misrepresentations of the Maine Law, and the advocates of prohibitory legislation, less than a year ago, when a Senator was to be elected.—Nor has his course since then been overlooked by the public. It may be that he has said little since then in his editorials against temperance; but while he has said nothing for it, his columns have been loaded with the miserable twaddle of all the friends of liquor and the liquor-traffic put into circulation for the purpose of defeating the Temperance Reform. It was for this that we first catechised him, and had he spoken out like a man, our curiosity would have been satisfied. But he seems determined, if possible, to maintain a double position, for he now says he is the friend of temperance. Compare this saying with his charge against those democrats who voted for Dr. Grimes' resolutions. They have "sold themselves" he says, "soul and body to the whigs."—Now, we are "wishing to deceive the democrats." The first ideas that suggest themselves to his mind, are those of "self-sale," "corruption," and "deceit." Truly has he said, "from the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh." Who tries to deceive democrats, now? Can the temperance men of the State credit a man who one week charges them with selling themselves to the whigs; and the next abuses us for defending them against his infamous calumny? Yet that is the Sentinel's position; and we ask the readers of the Sentinel to look back over it, and see if we are not correct in so presenting it? He slides from one falsehood to another with marvellous facility.

4. But we are charged with never attacking a whig. Exactly the reverse of this is the truth, and the editor either knew it to be so, or had no right to make the assertion that it was not. Our first editorial collision was with a whig—an esteemed friend—whose notions concerning temperance we noticed with far more asperity than we ever did the Sentinel's, until it assailed us with gross personalities. Indeed, it has been our constant aim even to seek an occasion to chastise the hostility of whigs to our cause, before applying the scourge to those of different politics; and we have pursued this course for the reason that we desire nothing but the advancement of correct temperance principles, and would not injure our efforts by any seeming partiality between parties, where our conduct otherwise might have been misconstrued. Besides, so far as our knowledge goes, there are more democrats in our State now engaged in urging forward the good and holy cause of temperance than whigs. Between them and their co-laborers we have never known or felt any difference. They are all our brethren, and as such we esteem, and have endeavored to defend them against Mr. Brown, who charges them with basely "selling themselves soul and body to the whig party!" It is with them to say, whether we were right in doing so. Our conscience approves our effort. We feel safe while we are able to say in truth, that the Sentinel is the only exchange in the State, which we receive, that in its selected or editorial articles opposes the efforts of the friends of tempernace to procure a prohibitory liquor law. This was our reason for attacking it, and not others.

5. It is urged, however, that we desire another democratic paper here, to advocate the Maine law. We should surely be guilty of a singular inconsistency to require of another a service which we have never performed ourself. We only ask that the party organs of our State remain neutral on the subject of Temperance.—That is all they have to do to be let alone by us. No man has ever read a line in our editorial columns advocating the Maine law. We have, on the contrary, disavowed any such purpose; and contended, according to the petition prepared by the Grand Division of the State, for a prohibitory law. We have thought best to leave the form of the law entirely to the Legislature of Indiana, believing that they can frame one, should they desire to do so, as well calculated to suppress the evils of intemperance as the excellent law of our "down-east" neighbors.

But all our endeavors to reach the editor through his sensibilities or his conscience we fear will be vain; for these, with him, we have too much reason to believe, have long ceased to operate as detergents from evil. Old scars have left no place for new wounds in either; and thus form a shield behind which all that is vital of him reposes in comparative security. But while they form his defence, like the brand of Cain, they also point him out as a thing to be shunned, and thus preserve community from pollution by the contact. Like a poisonous serpent whose fangs have been extracted, he may still spit his venom to frighten and annoy those whom he is powerless seriously to harm; or, in the language of another, like "the insect brought into life by corruption, and nestled in filth, which, though its flight be lowly, and its sting puny, can swarm and buzz, and irritate the skin and offend the nostril, and altogether give nearly as much annoyance as the wasp whose nobler nature it aspires to emulate."

We have now done with Mr. Brown personally. We never sought such a controversy as all our readers can testify. But when forced into it, no course was left us but that which we have pursued. For what we have said or even remotely intimated, we are personally responsible in any way that may suit him or his friends. The truth is not half told; but we have said enough to let the temperance men of the State know the character of their opponent. This is all we shall say of a personal character; for, however popular it might be here, where he is known to castigate his enormities, it can afford little satisfaction to those who are not familiar with his history. His position is now defined; and he can do the cause of Temperance no further harm.

NEW YORK.—Our exchanges from this State are filled with the doings of the recent State Temperance Convention. A Convention of females was met together at the same time. These latter marched one day, into the legislative halls and presented a mammoth petition. The Washingtonian of Albany holds this language:

"The Grand Temperance Demonstration of the present week, fully answers the expectations of the friends of temperance in the numbers of friends present, in the enthusiasm manifested, and in the able and soul-stirring addresses that were delivered. The State Society met at the State Street Baptist Church on Tuesday, as advertised. In the evening a public meeting was held in the same church, which was crowded to overflowing. Rev. Mr. Cuyler, of New Jersey, and T. W. Brown, Esq., of Auburn, delivered addresses which commanded the most respectful attention, and frequently called down outbursts of applause.

"On Wednesday the procession was formed, consisting of the State Society, Sons of Temperance and Rechabites, headed with bands of music and appropriate banners, and marched through the principal streets to the capitol, where the Hon. Neal Dow, and Rev. Mr. Cuyler delivered two most excellent and interesting addresses, while another portion of the procession were listening to Dr. Jewett and T. W. Brown, in the Baptist Church, near by."

DREADFUL WARNING.—About two weeks ago, we were introduced, in this city, to a young gentleman named Bartlet, engaged in the extensive importing and jobbing house of Clapp, Kent & Bicklep, Broadway, New York. He was a young man of pleasing address, and universally admired by those with whom he became acquainted; but alas, those qualities—goodness of heart—unsuspecting disposition—kindness—amiability—and attachment to his fellows, as is too often the result, led to dissipation—unusual with him at home, with his mind occupied in his business, and for three or four days prior to his departure for his home, with companions like himself, he gave himself up to the mind destroying cup. On last Tuesday, we bade him good bye, saying he must get straight before arriving home, as it would almost break his father's heart to know how he had been acting. Yesterday we heard of him; he had reached Elmyra, still continuing to drink deep, when he was attacked with mania potu, and during its paroxysms, cut his throat, killing himself instantly.—What a lesson to all young men, particularly those with whom he was specially associated, during his spree. May they take warning, for such habits must inevitably lead to disgrace and ruin—the brightest hopes must be blasted; in many cases, as in this, no doubt, dragging down in your fall, the fond anticipations of those most dear and near to you.—Cin. Nonp.

"If a person fawns on you when up, he will most assuredly trample on you when down."

Some fellow wrote the above, who had been a close observer of human nature.—We have observed, ourself, that the genus Man is very much like the genus Cow and the genus Hog; if one gets started down hill, every one gives him a push, and if one gets under the gate, all give him a pinch!—Ex.

Remedy for Intemperance.

Public journals, not friendly to the proposed law of prohibition, are discussing the propriety of various measures to put a stop to intemperance. Almost every week we find some new expedient suggested, or an old one commended. An article has been going the rounds of the papers, headed, 'remedy for intemperance,' which insists that a most efficacious means would be the erection of houses of industry, where the intemperate might be confined, and placed under a course of mental, moral, and physical treatment, which would cure them of the habit. We do not find fault with the proposition as a humane and charitable measure. It is right and just that society, after seducing and ruining men, should take care of them, and furnish all the means necessary to render them comfortable. But it is silly beyond expression to insist upon this as a remedy for intemperance. If drunkards could be thus occasionally reformed, why should every neighborhood have an expensive establishment to be sustained generation after generation, when the right and the power exist to arrest the cause, and thereby render such asylums unecessary?—Of course, suffering humanity calls for curative remedies, and they should be applied, but not with the view of dispensing with the preventive remedy.—Organ of Reform.

MONSTROUS OUTRAGE.—We understand from a reliable source that a most brutal murder was committed in Clay county, in this State, a few days ago, by four men whose names we cannot recall. A youth about seventeen years old, without the least offence, was seized by four men who had been drinking, and first ducked until nearly lifeless, and then his hair singed off close to his head, and last shot through the head. All this was done by way of mere amusement for the demons! They claim that they did not shoot him intentionally, but that they took the boy into a room after ducking him and burning off his hair, merely to alarm him by firing pistols over him, and that one of the pistols bursting, killed him. But it so happened that one of them, after it was supposed they had intentionally bursted the pistol, the boy seeming to be dead a half hour before, was seen endeavoring to drive one of the screws from the pistol stock into what appeared to be a bullet hole into his head. A man cannot think of such men and believe there is no hell.

[Mt. Sterling (Ky.) Whig.

CURIOUS.—An inquest was held in Rochester, N. Y., over the body of a man named McLaughlin, found in an unfinished building. The verdict of the jury was, "died from the effects of intemperance, exposure and want of food." McLaughlin was taken home by some of his friends, placed in a rough board coffin, and as they were placing a cloth wet in whisky, over has face to keep him from spotting, as they stated, he waked up and opened his eyes! crawled out of his narrow resting place, and his first inquiry was for whisky. This unceremonious mode of hurrying a man out of existence is supposed to have some connection with the fees which are charged for an inquest.

MATRIMONY.—Marriage is the mother of the world, and preserves kingdoms and fills cities, and churches, and Heaven itself. An unmarried man, like a fly in the heart of an apple, dwells in perpetual sweetnes, but dwells alone, and is confined and dies in singularity. But marriage, like the useful bee, builds a house and labors and unites into societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the world with delicacies, and exercises many virtues, and promotes the interests of mankind, and is that state of good things which God hath designed the constitution of the world.

Whe Dr. Franklin's mother-in-law first discovered that the young man had a hankering for her daughter, the good old lady said she did not know so well about giving her daughter to a printer; there were already two printing offices in the United States, and she was not certain the country would sustain them. It was plain, young Franklin would depend for the support of his family on the profits of the third, and that was rather a doubtful chance.

A STRANGE DRINK.—An old toper bet that he could when blindfolded, tell each of several kinds of liquors. When brandy, whisky, gin, and other drinks were presented to him, he pronounced correctly what they were. At length a glass of pure water was given him; he tasted it, paused, tasted again, and again considered, and shook his head. At last said he, "Gentlemen, I give it up. I am not used to that sort of liquor."

Our Government lands cost one dollar an acre on an average, and a bottle of champagne two dollars. How many a man dies landless, who during life has swallowed a fertile township, trees and all!

From the Alabama Organ.

"Why stand ye here idle all the day?"

The close of the old year and the commencement of the new, drew to our city many persons from distant parts of the country, to dispose of their produce and to receive in return such necessaries as the wants of their families required. This afforded us an opportunity of enquiring of several how the 'good work' was progressing in their respective localities and with what favor the people received the Bill adopted by the late State Temperance Convention, known as the Alabama Law. Judge of our astonishment, when told by a majority of them, that they had never heard of a Temperance Convention being held, much less of a Bill being recommended by that body to the Alabama Legislature. Some of them had heard something said of the Sons of Temperance, at one time, but having heard little or nothing said of them of late, they had concluded that they had 'gin out.'

We must confess we were not prepared to hear this. We knew that we had no lecturers in the field for a long time—that the temperance press was not generally encouraged—that the Order in many places had become cold, and the members indifferent; but we had no conception there was such a woful dirth of temperance information in the State.

Brothers of the Order, this is a lamentable state of affairs, and it pains us in the extreme that we should be obliged to chronicle such unfavorable intelligence.—But the truth had better be told—the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so that we may supply our deficiencies and short comings, and guard against the future. A better state of things must take place before we can expect to carry out the great end and aim of our organization. It cannot be disguised, that in many portions of the State the great truths of the temperance reformation have never been heralded—hence the cause suffers and languishes. One great fault is our people are not a reading people. They are not in the main opposed to temperance, but not having read and informed themselves on this vital subject, they cannot appreciate its blessings, and blindly pursue a course that is detrimental to themselves, their families and community. We may rest assured that we shall never succeed in correcting Intemperance and abolishing the liquor traffic in Alabama, while her people neglect reading. Let them read and they will THINK, and when they think, they will ACT. We then say to all friends of Temperance—"Why stand ye here idle all the day?" Are there no more drunkards to reclaim? Are there no more widow's tears to be dried? Are there no more desolate hearth-stones to cheer? Are there no more orphans to feed? Are there no more gaping graves to swallow up the lost inebriate? Are there no more souls to be saved from endless perdition? Arouse ye from your lethargy ye philanthropists of the nineteenth century, and rush to the field red with the blood of the slain. Suffering humanity bids you to the rescue—invokes your aid. Will you sit tamely by and close your ears to the supplications of thousands groaning under the yoke of the fell destroyer?—Every day's experience tells us that the great enemy of man is not vanquished——that his emissaries are as busy as ever carrying on the work of death. Then 'once more to the breach, dear friends.'

We contend, as we always have, that all the people want on this important subject is information. 'Spread the light,' then we say, and make the people acquainted with the enormity of the liquor traffic. Scatter temperance papers and tracts broadcast over the land. Among its numerous evils tell them that it is seducing and beguiling their children from the paths of virtue—rendering their servants valueless, and imposing burthensome taxes upon the producing classes.—Above all, let public temperance meetings be held in every county, town and village in the State. The great work is yet to be accomplished. The Bill to be presented to the Legislature will require to be backed by the signatures of the people, and the sooner we commence operations the better. Let then the word AGITATE ring from one extremity of the land to the other. There is nothing like agitation to awaken the dormancy of human nature upon all moral subjects. Will the membership see to it?

We cannot close these few hasty remarks without appending the following reproof from the Southern Era:

"Temperance men, what are your plans and purposes for the year 1853? The year which has but just departed, witnessed many glorious triumphs, and yet there remains a great work to be performed.—The land yet groans under the pressure of the curse, and humanity's voice yet cries unto you for relief. The 'smoke of the people's torment' continues to ascend from the chimneys of thousands of distilleries, and the streams of death are poured out without cessation. Are you ready for the work and for an opportunity, or can it, must it be said of you, 'he has grown weary in well doing?' Is your zeal still ardent, your energy strong, your faith all conquering? or has apathy thrown its chains about you, and bound you to selfish inaction? We fear for you, man, and we tremble for the cause. You are not guided by principle, and therefore cannot submit to a slight sacrifice. You are selfish, meanly so, and therefore it is that, at the very moment you are most needed in the field of conflict, you are found with armor off, asleep in the bowers of indolence. Shame on you, false, craven, traitorous coward. But we hope there are not many such. We hope that by far the greater number are determined to push the battle to the gates of this year. If so, begin at once. Now is the season; wait not for the morrow. Don't wait for opportunities, but make them. To work, to work, and when the sun rises on the next New Year, it will be on a land redeemed from the 'destroyer who smiteth wherever he cometh.'"

From the Kentucky New Era.

How Drunkards are Made.

Drunkards are made in many ways and of many varieties. I will not take up your time by an unnecessary prolixity in undertaking to detail either the evil of intemperance and its direful effects on society, or the glowing effects of wine described by Poets and writers in all ages, from Moses down, and then draw a parallel and reason out the proposition, that drunkenness is a great evil; but shall assume that as a truth which no landlord or Coffee-house keeper in this land will deny.—Drunkenness is an evil, which even they will admit when it interferes with their convenience by kicking the poor inebriate out of their house when he becomes too noisy or obstropulous, or by having him bundled off to the watch-house for his name to appear in the Police Reports next morning. I shall undertake nothing of this sort, but confine myself to the two simple propositions before me.

1st. The different ways in which drunkards are made.

2d. The different varieties of drunkards.

1st. Drunkenness is sometimes, yea very frequently inherited. I am no professed physiologist, but I do know and refer to any intelligent physician in the city to establish this proposition, that not only are the natural powers, peculiarities, and diseases of parents frequently transmitted to their children, but many times their acquired appetites and habits. Sometimes they may miss the first generation and appear in the second, third, or even fourth generation, for we have scripture warrant for knowing that "the sins of the father are visited unto the third and fourth generation on the children," and many, no doubt, could attest to that truth, if their secret history were known. I know a family whose great grandfather was a great horse racer, whose grandfather, on one side, was an inveterate gambler. I have heard them say frequently that they could never see a fine horse without feeling excited, or go near a card-table or be where any game of chance was played, even a Raffle or games of chance at a Religious (?) Fair, without betting.—They know the evils of it. It has been the ban of their family, they struggle against it, and yet many times they are overcome.

On the other side of this family, there existed a love of adventure and a taste for liquor, three generations ago, which has broken out afresh in the grandchildren, while the father and mother were quiet, domestic, sober, church, going people, who, I suppose, rarely if ever saw a horse race, and would not know the ace of spades from the jack of diamonds. So all physiologists know that consumption and insanity are transmitted in this way frequently, skipping one or two generations to break out with fearful violence in the third or fourth. So are the talents of a family, their mental peculiarities, even their gait, carriage, color of hair and eyes transmitted in the same way. Sometimes it does not show itself in the children, as I have said. Most frequently it does; perhaps in early life, perhaps not until late in life, perhaps not at all; but the fixed habit of mind or body will show itself somewhere in the future family. I know a man, the son of a miserable low drunkard, who kept a place to sell liquor, who was so disgusted with these scenes in his father's house that he grew up to be a man of forty years of age without touching it. The cholera developed the taste, or rather the scenes and prescriptions incident to it, and he is now a miserable drunkard. This brings me to the 2d Class—Drunkards by prescription.—Many a blighted hope, many a broken heart, many an act of violence and bloodshed can be traced to the physician. The man is sick or debilitated from disease or improperly observing the laws of life, and the doctor, by way of giving the patient's constitution a little philip, just to make nature do its duty, puts his patient on the high road to ruin. I don't know but that there are some constitutions that may require this kind of treatment, but I doubt it. The thing generally ends in nature's (because habit is a second nature) requiring a fill up instead of a philip, and I know from experience, that, after sometime, it takes a whole quart to produce the effect a gill did, and which the doctor thought was so exhilirating and delightful for his patient; but I have also seen that, in the end, "it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

3d Class—Drunkards who are made so by following the fashion. Fashion! what a thing to kill people with; and yet could all the compressed chests of females now skeletons, could all the bloated corpses of men made corpses by following the fashion, rise from their dark mouldering graves and range around us in one vast hideous congregation, what a commentary it would be on fashion. War might summon from the battle-field's gory graves all its victims, pestilence might bring all its rotten carcases, and famine come with its lean and hungry army of chattering dry bones, but no such array could they make as light and frivolous fashion. I have no idea of entering into a warfare with the ladies on the subject of fashion, for after all the tracts against tight lacing, long skirts, &c., I am satisfied that even with all their imprudence in this respect they are much less obsequious followers of fashion in vital importance than my sex.

No, I will have none of this to sustain my argument, but simply call your attention to the supreme ridicularity, if I may coin a word, of the whole proceeding. If I see a man go in a long mourning gown made of cotton, is that any reason why I should wear a long mourning gown made of cotten? If I see a man taking a glass of water, is that any reason in the world why I should take a drink of water? If I see one taking pork, I being a Jew, is that any reason why I should eat "hog and hominey?" But if I see a lady taking a drink of wine, and she says, "Come, Mr. Jones, or Mr. Smith, or Mr. Johnson, shall I not have the pleasure of a glass with you?" Oh, the bewitching creature! what man has the nerve to resist such tempting invitations. Old Adam had it not when the beautiful wife God had given him simply asked him to eat an apple, and how should his still more fallen descendants be able to resist the syren's voice when spoken from lips as fair? Oh, ladies! little do you know the drunkards you have made, little do you know the number of inebriates in which you have wakened up the dormant appetite for liquor; but suppose they were to ask you to eat or drink something distasteful or repugnant to you?

Gallantry might impel you to do so, but what a loathing you would have for her if she insisted on your taking something you so positively dislike. So then it is man's fault at last. What do you take it for, if you don't like it? Why not come out like an honest friend of mine who was dining with Mr. Clay, and was asked if he would have oysters. "No, sir," said he, "I ain't used to 'em." Then suppose a gentleman was entertaining his guests, and was to say, gentlemen, come up, I have some very fine Blue Lick water; I will warrant it genuine (and it is a much better article in its place than whisky,) would you see the guests that it nauseates flocking around the sideboard, tasting and smelling until they get sulphur enough in their compositions to tempt almost the devil to take up his permanent residence within them?—Yet you will see people doing things like this every day because it is the fashion!—Suppose it was the fashion for people to drink cold water—for every friend who had been parted from another on meeting him to say, come Frank, let's take a drink together, and step up to the bar and call for a drink of pure cold water? By a large majority this fashion would be followed, and it is to establish some such fashion that the temperance movement has been organized. EZEKIEL JENKINS.

Lexington, Ky.

FORBEARANCE.—By repetition it has become quite a popular maxim, that "there is a point where forbearance ceases to be a virtue," but to our mind, it is unchristian in sentiment and highly heathenish in tendency! With the true practical Christian, forbearance is ever a cardinal principle; through life he will bear and forbear. The Gospel teaches us to forgive our enemies, regardless of the multiplicity of their offences—though it be "seventy times seven." Maxims, as a general rule, are good and safe for the practical precepts of life, but all must regret the observance of any maxim when its tendency is to inculcate principles contrary to the genius and spirit of the Bible, and the Christian religion. Let all such be forever banished.

A READY ANSWER.—A lady, whose fondness for wine had given her a flushed face, and a carbuncled nose, was one day looking in the glass and exclaimed, 'Where in the name of wonder, did I get such a nose as this?'

"Out of the decanter madam," answered the servant, "out of the decanter!"

NATURAL HISTORY OF CONSUMPTION.—Two thin shoes, one cold,—two colds, one attack of bronchithis—two attacks of bronchitis, one mahogany box.

A London Boy

Young people in our favored land have very little idea of the sufferings of the poor in England and elsewhere. The following sketch will give them some idea of the truth:

"Upon one of my visits to the various ragged schools of the metropolis, I became interested in a lad of ten or twelve years of age, with a frank, open countenance, though somewhat dirty, and dressed in a suit of rags. He was reading busily in his Testament, and would stop occasionally and ask such curious questions of his teacher that I could but smile.—His practical observations on certain portions of the Scripture, if clothed in eloquent language, would have done honor to men of education. There was a free heartedness in him that gleamed out through all his rags and dirt, and I sat down beside him to ask him some questions.

"Where do you live?" I asked, "and how?"

"I live anywhere I can," he replied, "and almost how I can."

"But," said I, "what is your trade or business?" What do you generally do for a living!"

"I am a water-cress boy," he replied, "and get up every morning and go on foot three or four miles, and sometimes six or eight, into the edge of the city, to buy the water cresses. I get a basket for a shilling, and by crying them a whole day, generally clear another, which pays my board and lodging."

"But can you live on a shilling a day?" I asked.

"Yes, pretty well, but many times I don't make a shilling, and then buy a crust of bread, and go and sleep under one of the arches of the London Bridge, or in some crate or box down on the wharves.

Just then the superintendent came along and as I took his arm, he said—

"The lad you have been talking with, comes here every night to learn to read, and although he cannot get to sleep before ten o'clock, and is obliged to be up at two, yet he is always punctual."

Lately his mother was imprisoned for back rent—ten shillings. The brave boy almost starved himself, and slept out of doors, to save money to release her.

Hints to Young Women.

If young women waste their time in trivial amusements, in the prime season for improvements, which is between the ages of sixteen and twenty, they will hereafter regret bitterly the loss, when they come to feel themselves inferior in knowledge to almost every one they converse with; and above all, if they should ever be mothers, when they feel their inability to direct and assist the pursuits of their children, they will then find ignorance a severe mortification and a real evil. Let it animate their industry, and let not a modest opinion of their capacities be a discouragement to their endeavors after knowledge. A moderate understanding with diligent and direct application, will go further than a merely lively genius, if attended with that impatience and inattention which too often attend quick parts. It is not for want of capacity that so many women are such trifling and insipid companions, so ill-qualified for the friendship and conversation of a sensible man, or for the task of instructing or governing a family; it is often the neglect of exercising the talent they really have, and from omitting to cultivate a relish for intellectual, moral and religious improvement. By this neglect, they lose the sincerest pleasures, which would remain when almost every other forsook them, of which neither fortune nor age could deprive them, and which would be a comfort and resource in almost every possible situation in life.

TO WHIPPING MOTHERS.—A little boy yesterday tumbled into the dock. A sailor sprang in and brought him out again, about half dead with fright and excessive draughts of water. When he recovered from the shock, he began to sob and cry most piteously. He was assured that he was not hurt. 'I know that well enough,' said he, with a fresh burst, 'but mother said she would lick me if I got drowned, and I know she'll do it, for she always does."—Day Book.

Acrostic.

Gulf of perdition and despair!
Road that conducts to regions drear;
O, wretched place, where souls are killed;
Ghastly abode, with devils filled.
Sink of all sin, kept by a fiend,
Hell's all supplying constant friend;
Of all the ills on earth combined,
Perfect damnation here you find.

[Temperance Batteey.

A southern gentleman was accosted one night recently, in the streets of New York, by three ruffians, who asked him the precise time of night: "I will tell you," he replied, in his very blandest terms, placing his hand in his pocket as if to take out a time piece, but drawing forth a revolver instead, he presented it and said—"it is about to strike three!" The ruffians vanished in a twinkling.

Choice Gems.

Positive men err most of any.

Poverty wants some, luxury many, avrice all things.

Prudence is not satisfied with may-be's.

Rash oaths, whether kept or broken, frequently produce guilt.

Religion is the best armour in the world, but the worst cloak.

Remember always your end, and that lost time never returns.

Search others for their virtues, thyself for thy vices.

Sell not virtue to purchase wealth.

Silence is the wisdom of a fool, speech of a wise man.

Sloth is commonly the mother of poverty.

Solid love, whose root is virtue, can no more die than virtue itself.

Some people write, and others talk themselves out of their reputation.

Sow good works, and thou shalt reap gladness.

Spare when you are young, and spend when you ore old.

Speak of thyself seldom, and always with great caution and modesty.

Spend the day well, and thou wilt rejoice at night.

Study men as well as books.

That anger is not warrantable that has seen two suns.

That seldom remains a secret which is made known to three.

The best way of revenge is not to imitate the injury.

The glutton and drunkard shall come to poverty.

The great art of life is to play for much, and stake little.

The greatest advantges without virtue are real losses.

The greatest misfortune of all is not to be able to bear misfortune.

The life of a solitary man will be certainly miserable, but not certainly devout.

TRIFLES.—How much are we indebted to accident. Pythagoras owed the invention of music to the sound of the blacksmith's hammer. Newton, his first idea of gravitation, to the fall of an apple.—Voltaire tells us that Milton got his first idea of "Paradise Lost," from a ridiculous Italian burlesque, styled "Adamo, or the Fall of Man." Goldsmith's Comedy, "She stoops to Conquer," was suggested by an accident which occurred to him on his way to college. Verily, as the song says:

"We little know what great things
From little things arise."

[Ex. paper.

A watchman, one night last week, discovered a gentleman, (?) who having imbibed a trifle more wine than was necessary, was reposing on the steps of the Stone Chapel. Charlie roused him up; "let me alone," said the gentleman, "let me sleep; if you must be doing something, put out the candle, (the moon was shining brightly in his face,) and throw another blanket on the bed!"

An Englishman wantonly buckled a spur about the ankle of an Irishman whose leg was hanging out of the bed. On discovering his situation, Pat complained bitterly that the boot-jack boy had taken off his boot and let the spur remain.

A GREAT BRIDGE.—Ole Bull says he has in his possession a bridge which has carried him safely and profitably several times across the Atlantic, namely, the bridge of his violin!

The people of the United States pay as much for imported cigars, as they receive for exported wheat; and drink, in the form of French brandy, the whole proceeds of the Indian corn exportation.

The English Government has put the Maine Liquor Law into operation among the miners in Australia. Grogshops are burnt down as soon as they are discovered.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

A Magazine of Pure Morals: PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does. Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—Cheapest of all.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No. 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Lococks Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Lococks Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Lococks Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CIRCULAR---PLEASE TO READ THIS.
AGENTS WANTED.
New Books of Permanent Value.

Office of Sears' Pictorial Works,
Removed to 181 William St. New York, 1853.

Dear Sir:—If entirely convenient and agreeable to you, we would be much pleased to secure your valuable influence on behalf of our PICTORIAL FAMILY WORKS. We publish a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a high moral and unexceptional character, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly, by mail, a Circular containing full particulars, with "Directions to Persons disposed to act as Agents," together with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post-paid. ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, jan 5 It 181 William Street, New York.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, General Agent for the State of Indiana.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.
Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15 40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't.

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE, Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Booksellers and Stationers,
No. 12, Washington Street,
june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C.; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfonrd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851.

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would sufficate me when I laid down. Having used many r medies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours.
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med. College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med. College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter.
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili.
Rt. Rev. Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archibishop Pursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY BROWN'S COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1853. NO. 36.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

Office—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Little Silverstring.

Water.

"Water! water!" crid the bird,
With his singing, gentle note;
And the liquid cry is heard
Pouring from the little throat;
Water, water, clear and sweet!
"To-weet! to-weet!"

"Water! water!" roars the ox,
While it rushes at his side,
Down among the mossy rocks,
Rippling with its crystal tide;
Water, water, pure and true!
"Moo! Moo!"

"Water! water!" said the tree,
With its branches spreading high;
"Water, water," rustled he,
For his leaves were very dry:
Water, water, for the tree,
Pure and free.

"Water! water" said the flower,
Whispering with his perfumed breath;
"Let me have it in an hour,
Ere I thirsting droop in death.
Water, water, soft and still,
Is my will!

"Water! water!" said the grain,
With its yellow head on high;
And the spreading, fertile plain,
Ripening, joined the swelling cry;
Water for the grains of gold!
Wealth untold!

Water! water! sparkling, pure,
Giveth Nature every where—
If you drink it, I am sure
It will never prove a snare.
Water is the thing for me—
Yes, and thee.

Water! water! young and old!
Drink it, crystal-like and sweet;
Never heed the tempter bold—
Crush him underneath your feet.
Water, water! Youth, for thee—
Thee and me.

The Rumseller's Song.

Give to man the poisoned bowl,
To rob him of his powers;
We kill his body and his soul,
Oh, what a work is ours!
We make a widow of his wife,
We rob his babes of food,
We fill the world with woe and strife,
As every rummy should.

We spare no pains to spread our work
O'er valley, hill and dale;
For proof of this let each one list,
And hear the widow's wail.
So here's a health unto the bowl,
And all who 'round it gather,
We'll sink to woo the immortal soul,
'Mid fair and rainy weather.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Ragged-School Reporter.

Three Public Scenes.

BY AUGUSTINE DUGANNE.

SCENE FIRST.

In the Eternal City, eighteen centuries ago—in a mighty building devoted to the amusement of the people—were gathered thousands of men and women, eager to feast their senses upon a grand spectacle. Noble lords, princes, and gentlemen, fair dames, and blooming maidens, clad in purple and gold, and decked with jewels,—sat in raised tiers within the immense walls of the Coliseum, gazing down into the arena. Rome, throned upon her seven hills, was represented in this brilliant assemblage of the beauty and pride of a world's empire, ruled by the one man Cæsar. The clear brightness of Italian skies canopied the vast amphitheatre, and the soft summer air dallied with clouds of incense that arose from golden censers swinging before the altars of marble gods. Around the gorgeous balconies, hung with jewelled drapery, purple linen and cloth of gold, swayed the long ranks of spectators, grouped high up towards the smiling heavens, and stretching in wide wings from the central throne, on which sat Nero, madman of Rome.

Below, in the Arena, fought, breast to breast, in deadly strife, men who had been torn from their far-off homes, to "make a Roman holiday,"—gladiators butchering each other for the amusement of fair ladies and gallant gentlemen in the balconies.

Below, in the Arena, nailed to crosses, gored by bulls, torn by wild horses, stretched on racks, were the martyrs who dared to die rather than deny their God.

Below, in the Arena, were lions and tigers and frantic elephants, plunging and leaping to and fro, and trampling to death scores of flying men and women and children—till the saw-dust that covered the ground reeked with blood, and the clouds of ensanguined motes whirled upwards, and fell upon the gay lords and ladies in the balconies.

And the spectators shouted, and stamped, and clapped their hands, garlands were waved, and plumes nodded, in token that the audience were well pleased with the murdering men and the devouring wild beasts—and that they appreciated the interest of the death-scenes, which, unfortunately, could not be encored. And thus, in the face of the clear heaven, those Roman ladies and gentlemen feasted on spectacles of blood, and thanked their Cæsars and their marble gods for the privilege.

—

SCENE SECOND.

In the city of New York, the metropolis of the New World—in a great building called the Castle Garden, devoted to the amusement of the people—gathered one night, thousands of fair matrons and gentle ladies, and elegant gentlemen—crowding the wide amphitheatre and gazing upon the arena, with anxious eyes, hushed breath, and heaving bosoms.

And up, around the frescoed arches and sounding walls, rolled waves of glorious music, swelling into harmonious tempest, sinking in melodious ripples, vibrating, swaying, through the souls of the vast multitude.

And high above all swam the wonderful voice of a young girl, who stood with crossed hands upon her breast, and eyes upraised, while the people listened with throbbing hearts. Up through the vaulted roofs, into the blue ether, ascending in the sunlight, soaring to the throne of the Eternal—gushed the melodious prayer of that white-robed maiden, breathing the trusting avowal—

"I know that my Redeemer liveth!"

And the people who listened breathlessly, and hung raptured upon the tones of that maiden's voice, were of the same human family that laughed and applauded in the Coliseum of Rome—the same sparkling eyes and noble forms—the same matrons, and youths, and maidens. Down through the maze of centuries came this thought upon me, and I said wonderingly in my heart—"Can this thing be?—What, then, has changed the people's hearts, and made them turn from the dreadful Coliseum, to bow at the shrine of song?"

And, then, as in answer to our words, arose once more, amid the stillness of the hushed thousands around us, those clear clarion-notes of the maiden's voice—

"I know that my Redeemer liveth!"

—

SCENE THIRD.

Again, I stood, with a multitude of many thousand Christians, in a great hall of the metropolis. Around me, in waves of resounding melody, rolled the harmonic voices of men and maidens, while the swell and cadence of many instruments moved the hearts of the people. And as the rich measures of harmony floated and sank around me, or rose and quivered in the lofty dome, I felt that the bosoms of the multitude were pervaded and softened by the spirit of sweet sounds.

Then, in a pause of the accordant voices and melodious instruments, a new strain stole forth upon the silence. It was not the voice of a divinely-gifted singer, nor the cunningly touched notes of rare instruments; yet it was a strain that thrilled the breasts of all who listened; for it arose from the lips of little children breathing together, in the unison of a hymn to God. And the hearts of the audience warmed towards these children; for the little ones had wavy hair and clear foreheads, and eyes undimmed with many tears, and spirits yet unsoiled by evil; children who yet dwelt unsinning in the rosy light of infant confidence. And among the people in the audience were many tender fathers and loving mothers, who remembered their own little ones at home whose smiles were the light of their households.

But—even as the children sang thus clearly and hopefully, and as their rhythmic prayers flew upward, wafted by the wings of trooping angels to the throne of Our Father in Heaven—behold there appeared, opening at the very feet of those infant choristers, a wide, dark, unfathomable gulf, out of which arose continually a wail as of mortal anguish. And the multitude in whose midst I stood, hearkening to the voices, saw that these little ones, even while they sang in childish faith, were tottering upon the edge of the chasm, and that, ever and anon, one fell and was lost forever in the darkness.

And the people shuddered, and stretched forth their arms; for, as I said, many loving fathers and mothers were listening to the singing children; and a murmur of pity arose from these—a murmur of love and pity.

"Who are these," said the people.—"Who are these children, praying to Our Father in Heaven, and yet falling, one by one, into the gulf of sorrow and suffering? And how shall they be rescued from the peril in which they stand?"

Then a voice, which was clear and more melodious than the children's voices, and which yet seemed an echo of their chant, arose above all other sounds, filling the air and pervading the souls of the multitude. And this voice said:

"Behold! these little ones are the outcast children of poverty and vice; neglected from their birth, and sinking, day by day, into the dark gulf of ruin!—Build a bridge across that gulf, O ye fathers and mothers of happier children; and suffer those neglected ones to come over into your midst—even into the shelter of your Christian love!"

And the children heard that voice, their little hearts beat strangely at its wondrous music. And they stretched out their little hands unto the multitude, and sang in the words of the Good Shepherd—"suffer the little children to come!"

Blessed be Faith which hath removed the mountains of human error and prejudice—which has turned the hearts of the people from the love of blood—which has refined the brute nature and exalted the debased intelligence of man. Blessed be Hope, which points us forward to a Future of Humanity, when still nobler sympathies shall inspire our race, still higher aspirations actuate their lives; when the Christian love, which sanctifies, and the Christian Charity, which beautifies all things, may be the type and rule of the same human family that once was brutified by the Coliseum sports of heathen Rome.

Children.

BY MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

One cold winter morning I looked into a milliner's shop, and there I saw a hale, hearty, and well-browned young fellow from the country, with his long cart whip, and a lion shag coat, holding up some little matter, and turning it about in his great fist. And what do you suppose it was? A baby's bonnet! A little, soft, blue satin hood, with a swan's down border, white as the frill of rich blond around the edge.

By his side stood a very pretty woman, holding with no small pride, the baby, for evidently it was the baby. And one could read the fact in every glance, as they looked at each other, and at the little hood, and then at the large, blue, unconscious eye, and fat, dimpled cheeks of the little one. It was evident that neither of them had ever seen a baby like that before!

"But really, Mary," said the young man, "is not three dollars very high?"

Mary very prudently said nothing, but taking the hood, tied it on the little head, and held up the baby. The man looked and grinned, and without anothar word down went the three dollars, (all the last week's butter came to,) and as they walked out of the shop, it is hard to say which looked the most delighted with the bargain.

"Ah," thought I, "A little child shall lead them."

Another day, as I passed the carriage factory, I saw a young mechanic at work on a wheel. The rough body of a carriage stood beside him, and there, wrapped up snugly, all hooded and cloaked, sat a dark eyed girl, about a year old, playing with a shaggy dog. As I stopped, the man looked from his work and turned admiringly towards the little companion, as much as to say, "See what I have here?"

"Yes," thought I, "and if the little lady ever gets a glance from admiring swains as sincere as that, she will be lucky."

Ah, these children!—little witches!—pretty even in all their thoughts and absurdities!—winning even in their sins and iniquities! See, for example, yonder little fellow in a naughty fit; he has shaken his long curls over his deep blue eyes, the fair brow is bent in a frown, the rose-leaf lip is pushed up in infinite defiance, and the white shoulder thrust naughtily forward. Can any but a child look so pretty even in its naughtiness! Then comes the instant change; flashing smiles and tears—as the good comes back all in a rush, and you are overwhelmed with protestations, promises, and kisses. They are irresistible, too, these little ones. They pull away the scholar's pen; tumble about his papers; make somersets over his books; and what can he do? They tear up newspapers; litter the carpets; break, pull, and upset, and then jabber their unintelligible English in self-defiance; and what can you do for yourself?

"If I had a child," says the precise man "you should see!"

He does have a child; and his child tears up his papers, tumbles over his things, and pulls his nose, like all children; and what has the precise man to say for himself? Nothing. He is like everybody elsr: "a little child shall lead him!"

Poor little children, they bring and teach us human beings more good than they get in return. How often does the infant, with its soft cheek and helpless hand, awaken a mother from worldliness and egotism to a whole world of new and higher feeling. How often does the mother repay this by doing her best to wipe off, even before the time, the dew and fresh simplicity of childhood, and make her daughter too soon a woman of the world, as she has been.

The hardened heart of the worldly man is touched by the guileless tones and simple caresses of his son, but he repays it in time, by imparting to his boy all the crooked tricks and hard ways, and callous maxims which have undone himself.

Go to the jail—the penitentiary—and find there the wretched, most sullen, brutal and hardened. Then look at your infant son, such to some mother was this man. That hard hand was soft and delicate; that rough voice was tender and lisping; fond eyes followed as he played—and he was rocked as something holy. There was a time when his heart, soft and unknown, might have been opened to questions of his Maker, and been sealed with the seal of heaven. But harsh hands seized it and all is over with him forever.

So of the tender, weeping child—he is made the callous, heartless man; of the sneering skeptic—of the beautiful and modest, the shameless and abandoned—and this is what the world does for the little.

There was a time when the Divine One stood upon the earth, and little children sought to draw near him. But harsh human beings stood between him and them, forbidding their approach. Ah, has it always been so? Do not even we, with our hard and unsubdued feeling, our worldly and unscriptural habits and maxims, stand like a dark screen between our child and its Saviour, and keep, even from the choice bun of our heart, the radiance which might unfold it for paradise? "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not," is still the voice of the Son of God; but the cold world still closes around and forbids. When of old, disciples would question their Lord of the higher mysteries of his kingdom, he took a child and set him in the midst as a sign of him who would be greatest in the kingdom of heaven. That gentle teacher still acts the little child in the midst of us!

Wouldst thou know, O parent, what is that faith which unlocks heaven? Go not to wrangling polemics or creeds or forms of theology, but draw to thy bosom thy little one, read in that clear and trusting eye the lesson of eternal life. Be only to thy God as thy child is to thee, and all is done. Blessed shalt thou be indeed—"a little child shall lead thee."

Sermon for Moderate Drinkers.

A Scotch parson once preached a long sermon against dram-drinking—a vice very prevalent in his parish, and from which, report said, he was not himself wholly exempt. Whatever ye do, brethren, do it with "moderation," and above all, be moderate in dram-drinking. When ye get up ye may tack a dram, and another just before breakfast, and perhaps another just after, but dinna be always dram-drinking. If you are out in the morn, ye may just brace yerself up with another dram, and perhaps another before luncheon, and some I fear, tack another after, which is not very blameable, but dinna be always dram, dramming away. Naebody can scruple for one just before dinner; and when the desert is brought in, and after it is tane awa, and perhaps ane, and it may be twa, in the afternoon, just to keep ye drowsling and snoozing awa'; but dinna be always dram, dram, dramming. Afore tea, and after tea, and between tea and supper, and afore and after supper, is no more than is right and good; but let me caution ye, brethren, no to be always dram, dramming. Just when ye start for bed, and ye are ready to pop into it, and perhaps when you wake in the night, to take a dram or two is no more than a Christian man may lawfully do; but, brethren, let me caution you not to drink more than I have mentioned, or maybe ye may pass the bounds of moderation.

The Liquor Business.—The traffic in ardent spirits is said to be almost universally attended with such fraud as would disgrace and destroy the followers of any other calling. Gin is improved by the use of sweet oil and vitriol, which give it a 'bead.' Irish and Scotch whisky are made of American by the introduction of a little creosote, to give it a smoky twang. Pale and dark brandies are made of whisky by the introduction of a little of the coloring matter, &c. We read lately in the papers that one of the delegates of the Cold Water Alliance, recently assembled in Utica, New York, in the course of a narrative of his experience, informed the delegates that he was once engaged in the distilling business, and had frequently made and placed on sale good brandy, rum, gin, and wine, from whisky, in the short space of four hours, and could at any time make sparkling brandy from whisky, which would deceive the palate of the upper ten.

[Philadelphia Telegraph.

Habits.—Like flakes of snow that fall unperceived upon the earth, the seemingly unimportant events in life succeed one another. As the snow gathers together, so are our habits formed. No single flake that is added to the pile produces a sensible change. No single action creates; however it may exhibit a man's character, but as the tempest hurls the avalanche down the mountain, and overwhelms the inhabitant and his habitation, so passion acting upon the elements of mischief which pernicious habits have brought together by imperceptible accumulation, may overthrow the edifice of truth and virtue.

[Jeremy Bentham.

Samuel Chipman.—This venerable Father and Apostle in the Temperance Reform has, by reason of age and infirmities, retired from the field of active labor. His life has been one of toil and usefulness, and while he is very poor in the things of this world, he is rich in those things which endure when this world passes away.

Thousands will hereafter rise up and call him blessed,—Ohio Organ.

☞ By doing good with his money, a man as it were stamps the image of God upon it, and makes it pass current for the merchandise of heaven.—Rutledge.

☞ The Grand Duke of Tuscany has imported a guillotine, and appointed a public executioner, at a salary of fifteen dollars per week.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1853.

Temperance in the Senate.

This body has not acted finally on House bill, a synopsis of which may be seen in our columns to-day. It will probably pass the Senate; but not without indications of foul play on the part of its enemies, and weakness and vascillation on the part of some of its friends, whom we will notice when the contest is over.

Hon. William J. Brown.

The Editor of the Sentinel has shown his peculiar tendencies by stealing our thunder, and his want of originality as well as honesty by the theft. Truly may it be said of him,

"Not quite a felon, yet but half a knight—
The gibbet or the field prepared to grace,
A mighty mixture of the great (?) and base."

His last is communicated by the spirit of the Editor through some kindred menial medium. Tut Billy!

Brass Band Convention.

Prof. Geo. B. Downey's Brass Band Convention convened, on the 22d inst., at the Masonic Hall in this city, pursuant to previous appointment. It was every way worthy of Indiana—and of the glorious occasion—the birth day of the Father of his Country. Infinite thanks are due the Professor for his indefatigable energy in getting it up in so becoming a style; and too much praise cannot be awarded to the gentlemen of the several Bands, which attended the Convention.

In the afternoon the Convention was appropriately addressed by Lieut. Gov. Willard. The Grand Concert, at night, was altogether a splendid affair; and the competition between the different Bands reflected the highest credit upon the musical skill of each. The Banner—the victor's prize—was placed in full view of the competitors, as if to stimulate their efforts. It was awarded to the New Albany Band, justly, we think, but not until a second trial had satisfied the judges they merited it. The Bloomington Band alone was its competitor on this last trial. The rivals were worthy of each other; and we were compelled to pronounce, first rate, the music not only of the victor, but also, that of the Bloomington, Fort Wayne, Winchester, Franklin, Edinburgh, and Lafayette bands. The unsuccessful competitors showed themselves worthy of success, by the generous applause with which they greeted the victor. We were reminded of the Spartan, who, being unsuccessful in his race for office, rejoiced that there "were others more worthy than himself." Wm. Wallace, Esq. presented the banner in an address which was every way worthy of the occasion. Many thanks again, say we, to Prof. Downey.

The Legislature.

On last Thursday the House passed Mr. Owen's bill, with slight amendments, by a vote of 53 for, to 43 against it.

The provisions of the bill are substantially as follows:

1. That no person shall retail spirituous liquors, except for mechanicrl, chemical, medicinal or culinary purposes, unless a majority of the legal voters of the Township shall indorse license on their tickets at the annual Spring election; and then not, until he give bond in the sum of $2000, conditioned to keep an orderly house, and pay all fines, penalties, or damages that may be assessed against him under the provisions of the bill.

2. After such vote the Auditor must issue a license to every person who is willing to comply with the law in giving bond.

3. The word retail is defined to mean the sale, either direct or indirect, of any less quantity than a gallon.

4. The penalty for selling in violation of the law may be any sum not over $200.

5. No license under this bill shall authorize the sale of liquor on Sundays.

6. Any retailer causing the intoxication of any person, is bound to take care of and board such intoxicated person until he gets sober without compensation; and, if he fail, any other person may do so, or cause the same to be done, and recover for the same, with 50 per cent. damages thereon.

7. No money shall be received for license.

8. Disorderly houses where intoxicating liquors are sold are made nuisances—and subject to the laws in relation thereto.

9. Any wife, child, parent, guardian, employer or other person, injured in person, property, or means of support, by an intoxicated person, or in consequence of such intoxication, has a right of action against the person causing such intoxication, and sureties on his bond, for exemplary damages.

10. For the purposes of this act a married woman has the same rights as if she were single; and damages paid by a minor shall be paid as the court may direct.

11. A recovery against a retailer shall be conclusive against his sureties, both as to the right and amount of damages.

12. All contracts made with any person in a state of intoxication shall be void.

13. All places or houses where spirituous liquors are sold, bartered, or given away without license in a less quantity than a gallon, are declared nuisances; and subject to the law in relation thereto; and the keeper thereof may be fined in any sum not less than $10, nor more than $50.

14. It is made the duty of the Prosecuting Attorney to proceed forthwith against such nuisances so soon as informed of the same, and if he fail to prosecute, he is liable to be fined not less than $10, nor more than $25.

The ayes and noes on the final passage of the bill are as follows:

AYES—Messrs. Ballard, Brecount, Bridges, Brothwell, Brown, Bundy, Dodd, Donelson, Druley, Dufour, Ferris, Ferguson, Fleming, Freeland, Goodman, Greene, Hammond, Harris, Henry, Henton, Hicks, Hooper, Hunt, Jennings, Lines, Martin, Maxfield, McDonald of Sullivan, McKee, Milroy, Moss, Orr, Parker, Pratt, Read, Rockafellar, Scott, Seawright, Service, Shelby, Shoemaker, Shuman, Simpson, Spencer, Thomas, Turpie, Underwood, Walker of Laporte, Wilson, Work, Yount, Mr. Speaker—53.

NOES—Messrs. Able, Buell, Burnett, Catlin, Chapin, Clark, Cooper, Donald, Dunlavey, Durham, Dyer, Emery, Farnsley, Gentry, Gootee, Hamrick, Handy, Hartley, Howell, Johnson, Jones of Boone, Jones of Jennings, Jones of Ripley, Laird, Lasselle, Lemmon, Lewis, Lowe, McClure, McDonald of Lake, McKinney, Peckenpaugh, Price, Richardson, Stackhouse, Steele, Stephens, Stockwell, Struble, Sutton, Taber, Tanner, Walker of Rush—43.

One Idea.

"In several of the States of the Union, there are published, well conducted, and well sustained periodicals, devoted to the cause of education. But none of them, that I have seen, or of which I have heard, however valuable in some respects they may be, would answer for the meridian of Indiana. Nor would anything on the plan of any periodical yet projected, meet what the Superintendant deems the wants of the educational cause in this State. We want not a Quarterly Review, nor a Monthly Magazine, but a weekly paper. It should not be wholly occupied with educational matter. Any paper devoted to one idea, be it education, or temperanee, or religion, or politics, becomes generally uninteresting to the mass of the people, ultra in its principles, and impracticable in its measures. The one idea principle, applied to any form of periodical literature, never fails to degenerate into some form of humbug."—Prof. Larabee's First Annual Report.

☞ Thus deposeth our learned Superintendent of Public Instruction, of, and concerning periodicals in general; and especially of educational, temperance, religious, and even political papers. Now, we confess, that, although this talk about "one idea," is quite common even among those who have not one idea of their own, we were not altogether prepared for this new version of it, at the hands of Prof. Larabee, whom we frankly admit has a good store of ideas of his own. It is going pretty far to say, that a religious paper must necessarily "degenerate into some form of humbug,"—further we opine than many of the Professor's brethren will go along with him.

We have read in an old Book, which we acknowledge is devoted to one idea—a religious one too—that "ye cannot serve two masters." "Ye can not serve God and mammon." "If your eye be single your whole body shall be full of light," and many other such expressions, indicating, as we supposed, oneness of idea.—We have even been taught by learned economists that a division of labor is essential to the perfection of any art. But we now learn that all such notions are unsuited to this progressive age. A religious, temperance, or political newspaper "never fails to degenerate into some form of humbug;" for the reason that they are things of one idea. Even the old Book which so strongly impresses the reader with one great idea, and one lofty purpose, is, we fear, becoming antiquated; and if not itself degenerating into humbug, much of the seeming respect shown it is already degenerated into humbug.—O, age of progress, discovery and improvement, what wilt thou not yet bring forth!

Indiana State Prison--Crime and its Causes.

We call the attention of the citizens of Indiana to the following facts, illustrative of the effects of intoxicating liquors on the morals of the people. They are derived from the Report of the Warden of our own State Prison; and form a part of the materials out of which the future historian may write our history. They are now a part of the abiding records of the State, and will remain, despite the efforts of politicians to the contrary, a testimony against the policy that has produced them. If the State has a right to interfere in any case, to prevent crime, by removing a known cause of crime, the facts now given will be sufficient to establish that right for all time in relation to the traffic in intoxicating liquors. No reasonable man will attempt hereafter to controvert it; for no other case can be found, in which the law now interposes to prevent crime, so well sustained by facts, as would be the total prohibition of the liquor business, in all its departments. But the facts themselves will put this case beyond controversy.

By the Report referred to, it will be seen that there are now, in our

State Prison ..... 217 convicts

Of these there are no less than ..... 158 drunkards

Which leaves only ..... 59 temperate

And of these several are set down as moderate drinkers.

Takiug the intemperate class of 158, it will be seen that they are imprisoned for committing the following crimes:

Murder and manslaughter	16
Assault with the intent to commit murder or rape	10
Thieves, burglars, robbers, and receivers of stolen goods	111
Forgery	11
Arson	4
Rape	4
Bigamy	1
Perjury	1
Whole number of Intemperate convicts	158

The crimes of the temperate and moderate drinkers are as follows:

Murder and manslaughter	4
Assault with the intent to commit murder or rape	2
Thieves, robbers, burglars, and receivers of stolen goods	49
Forgers	2
Rape	1
Arson	1
Whole number of temperate convicts	59
Making of both temp. and intemp.,	217

By comparing these classes of offenders, it will be seen that there are of murderers and manslayers four drunkards to one sober man; of those convicted of assault with intent to commit murder or rape, five drunkards to one sober man: of thieves, robbers, burglars, and receivers of stolen goods, about two drunkards to one sober man; of forgers more than five drunkards to one sober man; of those guilty of rape, four drunkards to one sober man; of those who commit arson four drunkards to one sober person; and one drunkard guilty of bigamy and perjury, each, to no sober man.

We cannot too strongly urge both the friends and enemies of temperance to give this table of home facts, a careful and candid consideration. If facts are worth any thing, such a labor is a duty every man owes his State. If the Legislature may make laws under any circumstances, to prevent crime, by the removal of its cause, is not here a case worthy of its action? We commend it both to the lawmaker and tax-payer. If they will give it proper attention and heed the lesson it teaches, Indiana will not long suffer under the curse of Intemperance.

From the Ohio Organ.

100 Guns for Vermont!

"It won't do to legislate in advance of popular sentiment"! "Freemen never will submit to such tyrannical legislation"! When will such miserable twaddle cease to fill our political journals? Vermont, under the most crushing weight of opposition, has declared a war of extermination on the liquor traffic! Hurra for the Green Mountain boys!!

The N. Y. Tribune thus speaks of this triumph:

GLORIOUS VERMONT!

Returns from Tuesday's election in Vermont show an overwhelming majority in favor of the stringently Prohibitory Liquor Law enacted by the last Legislature. This law is very far beyond the Maine Law in its severity, and will almost insure the destruction of the Liquor Traffic in Vermont. Only reasonable fidelity and vigilance on the part of its friends are required to inforce it—it almost 'goes itself.' And wherever it does go, let the Rumsellers clear the track!

No measure was ever more bitterly opposed, nor had a stronger array of influence to contend against. It was vehemently assailed as unconstitutional, and the late opinions of Judge Curtis, the New-Hampshire Justices, &c., against milder laws, triumphantly cited to secure its rejection. Voters were assured that it was already a nullity, and voting for it a useless absurdity; a majority of the Political Press were either actively or passively hostile; while the fact that it was barely passed, under circumstances which enabled its adversaries to declare it not legally passed, weighed heavily against it. There never was a triumph for Temperance won under circumstances so inauspicious. To the determined and able advocacy of the only two Religious journals in Vermont with which we are acquainted--The Chronicle (Congregational) and The Repository (Universalist)—the friends of Temperance are deeply indebted for this triumph.

Legislators of New-York and New-Jersey! Rumocracy of Connecticut! dare you go with us before the People on the question of Liquor-selling Prohibition?—We entreat you, we exhort you, we dare you to let the People settle this matter for themselves! It is their business—are you afraid to trust them? If not, enable them to vote for or against a law like that of Maine, and make their decision effectual! Let us see who shrinks from this ordeal!

Eloquent Appeal.

At the great Temperance Convention at Albany, a committee of ladies were admitted within the bar of the Legislative Hall, when one of them read the following address:

"Mr. Speaker, and Legislators of the State of New York:

We come to you in behalf of 28,000 women,—wives, mothers and sisters,—of this great commonwealth, to petition your honorable body for protection. We ask protection that our hearthstones may not be desolated; that the little ones around our fireside may not be written more than fatherless; we ask protection that our sons may be saved from the drunkard's shame and the drunkard's doom; we ask protection that our husbands may be saved from the destroying power of the spirit that dwells in the intoxicating cup; we ask protection, lest all that is sacred to the homes of the Empire State may not be considered of less moment than the $2,635,000 invested in the liquor traffic in this State; we ask you to pass a law entirely prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, and we most resfectfully, but earnestly, solicit the early attention of your honorable body to our petition."

At the close of the address, the petitions were sent up to the Clerk's table.

GLORIOUS NEWS FROM MICHIGAN.—The Maine Liquor Law passed the Legislature of this State on the 10th inst., and it is to be submitted to the people at a special election in July of this year.

Items of News.

The constitution of Illinois provides for the payment of members of the Legislature for only 42 days' service.

Rutland, (Vt.,) voted 515 for, and 167 against the Maine liquor law. Clarendon, two to one in favor.

Returns from 138 towns in Vermont, of the vote upon the question of accepting the new liquor law, stand—yeas, 13,529; nays, 10,783—majority, 2,746.

By the statistics of the recent census, it appears that the whole number of churches of the Society of Friends in the United States, is 715, to which are attached 283,023 members.

A Washington correspondent of a South Carolina paper says, there are now at the capital, awaiting the arrival of the President elect, more than fifty South Carolinians, who are applicants for high offices.

The Journal of Organic and Medical Chemistry is out against pork, and defies all hog-eaters, chemists, and physiologists to prove that hogs' flesh is a healthy article of diet.

The Albion, published at New York, expresses the belief that the British squadron on the coast of Cuba is about to be further increased, with the determination effectually to put down the slave trade in that locality.

Some idea of the business done at Melbourne, Australia, may be obtained from the fact that the Argus of that place, of Sept. 1, a daily paper, contains over forty-two columns of advertisements, seven of which are auction sales.

☞ It is stated that the Earl of Aberdeen, the new prime minister of England, is a member of the Presbyterion church of Scotland. It is said also that since James II., there has been no prime minister who was not a member of the church of England.

Our Congressmen behaved very badly on the evening of their first after-dark session. One of the Democratic members from Iowa made his descent from the gallery to the body of the House by sliding down one of the pillars! This performance was greeted with roars of laughter.

A letter from Rio Janeiro states that on the 22d of December, one thousand slaves were landed from a slaver, at Dios Ries, and sold for 800 milreas each. A war steamer was despatched to the spot, but when she arrived the slaves had been sent into the interior, and the slaver had disappeared.

The London Athenæum, in an article on the literary productions of last year, remarks that France is, for the moment, blotted out from the list of literary nations. "All the muses are silent on her soil, her poets are exiles, her wits and orators silent. Her historians, with one bold and noble exception, are abashed and idle." Alas! for the withering blight of despotism.

While N. P. Willis was in New Orleans he saw two tables in the bar-room of his hotel, on one of which was spread out a lunch, with terrapin soup, olives, sandwiches, &c.; the other, directly opposite, was set out with half-a-dozen pretty and nicely dressed negresses, from eighteen to twenty-five years of age, seated in chairs upon the top of the table, and waiting to be sold presently at auction!

FASHION.—The Home Journal is responsible for this piece of important information to whom it may concern:

"The disputed question—May a gentleman wear a frock coat at an evening party?—seems to have been decided in the affirmative; and, accordingly, young gentlemen take particular pleasure in wearing that long obnoxious garment, with the additional innovation of black neckerchiefs. White waistcoats are generally discarded, and white kids yield precedence to gloves of color."

LIQUOR LAW IN OHIO.—A liquor bill is before the Legislature in Ohio, which allows the manufacture of spirituous liquors in the State, the transportation through and storage in the State, and the sale of liquors by any one, without restriction, for medicinal, mechanical, and sacramental purposes. A motion to amend so as to prohibit the manufacture of spirituous liquors in the State was opposed by the friends of the bill, thinking it would kill the whole thing, and was lost by a decided vote. No decisive vote has been taken on the bill.

Chloroform is being used to remove bees from the honey comb. The hive is placed above a chamber, having a glass window at one side, and a small hole pierced at the other. The chloroform is put into a small bottle, having two tubes through its cork, only one of which is allowed to come into immediate contact with the chloroform. The tube which does not come into immediate contact with the chloroform is inserted into the small hole in the side of the box, and by blowing into the other, the chamber is soon filled with the gas, and they tumble out into a box below.

Africans not Barbarians.

BY HON. EDWARD EVERETE.

"Sir, at the present day Africa is not the abode of utter barbarism. Here again we do not discriminate; we judge in the gross. Some of her tribes are, indeed, hopelessly broken down by internal wars and foreign slave trade, and the situation of the whole continent is exceedingly adverse to any progress in culture. But they are not savages; the mass of the population live by agriculture; there is some traffic between the coast and the interior; there is a rude architecture; gold dust is collected, iron is smelted, weapons and utensils of husbandry and household uses are wrought, cloth is manufactured and dyed, palm oil is expressed, and schools are taught. Among the Mahomedan tribes the Koran is read. I have seen a native African in this city who had passed forty years of his life as a slave in the field, who, at the age of seventy, wrote the Arabic character with the elegance of a scribe. And Mungo Park tells us that law suits are argued with as much ability, fluency, and at as much length, in the interior of Africa, as at Edinburgh. I certainly am aware that the condition of the most advanced tribes of Central Africa is wretched, mainly in consequence of the slave trade, which exists among them in the most deplorable form. The only wonder is, that with this cancer eating into their vitals from age to age, any degree of civilization can exist. But I think it may be said, without exaggeration, that, degraded as are the ninety millions of Africans, ninety millions exist in Europe, to which each country contributes her quota, not much less degraded. The difference is, and certainly an all-important difference, that in Europe, intermingled with those ninety millions, are fifteen or twenty millions, possessed of all degrees of culture, up to the very highest; while in Africa, there is not an individual who, according to our standard, has attained a high degree of civilization. But doubts of the capacity of the African race for self-government, and their improvability under favorable circumstances, seem to me to be removed by what we witness at the present day, both in our own country, and on the coast of that continent. Notwithstanding the disadvantages of their condition in this country, specimens of intellectual ability, the talent of writing and speaking, capacity for business, for the ingenious and mechanical arts, for accounts, for the ordinary branches of academical learnings, have been exhibited by our colored brethren, which would do no discredit to Anglo-Saxons. Pall Cuffer, well recollected in New England, was a person of great energy. His father was an African slave; his mother, an Indian of the Elizabeth Islands, Mass. I have already alluded to the extraordinary attainments of Abderrahaman. A man of better manners or more respectable appearance I never saw.

The learned blacksmith of Alabama, now in Siberia, has attained a celebrity scarcely inferior to that of his white brother, known by the same designation. I frequently attended the examinations at a school in Cambridge, at which Beverly Williams was a pupil. Two youths from Georgia and a son of my own were his fellow pupils. Beverly was born a slave in Mississippi, and apparently of pure African blood. He was one of the best scholars, perhaps the best Latin scholar, in his class. These are indications of intellectual ability, afforded under discouraging circumstances at home.

On the coast of Africa the success of Liberia (the creation of this Society) ought to put to rest all doubts on this question. The affairs of that interesting settlement, under great difficulties and discouragements, have been managed with a discretion, an energy, and I must say, all things considered, with a success which authorizes the most favorable inference as to the capacity of the colored races for self-government. It is about thirty years since the settlement began, and I think it must be allowed that its progress will compare favorably with that of Virginia and Plymouth after an equal length of time.

They have established a well organized constitution of Republican Government. It is administered with ability; the Courts of Justice are modelled after our own.—They have schools and churches. The soil is tilled, the country is explored, the natives are civilized. the slave trade is banished, a friendly intercourse is maintained with foreign powers, and England and France have acknowledged their independent sovereignty. Would a handful of Anglo-Americans from the humblest classes of society here do better than this?"

[Speech before the Colonization Society.

"Drunkenness is a Crime."

When a poor trembling convict was arraigned before our Criminal Court, a few days since, to receive the sentence of the law, he was asked the usual question whether he had any thing to say. He gave utterance to a very common remark under such circumstances: "May it please your Honor, if I committed the crime with which I am charged, I was so drunk that I did not know it." His Honor said, "this is no excuse, but aggravates your guilt; drunkenness is a crime."

If "drunkenness is a crime," how many criminals are upon the bench and in our Legislative Halls, both State and National?

The only difference between this class of criminals and that in the States' prisons, is, that the latter have unintentionally and perhaps unconsciously done what the former would have done, under precisely the same circumstances.

Hannegan, when the distinguished Senator in Congress, was a criminal, like scores of his associates, but he was not so regarded. In a state of wild delirium, he unfortunately took the life of his best earthly friend, and to restore that life he would cheerfully lay down his own a thousand times. Is it true that the act of killing his brother-in-law, is aggravated by his drunkenness? We know this doctrine is advocated in some old law books and is reiterated by modern Judges, but it is false and absurd. It is a libel upon the common sense of mankind, to declare that an offence committed when the offender is destitute of reason, (we care not from what cause,) is more aggravated than when committed by a person in full possession of all his faculties. Hannegan's guilt consisted in yielding to the tempter who sits in the lurking places of the villages, to ensnare and murder the innocent. The liquor seller must expect his full measure of punishment at the hands of a just God, as a participant in the crime of murder. We would rather be in Hannegan's place at the bar of eternal justice, than that of the liquor sellers who mix the damning potion. We should be surprised not to find in holy writ, "woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and maketh him drunken."

We would not be understood as wishing to exculpate the drunkard; we acknowledged that he is guilty of a crime; but the old serpent, the tempter was "cursed above all cattle," and, made to crawl upon his belly and eat dust forever, for seducing inuocence.

If drunkenness is a crime, why denounce those as enthusiasts and fanatics, who oppose the election of drunkards to places of honor, trust and profit. The political press utters a piteous cry that we "are destroying the holy cause of Temperance," "mingling Temperance with politics," &c. &c., when we say that drunken Whigs and drunken Democrats—"criminals"—ought not and cannot have our suffrage.

If drunkenness is a crime, why permit the cause of drunkenness to remain undisturbed? Why should Legislators and Judges throw themselves between society and the filthy stews, where this crime is engendered, and make their stations, cities of refuge, for the miserable panderer to vicious degrading, criminal appetite?

If drunkenness is a crime, what must be the guilt of the sovereign people of this country, who, knowingly take measures to produce it, or what is equally as bad permit its perpetration when they have the power to prevent it.

If drunkenness is a crime, what is the measure of guilt that attaches to the moderate drinker? The moderate use of the poison impairs the body, the intellect and the moral sense; and thus overpowered, they yield necessarily to the demands of perverted, vitiated appetite. In conclusion, if "drunkenness is a crime," we wish some of our Judges would not forget the fact, as they visit the saloons during the progress of business through the day, and after the adjournment of Court in the evening. They may find themselves in the "criminals' box," before they are aware of it.

It has been suggested, that a saloon on the same floor with the Court Room would facilitate the public business.—Ohio Organ.

Outrage on Liberty.

We see it announced in an exchange paper, that "a whole car load of putrid meat, on its way to market, has been seized in New York." What an abominable and unconstitutional outrage upon the rights of the citizen! Has not a man in this free country a right to sell what he pleases, provided he can find purchasers? We hope this abused and persecuted citizen who was thus summarily deprived of his property, will contrive by some means to get his case before his Honor Judge Curtis, of the Supreme Court of the United States, who will see his wrongs redressed. He was, probably, "a citizen of another State," New Jersey, perhaps, and his meat was possibly only "in transitu." If these are the facts, and if, in addition, it should appear that he had not "the right of trial by jury," before his stinking cargo was condemned, a right sacredly guarantied by the Constitution, then his case is a complete one, and parallel to the one recently decided in Rhode Island. Oh! civil liberty, whither hast thou fled! We wonder if such "tyrannical acts" will not create a civil war! Will our butchers tamely and quietly submit to such flagrant invasions of their sacred and inalienable rights?—If the seizure had been a car-load of bad liquor, it would have been resisted, and the constitutional question would have been discussed by able counsel, and decided by impartial judges. Will not that large and respectable class of feltow-citizens who are interested in the sale of meats, raise a purse and employ lawyers to have this matter fairly presented and fully decided?

The pretence urged for this seizure of property was, that the "public health" would be put in jeopardy. A class of crazy fanatics assert that no individual has a right to sell any article, which will endanger the health and life, corrupt the public morals, or peril the public peace, and we suppose some of this obnoxious class of zealots have been trampling upon the "blood-bought privileges" of this citizen. Our Fathers declared that all men have an inalienable right to "the pursuit of happiness;" and yet, in the face of this sacred declaration, a law is enacted and enforced, to stop a man on his road to market!—This case ought to be brought before our National Judiciary.—Ohio Organ.

From the Ohio Organ.

MR. EDITOR—Dear Sir: I send you some extracts from the "Docket of the Prosecuting Attorney of Fairfield county, Ohio," which will be useful to show how much whisky costs the body politic.

The number of Indictments found by the Grand Jury from July Term, A. D. 1850, to Oct. Term, 1852, is	384
Of these crimes, the number set down as caused by Intemperance, is	322
Costs of Prose'n, $2,024.81
No. of days the Grand Jury were in session	45
Fifteen Grand Jurors, 45 days each, is	675 days
No. of Witnesses, 386, one day each, is	386 days
Making together	1061 days

Or more than 3⅓ years (deducting Sabbaths) of valuable time employed in the investigation of crime, (exclusive of the time occupied before the Court in hearing the cases) which was a loss to the industry of the county of more than $1000.

So, then, the Records of Crime in this county, show (exclusive of a multitude of cases brought before Justices of the Peace and Mayors of corporate towns) that WHISKY alone has cost the tax-payers of Fairfield the sum of $1,697.88

The whole am't of fines assessed were	$3,352.96
Am't collected	584.04
Ded. am't collected in whisky cases	$489.70
Loss in money in costs &c		1,208.18
Add probable am't of expenses incident to trial, &c		4,000.00
Estimated loss to the industry of the country,		2,000.00
Estimated loss in money,		$7,208.18

It will be noticed how small a proportion of the fines assessed, have been realized. This mainly arises from the irresponsible character, generally, of criminals. I say generally, for there are some who have money and influence sufficient to hold the administrators of the law in abeyance.

Such statistics as the above, I have no doubt, could be collected in every county almost in the State, and if collected and brought to the notice of sober, reflecting men, would be enough to convince them that we have need of stringent legislation in regard to the liquor traffic, leaving wholly out of view the question of morals, and the incalculable sum of human suffering consequent upon intemperance.

With a view to add to the amount of temperance information, and to induce others to collect like statistics, I have contributed these hastily collected facts.

Respectfully yours,
W. B. KREIDER.

Lancaster, Feb. 11, 53.

"Tyrannical Legislation."

A considerable number of the political papers, in view of the immense pressure of popular sentiment in favor of a prohibitory liquor law, are casting about for some expedient to stop the clamors of "temperance fanatics," and save their parties from division.

The plan of having town, city and county hospitals for inebriates, where they might be subjected to medical treatment, and cut off from a supply of liquor, and in addition deprive them of the ability to control their own property, is meeting with great favor from political editors. It is urged that the fear of being sent to a house of correction and reformation, would deter thousands from becoming grossly intemperate. It is also urged that the proposed law of prohibition is so tyrannical in its features that the men of free thought, in the West, would not submit to it, however it might suit the latitude and longitude of New England.

In relation to the fear inspiring hospitals, we would say:

First—That the plan is impracticable and absurd. It would create a fine harvest for litigation and controversy that would benefit nobody but the lawyers. If the fear of bodily and mental ruin, personal degradation, the certain destitution of family, will not deter men from getting drunk, what can the dread of having ample provisions made for their comfort at the public expense, do to arrest those who are in the broad road.

Second—It is bad economy and worse morals to provide the means to ruin men, and then support them, when Government has the right and power to remove the cause of this ruin, and thus save coming generations.

As to the tyranny of a law of prohibition, we submit to the common sense of mankind, whether the hospital system, even if practicable, is not more tyrannical.

Which savors most of tyranny, to seize and destroy intoxicating drinks kept for illegal sale, or to deprive the citizen of the control of his honestly earned property—seize and confine him, that doctors may experiment upon his carcass.

We are told that the people would approve of making drunkenness a crime, and depriving the inebriate of his property and liberty, but they are opposed to the extreme measure of destroying liquor.—The very opposite of this is probably true. There has not been a single instance, within our knowledge, East or West, North or South, where the people have been permitted to express their sentiments at the ballot box, on the naked question of prohibition, that they have not voted affirmatively. These very men who prate so much about our being in advance of the people, dare not submit it to their decision. Even in the wilds of Minnesota, the people voted for the Maine Law.—In Vermont, a law far more stringent than that of Maine, was passed, submitted to the electors, and what is the result.—Scarcely a political paper in the State favored the measure. Party politicians were openly and secretly opposed, the provisions of the bill were misrepresented, lies by the hundred thousand were circulated, the liquor-sellers fired up the patriotism of their customers, and yet the law is approved.

When you propose to deprive a man of his liberty and property for indulging in excess of luxury, then you may fear the frowns of freemen. We have said lawyers would have a harvest. How? Mr. A. B. is arrested as a common drunkard—he is worth ten or twenty thousand dollars. He employs counsel—the case is litigated—relations want to be guardians—children are summoned to testify, and the neighborhood is thrown into a ferment.

Away with all such fooleries. Give us a law that looks to the protection of the next generation, and if the old soakers of this "will have liquor if they steal it," we shall soon be rid of them, and then hospitals will be unnecessary.—Ohio Organ.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.—The Missionary Herald for the present month contains some information of an interesting and encouraging character from several of the missions. Letters from the Sandwich Islands state that the religious interest which has been previously mentioned, continued. The attention of most of the people was more or less awakened. Many of the papists had left their teachers, and the priests were feverish with alarm.—Mr. Coan writes—"We have not had a more interesting time since the great awakening in 1837—'9. The present work, however, cannot be compared with that for energy and vital power. But the present is good and cheering." On the Sabbath prior to the date of this letter Mr. Coan admitted 72 persons to his church by profession. Nearly 200 had been admitted within four months, and there were many more candidates.

Letters from Bombay state that a learned Hindoo has recently commenced a course of lectures in a Hindoo Temple, in which he discussed the merits of Hindooism and Christianity. This, instead of being an evil, helps to excite interest and draws increased attention to the discussions. The letter says, "other causes, calculated to awaken the attention of the people to religious subjects, are also at work; so that at the present time in Bombay these subjects are on all sides examined with unwonted interest. There never has been anything like it since our coming to India."

A letter from Mr. Winslow at Madras, states that at the public examination of a native girls' school, one of the most prominent of the native gentlemen spoke in a very earnest and effective manner in favor of the re-marriage of Hindoo females.—He had an audience of some eight hundred respectable natives, and his speech was warmly cheered and applauded.—The letter adds:

"He brought arguments even from the Hindoo shasters to prove that the present degrading system of excluding from social life all young widows, and forcing multitudes, left widows while yet almost children, into a life of loneliness, and, indeed, servitude, unless they run into sin and become abandoned, as too often they do, is not a part of Hindooism in its purer form, and ought to be renounced. This is a most important movement in the right direction."

The earliest sacred writings of the Hindoos, it is said, do not justify the degradation of widows, nor idolatry, nor caste. And the people will one day understand this matter.

Choice Gems.

The loss of reason is less deplorable than the total deprivation of it.

The man who feels himself ignorant, should at least be modest.

The memory of the just is blessed, but the name of the wicked shall rot.

The more servants a man keeps, the more spies he has upon his actions.

The more true merit a man has, the more does he applaud it in others.

The most provident have commonly more to spare than men of great fortunes.

The only way to be humble is to be affable.

The poor man's penny unjustly detained, is a coal of fire in a rich man's purse.

The sum of Christian morality is—give and forgive, bear and forbear.

The usual fortune of complaint is to excite contempt more than pity.

They are always impaired by affliction, who are thereby not improved.

They that avoid not small faults, by little and little fall into greater.

Thine own friend and thy father's friend forsake not.

Think before you speak, and consider before you promise.

Think not to reap in seed time, or sow in harvest.

Those best can bear reproof, who merit praise.

Time, like money, may be lost by unseasonable avarice.

'Tis virtue only that repels fear, and fear only that makes life troublesome.

To be proud of learning is the greatest ignorance.

To humble a proud man, you must take no notice of him.

To err is human—to forgive, divine.

To live is a gift; to die is a debt.—This is only a prelude to eternity.

Th eProgress of the Maine Law.

The news of this week is full of encouragement, and should be set forth in the land. The people of the State of Vermont have voted on the Anti-Liquor question, and in 100 towns there was a majority of 3,000 in favor of the law. The matter then is settled, and Vermont is to have the Law now instead of December.

The bill which has been pending before the legislature of Michigan for the last month, has been passed. A most triumphant victory. Michigan is the first western State to adopt this glorious feature of progress.

Rhode Island has faithfully maintained her position, and has passed her new law: so the shout of the rummies has hardly had time to send back its echo before they are again defeated.

We may say also that Massachusetts seems to stand firm, and we have no fears. Let us push on to the victory.—Portsmouth Life Boat.

You will always be reckoned by the world nearly of the same character with those whose company you keep.

Why is Mullony's bedstead like one of our fancy wagons? Because it's "a little buggy."

Acknowledgments

Received of T. M. Stevens, J. Green, Henry Cotton, each, for the Chart, one year, 75 cents; W. W. Williams, 37½ cts. for Chart, 6 months; S. Bowers, 30 cents on the Chart; Z. Loyd, $2.00 for Chart, Kent, Jefferson county; M. J. Cooper, 75 cents, Greencastle, Ind.; H. Hough, 37½ cents for Chart, 6 months; Milton Division S. of T., $4 50 for the Chart; M. English, 75 cents for Chart.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—CHEAPEST OF ALL.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No. 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT

MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

FOR THE CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost INSTANTANEOUS relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, consequent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
WM. BURNET, President.
S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. RICHARD M. HALL. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,
june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washingion Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851.

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently despaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many r medies without much relief, I at last tried the CHERRY PECTORAL which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

DR. AYER, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
EDWARD HITCHCOCK, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. AYER. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

PRESIDENT PERKINS, Vermont Med. College.
PROF. SILLIMAN, Yale College
PROF. VALENTINE MOTT, New York.
PROF. CLEAVELAND, Bowdoin Med. College.
PROF. BUTTERFIELD, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. GEO. P. MARSH, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen. EMANUEL BULNES, President of Chili.
RT. REV. ED POWER, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. DOCT. LANSING, Brooklyn, New York.
ARCHBISHOP PURSELL, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

---

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY

BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1853. NO. 38.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

☞ What a beautiful picture is the following. Ah! it makes one almost throw away the pen and hurry home to the dear wife God hath blessed our hearth with.—What shall repay the loss of such a welcome as this to the lonely Bachelor. Not even the luxuries of negative cares—not the silent hours of study—not the independence as a man! For without the love of Woman in the gentlest corner of the heart, all welcomes are, indeed, cold.—Ex.

I Wait for Thee.

The hearth is swept—the fire is bright,
  The kettle sings for tea;
The cloth is spread—the lamp is light,
The white cakes smoke in napkins white,
  And now I wait for thee.

Come, come, love, home, thy task is done,
  The clock ticks listeningly,
The blinds are shut—the curtain down,
The warm chair to the fireside drawn,
  The boy is on my knee.

Come home, love, home, his deep fond eye
  Looks round him wistfully,
And when the whispering winds go by,
As if thy welcome step was nigh,
  He crows exultingly.

In vain—he finds the welcome vain,
  And turns his glance on mine,
So earnestly that yet again
His form unto my heart I strain,
  That glance is so like thine.

Thy task is done, we miss thee here,
  Where'er thy footsteps roam,
No heart will spread such kindly cheer,
No beating heart, no listening ear,
  Like those who wait thee home.

Ah, along the crisp walk fast
  That well known step doth come,
The bolt is drawn, the gate is past,
The babe is wild with joy at last,
  A thousand welcomes home.

MISCELLANEOUS.

J. C. Blain's Address,

Before Marion Section, Cadets of Temperance, Feb. 12, 1853.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Section be tendered to J. C. BLAIN, for his address, and request a copy of the same for publication.

WORTHY PATRON AND FELLOW MEMBERS: In appearing before you this evening, in answer to your call, I feel a consciousness of my inability to meet your reasonable expectations. Therefore, while attempting very briefly to address you on the topic which has called us together, I solicit your kind indulgence, and beg to assure you, that it is my love for the good cause in which we are all enlisted, that has alone prompted me to respond to the invitation so kindly tendered to me.

My friends, the title which you have adopted to designate your association is a very suggestive one. The young man who becomes a Cadet at West Point has a life-long object in view in doing so. He desires to become a soldier and fight the battles of his country, and avenge her wrongs. His young and enthusiastic spirit pants for distinction and honor. He sees that a thorough knowledge of his profession is indispensable to the attainments of his wishes. He therefore immediately sets about the accomplishment of his purposes, and schools himself to the arduous studies and severe duties of his newly chosen career. No obstacles are sufficient to hinder his progress in the acquisition of knowledge, and ere long he makes his mark in the annals of his country.

We too are Cadets, young soldiers, ambitious of distinction in a better and holier cause, I trust, than that characterized under the expressive epithet of "grim visaged war." Our theme in the significant words which are adopted for our motto, namely—

"TRUTH, VIRTUE, AND TEMPERANCE."

I say this our theme and motto is one most worthy of our zealous attachments and untiring efforts. In all our moral warfare under the glorious banner, inscribed with this triune motto, we shall be encouraged and emboldened by the abiding conviction that our weapons are wielded for God and humanity. Clothed in the armor of these principles, no opposition shall beat us back; no cowardly or selfish feelings deter us from our steady assaults upon the strong holds of the enemy. Being well schooled and disciplined for our several stations and duties in life, and inspired with an ever-abiding sense of inestimable value of our principles and aims, we shall become, in these the days of our youth, good soldiers in humanity's cause. I say in these, the days of our youth!—For now it is, that associations are formed and plans adopted as at no after period in life. A certain author well remarks, that "we shall be richly rewarded for stopping to mark the time at which many of the men, distinguished in their generation, began their allotted work. The names of Joseph and Daniel, and Nehemiah, will at once recur to us as brilliant examples in Sacred History, of Providential shapings and indications, with a view to the lofty eminence which they eventually reached."

History is teeming with the names of men and women whose lives have been a glorious legacy to their race, and an honor to humanity; whose plan of life, and their preparation for it, were made with more or less distinctness in their early days.

We may not all be stars of the first or even of the second magnitude. But wherever God in His Providence may be pleased to allot us a place, or with what measure of talent he may invest us, it behooves us as accountable beings, and as members of a common brotherhood, to do whatsoever our hands find to do with all our might; not with a stinted will and a reluctant heart, but with true christian liberality and nobleness. Thus shall we be able to win our erring brothers and sisters from the paths of iniquity and viciousness, and do our own souls good.

Oh, the thoughtlessness and heedlessness of youth! Would that I could ring in their ears, with thunder tones, STOP AND THINK. It is an admonition that we all need. But the thoughtless youth—oh, let hm stop and think, ever and anon as temptation assails him, and ponder while in the path of iniquity and on the road to ruin. Escape for thy life, oh youth! else so imperceptibly wilt thou be drawn into the vortex, that ere thou art aware of it, thy reputation will be lost. Such a loss is next to irreparable. Long years of repentance and adherence to the right will not obliterate the bitter memories of the past, nor compensate for their evils. Be on the watch, then, young man! Guard all the avenues of thy heart against the allurements and enticements of evil. Shun all the haunts of dissipation. Above all, touch not the intoxicating cup—cast it from thee as a viper that will surely sting thee to death. By all the tender considerations of parental affection, by every motive of duty to your associates, to society, to your country and to your God, be persuaded to fight the good fight of "Truth, Virtue and Temperance."

Let us nail the flag to the mast, and resolve, come what may, that we will never surrender, nor give an inch to the enemy that seeks to seduce only that he may destroy. Have we not enlisted for the war? And does not the campaign end only with our mortal existence? Verily our answer is yea. It is true, the persons comprising the assembly before me, to-night, may, in the common course of events, be scattered, but that matters but little, so long as we, one and all, shall continue to wear faithfully the helmet of our order and enforce, by precept and example, the glorious principles embodied in its motto.—Then shall we, indeed, be as bulwarks of defence against the floods of intemperance that threaten to sweep over our beloved land.

But it may be asked: Why all these admonitions to us? Have we not faithfully adhered to our pledges and fulfilled all our obligations as members of our order? I answer, you have, as I hope and trust. But, alas! human nature is weak. We are all too apt to grow weary in well doing. The most successful General does not fail to appeal to his soldiers as often as a new battle is to be waged against the common enemy. He knows the potency of those appeals to their patriotism, their pride, and love of military glory. Therefore, although he does not doubt their fidelity, he ceases not to make constant and unremitting proclamations to them, of the glory which awaits them, if they but fearlessly and faithfully perform the duties assigned them. And if such be the fact in regard to the influences which are exerted in the horrid and bloody achievements of war, it is equally true that like proclamations and appeals are necessary to stir up our dormant and ever-flagging energies in the great moral warfare we are waging against those stalking enemies of our race—Vice and Intemperance.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty"—in a moral, as well as a political sense, and wo to that people who disregard its solemn truth.

These considerations will impel us to renewed zeal in furthering the objects of our associations. Besides these, there are other cheering encouragements to inspirit us to redoubled energy in the glorious cause. It is true the enemies of our principles seem just now to be marshaling their forces for a final and desperate effort to accomplish their nefarious and cruel purposes; but it can't be that they will succeed. No! All the reminiscences of the past, all the facts of the present, and all the signs of the times—prophetic of the future—forbid such an unhallowed consumation. Already, from end of the land to the other, are the friends of our side buckling on their armor to meet their opposers. We may not accomplish an easy victory, but in the end we have no doubt of the success of the Right. Progress is too indelibly stamped on the age to permit of a well-grounded apprehension as to the final result. Therefore, let us go on our way rejoicing, doing the works meet for so blessed a hope.

Our principles are as broad in their spirit as the universe. The genius of our order looks out upon every victim of vice and error as a brother, a kinsman, and commands the electric chain of a brother's sympathy and succor. It is our privilege, severally and individually, to act the part of good Samaritans in rescuing our unfortunate fellows from the monster that "biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

In our warfare, we shall also be encouraged by the fact, that it would be difficult now to find a man who would stand up before the community and preach for intemperance. The public mind has been so changed and revolutionized by the power and influence of arguments and facts—all of which have went to establish the temperance cause to such a degree—that no man, however much he may be prejudiced against it, will say that it is right and proper for a man or woman to drink alcoholic beverages to intoxication, or who will say, that it is no sin for a father or husband to beggar his wife and children for the sake of gratifying his sensual debaucheries. Not a dealer in strong drink in the land is there who will say this. No, he who traffics in the souls and bodies of beings immortal, and whose heart is as hard as the adamantine rock, is compelled to acknowledge the soul-cheering results which have followed the triumphant march of an army whose leading star is philanthropy, and whose object is the elevation of man. Though men everywhere may indeed differ concerning the adoption of measures for the aid of temperance, yet in plain words, they will say that they believe the cause good and profess to oppose certain efforts because they believe it will retard its progress, if they are adopted.

Thus when we look around us to-day and ask, how does the spirit of Reform stand now in our midst, in comparison with what it was a few years in the past, the answer that comes is far otherwise than disheartening and discouraging to the hopeful. Thank God, that so bright a picture can be presented. But the end is not yet; for it can't be denied that even now, forty thousand of our citizens die annually of drunkenness. This cruel sacrifice is yearly offered upon the bloody altars of bacchus. Property, health, reputation, and all things dear to man fall before this sharpened weapon of death like forest trees "before the sweeping tornado." All other evils combined have not done so much to impoverish the people of this country. A whole chapter of details could be furnished by every asylum, by every prison-house, by every grave-yard, and by almost every family hearth.

"Fearful and long thy reign has been,
  And many a tear thou hast caused to flow,
  Hast been the mothers deepest pain,
  Has been the sisters direst foe."

Who, then, will stand back and refuse to throw his influence on the side of the suffering victims of this hellish—this monster vice? Let it not be said that one of us shall be found wanting in faithfulness to the cause we have espoused. God forbid that any of us should fail of our duty in staying to the full extent of our ability the wretchedness of millions of our fellow-beings. My young friends,

"Seemeth life to thee like a pleasant May—
  Are its flowers all fresh, their colors all gay."

Thus has it been with thousands before you, who, alas! have fallen by the way and made shipwreck of life, because they were not fortified against the besetments and allurements which crossed their path, and especially because, after having entered on the high road to death, they had no brotherly or sisterly hand extended to them to guide them in the better way. Verily, our lot is cast in more pleasant places. For the cause in which we are engaged, and which we seek to establish, we have the mighty influence of woman arrayed and earnestly exerted. The presence of so many ladies here to-night gives goodly token that their hearts and souls are fully enlisted with us. We rejoice exceedingly in this fact, for without their aid and support we could not reasonably expect to come off victorious. They have beheld the sublime moral excellencies which have resulted from a practical operation of the principles, recognized in this institution as sacred. Actuated by pure love to the human family, and feeling conscious of the fact that these principles are essential to the advancement, promotion, and happiness of our people, they have become coworkers with us in disseminating them throughout this, our beloved Commonwealth. We have their aid, sympathy, and co-operation. They, too, indulge the hope that the day is not far distant when the great fountain from which emanates so much misery, crime, and human woe, shall be quenched, and principles of morality permanently and universally established—when temperance shall erect her magnificent altar in every family, and virtue her lovely throne in every heart. They feel a deep and an anxious solicitude for the triumph of this glorious work which guards and protects the youth of our land from the destructive influences of vice and error—stamps upon their mind principles which are ennobling and elevating in their character, and which makes life a pleasant dream and death a welcome messenger.

We rejoice that this order has been so constructed as to enable them to partake of its rich festivities; for we know the self-sacrificing spirit and high moral influences which characterize their sex. It is within these walls, and around this sacred altar, where young men dedicate themselves to virtue's noble cause, that woman's mighty and generous impulses will find an ample sympathy and co-operation. Here she may be enabled to accomplish the more successfully the beneficent purposes of her heart. These traits in her character will prompt us as male members of this association to a more zealous action. Her example will stimulate us to a more vigilant effort, as young men seeking the redemption of our fellows from vice, crime, and dissipation.

Upon them rests a great responsibility. They hold the moral destinies of our people in their hands. They can be mainly instrumental in making the waste places green again, and under their hands the moral desert will blossom as the rose.—We therefore invoke their united assistance in effecting the glorious ends of "Truth, Virtue, and Temperance."

But, methings, no wordy declamation is needed to awaken woman to a sense of the great importance to her, of the objects sought to be obtained through the agency and instrumentalities of societies and associations like that convened here to-night. Alas! she knows too well by bitter experience the sorrows which hath eaten out her heart like a moth, and in the prime of life verified the lament of the dying inebriate, as expressed in the touching language of the sweet poetess—

"In her white shroud she lieth
  Beneath the cold stone;
My life was the shadow
  That darkened her own,
And my death-crown to-night,
  Is the thorns I have sown."

Heaven grant that the future may not be as the past to too many of the women of our country. They have been the innocent victims of a vice more appalling and more destructive to domestic bliss, than all others combined. It is quite sufficient for the tender mother to behold her beloved son strickened down by a common disease, and pine away and die. But who can tell the anguish of her heart, when she sees him

"Rage and toss in consuming fire,
  Till nature, spent with agony, expire."

It is quite enough for the sister to near the bed-side of a pious brother, and for the last time grasp his death-strickened hand, and imprint the parting kiss upon his pale cheek; but who can describe the horrid pangs which the death-bed scene of a debauched brother creates in her heart.—Nothing less than the finger of the recording angel can picture out the mighty emotions of the sympathizing heart in such hours as these.

Oh, God! how long shall this our beloved State be the theatre of such scenes as these? How long shall this system receive the sanction of law, which "robs earth of its loveliness, and heaven of its jewels?" When shall this fireside desolation cease? When shall the prayers which ascend up to the God of Sabaoth for the emancipation of our people from under the power and dominion of this giant monster, be answered? How long shall the Rum-seller be permitted by the laws of the land to turn the father into a fiend, and lacerate the mother's heart? How long shall these mighty 'monuments of God's forbearance,' be permitted to blast the hopes of our people?—and who, like beasts of prey, now stand upon the "necks of their fellow-men, and suck the heart's blood of their prostrate victims."

"Thou foulest of the fiends of hell,
  When wilt thou stay thy direful hand?
  When shall the friends of temperance tell
  That thou art driven from the land?"

"Thy withering hand hath spread
  Sorrow, and tears, and death;
Fair virtue mourns at early birth.—
  Soon may she greet thy latest breath."

We rejoice to know that in some of the States of this glorious confederacy, Truth and Virtue have triumphed over vice and crime. The voice of an emancipated host in Maine resound throughout this broad valley, while Minnesota's gallant sons echo back the song. A beautiful star can be seen in the great moral horizon—it bids the patriot to hope, and the Christian to take courage. In this State the harvest is whitening for the cycle; but we have to lament that the laborers are so few. But let us persevere in a cause so worthy of our affections and efforts, relying upon the blessing of an All Wise Providence to crown our labors with success. The battle is not always to the strong, nor the race to the swift. By a "patient continuance in well doing," we shall come off victorious in our conflicts.

Let the principles of our order be emblazoned upon our shield and breast-plate, and let us resolve, one and all, to go forward in the path of duty, and walk faithfully therein while life lasts, and so reap the reward of good stewards, and receive the welcome of Him who, while on earth, went about doing good.

New Flooring Composition.

SATURATE a quantity of chalk, or marl, or lime, or loamy clay, or sandy earth previously reduced to the state of fine powder, with oil or tar, or mineral tar, or vegetable napths, or any other resinous, oily or fatty matter. Then take one cwt. of rosin, and melt it in a caldron exposed to a gentle fire, until all the fire is evaporated, and throw into the caldron, 2 cwt. of the saturated chalk, or other earth, and mix it well with the melted rosin. Next add from three to six pounds of Liquid India Rubber, or from three to six pounds of essential oil of tar, or some other oily or fatty substance, and after that from 3 to 5 cwt. of sulphur, and finally two cwt. of dry grit, keeping all the contents of the caldron well stirred, till the whole are thoroughly amalgamated.—When cool the compound is of a saltish grey color, and of a close, granular texture.

This compound may be used by being laid down in a hot and fluent state, of sufficient thickness; or combined with any of the natural asphaltes, or bitumen, or with wood or stone, to make a perfectly anti-damp flooring, durable and cheap.

LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS
v. 2 # 38

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1853.

Gold Pens.

We advise all those who desire to purchase the very best gold pens in use to call at NEFF's Jewelry Store, at the Palmer House, in this city. Any other article of jewelry can also be found there of the best quality and on the most reasonable terms. Those who desire bargains in this line will do themselves a favor by giving him a call.

"The Farm and Shop."

The first No. of this beautiful Agricultural paper is before us; and, so far as we are competent to judge, it is not unworthy of the patronage and warm support of the farmers and mechanics of Indiana. Its selections are judicious and valuable, evincing good taste and a proper appreciation of the wants of our people on the part of its editor; while its original articles, both editorial and communicated, indicate the ability of their authors respectively.—Such a paper is needed, and should be liberally supported by the working men of Indiana.

"THE FARM AND SHOP" is got up in quarto form, and printed on fine large and clear type. Each number contains sixteen pages, and it is issued semi-monthly, at $1.00 per annum per copy, or 50 cents for six months. It is edited and published by O. F. MAYHEW, Esq., and printed by ELDER & HARKNESS, at their Book and Job Steam Press office, Indianapolis.

Stand at your Posts.

The Division of the Sons of Temperance, at South Bend, in this State, has been dissolved by vote of the brethren, some of whom have attached themselves to the Temple of Honor in that place. We regret to see Divisions thus consenting to their own death; for, as a means of advancing Temperance, we regard the Order of the Sons as the most efficient in existence. This we say with due deference to all other Temperance organizations. The Temple of Honor is the most powerful for its own preservation, but not the most efficient means to operate with the masses. The Sons should never give up the glorious means of doing good which they possess, nor tarnish the laurels they have won.

Indiana Laws.

We publish the liquor law passed at the late session of the Legislature, in order to enable our readers to judge for themselves of its character. We hope it will be found more efficient in suppressing the evils of intemperance, than, at first view, we believed it would be. Its provisions deserve to be fairly tested. The friends of Temperance owe it to themselves, to see that the law is fairly tried. If it is susceptible of enforcement, let it be enforced; if not, let it be amended at the next meeting of the General Assembly. Should it prove wholly inoperative for good, the principle upon which it professes to be founded, would require its repeal, and the passage of a law fully adequate to suppress the evils of intemperance. This principle is now acknowledged by our Legislature; and from it, there will be no going back, by the people. In politics or out of politics, the efforts of whisky men will not be able to drive back the hosts of Temperance. Here we stand upon the admissions of this law, and assure our adversaries that the first move we make will be an advance, and not a retrograde movement.

The friends of Temperance, and order, and economy may take heart; for the day already dawns. Another watch, made cheerful by the morning star, and the sun will rise and glorious daylight make glad the hearts of those who are now "sitting in the darkness of the valley and shadow of death." Up then, and he doing. If we have gained anything, it must be maintained with sleepless vigilance and timely exertion. Therefore, be steadfast, abounding in good works; "for in due season you shall reap if you faint not."

A Narrow Escape.

A few nights ago, near the Bellefontaine Depot in the Northeast part of this city, a young lady in returning from a neighbor's house crossed the track of the railroad, upon which, with his head rudely laid on one of the rails, she discovered, greatly to her terror, a drunken man. She hastened back in her fright to the neighbor's, and informed them of the cause of her fright. Two young gentlemen proceeded to the spot, where they found the miserable wretch still laying profoundly asleep. They removed him to a place of safety; but scarcely was he removed before a train passed over that part of the track, which he had chosen for his bed.

Had he been killed there, as but for the merest chance he must have been, who would have been his murderer? Can any one hesitate to answer—the man who made him drunk. It would have been the crime of some one of our shamless and murderous whisky sellers—of Ford, Garner, or some one of their companions in crime.

Maine Law enforced in Indianapolis.

A few days ago Marshal McNeely enforced the Maine law against a tenant of the old "City Hotel," in this city. Several affidavits having been filed against the tenant aforesaid, for selling liquor in violation of law, and writs issued upon them by the Mayor, the Marshal served the writs and brought the defendant before his honor. He was tried and found guilty in four cases. Finding that the fines and costs would amount to more than he felt able to pay if the remaining cases should be decided in the same way, the defendant proposed a compromise, which was effected on something like the following terms:

The defendant agreed to secure the fines and costs in the cases already tried; to permit the Marshal to search his house at pleasure, and destroy any intoxicating liquors he might find there at any time; in consideration of which it was agreed by the court that the cases still remaining untried should be continued, until the defendant violated his part of the agreement. As soon as the agreement was perfected, the Marshal proceeded to search the house of the defendant. In doing this, he found a barrel, from a fourth to a third full of whisky. This he rolled into the street, and knocking out the bung, poured it out. It is said that when about to empty the whisky on the ground, the wretched inmates of other parts of the house ran out with buckets, pitchers, and cups, and besought the Marshal to allow them to catch a "wee drap o' the gude cratur." This being denied them, they showed their devotion to it, by wading through it and endeavoring to scent their clothes with it.

Divorce.

At last the State of Indiana has divorced herself from all connection with the infamous liquor traffic. She has done herself the honor to refuse to continue a partnership with whisky sellers, or to accept the miserable pittance of their blood-stained gains. She has said that she will no longer receive into the treasury the price of innocent blood. She has declared to those miserable economists who have heretofore been willing to grant indulgences to commit crimes of all grades and without number, that if they desire to indulge iniquity hereafter, it shall not be done on the pitiful and disgraceful pretence, that it is profitable—a pretence as false as it is contemptible. This is an epoch in her history, that will not be overlooked in the future. Let the people hereafter remember it, when they go to the polls. If they vote—"LICENSE," they make nothing—absolutely nothing—but the curses and expenses of intemperance for themselves and their childeren. If they vote—"NO LICENSE," they vote against crushing taxation, against the spread of vice, crime, and ruin, individual and national. Then, freemen of Indiana, go to the polls at the April election, and vote with due reference to your own weal; and you will merit the approbation of the wise and the good, by contributing to the elevation and happiness of your fellow-men. Assist, then, in drying up the streams of death that are opened by the lawless monsters of our city, who in the teeth of public opinion and public decency continue to poison the souls and bodies of their fellow-men.

Execute the Law.

Since the Legislature has thought proper to give us a law, "to regulate" a traffic which we have thought should be entirely prohibited; and has, also, coupled with the regulation of that traffic "the suppression of the evils arising therefrom,"—what is the duty of the friends of Temperance in regard to the law? Each of course will answer this question for himself. If, however, there is not some concert of action on the part of the friends of reform in reference to their course in relation to the law, no matter how wise may be our individual notions, they will avail nothing. Our action, to possess any power must be harmonious. Without unity of purpose and action, our efforts will lose the respect of our adversaries, and of course fail of any praiseworthy result.

What then shall be our course? Shall we use the law as a regulator of the traffic; or seize upon its provisions as a means to cripple and destroy it? Certainly no temperance man desires any thing to do with the traffic in the way of regulating it, as that phrase has been heretofore generally understood. So far as temperance men use the law at all, they will have to employ it as a means for suppressing the evils of the traffic, and every effort for that purpose, so far as it goes, is an effort to destroy the traffic. The traffic is fruitful of nothing but evils, and whatever suppresses them, that far suppresses it. To this end, then, if the law can be used by temperance men, must it be employed.—Whatever does not conduce to this end should not have their countenance or aid; and in whatever does, they should act as one man. Let our purpose then be one.

Next to oneness of purpose, our action should be directed to the same point. The means, too, should be the same. The doctrine of resorting to force is discarded by all who are not either crazy or wofully misled by their feelings. Hence, the means to be employed, must be just such as the laws furnish us with. If these be good, well; if not, we must make the most of them. It is true that our great lack has always been in our tools, more than in our own want of skill for the achievement of our purpose. Evidence is the chief instrument for the execution of our penal laws, not only on questions arising from the violation of the liquor laws of the State, but of all other penal laws. Especially has it been so in reference to the former. Our laws have uniformly given us for witnesses, men whose souls and consciences have already fallen into the keeping of the liquor sellers—the men to be punished.—These men, of course, are never too good to suborn their victims to commit perjury, in order that they may go unwhipt of justice. It is a fact, well known, that the most shameless perjuries have been committed in this city, under the immediate direction, advice, and procurement of liquor sellers. It is a common thing. We have yet to see the liquor seller, who will not go even to this degrading length to screen himself from the penalties of the law which he has violated. Indianapolis groans under the weight of a great and accumulating load of perjury, for which her whisky sellers are responsible either directly or indirectly. We have always suffered more from having to depend on corrupted witnesses—witnesses of the liquor sellers' own making—than for want of sufficient penalties.

But we are now to test a new law. Its efficiency or inefficiency must be proved. The first important action to be had upon it, will take place at the ballot-box. It must derive its force either in the aid of whisky sellers of each Township, or against them, by the voters thereof. If a majority of those who vote in relation to the subject, should be in favor of License, then licenses issue of course to all who desire them, and are willing and able to comply with the provisions of the law; if the vote should be against license, then no licenses shall be issued under any circumstances, until at another annual election the people reverse their vote. Those not voting on the subject at all, are not counted. Such bats, will, in the future, occupy a position of neutrality worthy of their patriotism and moral courage. With them all against us, we beat the friends of license in this city last spring; let us see that we do now when the contest is between the friends of temperance on the one hand and drunkenness on the other. Temperance men of Indiana! Show yourselves worthy of the position you occupy, by the vote you cast at the next April election. Let "No License," be elected at every poll in the State. This is the first step to be taken to suppress the evils of intemperance under our present law.

After the election there must be an organization of the friends of the cause of humanity, to see that the will of the people is enforced. Let every transgressor of the law know that he is watched by more than the eyes of Argus; and let no pains be spared to make the law a terror to evil doers. To effect this, let committees be organized, and a proper police kept on foot to track the crawling serpents of the prohibited traffic to their dens, and drag them forth to justice. Where liquor shall be sold without authority of law, let the vender be visited by all the penalties of the law. If without license, prosecute the place as a nuisance; if a licensed retailer of vice, crime, disease and death makes any one of his customers drunk, see that he feeds and takes care of him, until he is restored to his right mind; or, on failure of the dram-seller to do so, see that some other man is well paid for doing this very unpleasant duty. Let no stone be left unturned to make the poisoners of the public morality and health feel and know the position they occupy in the public estimation. If after doing all, however, that can be lawfully done to suppress the evils of intemperance—that end shall not be attained—we can demand further and better legislation without subjecting ourselves to the reproach of asking too much.

Gov. Wright and his Enemies.

We are not likely to be accused of political partiality for His Excellency, our worthy Governor; but when even our political adversary is persecuted for righteousness' sake, we should despise ourself if we did not say what we thought of his persecutors. The following article, so far as it comes from the Rushville Jacksonian, carries with it the clearest proof of the raving madness of its author at the time he penned it. He speaks of men as "MANIACS," who are his superiors in all the elements of true manhood, even when he is in his right mind, and clothed. It is not wonderful that, when frenzied by influences fantastical as a madman's dreams, he should rave out unmeaning threats against a man, who, whatever may be his political opinions, has served Indiana with ability, fidelity, and advantage to her people.

In regard to what Mr. Jackson reports of the conversation he had with the Governor, we have to say that we regard it as very unfortunate for Mr. Jackson to have made any such report. It is not becoming a gentleman to blab out a private conversation, under any circumstances—much less after having enjoyed the hospitality of the man whom his disclosures tend to injure. But the recommendation said to come from Gov. Wright does not look like truth on its face. Why should temperance men unite with the weaker party, to secure their ends? The very idea is ridiculous. Gov. Wright could not have made so manifest a blunder. There must be some mistake. If we desire a prohibitory law, we have to seek it through the majority party—not the minority; and in and through that means, we will yet have it, all the efforts of a whisky press to the contrary notwithstanding. Here is the article:

From the Rushville (Ind.) Jacksonian.

THE PLAN FOR SELLING THE DEMOCRACY OF INDIANA TO THE MANIACS.—We clip the following from the Delphi Times, a staunch and reliable Democratic Journal, and to it we invoke the attention of every Democrat in this country. It unravels and exposes a system of base corruption and intrigue on the part of the Governor of this State, which, if founded on fact, will consign that functionary to beneath even that "lower depth" so graphically described by the talented Hannegan as so low that the hand of resurrection never could reach him. It is due to the Democracy of Indiana that some explanation be given of this infamous attempt to sell them for his own aggrandizement. We repeat, an explanation of this matter is due to every Democrat who voted for Governor Wright, but who loves the principles of his party too well to barter it for the elevation of any man, or the success of any project. If true, then we say with the Delphi Times, that Gov. Wright has received our vote, and the votes of a host of Democrats, for the last time. If it is not true, it is due to the Democracy and due to the Governor that he should authoritatively deny it. Here is the article.—Read it:

"Isaac Jackson, who was down to Indianapolis at the time of the late temperance convention, in a speech made by him in the Old School Presbyterian Church of this place, stated that Gov. Wright had pointed out to him the proper course to be pursued, by the friends of temperance throughout the State, as being the only way that the people would ever succeed in carrying the Maine Law through the Legislature. It was this: In those counties where the Whigs are in the minority, the friends of temperance should unite with them to elect Whigs, who favor a temperance law; and in counties where the Democrats are in the minority, the friends of temperance should unite with them, to elect Democrats who are friendly to the law.

"We cannot believe that Gov. Wright ever recommended any such thing. If he did, all that we have to say is, that he has received our votes for the last time. We have no objection to his thinking as he pleases; but we object to any such Democrat governing Indiana."

Newell's Self-Adjusting Scales.

It is with pleasure and pride that we call the attention of the public to Newell's Self-Adjusting Scales. We regard the invention as one of the most useful and ingenious contrivances of the age. It reflects the highest honor upon the inventor; as it will be found to confer the greatest benefit on all those who are engaged in business, requiring a frequent resort to scales. With these scales on his counter, the merchant will have nothing to do but place the article to be weighed on the platform, and notice the figure to which it carries the index on the dial of the scale, which is its exact weight. Just as easily, and just as exactly as you tell the time of day by the position of the hands of your watch on the dial, do you ascertain the weight of the article placed on the platform of these scales. It is its own register, and cannot err. The principle of its construction we have not been permitted to ascertain.

The following notice, which we clip from the State Journal, will serve to show that we are not singular in our convictions of the utility of these scales:

SELF-ADJUSTING SCALES.—A new invention in scales has just been made by Mr. ROBERT NEWELL, of Boone County, which promises to be of great advantage, so far as we can judge from the operation of the one examined by us a few days ago.—Scales on this new plan can be made so as to weigh from one ounce, up to any amount ever required in the transaction of business. A great saving of time is acquired, as by a single glance at the dial-plate, the exact weight of the article on the platform is told. It is especially valuable for weighing all kinds of grain, as will appear at once by an examination.

☞ We have just had laid upon our table, by Messrs. Cox & MATHES, a new and popular Temperance volume entitled "The Senator's Son, or the Maine Law, a Last Refuge," by Metta Victoria Fuller; published by Tooker & Gatchel. We have not had time to examine the work critically, but will give it an examination in future. It is highly spoken of by some of our exchanges. We understand that Messrs. Cox & MATHES are to become the sole agents for the sale of the work in Indiana; and those wishing to purchase, either at wholesale or retail, will find it to their interest to call upon them.

☞ Of all felicities how charming is that of a firm and gentle friendship. It sweetens our cares and softens our sorrows, and assists us in extremities—it is a sovereign antidote against calamities.

Punch says he once saw a father knock down his boy, and thought it the most striking picture of sun down he ever beheld.

An Act

To regulate the retailing of Spirituous Liquors, and for the suppression of the evils arising therefrom.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That no person shall retail spirituous liquors, except for sacramental, mechanical, chemical, medicinal, or culinary purposes, without the consent of a majority of the legal voters of the proper township who may cast their votes for license at the April election; nor without filing with the auditor of the proper county his bond, with at least four freehold sureties, to be approved by such auditor, in the penal sum of not less than five hundred nor more than two thousand dollars, proportioned according to the number of inhabitants of the township, conditioned for keeping an orderly house, and for the payment of all fines, penalties, or damages, that may be incurred under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 2. The consent required in the preceding section shall be determined by the number of votes cast for or against license, to be expressed on the ticket; and no ticket on which the same is not expressed shall be counted either way. Such consent shall extend for one year from the period of such election, and shall extend to all persons who shall comply with the requirements of the first section respecting bond and security.

SEC. 3. Upon the filing of such bond the auditor shall issue to the person filing the same, a license to retail spirituous liquors, which shall be good for one year from the day of the election at which such consent was granted to retail spirituous liquors, and shall, during such year, be presumptive evidence of the right of such person, to retail such liquors.

SEC. 4. The word "retail," in this act, shall be construed to mean the sale or barter, direct or indirect, of any quantity less than one gallon.

SEC. 5. Any person offending against the provisions of the preceding sections, shall, for each offence, be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred dollars.

SEC. 6. A license granted under the provisions of the first section of this act, shall not authorize any person to retail spirituous liquors on Sunday.

SEC. 7. Any person who shall, by the retailing of spirituous liquor, cause the intoxication of any person, shall board, keep and take care of such person, until he shall be able, without assistance, safely to return to his home, and on failure to do so, it shall be lawful for any other person to do so, or to cause the same to be done; which person shall have an action against such retailer, for reasonable compensation for such service, and fifty per cent. damages thereon.

SEC. 8. No municipal corporation or board of county commissioners shall exact or receive from any person any money under the name of license, or otherwise, for the privilege of retailing spirituous liquors.

SEC. 9. All places wherein spirituous liquors are retailed, if kept in a disorderly manner, shall be deemed common nuisances; and the keeper of any such nuisance, maintained to the annoyance, disturbance, or injury of the neighborhood, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars.

SEC. 10. Any wife, child, parent, guardian, employer, or other person, who shall be injured in person or property, or means of support, by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication, habitual or otherwise, of any person, shall have right of action in his or her own name against any person, and his sureties on the bond aforesaid, who shall, by retailing spirituous liquor, have caused the intoxication of such person, for all damages sustained, and for exemplary damages.

SEC. 11. But if it shall be made to appear, in any such action, that the intoxicated person, through whom damages was sustained, was procured by any other person to do such damage for the purpose of enabling suit to be brought for damage against any retailer, or that such intoxicated person committed any trespass or other unlawful act for such purpose, it shall bar recovery against such retailer.

SEC. 12. For all purposes under this act, whether to institute or prosecute the suit, to control the recovery, or otherwise, a married woman shall have the same rights as if she were single.

SDC. 13. Damages recovered by a minor, under this act, shall be paid at the option of the court, either to such minor, or to his parents, or to any guardian or next friend, recognized or appointed by the court as such.

SEC. 14. A recovery against a retailer, shall be conclusive evidence against his sureties, in an action upon the bond hereinbefore provided for, both as to the right of action, and as to the amount of damages.

SEC. 15. The provisions of this act in regard to disorderly houses, and their punishment as nuisances, and penalties against the keepers thereof, shall apply to persons to whom licenses to retail spirituous liquor shall have been legally granted during the term for which they shall have been granted.

SEC. 16. All contracts made for the performance of any obligation, or for the sale or exchange of any property, real or personal, by any person who, at the time of such contract, is in a state of intoxication, rendering him incapable of making a contract, shall be voidable at the option of such intoxicated person.

SEC. 17. All places or houses wherein spirituous liquors shall be sold or bartered, directly or indirectly, without license, in less quantity than one gallon, or suffered or allowed to be drank, in or about such place, house or out-house, yard, or appurtenance thereto, be, and the same are hereby declared to be common and public nuisances; and all persons keeping and maintaining such nuisances as aforesaid, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any amount not less than ten dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars.

SEC. 18. It shall be the duty of the proper prosecuting or district attorney, when informed of the existence of any such nuisance, as defined and designated by this act, immediately to institute legal proceedings against any person keeping and maintaining such nuisance; and on his failure to commence and faithfully prosecute such nuisance, he shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars, nor exceeding twenty-five dollars, by any court having competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 19. All laws on the subject of retailing intoxicating or spirituous liquors heretofore enacted, are hereby repealed; but all offenses against such laws shall be punished, as if such laws had not been repealed.

SEC. 20. It is declared that an emergency exists requiring the enactment hereby made—that this act shall be in force from and after its passage, and publication in the Indiana State Journal and Indiana State Sentinel.

OLIVER B. TORBET,
Speaker of House of Representatives.
ASHBEL P. WILLARD,
President of the Senate.

Approved, March 4, 1853:
JOSEPH A. WRIGHT.

What Everybody Knows.

Edward Baines, a member of the British Parliament, tells us what he has known.—A person need not reside in England, to be equally well informed on the same subject. There are very few men, or women either, in the United States, who will require the honorable gentleman to take any testimony to prove what he says. We do not ask for "persons or papers," but we will invite our readers to read what Mr. B. says he has known:

"The peculiar danger of intoxicating drinks is in their extreme seductiveness, and in the all but unconquerable strength of the drinking habit when once formed; and their peculiar malignity is in their being the parent or nurse of every kind of crime, wickedness and suffering.

"I say boldly, that no man living, who uses intoxicating drinks, is free from the danger of at least occasional, and if of occasional, ultimately of habitual excess.—I have known such frightful instances of persons brought into captivity to the habit, that there seems to be no character, position, or circumstances that free men from the danger. I have known many young men of the finest promise, led by the drinking habit into vice, ruin, and early death. I have known such become virtual parricides. I have known many tradesmen, whom it has made bankrupt. I have known Sunday scholars whom it has led to prison. I have known Teachers and even Superintendents, whom it has dragged down to profligacy. I have known Ministers of religion, in and out of the establishment, of high academic honors, of splendid eloquence, nay, of vast usefulness, whom it has fascinated, and hurried over the precipice of public infamy, with their eyes open, and gazing with horror on their fate. I have known men of the strongest and clearest intellect, and of vigorous resolution, whom it has made weaker than children and fools. I have known gentlemen of refinement and taste, whom it has debased into brutes. I have known poets of high genius, whom it has bound in a bondage worse than the gallows, and ultimately cut short their days. I have known statesmen, lawyers, and judges, whom it has killed. I have known kind husbands and fathers, whom it has turned into monsters. I have known honest men, whom it has made villains. I have known elegant and Christian ladies, whom it has converted into bloated sots.

Is it not notorious that under the ravages of drunkenness the land mourns—that it is this which, I may almost say exclusively, fills our prisons, our workhouses, our lunatic asylums, our dens of pollution, and our hospitals—which causes most of the ship recks, fires, fatal accidents, outrages, crimes, and suicides that load the columns of our newspapers—which robs numberless children of a parent's fondness—which strips thousands of homes of every comfort, deprives scores of thousands of children of education, and almost of bread, and turns them on the streets; which leaves so many places of worship almost empty, and so many Mechanics' Institutes languishing, whilst pot-houses are crowded, which brings down, it is estimated, 60,000 of our population every year to a drunkard's grave.

"And of all the victims of intemperance, be it remembered, there is not one who did not begin by moderate drinking, or who had the remotest idea, when he began, that he should be led to excess."

Silk Manufacture.

The silk manufacture of France alone is of marvelous extent. The number of silk looms in operation there is not less than one hundred and thirty thousand, the product of which, per annum, is valued at three hundred millions of dollars. Of this amount, the fabric of Lyons yields quite two-thirds. One-half of the entire manufacture is exported, and three-fifths of the exports are from Lyons. The greater part is consumed in this country. France, in this article of her industry, encounters a formidable competition, both in Germany and England; but at the late London exhibition it was conceded that, in respect to designs and tissues, the silk goods of Lyons were superior to those of all rival factories. That city employs constantly a force of seventy thousand looms, and one hundred and seventy-five thousand operatives, who earn, on an average, thirty cents per day. There are three hundred manufacturing firms, whose establishments are distributed in a circle around Lyons, having a radius of twenty leagues.

Considering the immense quantity of silk goods consumed, some have expressed astonishment that the supply of the raw material has been equal to the demand.—But this matter is easily relieved of all occasion for doubt or amazement by reference to the statistics pertaining to the subject. The silk worm is found in almost every part of Asia, Europe, and the United States, though here it is cultivated to a comparatively slight extent. It requires but eight weeks to reach maturity. In some regions—as in India—three crops of silk are obtained in a year, while the mulberry trees may be stripped of their leaves six times in the same period, and the like number of crops of worms obtained with ease.

Twenty years ago, France alone produced more than three millions of pounds. In Russia, Bavaria and other parts of Germany, Spain, Sweden, India, China, Turkey, Syria, Egypt and Great Britain, the silk worm and the mulberry tree are cultivated with more or less success. In British India, the production of silk is rapidly extending, and it is believed that the English market, in the end, will be exclusively supplied from that source.

As explanatory of the relative production borne by the raw to the manufactured material, it is computed that sixteen yards of gros-de-Naples, of ordinary quality, or fourteen yards of superior description, are produced out of one pound of reeled silk, yielded by twelve pounds of cocoons. The average weight of a cocoon varies from three to three grains and a quarter, having an average length, when reeled off, of about three hundred yards.

The value of the silk manufactories of Great Britain is estimated to exceed several millions sterling per year. Its factories employ more than 30,000 persons, two-thirds of whom are females.

Daniel Webster's Mother.

In the valuable library of the late Mr. Webster, among busts and portraits of great men, hangs a small profile of a woman, the mother of that eminent statesman, whose genius was the boast of his country, and whose death has been so universally lamented. Beneath the profile is written, in the well-known handwriting of her son, "My excellent Mother, D. W."

The world gives honor to Daniel Webster—his heart dedicated this honor to his mother. Would it not be worth the attention of statesmen as well as philosophers, to inquire which of the two, the mother or her son, is the more worthy to be honored?

In order to ascertain this, we must consider which of the two had the most important part to perform? which was favored with the best means of preparation? and which best discharged their duty? That the mother's office—to preserve the child, and stamp its character for time and eternity—is the most important a human being can hold, will hardly, I think, be questioned by Christian men. That the mother of Daniel Webster did her duty well, his own testimony confirms, and his life also; for his errors were not of the kind his mother's teachings or example would have endured, But his religious feelings were precisely those that early instruction fixes in the mind of a boy, and which no circumstances can ever efface. Though the brightness of those truths may be dimmed by the glitter of worldly glory, and their sweet purity lost for a while in the labyrinth where luxurious pleasure leads her votaries, yet the voice of conscience, that speaks to the man in the mother's tone to her child, recalls the mind of the sternest and loftiest to his childhood's faith, and he turns for strength and hope to the God he first bowed to worship at his mother's knee. And thus Daniel Webster, in his age, acknowledged openly his faith in the Christian truths which, during his infancy and childhood, had been instilled into his heart.

Thus the mother's duty had been faithfully discharged—so far as she had been qualified for her office. All that we know of the private history of Mr. Webster's mother is this: Her maiden name was Abigail Eastman; she was a native of Salisbury, Mass.; and was ever noted for her intelligence and piety. But in those early days, the opportunities of education for females were very limited; nor is there any reason to think Mrs. Webster had received any more than the mere rudiments of what is now termed a common-school education. How much more powerful and salutary her influence might have been over her son, had she been able to train his mind as well as his heart!

He was prepared for his career in life by a liberal education, and all the means of acquiring knowledge which the country could furnish; yet all that he has done is but for this world—for time. His mother wrought for heaven and eternity. Ought not the education of women to be provided for by the public as liberally as is done for men, when to her forming care belongs the moulding of human character, the life of the heart, if not the salvation of the soul?—Lady's Book.

"I Have No Time To Read."

None! No half hours, no spare moments, even! No! But you have time to eat, drink, and provide for the supply of your physical wants. You have time to build houses, shops and stores, and to labor for money which you accumulate until you are rich, or spend in sensul pleasure and remain poor. You have time to shelter from heat and cold a body that will walk but for a little season upon the earth, and then be buried in its bosom.—You may have time to adorn it with purple and fine linen, or it may be covered with coarse attire, and although it possesses the beauty of Apollo, or the strength of Hercules, it will soon be dust under the feet of the living. Do you sometimes forget that this outer man dies, while the soul lives forever, and in too great anxiety for the comfortable support of the one, forget the importance of the other?

Do you say, men of strong muscles and sinewy arms—men who plow the ground, and fashion wood, iron and brass, into articles of convenience and luxury—that you have no time to read, and therefore no time to think? Are there not hearts within your breasts that sometimes beat with noble impulses, and have you not minds that return an abundant harvest for the seeds of knowledge sown within them? The farmer who tills the soil will do so the more successfully, if he can analyze its properties, and thus ascertain the kind of grains to which it is best adapted. The mechanic who best understands those scientific principles that are connected with his trade, will wield his tools with an ability that leaves his ignorant competitors far in the rear. The one guides every stroke of the hammer with an eye beaming with intelligence; the other brings to his labor only that strength which he shares in common with the lower animals of creation.—The one is well informed upon the current topics of the day, has an intelligent opinion in relation to politics, and casts his vote according to his own judgment; the other is carried away by popular excitement, and falls an easy prey to the wiles of the partisan and the demagogue. The one exercises a powerful conservative influence in favor of law, and of order; the other swells the mob, and manifests his unfitness to share in the government of others by failing to govern himself.

But if you have not time to read for your own sake and for society, there may be those for whom it is your especial duty to live wisely. There are some families where children gather around cheerful firesides at evening hours, and receive instruction from the lips of parents and elder brothers and sisters; not perhaps by formal question and parrot-like reply, but with a quick and ready tact that obtains stores of valuable information from cheerful and intelligent conversation.

Let us not complain because others have greater riches and honors than ourselves, for where there are no laws of primogeniture, and no hereditary peers, riches and honors are rewards of industry and perseverance. In this country, only vice and ignorance are disgraceful, while labor is respected and honored. The printer-boy who sat up all night to read borowed books that were to be returned in the morning, conquered the lightning, and was courted and admired by the most polished circles of Europe; and the young blacksmith, whose classical education began with a Latin grammar at the forge, became a welcome visitor in the first literary circles at home and abroad.

Female Piety.

The gem of all others which enriches the coronet of a lady's character, is unaffected piety. Nature may lavish much on her person, the enchantment of the countenance, the grace of her mien, or the strength of her intellect—yet her loveliness is uncrowned, till piety throws around the whole the sweetness and power of her charms. She then becomes unearthly in her temper—unearthly in her desires and associations. The spell which bound her affections to things below is broken, and she mounts on the silent wings of her fancy and hope to the habitation of God, where it is her delight to hold communion with the spirits that have been ransomed from the thraldom of earth, and wreathed with a garland of glory.

Her beauty may throw a magical charm over many; princes and conquerors may bow with admiration at the shrine of her riches; the sons of science and poetry may embalm her memory in history and song; yet her piety must be her ornament, her pearl. Her name must be written in the "Book of Life," that when the mountains fade away, and every memento of earthly greatness is lost in the general wreck of nature, it may remain and swell the list of that mighty throng which have been clothed with the mantle of righteousness, and have their voices attuned to the melody of heaven.

With such a treasure, every lofty gratification on earth may be purchased, friendship will be doubly sweet, pain and sorrow shall lose their sting, and the character will possess a price far "above riches;" life will be but a pleasant visit to earth, and death the entrance upon a joyful and perpetual home. And when the notes of the last trump shall be heard, and the sleeping millions awake to judgment, its possessor shall be presented "faultless before the throne of God, with exceeding joy, and a crown of life that shall never wear away."

Such is piety. Like a tender flower, planted in the fertile soil of a woman's heart, it grows, expanding its foliage, and imparting its fragrance to all around, till, transplanted, it is set to bloom in perpetual vigor and unfading beauty in the Garden of the Lord.

Follow this star! it will light you through every labyrinth in the wilderness of life—gild the gloom that will gather around you in a dying hour, and bring you safely over the tempestuous Jordan of death, into the Haven of promised and settled rest.

WHITHER ARE WE TENDING?—It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding place. It cannot be that our life is a bubble cast up by the ocean of eternity, to float a moment on its waves, and sink into nothingness. Else. why is it that the high and glorious aspiration which leaps like angels from the temple of our heart, is forever wandering about unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and the cloud come over us with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off and leave us to muse upon their faded loveliness? Why is it that the stars hold "their festival around the midnight throne," and set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their inapproachable glory? And, finally, why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view, and then are taken from us—leaving the thousand streams of pure affections to flow back, in their Alpine torrents, upon our hearts? We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth. There is a realm where the rainbow never fades; where the stars will be spread out before us like islands that slumber on the ocean, and where the beautiful beings which here pass before us like shadows, will stay in our presence forever.

Acknowledgments

Received of the Hon. Mr. Reynolds, Hon. J. Milroy, J. R. Davison, Mr. Wilber, (for Mrs. Ann King,) Hon. M. W. Shields, L. Hurlbut, Ovid Butler. A. Taffe, J. Wharton (in two sums,) Rev. H. Wells, each, the sum of 75 cents for the Chart for one year. Of J. H. Ohr, (for Albee 1 year, and W. A. Rogers 4 months) $1. Of J. Fugitt, Clifty, (a long time ago,) $1 for two copies of the Chart, 8 months. Of B. H. Simmons, 25 cts. for Chart, 4 months, at Laurel, Ohio. Of L. C. Perkins, $3. Of C. Reynolds, for 16 copies of the Chart for 8 months, $8. Of M. C. Culver, $2 for two copies of the Chart, 1 year and 4 months. Of J. H. Hutchins, $3 for 4 copies of the Chart. Of LeRoy Wood, $1 for A. Robinson. Of A. W. Leonard, $3 for 8 copies of the Chart for 6 months. Of C. W. Woodward for 10 copies of the Chart, 8 months, at Lexington, $5. Of Hiram Duncan for Chart, $2. Of M. W. Digg, $2. Of J. G. Hout, $1. Of D. Taylor, $3.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,
South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.
Manufacturers of
Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,
Of Every Size and Description,
Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.
CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGAZINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does. Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—Cheapest of all.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No. 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Lococks Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Lococks Wafers, consequent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Lococks Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN
Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,
North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.
Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.
Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, } Medical Examiners.
Fred. A. Fickardt, }

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week,
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week,
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,
Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't.
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.
Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Booksellers and Stationers,
No. 12, Washington Street,
june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.
JUST PUBLISHED,
T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,
DEALERS IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.
Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL
For the Cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851.

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would sufficate me when I laid down. Having used many r'medies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College.

Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med. College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College.
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med. College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter.
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen. Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili.
Rt. Rev. Ed. Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.
Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind. by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.
CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,
Dealers in all kinds of
Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,
WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY
BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1853. NO. 39.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

The Dying Girl's Adieu to Life.

I know that I must die,
  But the earth is very fair;
And the incense of a thousand flowers
  Floats on the summer air;
And the song-bird's lay is merrier
  Than e'er it was before,
For soon this weary soul shall catch
  Its gladsome tones no more.
The sun beams seem so very bright,
  The brook breathes melody,
The leaflets on the waving boughs
  Dance joyously and free;
Whilst golden-tinted insects hum
  A drowsy, lulling strain,
A strain of fairy music that
  I ne'er may hear again.
I never felt the zephyr's breath
  So welcome as 'tis now,
As it lightly lifts the heavy curls
  From off my fevered brow;
I never knew how beautiful
  Was all this laughing earth,
How full of mystic music,
  How fraught with love and mirth.
Come hither, gentle sister!
  Thine eyes are very bright,
But mine are dimmed and tearful,
  They've lost their dazzling light;
And the cheek that, like thine own,
  Once wore the crimson hue
Of the rose, in all its beauty,
  Is dimmed and fading, too.
I know that I must die,
  And a form is lingering near,
With smile of angel sweetness,
  With eyes so deep and clear,
She would win my heart from earth,
  And would turn my thoughts of love
To a land of life eternal—
  To a home of bliss above.
I hear her tones—still sweeter,
  Ah! sweeter far are they
Than streamlet's soft, sad murmur,
  Than wild birds' joyous lay;
Faint music floats around me
  With a dreamy, spirit-spell—
I am dying, gentle sister!
  I am dying—fare thee well!

Tremble, if any darling error
  Reigns in the temple of thy soul!
Unmask this cherished fiend of terror!
  Trust not thyself to its control;
  Heed only Truth!—be this thy goal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Western Odd Fellows' Magazine.

Claims of Society on the Mystic Brotherhood.

BY JAMES G. MAY.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness."

Attention in a manner, evidently very brief, having been directed to some of the claims of society on the two great pillars in the Grand Temple of Mystic Brotherhoods, it seems appropriate, at this stage of the inquiry, to investigate the corresponding claims and accruing obligations attaching to two fraternities, distinct, indeed, yet so nearly alllied in birth and purpose, that, in the opinion of many intimately acquainted with both, they ought to be comprehended in one social body. The allusion will be readily apprehended. The Sons of Temperance and the Temple of Honor are children—almost twin children of the same distinguished parentage, each contemplating, in the design of its organization, the accomplishment of the same noble end—the total extirpation of intemperance in all its multinominal aspects.

In this number it is not intended to discuss either the necessity or the utility of the temperance orders. The circumstances that gave birth to the one and the rise and rapid progress of the other, clearly indicate the necessity—and the continued success and healthful existence of each, clearly demonstrate the utility. It is not beyond the scope of the legitimate course of discussion to intimate, parenthetically, that among the causes inducing a necessity almost startling for originating and building up mystic temperance families, was the departure, to a lamentable and most unfortunate extent, of numerous Masons and Odd Fellows from the true spirit and literal interpretation of the grand temperance principle, beautifully set forth in the admirable precepts and comprehensive teachings, both of Masonry and Odd Fellowship, as a great, indispensable, cardinal virtue. In numerous instances, even now, the sad vestiges of this shameful obliquity are still plainly manifest, This unfortunate and less unhappy veering from a polar star principle, originated alarming prejudice against both these benevolent institutions, and thus, in a great measure, took away from each the ability to exercise an extended, controlling, moral influence upon the public mind, thereby circumscribing the amount of good designed to be accomplished by each. The pious, virtuous, moral and truly worthy members of these cherished institutions long mourned in secret and in silence over the desolating inroads and violent innovations the intoxicating cup had been making amid their respective fraternities, and, for a great length of time, they looked, apparently in vain, for some permanent, efficient instrumentality of reformation. The results of each successive temperance movement were watched with the deepest solicitude. The flowings and ebbings were watched with no ordinary anxiety. At length relief, partial, if not entire, came. The star of promise, of hope, almost of anticipated fulfillment, rose high above the eastern horizon, indicating the ushering in of a better—a more glorious day. Its rise was hailed as the new-born harbinger of Love, Purity and Fidelity, wearing the garb of a youthful, vigorous, fraternal band—simple but still mystic in its internal organization, beautiful in its ritual, highly instructive in its didactic ceremonies, and most admirably adapted for a speedy, wide-spread diffusion among all classes of society. Swiftly in its wake, and ere the troubled waters had commingled their surging waves, followed another more beautiful and much grander temperance organization, sharing in its multifarious, mystic ceremonies, much of that symmetric complexity, elegance and sublimity, the tendency of which is to rivet the attention and to impress permanently upon the mind the principles and truths intended to be iaught.

Masonry and Odd Fellowship are unquestionably the models whence the frame work of these new institutions is derived; and in their written laws are found, fully embodied, all the cardinal virtues and fraternal bonds that adorn and emblazon the historic pages of the parent institutions, with the important addition that the great cardinal virtue of temperance is specifically defined to denote total abstinence from every thing, as a beverage, that can intoxicate.

The adoption and promulgation of this sanitary definition, on the part of the Sons of Temperance and the Temple of Honor, has had a most salutary influence upon the Old Fraternities. First, members, and then Lodges, began to inquire after the true import of their distinguishing cardinal virtue. Offenders were kindly but earnestly admonished, the contumacious ejected; and, at the sanctuaries, the work of purification began to be carried forward with surprising boldness and astonishing success. The clouds that so long had shut out the sunlight of truth were swept away, and the star of pristine glory rose in its wonted brilliancy, and began to shine with renewed splendor. As already stated, individuals and Lodges began to reap the benefits, and act upon the suggestions for good, resulting from the principles advanced by the new mystic alliances. Their influence soon began to dispel the clouds of benumbing prejudice that arrayed many darkened minds against what are popularly denominated secret associations. Many Masons and Odd Fellows became active, prominent members of both these temperance organizations, and sharing amply of the spirit and ardor of the most zealous and prudent advocates of the cause of temperance, carried the strong resolution of effectual reform into their respective Lodges; and, through this instrumentality, an inestimable amount of good has been attained by a vast majority of the Lodges of Masons and Odd Fellows throughout the United States.

Sufficient has already been set forth to carry conviction to the mind of any one disposed to reflect, that the mystic Temperance Brotherhoods possess a sublime moral influence capable of accomplishing good to an extent unlimited. This power creates absolute obligation independent of any specific undertaking. The undertakings of these Orders are not only numerous, but stupendously grand. What are some of these most signal engagements? Let them be arrayed in unmistakable prominence.

1. A perpetual, indefeasible obligation to abstain from the manufacture, traffic, or use, as a beverage, from all that can intoxicate.

2. To wage an exterminating war, by all honorable means, against the manufacture, traffic, or use of the same.

3. Each member makes an explicit profession of his own integrity of purpose.

4. He devotes himself to the eternal, immutable principles of Truth.

5. Love—love to his God—his country—and his fellow man.

6. Purity—purity in his thoughts, words and deeds.

7. Fidelity—fidelity in all his undertakings, faithfulness and simple-minded honesty in the discharge of every moral and social obligation.

This array of absolute undertakings, of explicit, positive engagements, of uncontrovertible liabilities, is enough to cause the craven heart to quail and quake as the earth trembles at the fiery belchings of the volcano. What could be more awfully solemn than these life-lasting ties, these fraternal covenants of the Sons of Temperance, these undertakings of devoted Templars. Like Nehemiah, they have reared a stupendous wall about their beloved Jerusalem; like him, they are engaged in a great work, and like him, they ought not to come down till their noble purposes are all carried into successful operation.

This work is, to every individual engaged, an active personal debt, demanding payment to the uttermost farthing—requiring every one to establish, rear and cultivate, a large amount of personal or individual influence, calculated to promote the general welfare of society at large. As the unrivaled energy of Napoleon Bonaparte created armies and gained astonishing victories, so must the more laudable energy of every Templar create for him a character and influence for good that shall win for the cause in which he is engaged a brighter day than the Sun of Austerlitz gave to the Grand Army. Such is the debt due society from every Son and from every Templar.

The indefeasible, perpetual obligation to abstinence constitutes the passive or negative part of the undertaking. The active part of the obligation clearly and forcibly demands the speedy introduction and employment of every lawful and honorable appliance that can assist in bringing about the extermination of the liquor traffic. Every individual member is commanded to go forth and work—to labor with prudent but untiring zeal; he is pledged to go—he is solemnly bound to thrust fore and aft, right and left, and support an unsompromising warfare, till the very last foot-print of the very last soldier in king alcohol's army shall be wholly obliterated from the earth—till every monument of the cruel monster shall be levelled with the dust. Like Noah's dove, there must be no rest for the Templar's foot till the floods of vice shall be entirely abated from off the earth. Such is the pledge he took of his own free will. Sinai thunders in his ear, "Thou shalt not bear false witness."

Every applicant who sets his foot upon the threshold of these Orders, employs language of the import: "I come to the gates of your family circle with integrity of purpose engraven upon the tablet of my heart. I will take your constitutions, your laws and your ways, and hide them in the inner chambers of my mind. I will labor with you in the fields of your toil. The cause of humanity—the cause of mankind—shall be my cause." Such is the moral soundness—the incorruptness, the honesty, the probity—to which the traveler, who is seeking to enter the portals of one of these mystic families, pledges himself whilst passing the outer porch. His is a candid, unvarnished representation, a fair count, a correct narration, an indemurrable declaration upon the explicit "promise to pay" of every Templar—of every Son. With this picture before him, who is incompetent to estimate the debt and interest daily accumulating, constantly augmenting the demands against every member of these Orders, and which will continue to increase till the means of intemperance shall be finally swept from earth.

Again, the Sons and Templars, like the two great protoplastic families whence they borrowed their plans of mystic and mechanical structure, stand sacredly covenanted for the diffusion and culture of the immutable principles of eternal Truth—Truth as it emanates, in richness and purity, from nature's Omnipotent Law-giver; Truth, as it stood engraven upon the tables of stone hewn out upon Sinai's brow. Hence it is manifest, that no Son of Temperance has a right to remain in ignorance of any great moral or social duty, when the means of instruction, the power to acquire knowledge, are within his reach, and the knowledge necessary to be obtained, within the limit of his capacity for comprehension. What activity, what lessons of unceasing industry, do not Sons and Templars owe society?

Prosecuting the subject matter of investigation still further, it will be seen that these individuals devote themselves to the essential teachings of Love, rationally understood and scripturally defined: Love to God, love to their country and to their fellow men. A broader platform of fraternal and social obligations could in no way be constructed. This remark applies with peculiar force to the Temple organization. Every Templar professes to offer the supreme affections of a heart that beats with sincerity and truth, as a free-will service to the Omnipotent Architect of the universe. Love to God! How wonderfully comprehensive are such professed consecrations! The devotee cannot come up to the standard by which he proposes to measure his conduct, short of the most sincere Bible-taught, Bible-derived devotement to Heaven's Majestic Prince.

But the boundary of the obligation is still in the distance. Love to country and love to fellow man come in as "right and left supporters," announcing the prevalence of patriotism the most fervent. Can it be that the great host of Sons and Templars intend nothing but idle boast in their professions of ardent regard for the welfare of their common country and the perpetuity of its noble institutions? Can it be that they mean nothing when they avouch love to their fellow man? Such a conclusion would imply the bearing of false witness, with a vengeance!

Both Templars and Sons appear before the world with the rich grace of Purity inscribed upon their banners, their helmets, and their breast-plates, announcing in this way that each individual member has vowed to cultivate, with rigid austerity, purity of thought, purity of speech, and purity in all his deeds. What a task! What a Herculean undertaking! How little time for idleness hangs upon the hands of these mystic families! Indeed, it appears that each member should share largely of that spirit of unfaltering perseverance and indomitable energy that won a crown of peerless military glory on the blood-drenched field of Austerlitz. Each is bound to encounter daily foes, more wary, more stealthy, than the combined forces of Austrian and Russian tyrants.

But the completion of the grand temperance pyramid remains to be noticed.—The crowning grace of this magnificent superstructure invites description. Without Fidelity there can be no truth, no abiding love, no incorruptible purity. Without this, all pledges, all undertakings, would be worse than base, hypocritical mockery. Hence it is that Sons and Templars make a bold profession of Fidelity in all their aims and ends.

Having reached the point of the investigation, the inquiry may be pertinently instituted: Do these Mystic Brotherhoods properly understand—do they heartily realize—the force, the amazing responsibility, in all its length and breadth, of their binding obligations, their comprehensive engagements and their world-wide undertakings? Aye, how much is promised—how much of personal, individual exertion is soiemnly pledged. It is plain that these Mystic Temperance Brotherhoods not only promise all that Masonry and Odd Fellowship engage to accomplish, but amplify and define in such a way as, were it possible, to augment the claims of society upon them a thousand fold. In order to impress indelibly upon the mind the peculiar force and tendency of each virtue, imagery the most commanding, drawn from the most enchanting paintings of heaven and the most captivating pictures of earth, are beautifully employed.

Referring once more to the leading principles of these Orders, let it be asked, who can listen to the teachings of Temperance, Truth, Love, Purity and Fidelity, and not embrace the conclusion, that the fraternities who inscribe these graces upon their frontlets, and emblazon them upon their banners, do owe to society such a debt of vigorous action, of pure and holy living, the prompt liquidation of which would carry such terror amid the ranks of the rum-sellers, that intemperance and all its kindred evils would soon be driven from the earth.

In the conclusion of this series, may it not be urged with great earnestness upon Masons, Odd Fellows, Sons and Templars, to give the most careful attention to the respective professions made by each, to inquire with all honesty of purpose, what are the claims of society upon the membership of the Mystic Brotherhoods. Let the designs of each organization be fully carried out—let there be a combination of effort to exalt the virtue embraced, and to exterminate the vice denounced—and half a score of years will not pass by till there shall transpire the most sublime moral and social revolution the world has ever witnessed.

FATHER, PLEASE COME HOME EARLY.—We heard a bright, affectionate mannered boy say this to his father, as the latter was leaving the door of his home to attend to his daily duties. And why was that bright boy so anxious to secure from his father the promise of an early return in the evening? We happened to know the reason. It was because this kind father is in the habit of devoting as many evenings in the week as he can spare from other claims, to the society and the improvement of his children. And he has such a winning way of imparting instruction to his sons and daughters, that they are never tired and never feel that it is dry and uninteresting. There are books of travels, of biography, of history, geography, natural science, &c. There are maps and pictures and games of different kinds, and sometimes the father tells what he has seen, and heard, and read, and drawn useful lessons from every thing, so that the children always find it both pleasant and profitable. And while they love to learn useful lessons in this way, they also learn to love Home as the dearest spot on earth, and are seldom anxious to spend an evening in any other way.

And what a happy father our friend is. We saw his eye sparkle with delight and love as the little boy requested so eagerly that he would come home early. There was no need of urging him, for his heart turns to that home wherever he is, as the needle to the pole. Would that all fathers felt as he does, loves as he loves, and made Home, with its delightful duties, the chosen resort—the earthly Eden of the heart.—N. Y. Organ.

A MAHOMETAN NEGRO IN SLAVERY.—A native African called "Uncle More," resides in Wilmington, N. C., 83 years of age—45 years a slave. His time is chiefly occupied in reading the Scriptures in Arabic. He writes the language with remarkable accuracy and beauty of penmanship.

The above says the Wilmington, N. C. Commercial, has been handed to us by a correspondent. It has appeared in several of the northern papers, and some inquiry is made as to its verity. We know "Uncle More" very well—"Prince," as he is usually called here, on account of a rumor that he is the son of an African King. We believe the fact to be that he was a school teacher of the Arabic in his native country, and the above statement is doubtless correct. "Prince" is a general favorite, being very inoffensive, and one the politest men of the age.

CHILDREN AND PARENTS.—Let all children remember, (says Dr. Dwight,) if ever they are weary of laboring for their parents, that Christ cheerfully obeyed; if reluctant to provide for their parents, that Christ forgot himself, and provided for his mother amid the agonies of the crucifixion. The affectionate language of this divine example to every child is "Go thou, and do likewise."

Young physicians find it hard to get into business; but they will succeed if they only have patients.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY #39

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1853.

☞ We received some time since from one of the Evansville Divisions, a communication, asking the name of the author of an article, from that city, on weekly benefits, which we published. There was nothing personal in that article; and our sense of our duty will not allow us to disclose the name without the consent of the writer. If it reflected upon any individual, we would have no objection to comply with a request of the kind, coming from the injured. But there is nothing of that kind in the article or request.

The Chart.

It is one thing to vote to support a paper, quite another thing to do it. The vote makes no demand on the pocket, or if it does, it abstracts nothing from it unless the draft is honored. It should be remembered, however, that votes, however gratifying to the vanity of editors and publishers, if not followed by something more substantial, will not enable them to go on with publications. In this age of earnest reality, whatever we would do must, to be successful, be sustained by the material aid. To publish newspapers is like all other works. It costs money, and cannot be done long without it. Paper, type, ink, and the labor of the printer, all are cash articles. It is due to our readers that we should say this, lest it should not be thought of without it.

It is time the friends of Temperance in Indiana should know that the Organ of their adoption needs the support of its friends. We are confident that all who have voted to sustain it, seriously intended to do so at the time; but when absent from the circumstances that called their attention to it, they forget its necessities. We are sure that an earnest and persevering effort on their part, would, in a very brief space of time, remove its embarrassment. We hope this effort will be made. There are but few persons who will not give 75 cents, to sustain a newspaper, if rightly approached. The people only need to have their attention called to the subject to grant the required aid.

Let the appeal, then, be made. Ask your friends to assist in supporting your paper, and they will do it. This is the only course that lies before you, unless you intend that your paper shall go down. If it is your desire to sustain it, as we are sure it is, we conjure you to make a vigorous effort in its behalf.

The subscription price of the Chart is but 75 cents a year. It has no connection with any other paper that tends to support it. It must support itself or fail. We hope these things will be remembered, and an effort made worthy of the cause it advoates.c

To the Polls!

Voters of Indiana, under our present law you are called upon to determine whether you will license the retail of spirituous liquors or not at the ensuing April election. Will you do it? Will you consent to entail upon community the curses of that traffic, and thereby render more desolate the already desolate; make more guilty the already criminal; and more deeply sorrowful the already disconsolate? There is no pretext under the present law for such a course. You will receive nothing for your consent to this murderous traffic in the future. The liquor seller will pay nothing under the present law for a license; and yet every one licensed will increase the paupers and criminals of the State; and render the people less able to pay the costs incurred by reason of the same. Then go to the polls with "No License" upon your tickets and rid the State of the curse of licensed MURDERERS.—We conjure you not to forget it, nor neglect it. Yours is the duty, the responsibility is yours, and yours will be the great reward of righteous endeavor, if you deport yourselves worthy of the interests committed to your charge.

Indianapolis Groggeries.

The capital of Indiana is fruitful in establishments to corrupt public morals, fill poor-houses, jails, lunatic asylums, and penitentiaries. The proprietors of these infernal soul-traps meet you at almost every turn of the street; and strong, indeed, must be your nerves, if you can look upon one of them, and feel no inward loathing of the monster. For ourself, we frankly confess that we never see one of these crawling serpents of iniquity, that we do not feel as if some poisonous reptile, bloated with its own venom and watching for its victim, were before us; and we rejoice that the original curse of the serpent is still unreversed and in full force. It rests upon this whole race of vipers, as it did upon the parent of them all. They are doomed to crawl and eat dust, all the days of their lives. Instead of filling the sphere of men, and going upright, they follow the slime-marked trail of the serpent; and eat dust, instead of partaking of the rich viands which a benevolent Creator has placed before them, as rational and immortal beings. They are unmistakeably not of the genus homo, but of the genus reptilia.—None of the warm and generous blood of manhood circulates through their veins—but only the cold blood of the lizard, or their more exact type, the copperhead.—They combine the stealthy shyness of the latter with the mortal venom of the centipede or tarantula.

We deem it our duty to point out to the unwary, and those who are strangers among us, the lurking places of some of the most poisonous of this class. It may teach them where there is danger, and thus enable them to shun it.

In the first place, the nests of these reptiles are generally marked by signs which, to the eye of experience, indicate their nature and locality. Nearly all of them have some false device immediately over their holes. One, for instance, is an eating house, in appearance; another, an ice-cream saloon; another, an oyster saloon; and another something else—anything, in a word, but what it really is. This false pretence, at the door, is common to the class—from the finely-carpeted saloon where our fashionable ladies (?) and gentlemen, (?) of the upper ten, spend their evenings over their sparkling champagne, away down to that vestibule of hell, the old "city hotel," fronting the Court House. But we desire to point out some of them specially; because they are doing more harm than others.

You will notice "OYSTER SALOON" over a door on the north side of Washington street, under one of our best Hotels. The hotel and saloon, however, are not in anywise connected. But the saloon is there; and none more potent than it in the work of destruction. Its front is beautifully paved—the approaches made smooth—and it is thought that few who enter it ever return with their proper mind. The fact is, the sign is significant. It is an "oyster saloon," and the fool that enters is opened like an oyster, and leaves his cash and his blood to fatten the vampyre that presides in this slaughter-house of the simple. It is but a day or two since a noble-hearted Scotchman, who had entered there, returned only to die—DIE, with all his veins throbbing and palpitating with poison—DIE, in agony unutterable—DIE, under the lash of fiends, and confined to his bed only by the strong hands of his horror-stricken friends!—for Crackson still had friends. Oh! if our tears and our prayers could have saved thee from such a fate!—but the eye of the basilisk had charmed thee, and death, horrible beyond all description, closed thy career! Once a noble Son of Temperance!—but, seduced by the guile of pretended friendship, thy sleep is now in a drunkard's grave! We have tears for thy untimely fate—bitter without mitigation; but for the devil that seduced and destroyed thee, what shall we say?

[To be continued.]

Moderate Drinkers read this.

The following graphic sketches are taken from the 'Recreations of Christopher North,' by Prof. Wilson. Their truthfulness will be acknowledged by all who have an appreciation of the best efforts of genius. We commend them to the serious consideration of all who are given to their cups.

"You look as if you wished to ask who inhabits the cottage—on the left hand yonder—that stares upon us with four front windows, and pricks up its ears like a new-started hare? Why, sir, that was once a shooting-box. It was built about twenty years ago, by a sporting gentlemen of two excellent double-barrelled guns, and three stanch pointers. He attempted to live there, several times, from the 12th of August till the end of September, and went pluffing disconsolately among the hills from sunrise to sunset. He has been long dead and buried; and the box, they say, is now haunted. It has been attempted to be let furnished, and there is now a board to that effect hung out like an escutcheon. Picturesque people say it ruins the whole beauty of the glen; but we must not think so, for it is not in the power of the ugliest house that ever was built to do that, although, to effect such a purpose, it is unquestionably a skilful contrivance. The window-shutters have been closed for several years, and the chimneys look as if they had breathed their last. It stands in a perpetual eddy, and the ground shelves so all around it, that there is barely room for a barrel to catch the rain-drippings from the slate-eaves. If it be indeed haunted, pity the poor ghost! You may have it on a lease, short or long, for merely paying the taxes. Every year it costs some pounds in advertisement. What a jointure-house it would be for a relict! By name, Windyknowe.

Nay, let us not fear to sketch the character of its last inhabitant, for we desire but to speak the truth. Drunkard, stand forward, that we may have a look at you, and draw your picture. There he stands! The mouth of the drunkard, you may observe, contracts a singularly sensitive appearance, seemingly red and rawish; and he is perpetually licking or smacking his lips, as if his palate were dry and adust. His is a thirst that water will not quench. He might as well drink air. His whole being burns for a dram. The whole world is contracted into a caulker. He would sell his soul in such extremity, were the black bottle denied him, for a gulp. Not to save his soul from eternal fire, would he, or rather could he, if left alone with it, refrain from pulling out the plug, and sucking away at destruction. What a snout he turns up to the morning air, inflamed, pimpled, snubby, and snorty, and with a knob on the end on't like one carved out of a stick by the knife of a schoolboy—rough and hot to the very eye—a nose which, rather than pull, you would submit even to be in some degree insulted. A perpetual cough harasses and exhausts him, and a perpetual expectoration. How his hand trembles! It is an effort even to sign his name: one of his sides is certainly not by any means as sound as the other; there has been a touch of palsy there; and the next hint will draw down his chin to his collar-bone, and convert him, a month before dissolution, into a slavering idiot. There is no occupation, small or great, insignificant or important, to which he can turn, for any length of time, his hand, his heart, or his head. He cannot angle—for his fingers refuse to tie a knot, much more to busk a fly. The glimmer and the glow of the stream would make his brain dizzy—to wet his feet now would, he fears, be death. Yet he thinks that he will go out—during that sunny blink of a showery day—and try the well-known pool in which he used to bathe in boyhood, with the long, matted, green-trailing water-plants depending on the slippery rocks, and the water-ousel gliding from beneath the arch that hides her "procreant cradle," and then sinking like a stone suddenly in the limpid stream. He sits down on the bank, and fumbling in his pouch for his pocket-book, brings out, instead, a pocket pistol. Turning his fiery face towards the mild, blue, vernal sky, he pours the gurgling brandy down his throat—first one dose, then another—till, in an hour, stupefied and dazed, he sees not the silvery crimson-spotted trouts, shooting, and leaping, and tumbling, and plunging in deep and shallow; a day on which, with one of Captain Colley's March-Browns, in an hour we could fill our pannier. Or, if it be autumn or winter, he calls, perhaps, with a voice at once gruff and feeble, on old Ponto, and will take a pluff at the partridges. In former days, down they used to go, right and left, in potatoe or turnip-field, broomy brae or stubble—but now his sight is dim and wavering, and his touch trembles on the trigger. The covey whirs off, unharmed in a single feather—and poor Ponto, remembering better days, cannot conceal his melancholy, falls in at his master's heel, and will range no more. Out, as usual, comes the brandy-bottle—he is still a good shot when his mouth is the mark; and having emptied the fatal flask, he staggers homewards, with the muzzles of his double-barrel frequently pointed to his ear, both being on full cock, and his brains not blown out only by a miracle. He tries to read the newspaper—just arrived—but cannot find his spectacles. Then, by way of variety, he attempts a tune on the fiddle; but the bridge is broken, and her side cracked, and the bass-string snapped—and she is restored to her peg among the cobwebs.—In comes a red-headed, stockingless lass, with her carrots in papers, and lays the cloth for dinner—salt beef and greens. But the Major's stomach scunners at the Skye-stot—his eyes roll eagerly for the hot-water—and in a couple of hours he is dead-drunk in his chair, or stoitering or staggering, in aimless dalliance with the scullion, among the pots and pans of an ever-disorderly and dirty kitchen. Mean people, in shabby sporting velveteen dresses, rise up as he enters from the dresser covered with cans, jugs, and quechs, and take off their rusty and greasy napless hats to the Major; and, to conclude the day worthily and consistently, he squelches himself down among the reprobate crew, takes his turn at smutty jest and smuttier song, which drive even the jades out of the kitchen—falls back insensible, exposed to gross and indecent practical jokes from the vilest of the unhanged—and finally is carried to bed on a hand-barrow, with hanging head and heels, like a calf across a butcher's cart, and, with glazed eyes and lolling tongue, is tumbled upon the quilt—if ever to awake it is extremely doubtful; but if awake he do, it is to the same wretched round of brutal degradation—a career, of which the inevitable close is an unfriended death-bed and a pauper's grave. O hero! six feet high, and once with brawn like Hercules—in the prime of life too—well born and well bred—once bearing the king's commission—and on that glorious morn, now forgotten or bitterly remembered, thanked on the field of battle by Picton, though he of the fighting division was a hero of few words—is that a death worthy of a man—a soldier—and a Christian? A dram-drinker!—Faugh! faugh! Look over—lean over that stile, where a pig lies wallowing in mire—and a voice, faint and feeble, and far off, as if it came from some dim and remote world within your lost soul will cry, that of the two beasts, that bristly one, agrunt in sensual sleep, with its snout snoring across the husk trough, is, as a physical, moral and intellectual being, superior to you, late Major in his Majesty's —— regiment of foot, now dram-drinker, drunkard, and dotard, and self-doomed to a disgraceful and disgusting death ere you shall have completed your thirtieth year. What a changed being from that day when you carried the colors, and were found, the bravest of the brave, and the most beautiful of the beautiful, with the glorious tatters wrapped round your body all drenched in blood, your hand grasping the broken sabre, and two grim Frenchmen lying hacked and hewed at your feet! Your father and your mother saw your name in the 'Great Lord's" Despatch; and it was as much as he could do to keep her from falling on the floor, for "her joy was like a deep affright!" Both are dead now; and better so, for the sight of that blotched face and those glazed eyes, now and then glittering in fitful frenzy, would have killed them both, nor, after such a spectacle, could their old bones have rested in the grave.

Alas, Scotland—ay, well educated, moral, religious Scotland can show, in the bosom of her bonny banks and braes, cases worse than this; at which, if there be tears in heaven, the angels weep. Look at that grayheaded man, of threescore and upwards, sitting by the wayside. He was once an Elder of the Kirk, and a pious man he was, if ever piety adorned the temples—"the lyart haffets, wearing thin and bare," of a Scottish peasant. What eye beheld the many hundred steps, that one by one, with imperceptible gradation, led him down—down—down to the lowest depths of shame, suffering, and ruin? For years before it was bruited abroad through the parish that Gabriel Mason was addicted to drink, his wife used to sit weeping alone in the spence when her sons and daughters were out at their work in the fields, and the infatuated man, fierce in the excitement of raw ardent spirits, kept causelessly raging and storming through every nook of that once so peaceful tenement, which for many happy years had never been disturbed by the loud voice of anger and reproach. His eyes were seldom turned upon his unhappy wife except with a sullen scowl, or fiery wrath; but when they did look on her with kindness, there was also a rueful self-upbraiding in their expression, on account of his cruelty; and at sight of such transitory tenderness, her heart would overflow with forgiving affection, and her sunk eyes with unendurable tears. But neither domestic sin nor domestic sorrow will conceal from the eyes and the ears of men; and at last Gabriel Mason's name was a by-word in the mouth of the scoffer. One Sabbath he entered the kirk in a state of miserable abandonment, and from that day he was no longer an elder. To regain his character seemed to him, in his desperation, beyond the power of man, and against the decree of God. So he delivered himself up, like a slave, to that one appetite, and in a few years his whole household had gone to destruction. His wife was a matron, almost in the prime of life, when she died; but as she kept wearing away to the other world, her face told that she felt her years had been too many in this. Her eldest son, unable, in pride and shame, to lift up his eyes at kirk or market, went away to the city, and enlisted into a regiment about to embark on foreign service. His two sisters went to take farewell of him, but never returned; one, it is said, having died of a fever in the infirmary, just as if she had been a pauper; and the other—for the sight of sin, and sorrow, and shame, and suffering, is ruinous to the soul—gave herself up, in her beauty, an easy prey to a destroyer, and doubtless has run her course of agonies, and is now at peace. The rest of the family dropt down, one by one, out of sight, into inferior situations in far-off places; but there was a curse, it was thought, hanging over the family, and of none of them did ever a favorable report come to their native parish; while he, the infatuated sinner, whose vice seemed to have worked all the woe, remained in the chains of his tyrannical passion, nor seemed ever, for more than the short space of a day, to cease hugging them to his heart. Semblance of all that is venerable in the character of Scotland's peasantry! Image of a perfect patriarch, walking out to meditate at eventide! What a noble forehead! Features how high, dignified, and composed! There, sitting in the shade of that old wayside tree, he sesms some religious missionary, travelling to and fro over the face of the earth, seeking out sin and sorrow, that he may tame them under the word of God, and change their very being into piety and peace. Call him not a hoary hypocrite, for he cannot help that noble—that venerable—that apostolic aspect—that dignified figure, as if bent gently by Time, loath to touch it with too heavy a hand—that holy sprinkling over his furrowed temples of the silver-soft, and the snow-white hair—these are the gifts of gracious Nature all—and Nature will not reclaim them, but in the tomb. That is Gabriej Mason—the Drunkard! And in an hour you may, if your eyes can bear the sight, see and hear him staggering up and down the village, cursing, swearing, preaching, praying—stoned by blackguard boys and girls, who hound all the dogs and curs at his heels, till, taking refuge in the smithy or the pot-house, he becomes the sport of grown clowns, and, after much idiot laughter, ruefully mingled with sighs, and groans, and tears, he is suffered to mount upon a table, and urged, perhaps, by reckless folly to give out a text from the Bible, which is nearly all engraven on his memory—so much and so many other things effaced for ever—and there, like a wild itinerant, he stammers forth unintentional blasphemy, till the liquor he has been allowed or instigated to follow, smites him suddenly senseless, and, falling down, he is huddled off into a corner of some lumber-room; and left to sleep—better far for such a wretch were it to death."

WINE.—Of the twenty millions of gallons of wine consumed in this country, only six millions are imported. Of the fourteen millions of home manufacture, all but 300,000 gallons, are made from logwood, turnip-juice, and cider. And yet to have this miserable stuff on their tables, men will run in debt to the liquor-venders, and deny their families of many comforts. They drink logwood juice, and call it claret; the extract of turnips, and call it champagne; while venders, who grow rich on their vanity and credulity, pocket the profits, and keep for their own stomachs, the little genuine wine they import. Oh, if our red-nosed, vacant-eyed, turnip-juice drinkers, could see themselves as others see them, could hear the jokes cracked at their expense as they march out of our stores after buying a lot of spurious wine, and pronouncing it "first-rate," they would never drink again.—Ohio Organ.

☞ We have seldom read of a more awful illustration of the fate of the drunkard, than that of James Nutter, of St. Albans, Me., as recorded in the "Skowhigan Clarion." Being very intemperate, he so abused his wife and children, that they were obliged to leave him. He then wandered about, a miserable outcast, drinking whenever he could obtain anything, until, becoming weary of his wretched existence, he went into the woods, sat down upon a stump, and cut his throat with a jack-knife, pitching forwards across a log. He was buried as he was found, with the exception of removing some of his clothing.—N. Y. Organ.

☞ The following rule, given by a German author to his daughter, would, if followed by every young lady, prevent much difficulty, many silent twitches of conscience, and often, the alienation of true friends: "Converse always with your female friends, as if a gentleman were of the party; and with young men, as if your female companions were present.

☞ In a single century, four thousand millions of human beings appear on the face of the earth—act their busy parts—and sink into its peaceful bosom.

Foreign Items.

The Legislative Chambers were opened at Paris on the 14th of February, by the Emperor in person; on which occasion he made a speech, in which he said he had decided on reducing the army, in order to keep up a friendly understanding with foreign powers, and to prove to the most incredulous, that when France expresses her intention to remain at peace, she must be believed. The army is to be reduced twenty thousand men. The speech was received with great enthusiasm, and produced a favorable effect on the Bourse, causing a rise in the French rents.

The steam-packet Victoria, belonging to the Dublin and Liverpool steam-packet company, during a snow-storm, on her passage from Liverpool to Dublin, struck the rocks off Baily light-house, near Houth, and sunk in about fifteen minutes. Some of the passengers took to the boats, and others endeavored to swim ashore. She had about one hundred passengers aboard, of whom sixty-eight were lost, with the captain and second and third mates.

It appears the interview between the Pope and Bishop Ives, of South Carolina, was very pathetic. When the latter handed the former the cross, ring, and seal, he said, "Holy Father, these are the signs of my rebellion;" to which the Pope replied, "It is our will that these signs of your submission be suspended over the tomb of St. Peter."

Von Sebuzed, the Japanese traveler, has been summoned to St. Petersburg, to confer with the Emperor in regard to the expedition Russia is sending to Japan; and, whether this expedition is of a peaceful or hostile character is not known.

The returns of the English general post office for the past year, give additional proof of the efficacy of the penny postage system in every respect. In 1839 the number of letters was 76,000,000; in 1840, first year of the new system, 169,000,000; in 1845 the number reached 271,500,000; in 1850 it was 347,000,000; and in 1852 it had increased to 379,500,000.

George Gordon, Earl of Aberdeen, the first officer of the British crown, is a Scotchman, and a member of the Church of Scotland. It is quite a novelty in the British Government, to have a Prime Minister whas no connection with the Church of England.

Marshal Radetsky, in his proclamation, states that the soldiers killed and wounded fifty-four of the rioters in Milan, and there was no more disturbance at any other point in Italy. A letter from Milan states that the number of arrests made, was eighty-six.

The Austrian Government has placed a military cordon on the frontier of Switzerland; and martial law of the most rigorous nature is in force at Milan.

Austria has expressed her determination to adopt some measures against Switzerland and Piedmont, which she regards as the two hotbeds of revolt.

Later accounts from Milan represent the late outbreak there as a small affair; and that the ring-leaders had been all taken and hanged.

Louis Napoleon's crown, now in the process of manufacture, will be of the value of near 23,000,000 francs, about $4,500,000.

The weather in England, during the month of February, was remarkably cold, with heavy snow and severe frost.

The manufacturing business throughout France is stagnant, and the corn market generally dull.

☞ Our sister village Bethel is a model town for its dealing with rumsellers. A man had better count the cost before he goes into that community with his liquor-kegs. Before he can get out his oyster-sign, or grocery announcement, or whatever the flier may be for covering up his nefarious traffic, almost every man, woman and child have marked him out and are down upon him like an avalanche. No disturbed hen-roost plunderer ever left his ungathered spoil more hastily than the rumseller bolts from that place—and as he clears the track he can be mortal sure that what Solomon says about "the wicked fleeing when no man pursueth," is only half true in his case.—Danbury Times.

☞ If a proud man makes me keep my distance, the comfort is, he keeps his at the same time.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Self-love is the love of one's self, and of every thing on account of one's self; it makes men idolize themselves, and would make them tyrants over others if fortune were to give them the means. It never reposes out of itself, and only settles on strange objects, as bees do on flowers, to extract what is useful to it. There is nothing so impetuous as its desires, nothing so secret as its plans, nothing so clever as its conduct. Its pliancy cannot be depicted, its transformations surpass those of Ovid's "Metamorphoses," its refinements those of chemistry. We cannot sound the depths, nor penetrate the darkness of its abysses. There it is concealed from the keenest eyes, it goes through a thousand turns and changes. There it is often invisible to itself; it conceives, nourishes, and brings up, without being conscious of it, a vast number of loves and hates. Some of these it forms so monstrous, that when brought to light it is unable to recognize them, or cannot resolve to own them.—From this darkness which conceals it, spring the ridiculous ideas it has of itself; hence come its errors, its ignorances, its grossness, and its follies with respect to itself. Hence it comes that it fancies its sentiments dead when they are only asleep, it thinks that it has no desire to arise from its repose, and believes that it has lost the appetites which it has satiated. But this thick darkness which conceals it from itself does not prevent its seeing perfectly every external object—in this, resembling our eyes, which see every thing, and are only blind to themselves; in fact, in its greatest interests and in its most important affairs, where the violence of its desires call for all its attention, it sees, it perceives, it understands, it imagines, it suspects, it penetrates, it divines every thing; so much so, that one is tempted to believe that each of our passions has a magic peculiar to itself. Nothing is so close, and so firm as its attachments, which it vainly endeavors to break off at the appearance of the extreme evils which menace it.—Sometimes, however, it accomplishes in a short time, and without effort, what it had not been able to effect in the course of several years with all the efforts in its power; whence we may conclude, not unjustly, that its desires are excited by itself, rather than by the beauty and the merit of their objects; that its own taste is the price which gives them value, and the cosmetic which sets them off; that it is only itself which it pursues, and that it follows its own taste when it follows things after its taste. It is a compound of contraries, it is imperious and obedient, sincere and dissembling, compassionate and cruel, timid and daring; it has various inclinations according to the various temperaments which affect it, and devote it, sometimes to glory, sometimes to riches, and sometimes to pleasure; it changes them according to the changes of our age, our fortune, and our experience. It is indifferent to it, whether it has many inclinations, or only one, because it shares itself among many, or collects itself into one as may be necessary or agreeable to it. It is inconstant, and, besides the changes which arise from external causes, there are an infinity which spring from itself, and from its own resources. It is inconstant from inconstancy, from levity, from love, from novelty, from weariness, from disgust. It is capricious, and we sometimes see it laboring with extreme earnestness and with incredible toil, to obtain things which are by no means advantageous, and even hurtful to it, but which it pursues because it wills to have them. It is whimsical, and often throws its whole application into the most frivolous pursuits; it finds its whole delight in the most insipid, and preserves all its pride in the most contemptible. It is present to all states and in all conditions of life; it lives everywhere, it lives on every thing, it lives on nothing. It accommodates itself to advantages, and to the deprivation of them; it even goes over to the side of those who are at war with it; it enters into their schemes, and, what is wonderful, it joins them in hating itself, it conspires its own destruction, it labors for its own ruin. In short, it cares for nothing but its own existence, and, provided that it do exist, will readily become its own enemy. We must not be surprised, therefore, if it unites with the most rigid austerity, and enters boldly into league with it to work its own destruction, because at the same time that it is overthrowing itself in one place it is re-establishing itself in another. When we suppose that it is relinquishing its pleasures, it does nothing but suspend or vary them; and even when defeated, and supposed to be annihilated, we find it triumphing in its own defeat. This is the picture of self-love, the whole existence of which is nothing but one long and mighty agitation.—The sea is a sensible image of it, and self-love finds in the ebb and flow of the waves a faithful representation of the turbulent succession of its thoughts, and of its ceaseless movements.

☞ It is reported that a company of twenty have purchased the exclusive right of the Caloric engine on the Lakes.

Aristocracy.

[It is related of Antæus, who aspired to wrestle with the gods, that, if they could by any means induce him to leave his "mater terra" and grapple in with them, they found little difficulty in worsting him, but so long as he could keep his foot firmly planted upon his native soil he was more than a match for them.

When men outgrow their true position and aim to live removed from the cares and duties of life, they like Antæus, lose their footing and fall. In order to battle successfully, we should never forsake our sphere. Thousands are kept poor by aping the notions and customs of the rich, and thousands who are rich become poor, because they are too proud to use the same efforts to keep, that it requires to accumulate. The following is an excellent hit at this species of aristocracy.]

It is always a perilous thing for haughty people to look back along the line of their ancestry. Twenty years ago, says the "Merchant's Magazine," this one butchered, that one made candles, another sold chese and butter, a fourth carried on a distillery, another was a contractor on canals; others were merchants and mechanics. They are acquainted with both ends of society, as their children will be after them, though it will not do to say so out loud. For often you will find that those toiling worms hatch butterflies, and they live about a year. Death brings division of property, and it brings new financiers; the young gentleman takes his revenues, and begins to travel—toward poverty, which he reaches before death—or his children do, if he do not. So that, in fact, though there is a moneyed rank, it is not hereditary, it is accessible to all; three good seasons of cotton will send a generation up; a score of years will bring them all down, and send their children again to labor. The father grubs and grows rich; his children strut and use the money; their children inherit their pride and go to shiftless poverty; their children, reinvigorated by fresh plebian blood, and by the smell of the clod, come up again. Thus society, like a tree, draws its sap from the earth, changes it into leaves and blossoms, spreads them abroad in great glory, sheds them off to fall back to the earth, again to mingle with the soil, and at length to reappear in new trees and fresh garniture.

The Falling Leaf.—It has been a fancy born of our day-dreams, that for every leaf that falls, a human soul ascends; for every leaf that unfolds, a spirit glides from the dim past into the active present; and thickly as falls the decaying leaves, do forms of human mould drop into the soul.

We watch the yellow leaf as it struggles with its downward tendency, essaying in vain to hang in mid-air, shrinking from the cold resting-place, and buoyed up with a momentary hope as a stray breeze wapts it upward again only to descend more rapidly. It seems to wail, to shrink, as it settles nearer and nearer to the detested soil. As it lies worn out and dead upon the chill earth, the spirit whispers: Another has gone down to the tomb! Nature drops a leaf for every one who falls, as the nun drops a bead for every sin she thinks.

As we stand beside the spent leaf, so stand weeping ones around the new-made grave. Ah! as they embalm their dead in tears and undying memories, so will we embalm thee, thou typifier of human frailty. Thus between the leaves of the book of books the sickly hued leaf is laid as a memento mori. As I gaze on the skeleton form, I follow the decay of the one for whom it fell, and turning thoughtfully away, gaze up to the myriad of leaves, and ask, "which one will fall for me?"

A Delighted Mother.—A mother, who was in the habit of asking her children, before they retired at night, what they had done to make others happy, found her young twin daughters silent. One spoke modestly of deeds and dispositions founded on the golden rule, "Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you." Still those little bright faces were bowed in silence. The question was repeated.

"I can remember nothing good all this day, dear mother; only one of my schoolmates was happy, because she had gained the head of the class, and I smiled on her, and ran to kiss her; so she said I were good. This is all, dear mother."

The other spoke still more timidly: "A little girl, who sat with me on the bench at school, has lost a little brother. I saw that while she studied her lesson, she hid her face in her book and wept. I felt sorry, and hid my face on the same book and wept with her. Then she looked up and was comforted, and put her arms around my neck; but I do not know why she said I had done her good."

"Come to my arms, my darlings!" said the mother, "to rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with those that weep, is to obey our blessed Redeemer."

☞ Ex-President Van Buren will start for Europe in a few days, with his son Martin, who is in bad health. Old Matty is said to be in good health, lively and cheerful as ever. He was born in 1782, and is therefore 71 years of age.—Cayuga Chief.

Irish Anecdote.—A late traveller in writing upon "Scenery in Ireland," gives a couple of anecdotes, that were brought out by the driver of an Irish jaunting-car, in which Willis was the only passenger. A young fellow was seen leading an ass.—The driver addressed him:

"Good morrow, neighbor!—is that your own?"

"No," said the boy, "he's my father's."

"In troth—I knew he was one of the family, for he's the very picther of the ould man," retorted Barney, with a loud guffaw; at the same time applying the whip vigorously to his horse to escape the vengeance of the irritated lad, who was searching on the road for a "lump of a two year old," i. e., a stone not larger than a bullock's kidney, with which he meant to return Barney's witticism. His next essay was upon a good-looking country girl, who, with her bare feet and well gathered-up petticoats, was daintily picking her way along a splashy part of the road.

"Mind your steps, ma cailleen dhas, or you'll dirty your birth-day stockings," said Barney.

"Never fear, abouchal. But if I do, where's the harm? Shure they're warranted to wash, and hould the color always," replied the girl smartly.

"I wonder, then, how they'd look turned?" inquired Barney with a grin.

"About as purty as your own eyes," answered she, glancing knowingly at the questioner.

The girl's allusion to the obliquity of Barney's optics, disconcerted him a little; he flourished his whip, began to whistle vehemently, and looked out for a fitter object to crack his joke upon.

☞ The Buffalo Express narrates the following anecdote, which illustrates in a humorous manner the capriciousness of the memory:

A young boy was sent to school, and commenced learning the alphabet. He readily mastered the "list of letters" save one—the B was a poser. Do what he could he was unable to retain its name. His industry and application were strengthened by the frequent mementoes of the rod, but all to no purpose—he could not remember the B. At close of school one evening, after his body had suffered martyrdom for his mind, he passed along the road tending homeward, dropping walnut-sized tears the while, when one of his comrades accosted him with, "Bill, what are you crying for." "Can't remember the B," says Bill.—"Well,"—rejoins his companion—"don't cry; and if you will forget it by to-morrow morning I will give you three fish hooks." The result was that Bill tried so hard to forget the fatal letter that he has always remembered it from that day to this.

A Beautiful Figure.—Life is compared to a fountain fed by a thousand streams, that perish if one be dried. It is a silver cord, twisted with a thousand strings that part asunder if one be broken. Frail and thoughtless mortals are surrounded by innumerable dangers, which make it much more strange that they escape so long, than they almost all perish suddenly at last. We are encompassed with accidents every day to crush the mouldering tenements we inhabit. The seeds of disease are planted in our constitutions by nature. The earth and atmosphere whence we draw the breath of life, are impregnated with death, health is made to operate its own destruction, the food that nourishes containing the elements of decay; the soul that animates it by vivifying first, tends to wear it out by his own action; death lurks in ambush along the paths. Notwithstanding this is the truth, so palpably confirmed by the daily examples before our eyes, how little do we lay it to heart! We see our friends and neighbors among us, but how seldom does it occur to our thoughts, that our knell perhaps will give the next fruitless warning to the world.

The Company of Women.—He cannot be an unhappy man who has the love and smiles of a woman to accompany him in every department of life. The world may look sad and cheerless without, enemies may gather in his path, but when he returns to the fireside and sees the tender love of woman, he forgets his cares and troubles, and is a comparatively happy man. He is not prepared for the journey of life who is without a companion, who will forsake him in no emergency—who will divide his sorrows—increase his joys—lift the veil from his heart and throw sunshine amid the darkest scenes. No man can be miserable who has such a companion, be he ever so poor, despised, and trodden upon by the world.

☞ Did alcohol destroy the body only, however many it might bring to the grave, its effects would not be so dreadful, but it destroys the soul also. Not that it annihilates its existence, but its excellence, usefulness and happiness. It cuts off its probation and hopes. It also enfeebles its powers, corrupts its character, and aggravates all its moral diseases, while it tends to counteract all the means which God has provided for their removal, and thus to bring upon it the unending horrors of the "second death."

Mad Through Excessive Joy.—A writer, describing the Lunatic Asylum at Blackwell's Island, says:

"Here is a woman whom joy has deprived of her senses. Her husband and child were on board a vessel which was wrecked. Going down to the shore every day, as if with the wish of being near the beloved objects that lay buried beneath the sea, suddenly she beheld them landing from a vessel which had picked them up and saved them. An overwhelming flood of joy pervaded her bosom—and then reason was gone forever. She never has known them since, but sits on what she thinks the same rock where she used to bewail their fate, wringing her hands, and moaning most piteously—while every week the husband and son come and gaze on her face, in hope to rouse one gleam of memory—but in vain!"

☞ Dr. Cheyne, of Dublin, after upwards of thirty years of medical practice, observation, and experience, gives the following opinion: "Let ten young men begin at twenty-one years of age to use but one glass of spirits, containing only two ounces, per day, and never increase the quantity, nine out of the ten of these young men will shorten life, upon an average, more than ten years."

Mock Funerals.—The mock funerals got up in honor of Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, cost the cities of Boston and New York not less than half a million of dollars. The tax-payers are complaining, and justly, we think, of the extravagance of these useless expenditures. Among some of the items at New York, we find the following:

Decorating the City Hall, ...	$2,547 32
Scarfs for the Marshal, ...	946 00
Undertaker, ...	1,481 00
D. D. Howard, for board of 6 Senators, 3 days.....	2,161 75

Grand Division.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of Indiana, will commence its semi-annual session, on the 26th day of April, next, at 2 o'clock, P. M., at Cambridge City, in Wayne county.

☞ There is no greater obstacle in the way of succeeding in life, than trusting for something to turn up, instead of going steadily to work and turning up something.

☞ We have just received, in time to barely notice, the sad information of the death of Bro. Jacob Sanders, of the New Columbus Div. S. of. T.

The brother was about 24 years of age, and was a worthy and faithful advocate, and worker, of the noble principles of our order. He has left a wife and two children, and many friends, to mourn his loss.

What can be had for Five Dollars!

THE UNDERSIGNED have entered into an arrangement by which they agree to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, (monthly,) the Home Journal, (weekly,) and the Musical World and Times, (weekly,) to new subscribers, at the very moderate price of five dollars a year for the three publications; all orders, enclosing that amount to Dyer & Willis, will be promptly attended to.

SAMUEL HUESTON,
Publisher of the Knickerbocker.
MORRIS & WILLIS,
Publishers of the Home Journal.
DYER & WILLIS,
Publishers of the Musical World & Times,
257 Broadway, New York.

GRAND LITERARY AND ARTISTIC COMBINATION!

Arrangements have been made to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, the Home Journal, and the New York Musical World and Times, to new subscribers, for Five Dollars a year! This is cheap literature, with a vengeance. The Knickerbocker is $3 per annum; the Home Journal, $2; and the Musical World and Times, $3; making $8 a year at the usual rates. That three such works can be obtained for five dollars a year, is a fact truly worthy the Caloric age, which is just now being ushered in. Of the Knickerbocker Magazine, edited by Lewis Gaylord Clark, it is unnecessary to speak; for twenty years it has been the most genial, humorous and spicy "monthly" in the world—and the present volume will be better than any which preceded it. The Home Journal, edited by Geo. P. Morris and N. P. Willis, is well known as the best family newspaper in America. And the Musical world and Times, edited by Richard Storrs Willis, with Lowell Mason, Geo. H. Curtis, Thos. Hastings, Wm. P. Bradbury, Geo. F. Root, and other musical writers contributing, and which gives, among other things, over $25 worth of music, and a full course of instruction in harmony, annually, is the very best musical journal ever published. These three publications will post a family up in regard to nearly everything worth knowing:—Art, Science, Literature; Music, Painting, Sculpture; Inventions, Discoveries; Wit, Humor, Fancy, Sentiment; the Newest Fashions and other attractions for Ladies; Choice New Music for the Sabbath, the Church, and the Fireside; Reviews and Criticisms of Musical Works, Performers and Performances; in short, the very pick and cream of Novelty, Incident, History, Biography, Art, Literature and Science—including whatever can be given in periodicals to promote Healthy Amusement and Solid Instruction in the family, and help to make it better, wiser and happier—may be now obtained for five dollars. Address

DYER & WILLIS, 257 Broadway.

☞ Editors publishing the above three times, and sending the papers containing it to Dyer & Willis, will receive the three works named, for one year. mar1

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHEs,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,

Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,

oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does. Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—Cheapest of all.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No. 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT

MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

FOR THE CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfuly testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

☞ In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer,
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor

John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't.

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

---

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,

june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq, the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all tree for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851.

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would sufficate me when I laid down. Having used many r medies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med. College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College.
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter.
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili.
Rt. Rev. Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archbishop Pursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

---

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY

BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1853. NO. 40.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid

Office—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Neveda (Ga.) Journal.

The Dying Miner's Lament.

Afar from my home and the scenes of my childhood,
O'er mountain and wave I've wandered away;
And here 'mid these sands, these rocks, and this wild wood,
Is wasting in sickness, my last lingering day.

Fond memory oft whispers, in accents of sadness,
Of home, and of friends, and of joy left behind.
My wife—my dear children—their voices of gladness,
My fond doting mother, now dwells on my mind.

How fondly I hoped in the bosom of home,
To have spent the rich treasures I gleamed from the sand,
But ah! sad affliction and sorrow have come,
And doomed me to die in this far distant land.

I have toiled in the valleys—I have delved in the hills;
The streams and the bars I have prospected o'er;
The wild dashing Yuba, and the deep flowing rills,
The gulches and ravines will see me no more.

By Yuba's bright waters, then, softly inter me;
The friends I love best cannot stand round my bier—
No mother to sorrow, no wife to deplore me,
Or shed on my grave a last lingering tear.

The tempest may howl, and the storm may beat o'er me—
I shall not be disturbed by the loud thunder's roar;
But gently I'll sleep, though my friends are far from me—
My dear native land I shall see thee no more.

Cold Run Mill, Sept. 15, '52.

Tribute to Maine.

We love thee, fairest sister, we love to speak of thee,
We love to glory in thy fame, and tell thy victory!
For thou hast been the bravest, and the noblest of the train,
Of all the sisterhood of States, our dearest sister Maine.

Soon all the happy sisters shall rise up and call thee blest.
For thy glorious deeds of valor shall disenthrall the rest!
First in the glorious conquest thou hast washed away the stain,
Of Alcohol's pollution, our purest sister Maine!

And when in brighter years to come, our country shall be free
From the desolating power of rum's dread tyranny,
With rapturous exultation we'll repeat the glowing strain
Of praise and admiration of our loveliest sister Maine!

The Father of that Glorious Law—the blessed, honored Dow—
Deserves a crown of diamonds to deck his noble brow!
The highest seat in our fair land we'd like to see him gain,
That fearless and true hearted son of our sweet sister Maine.

Mount Holly, N. J. Mary.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Death of Eglon.

FROM THE GERMAN.—BY MRS. ST. SIMON.

In the city of Gaza, which lies on the sea-coast, there dwelt a man whose name was Eglon. He was a judge among his people for many years, and possessed great riches. But the people honored him more for his justice and humanity than for his wealth, and the poor called him, among themselves, Father Eglon.

When the day of his death arrived, he sent for his friends and his brethren, together with their children, and said unto them: "Behold, my end approaches!—Last night the Angel of Death appeared to me, and I heard the gentle waving of his wings. Rejoice, therefore, and be joyful with me!"

Then the hearts of those that stood about him sank within them; and they looked at each other, and said: "Would to Heaven that Eglon's words may, for the first time, prove untrue!"

But Eglon smiled, and said: "My friends, put far from you all lamentation and vain hopes! My days are numbered! This is the third time that I have beheld the Angel of Death face to face; therefore he is no stranger to me. But this is the first time that he hath appeared unto me with a friendly countenance; therefore do I follow him with gladness and with joy."

His friends looked upon him in amazement, and held their peace.

Eglon perceived that they had not understood him, and thus spake: "I will relate to you a short history of my life, and then you will understand my words.

"My youth passed smoothly away, and I knew not the sorrows of life. When I became a man I was chosen to be a judge in Gaza, and the people extolled the judgments which I pronounced at the gates.—I gained, moreover, the heart of a woman, whom the voice of the people praised as the loveliest and the noblest of the land, and I was called the happiest of mankind. Then God visited me with a grievous sickness, which afflicted me for many months; and all the skill of the physicians was of no avail, and they said: "He will surely die!" Then the Angel of Death appeared to me for the first time with terrible aspect, and I prayed that he might pass by.

"He did pass by. I was restored to health, and my life became more pleasant to me than ever; for my wife bore me two infants, fair as two young pomegranate trees, and each day of their lives was to me as a day of spring. Then said all the people: "Eglon is the happiest of mankind. What is there wanting to his joy, and to the welfare of his house?"

"Behold then came the sickness of Mizraim from beyond the sea; and the infants died, both the boy and the girl. And their mother fell sick, and said: "The children are not! Ah, Eglon, another world will preserve and restore them to us." Thus she spoke and died also. And I stood alone upon my rich carpets, and my house seemed at once too spacious and too confined.

"I then called in great wrath upon the Angel of Death, and named him the Destroyer, and when he passed before me, I said: "I will seek thee, cruel one, in the depths of the sea, that thou mayest unite me with those whom thou hast torn from me. What is the world, and what is life now unto me!"

"So I walked forth in the night to the sea-shore; but as I passed along, I heard a sobbing and moaning in a cottage by the way-side, and I entered it; for I thought to find there companions in affliction. A woman lay upon the earth, and tore her hair; five young children were weeping around her, and asking for bread, and an aged man, bowed down with years, stood by trembling. But I was affrighted and said: "Woman, what aileth thee?"

"Then the old man said: "In the last tempest the sea swallowed up her husband, my son, with his little bark. The rich man, who had lent him money to purchase it, demanded payment of the debt, and as we could not pay it, he hath taken away all that he could find in our hut, and to-morrow he will drive us forth, if famine do not first put an end to our misery."—"And why, I asked, did you not bring the matter before Eglon, the judge of Gaza?" The mother then opened her lips, and said: "Eglon dwelleth in a palace, and is the happiest man in the whole land!" "Besides," added the aged man, "the debt is just, and so Eglon hath declared it to be."

"Then did I exclaim: "God of Heaven? is this thy justice, Eglon?" And I remained all night in the fisherman's hut, and succored them, and in the morning I said: "Behold Eglon, judge of Gaza!—Come now to my house, that I may do justice unto you."

"From that time forth, my friends, I have known myself and the huts of poverty, and have practised justice.

And thus I have enjoyed happiness, endured affliction, and striven to do good on earth. Amid prosperity, death appeared to me as a destroying angel; in the bitterness of my sufferings, as a jailer, bring a cup of poison to his prisoner; but now, I recognize him for what he really is—a friend about to conduct me to those I love."

When he had thus spoken, the old man turned upon his pillow, and gave up the ghost.—Lady's Wreath.

The Blasted Hope.

In one of the pleasant villages in Maine, lived a young merchant—respected, in good business, blessed with a lovely wife, and having as good prospects of accumulating property as any one around him.—His taste as a merchant was very good, and qualified him to keep a store, at which would be found handsome and fashionable articles. He had built a house, and had things respectable and convenient around him; and if any man bid fair to enjoy life, it was Mr. B——.

The fashionable habit of brandy and water drinking, however, gained upon him, in the progress of a few years, and by degrees finished his character as a drunkard. His business became deranged and embarrassed, his property went into the hands of creditors; he lost his character of an affectionate husband, and his wife was compelled to return, with a broken heart to her father's house, for a home. And so completely was he besotted and degraded by his habits of drinking, that he was finally sent to the poor house.

After two years tuition at the poor house—having been restrained from drinking, and assisted by his own resolutions against it—the hopes of his friends were that he was going to be Mr. B—— again, and a few anxious to encourage him in his apparent reformation, and to see him in business, and to gain him back to his former standing, if possible, gave bonds for a sum sufficient to purchase for him a small assortment of dry goods. His wife began to hope that he was rescued from ruin, and that yet they should be happy in their home.

The necessary arrangements having been made for his opening a store he visited Boston in company with one of his former mercantile friends, for the purchase of goods. The principal part of the money having been paid by them, in purchases; the remainder (about forty dollars) was put into his hands by his friend, who had business of his own to transact, that he might make a few small purchases, to complete his assortment. He rose early on the following morning, and went out before his friend, for this purpose. That was the last his friend saw of him for three days. After having anxiously searched for him in every quarter where he might be heard from, he was found intoxicated and his money in some proportion squandered.

The history of his three days last past was short. The temptation of a certain bar, set out with handsome decanters, and every kind of liquor that could please a taste such as his, had proved too much for him. He drank once, twice, thrice, and there was no stopping point; and down he went again to that state of sottishness from which he had been two whole years climbing. He went back to his friends only to show them that he was again worthless as to character. That lovely wife, whose face had for a time, brightened with the hope of their mutual happiness in good days, was plunged in grief and gloom deeper than ever, at this cruel blasting of her hope; and instead of a pleasant home, he went back again to the poor house.

Now, let us look at the concern of the retailer of liquors, in all this. On that morning of high hopes respecting Mr. B——, he opened his store house of temptations; and spread them—bright, alluring, and irresistible. For what? A little money. Mr. B—— came in sight of the sparkling decanters, the retailer first took a ninepence of him, and thus forged one dagger for the breast of that wife. Then he took another ninepence; and another and another—and one forenoon he succeeded in pulling down to the ground the kind expectations of friends, and what was worse, the fond and high hope of an affectionate wife, and all this for the paltry sum of fifty cents, or seventy-five cents, or perhaps a dollar. Now, put these in the balance of humanity, and weigh them against each other. Kind efforts, hopes, encouragement of friends, the happy anticipations of relatives, and especially of a devoted and affectionate wife, in one side of the scale; and in the other, say seventy-five cents, to go into the pocket of a retailer.—And thus, in these times, when many a man, well nigh ruined, is trying to abstain from the intoxicating cup, and needs to have temptation kept out of his way by the caution of every man who has a drop of the "milk of human kindness" in him—still do men, who are bent on the accumulation of wealth, at all hazards, set forth the intoxicating cup, and in the way of making a little money for themselves, dash in pieces the brightest hopes of good will and affection.

Retailer of ardent spirits, think of these things.

Politeness at Home.

Why not be polite? How much does it cost to say "I thank you?" Why not practice politeness at home? To your husband, your children, your domestics? If a stranger does you some little acts of courtesy, how sweet the smiling acknowledgement? If your husband—oh! it's a matter of course! no need of thanks.

Should an acquaintance tread on your dress, your very, very best, and by accident tear it, how profuse you are with your "never minds—don't think of it—don't think of it—I don't care at all." If a husband does it, he gets a black frown, if a child, he is chastised.

Ah! these are little things, say you.—They tell mightily upon the heart, let us assure you little as they are.

A gentleman stops at a friend's house, and finds it all in confusion. "He don't see anything to apologise for—never thinks of such little matters." Every thing is all right—cold supper, cold room, crying children—"perfectly comfortable." Goes home where the wife has been taking care of sick ones, and working her life almost out.—Don't see why things can't be kept in better order; there never were such cross children before." No apologies accepted at home!

Why not be polite at home? Why not use freely that golden coin of courtesy?—How sweet they sound, those little words, "I thank you." or "You are very kind!" Doubly, yes thrice sweet from the lips we love, when heart-smiles make the eye sparkle with the clear light of affection.

Be polite to your children. Do you expect them to be mindful of your welfare? To grow glad at your approach? To bound away to do your pleasure before the request is half spoken? Then with all your dignity and authority, mingle politeness; give it a niche in your household temple. Only then will you have learned the true secret of sending out in the world, really "finished" gentlemen and ladies.

"What we say, we say unto all"—be polite.

Women and Temperance Reform.

AN ADDRESS TO MY SISTERS.

BY CORA CUSHMAN.

1. If your boy never drinks, he will never be drunken. This is evident; and also, if he never becomes drunken, he will not be a drunkard. Nothing else will ensure perfect safety to any individual, because the approaches of intemperance are so insidious that the occasional dram-drinker feels no alarm until appetite is stronger than reason and self-respect.

2. However firmly an individual may have fixed the determination to drink nothing that can intoxicate, there is a constant liability of lapse, while he consorts with those who drink. Sociality will play a powerful battery upon the will, and most usually good resolutions fade away like frost-work before the influence of a warm sun. All experience tends to confirm the truth of that Divine precept, "Evil communications corrupt good manners."

3. If the companionship of young men who drink be dangerous, much more is the family circle or the festive throng. In the former, the social instincts are excited by but one, while in the latter, age, youth and beauty, all incite the youth to violate the teachings of his mother. But you may urge that the adoption and adherence to this rule will curtail the circle of acquaintances—that it will cast your boy without the pale of fashionable society. Better thus than he should, by being exposed to temptation, fall away from his steadfastness, and weave about his person a garment of shame. It is well to settle the question, whether, for the sake of giving your boy fashionable associates, you are willing to jeopard his usefulness and happiness through all coming time. If the alternative be, the relinquishment of the society of the votaries of fashion, or the maintenance of the habits of sobriety, which will you choose for him? Answer wisely.

4. It is deplorably true, that, in all our cities, there are many houses which stand with doors ever open, inviting the entrance of the young and unwary. In these places, in conjunction with oysters, game, coffee, and such like things, there is found ardent spirits. The young are taken into these "gin palaces" to eat oysters or other luxurious food, and while there are enticed to drink, and thus habits of intemperance are gradually formed. In the whole catalogue of dangers of life in the city, the most fearful item is here. It is in these fashionable resorts that the young men are taught, not only to drink, but likewise to gamble, and thousands fall into this gilded snare. "My son," said Solomon, "go not in the way with evil doers," and his solemn tones of warning have a fearful import when regarded in this connection. These are the entrances to the way of death, and he that enters therein, his feet take hold on the grave and on disgrace.

5. "Wo unto him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lip," are the words of Deity, and human experience has proven that the curse was not lightly pronounced. Rare, indeed, are the instances where the young man who engaged in this "soul destroying, God dishonoring traffic," failed to reap a harvest of retribution. He setteth a snare for others, and falls into it himself; he is wounded by the spear in his own hands. There is that in the traffic in ardent spirits which blunts the sensibilities, violates the chastity of the imagination, corrupts the fountains of thought, and unduly developes the lower instincts and impulses of human nature. It has a tendency to brutalize men and to break down the sentiments which in infancy were instilled, and which, if followed, would lead to honor, usefulness and distinction. I remember one who was thus led to forget the pious teachings of a devoted mother, and whose life was blurred by crime and sin, and his grave covered over with infamy. The light of happiness faded from his pathway, and darkness like that of the grave settled down upon him. Lower and lower he sunk, until the friends and playmates of his childhood turned away from him, and he was left without a heart to pity, a hand to aid, or a voice to soothe. It was the transforming power of the traffic which wrought his downfall. Wouldst thou give thy boy to a fate like this?—Southern Era.

Beauty of the Female Character.—There is a spell in woman. No man, not utterly degraded, can listen without delight, to the accents of a guileless heart.—Beauty, too, has a natural power over the mind, and it is right that it should be so. All that overcomes selfishness, the besotting sin of the world, is an instrument of good. Beauty is but melody of a higher kind, and both alike soften the hard and troubled spirit of man. Even if we look upon lovely woman as on a rose, an exquisite production of the summer hours of life, it would be idle to deny her making even those summer hours sweeter.

But, as the companion of the mind, as the very model of friendship, that no change can shake, as the pleasant sharer of the heart, the being to whom man returns after the tumult of the day, like the worshipper to a sacred shrine, to receive his noble tastes as a source free from the evils of the external world, and glowing with a perpetual light of sanctity and love—where shall we find her equal?—Or, what must be our feelings towards the mighty disposer of earth, and all that it inhabits, but of admiration and gratitude for that disposal, which combines our highest happiness with our purest virtue?

Self-love is the greatest of all flatterers.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1853.

Grand Division.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of Indiana, will commence its semi-annual session, on the 26th day of April, next, at 2 o'clock, P. M., at Cambridge City, in Wayne county.

The Forest Rose.—This is the title of a handsome little weekly, printed and published by the boy Editor, Ross Alley, at Olean, Ripley county, Indiana. It is well printed on good paper, and full of original matter, indicating a good order of talent in both Editor and correspondents.—We have high hopes for its success; for we know the tireless energy of its proprietor. Success to the "Rose!" and success a thousand times to Ross Alley its Editor.

Danville Division.

We had the pleasure of meeting with the Danville Division of the Sons of Temperance, on the —— inst.; and we must say, that a nobler band, we have not at any time had the happiness to see. The Division room was full, and the most excellent state of feeling pervaded all. We feel assured that as long as that Division remains in its present condition, Danville will be free from the curse of the liquor traffic. Oh, that other Divisions would follow their example!

To Correspondents.

It is always a real gratification to us to receive well written communications from the friends of Temperance in different parts of the State; but it seems to us that those who can write, seldom try. On the other hand we are in the constant receipt of letters, which have no merit either in their subject matter, or the manner in which they are written. We cannot publish any article that has not some claim to originality, or artistic finish; and, however, it may disappoint the writer, we will not. We are always glad to receive well written articles that have any tendency to build up our cause. Those who deem their productions worthy of a place in the Chart, will please remember that it is also worth their while to pay their postage on such productions.

We owe an apology to "Brickabus" of Dillsboro', for not having published his letter. We lost the lettera few days after it was received; but will be pleased to publish any more of the like kind from the same source.

"We hope that all parties will settle down in the determination to give the law a fair trial. If it is constitutional, let it be enforced, rigidly enforced. In the mean time we hope our temperance friends will be satisfied to give the act a fair trial, and not urge the Maine Law or any other law, until the efficiency of the present one is fully tested."—State Sentinel.

The point in the foregoing is couched in the following sentence: "In the mean time we hope our Temperance friends will be satisfied to give the act a fair trial, and not urge the Main Law, or any other law, until the efficiency of the present one is fully tested." The italics are our own; and we use them to show what we are requested to do, under the modest pretext of fairly testing the law. Temperance men would be very verdant, indeed, if they should cease to agitate for a prohibitory law, on any such ground as that suggested by the Sentinel. They will not do it; but, while striving to execute the present law, they will not fail to labor for "something more exquisite still." From that purpose you will not deter us, Bro. Brown, by any such pretext.

Indianapolis Groggeries

In our last issue we noticed some of the common features of our Groggeries and their keepers; and glanced at the locality of one of the most conspicuous of the class. We now ask our readers to read "Oyster Depot" for "Oyster Saloon," and they will have no difficulty in ascertaining this celebrated resort of the simple. By the way, we owe an apology to the Oyster Saloon man, under the Wright House, for using his title as descriptive of the hard-visaged man of the Depot. If he is offended, however, we hope he will remember that the misnomer was entirely unintentional. But we really do not think he should be; for his case is not unlike the man who was compared to the monkey, or the monkey which was compared to the man; it is extremely difficult to determine which has a right to be offended. We hope, therefore, this apologetic explanation will be satisfactory to all parties; and shall proceed to notice the next of the groggeries.

2. Number two is situated under the Wright House a little to the east and across the street from the "Depot," and is the veritable "Oyster Saloon" itself, the real Simon Pure of Impurities. It has a sign much more significant than the Depot.—This is a triangular transparency, two sides of which constitute the sign. On these two sides, will be observed various devices, all more or less emblematical of what goes on within. On the east, are sketched two stately bucks in repose, designed, no doubt, to indicate that he who goes in will find himself oftener down than up, and that before he quits the place he will be entirely flat. The west side, however, which fronts the stair-way, leading down to the Chamber of Death, bears a still more cunning and altogether more significant device. You will observe, among other things, several fish hanging by a line that seems to enter their gills; and, by paying pretty strict attention, you will perceive, also, that their eyes, though not yet closed, are red and fiery—indicative of high inflammatory action, and by consequence of great agony. Transfer these figures thus curiously drawn upon the canvass, to the victims of the liquor-vender below, and you will be forced to admit that he gives his victims fair notice of the fate that awaits, by this sign. Does he not say to all who turn in thither: "Behold my sign! I will catch you, like so many fish, if you enter—perhaps with a hook in the gills—certainly with fish berries; and when I once get my fatal line into your gills, you will find yourselves in a state of suspension. Your eyes will become swollen and fiery; and alas! poor simple suckers, you shall at last utterly die. To show you, that this is just what I mean, behold my partridges, see how they dangle and are dead. One of them, poor thing!—hangs with its head down; and so shall it be with you, my customers, when I shall be done with you. Nay, do you not see, that the very canvass of my transparency is rent, and will you not learn hence, that if you but continue to enter you will also become torn."

It is really so. Here is fair warning to all the world "and the rest of mankind," and if the passenger will not heed it, the presiding genius of this soul-trap, need give himself no trouble on the score of conscience for stringing up his victims—at least he will not.

In conclusion, it is but just to say, that this pit that leads to one without bottom, goes down under the fashionable Hotel that stands over it. The Hotel opens into it, by many moveable ways, so that the one seems to be a door-way of the other. It is, therefore, safe, for the friends of their own souls to shun this haunted ground. The splendid House above, is but the ante-chamber of the pit below. Its doors afront and arear go down into it, and many a luckless wight has found himself engulphed in the Serbonian bog beneath, whose passage into it was by a way the world without knew not of. Beware!!

☞ We remember an old lady who was so remarkably economical that she once had a pair of shoes made for her little girl without soles, for fear that she would wear them out. This is nearly as bad as the woman, who, with her last breath, blew out an inch of candle, saying, that she could "see to die in the dark."

To the Polls!

Again we say, to the polls! Temperance men, religious men, sober men, friends of good order and economy, we conjure you by all that is sacred in society and virtue, to go to the polls on next Monday, and cast your votes "against License." Do not forget it! If you but remember it, and do your duty, we shall be able to test the law given us for the suppression of the evils of intemperance; and, if it answer the purpose for which it was enacted, we shall also be able to suppress the evils.—We can defeat the hosts of Alcohol; and if we are true to ourselves, we will defeat them. Let "no license" be your watchword, and, then, "to the polls!"

☞ We clip the following from a Texas paper, and publish it as an indication of the state of the cause in that State. It speaks right out. We wish our whisky press had the courage to do so too. We should then have our enemies fairly before us, and not as they now are, skulking coward-like behind ambiguities that ought to make hypocrisy itself ashamed. Can't they imitate their Texas brethren?

Dealy Forever!—Dealy continues to surfeit us with good things—now cigars—now cigars and sundries—until the table of our sanctum groans under its accumulated burden of luxuries. Reader, if you wish to purchase good liquors, good cigars, good tobacco, in fact anything in the grocery line, either at wholesale or retail, go to Dealy's.

Spots on the Sun and Magnetic Variations.—We find the following statement in the National Intelligencer, from its London correspondent:

Mr. Faraday, in a late lecture before the Royal Institution upon the Magnetic Forces made the following important announcement:

"A German astronomer has for many years been watching the spots on the sun, and daily recording the result. From year to year the groups of spots vary. They are sometimes very numerous—sometimes very few. After a while it became evident that the variations in number followed a descending scale through five years, and then on an ascending scale through five subsequent years—so that the periodicity of the variations became a visible fact.

"While our German friend was busy with his groups of sun-spots, an Englishman was busy with the variations of the magnetic needle. He, too, was a patient recorder of patient observation. On comparing his tabular results with those of the German astronomer, he found that the variations of the sun-spots—that the years when the groups were at their maximum, and so on through their series. This relation may be coincident merely, of derivative; if the latter, then do we connect astral and terrestrial magnetism, and new reaches of science are open to us."

Central American Troubles—Extraordinary conduct of an English Steamer.—New Orleans, March 9th.—The schooner "Charles Pearson," arrived this morning from Honduras. She reports that great excitement prevailed on the Island in consequence of Her Brittanic Majesty's war steamer "Devastation," having anchored off Toupello, and demanded the surrender of the place, in the name of the Mosquito King. The inhabitants were given two hours' time to decide before the commencement of a bombardment. The inhabitants yielded before superior forces, but solemnly protested against the outrage. The Mosquito flag was hoisted, and the Honduras flag was pulled down.

The British war steamer then proceeded to Limas, and cannonading was afterwards heard in that quarter. It was presumed that a contest was going on between the steamer and the Honduras troops.

A severe shock of an earthquake was felt at Belize on the 10th of February.

☞ Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams—a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of a ship—a bridle bit is a little thing, but see its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold the large parts of large buildings together; a word, a look, a frown—all are little things but powerful for good or evil. Think of this and mind the little things. Pay that little debt—it's a promise, redeem it—if it's a shilling, hand it over—you know not what important event hangs upon it. Keep your word sacredly—keep it to the children, they will mark it sooner than any one else, and the effect will probably be as lasting as life. Mind the little things.

"The whole Christian religion lies in this: Faith in Jesus Christ, as the means of salvation; the Gospel, as the source of light; the Spirit of God, as our guide; the love of God, as our law; Heaven, as our home; eternal life, as our end."

From the Maine Law Advocate.

An Argument with a Moral.

A few days since, says a correspondent, I came in contact with a man whose bloated countenance and crippled limbs told too plainly that he was a slave to the intoxicating cup. In conversation with him on the temperance movements of the day he boldly and honestly replied, "I shall vote for rum. I mean to act consistent with my life and professions. I do not profess to be a temperance man or a christian. I drink rum sometimes, and shall vote for rum.—"But," continued he, "if I ever should become a christian I should vote against rum and for the Maine Law for any man professing to be a temperance man or a christian, can not vote against the Maine Law, and be consistent with his profession."

"Believing as I do that the opinions and feelings of this man are the opinions and feelings of rumsellers and rum drinkers generally, in how mean a light (if I may be allowed to use a homely but expressive term) do professed temperance men and christians, who vote and otherwise oppose the efforts now making to prohibit the liquor traffic, stand in their estimation.—They like the offering of principle and profession made by such men on the altar of rum and party, because it assists them to attain their object, while at the same time they most heartily despise those who make it!"

We fully agree with our correspondent in his conclusion. If there is any one class of persons more thoroughly despised by the opponents of temperance than another, it is those whose professions look one way and their practice the other way.—The honest unyielding advocate of temperance, however ultra he may be, while he may receive the unqualified curses of those interested in the traffic, nevertheless commands a thousand times more respect from the heart than the look-one-way and row-the-other-way class named.

Think of this thing, you who profess to be temperance men and "new creatures in Christ Jesus"—think of the words of this degraded yet honest spoken man, his only plea offered in self-vindication was that he professed nothing better, and acted consistent with his professions—think of your position before God and men, of your professions, and then reconcile the stand you take in this matter with such professions, if you can. There is nothing a bad man more quickly notices and more heartily condemns than acts inconsistent with a christian profession, and no one thing in the world has made so many infidels and sceptics, as this species of inconsistency.

Said a man a few days since "I do not want to hear him pray," alluding to a certain individual, and why this aversion to that man's prayer, for no one prays more earnestly. Why, because he a professed temperance man and christian, casts his vote and uses his influence to elect men to office whom he knows will do all they can to prevent the passage of a law to prohibit the liquor traffic. Christian professor yours is a fearful responsibility. You "are a light set upon a hill," and how careful ought you to be that your light does not lead men down to perdition, instead of to repentance and good works. Remember the argument, "If I was a temperance man or a christian I should vote for a prohibitory law, but as I drink sometimes, and dont profess to be a christian, I am consistent and shall vote for rum."

First Use of Mahogany in England.—Doctor Gibbons, an eminent physician in the latter end of the last, and beginning of the present century, had a brother, a West-India Captain, who brought over some planks of this wood as ballast. As the Doctor was then building him a house in King-street, Covant-garden, his brother thought they might be of service to him. But the carpenters finding the wood too hard for their tools, they were laid aside for a time as useless. Soon after, Mrs. Gibbons wanting a candle-box, the Doctor called on his cabinet maker (Woolaston, in Long Acre, to make him one, of some wood that lay in his garden. Woolaston also complained that it was too hard. The Doctor said he must get some stronger tools. The candle-box was made and approved; insomuch, that the Doctor then insisted on having a bureau made of the same wood, which was accordingly done, and the fine color, polish, &c., were so pleasing that he invited all his friends to come and see it; among them the Dutchess of Buckingham. Her Grace begged some of the same wood of Dr. Gibbons and employed Woolaston to make her a bureau also; on which the fame of mahogany, and of Mr. Woolaston, were much raised, and the wood came into general use.

☞ A few months since a eulogy on Daniel Webster was delivered by a member of the legal profession before a Lyceum. Among the hearers were a school teacher and a school agent. On their ride home after the address, their conversation turned upon the performance of the evening. The teacher expressed himself much pleased with it. The agent replied "it was very good, but why did he keep back a part of it? Why didn't he tell the whole story and let us know all about the hanging?"—N. Y. Organ.

American Citizen Imprisoned.—The Savanah Republican learns by private letter from Bremen, that another American naturalized citizen has been imprisoned in Bremen, in violation of the laws of nations. Mr. Conrad Schmidt went to Bremen some months ago on a visit to his relations in Hanover, with a regular passport from the State Department at Washington. On the 24th of January last, while yet in Bremen, he was arested by the Bremen police on the requisition of a Hanoverian magistrate, for military service due Hanover in 1841, and thrown into prison. Our Consul at Bremen, Ralph King, applied to the director of the police for his release. The answer to this demand was a reference to the Hanoverian Government, to which Mr. Schmidt was to be delivered. Mr. King then addressed a letter to the chief burgermeister of Bremen requiring his discharge, alleging that he had nothing to do with Hanover, and that the Government of Bremen would be held responsible by the United States, This communication had no effect; wherenpon the Consul referred the whole matter to Mr. Barnard, our Minister at Berlin, who sent a strong protest to Bremen, fortified with which Mr. King again demanded the enlargement of Schmidt, giving the senate until 4 P. M., on the following day to make up their decision. This brought Schmidt out of prison, after being detained five days.

The letter further states that while Mr. Schmidt was in prison, another United States citizen was pursued in Hanover, with the Bremen police after him. He escaped, however, and, at the date of our letters had appeared with impunity in Bremen. From these occurrences, naturalized German citizens will see the necessity of always being fortified with a passport from the State Department when visiting the old country.

Curious Case of Fraud.—A singular case of alleged kidnapping was under examination at Hamilton, Canada, at last accounts. A very respectable looking young man, named Harvey Smith, was brought before Messrs. Winner & Ryckman, charged with having indnced two young colored men to sell themselves into slavery, by telling them he would divide the proceeds of the sale equally among them and ensure their return to Canada by stealing them from their purchasers. The parties' names are Adley and Bacchus, one of whom had been in the employment of the defendant's brother. Informations were laid against the prisoner by a young colored man named Charles Webbe, who swore that Mr. Smith had made the proposal mentioned above also to him, but that he declined accepting it. This witness also stated that Adley and Bacchus had told him they were going to the South, and that the last time that he saw them was on the beach, apparently on their way to Buffalo.

The examination had elicited no additional facts of importance when the Court adjourned. Much excitement against the prisoner existed among the colored population, and a breaeh of the peace was feared.

The Stormy Petrel.—A short time since we gave in the Journal some account of the interesting little wanderer of the sea, known as the Petrel, or in sailor parlance, "Mother Cary's Chicken." A correspondent in Lubec, Me., sent us the following interesting fact which have come under his own observation. The Petrel is found in great abundance in the bay of Fundy, and in fair weather they are seldom seen in very close proximity to the land, but when the weather is thick and hazy, and also in the night, they come on shore. They dig holes in the banks, like the kingfisher, where they lay their eggs and rear their young. They are never seen flying in the vicinity of their nests, like other birds, hence our correspondent comes to the conclusion that they seek their nests under the cover of night. When a mackerel fisher is engaged dressing fish, these birds will feed all night around the vessel, upon the offals thrown overboard. On one island in the bay is a brook of fresh water, where the fishermen resort for a supply, and the birds are heard in great numbers in the vicinity at night. There are two varieties, which are denominated by the "down East" fisherman, Father Cary's and Mother Cary's Chickens.—Boston Journal.

A Caution.—We learn from a late treatise on Cancer, that the application of soot poultices, salves, &c., has fearfully increased the number of cases of cancer in our hospitals. From a careful inquiry into the origin and causes of cancer cases in one of the eastern hospitals, it was ascertained that in three cases out of five, the patients had had cuts, burns, or bruises, and had resorted to the much approved application of soot for relief. This author also cited a species of cancer peculiar to sweeps, and which he attributes to their constant proximity with soot.

☞ "My brethren," said Swift, in a sermon, "there are three sorts of pride: of birth, of riches, and of talents, I shall not speak of the latter, none of you being liable to that abominable vice."

Who will be Benefitted!

Or rather, we might better ask, who will not be benefitted by the prohibition of the liquor traffic? There is not an interest throughout the whole range of society, but what would be greatly improved, was the entire beverage traffic annihilated today.

That every social relation of life would have a new existence, was the entire body of intoxicating beverages utterly and forever destroyed, it needs no other arguments to prove, than are found in the statistics given us in Maine, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, where the laws of these States have been enforced, and the startling, ever visible effects of the traffic, in this as well as every other community.—Hard is it to find a person entitled to a moment's consideration, who is not ready to admit the curse, socially and morally, that intemperance has entailed upon the community.

That the mercantile and mechanical interests would be proportionably benefitted, is equally plain to be seen. Intemperance is the destroyer of labor—consequently of its wages and their producing thrift. Let every one who now squanders his time hanging around grog-shops, when he might and should be at work, change his course of life, and become a sober working man, he has the more to spend, and more that he will spend in the necessaries, as also the luxuries of life. It is a rule, with but few exceptions, that persons spend in proportion to their income. Hence, as the income of the industrious and thrifty is more than that of the idle and profligate, were all industrious, as they most likely would be was rum out of their way, the amount of actual wealth now lost by idleness would be distributed among the various tradesmen in the community, and add just so much more to their stock and trade. Every dollar spent for alcoholic drinks as a beverage, is more effectually lost, and is the cause of more poverty, than if sunk to the bottom of the sea.

How is it with the rumseller? Whatever he may think, and those interested with him in the renting of stores and otherwise, to the contrary, no class of persons in the community, if we except the intemperate themselves, and their families, would be more largely the recipients of the blessings of a strictly enforced prohibitory law. It is proved, beyond even the shadow of doubt, by careful investigation of the traffic for the past twenty years, that more than three quarters of all who have been engaged in it, have either been ruined by it themselves or some part of their families, and not an eighth of all who have been in the business during that time in this State, have come out of it unscathed and with property.

If any one doubts the truth of our statement, let them bring up in review the life and end of all of those within their memory who have been engaged in the traffic for the past fifteen or twenty years, and see if we are not more than sustained by the facts, as they shall appear. To this end we challenge investigation, and freely offer our columns to any one who will show to the contrary.

What a fearfully hazardous business is it that involves the ruin, or the loss of domestic happiness, of seven out of every eight who embark in it; and if men in their blind infatuation will thus jeopardize their own and the best interest of those around them, is it not a just and philanthropic act to take from them the power to do so?

The traffic is all wrong from the beginning to the end—an unmitigated curse, cursing alike all who are brought within its baleful influence. It has not a single redeeming quality—it commences in deception and falsehood, and ends in ruin and death. It is a foul libel on mercantile business, a disgrace to everything like fair and honorable dealing, and marks those who are engaged in it with a stigma deep and lasting as the curse of Cain.—Maine Law Advocate.

☞ A very curious discovery has lately been made in the province of Bulgaris, in Turkey. Some Greek workmen, in digging near the village of Rahmanileah and the town of Hodzah, found a large table of gray colored marble; they removed it, and found one beneath, exactly similar; having removed that, also, they saw a great number of objects shining like gold and silver. They hastened to the captain of the district, and that functionary, assisted by two ecclesiastics, proceeded to make an examination. They found a skeleton of large stature, with a copper helmet on his head, surrounded by a thin crown of gold; the hands and arms, up to the elbows, were stained with something of a bronze color. In the right hand was a copper chain, with an incense-box of the same material, covered with verdigris; on the third finger of the left hand was a gold ring, with figures in Roman characters, 960. By the side of the skeleton were three cups of silver, very brilliant, and twenty-six cups of iron, very rusty, but bearing traces of having been gilded; there were also an immense number of nails, and about five hundred arrows, of which the wood was rotten and the points rusty. The skeleton and the different articles were carefully packed up and sent to Adrianople.—Medical Journal.

To the 'Moderate Drinker.'

I behold in you a noble form and manly beauty; I know you have a heart in which might dwell every manly virtue.—Will you allow one who fears your happiness may be wrecked, to say a few simple words to you with regard to a habit that has carried the wisest, the best, the most beautiful, to the dark grave of shame?

The wine, with its rich, ruby hue, may sparkle in the glass; but remember ever, as you raise it to your lips, there is DEATH there. It may leap to your brain, and induce that dreamy delight that is like the torpor preceding death, when the limbs are benumbed with cold, and beautiful vistons flit through the mind, before the life—light goes out forever. It may please the taste now—but it is surely and swiftly working your destruction.

By the love of a mother, upon whose bosom you lay in helpless infancy, I beseech you,—pause. Think! upon one hand there is life—a sweet young wife, who has already learned to weep over your indiscretion; a future that you may brighten with the fruition of hope—a home of comfort—a reasonable competency—a fame untarnished—everything that will make life desirable. On the other, neglected vows, a wretched fireside, an unhappy wife, a broken constitution, a blunted intellect, a depraved appetite, a gloomy future, a drunkard's grave. Look at these extremes! Which path will you choose?

Pardon me if I speak plainly. I do so because I think you are worth saving.—You may be an ornament to society; and if you will but call it into action, you have all the firmness necessary to resist the love of strong drink.

Look at that young wife. She has left all for you, she would brave danger, death, for your sake. How will you repay her? Shall the thoughtless world point to her, and say with sneering accents, that her husband cannot control his base appetites? Will you cause that loving heart to break with its load of grief? Is that the way you will repay her? I hope—I trust not.

Will you not go to Him and ask for grace to put aside the cup that a brother might tempt you to drink? Dare to say 'no,' when they crave your company at the place of conviviality. Dare to say 'NO, I am a husband; I may be a father; shall I bring my little ones to shame and beggary?' No, no; forbid it, Heaven!

May I not hear that you have given up and forever, the habit that ruins soul and body? that you have thrown off the shackels of slavery, and can stand up and say, 'I AM A MAN! and my wife shall never blush for her husband, my mother shall never weep for her son.'—Ohio Organ.

"NO PAUPERS HERE, EITHER."—In the town of Plymouth, in this State, there is a hotel which has long been kept without any 'medicine.' During the up-going travel to the White Mountains last summer, a Southron stopped at this hotel, one who was going up altogether for a look at Nature's grandest scenes, or a draught of cold water from the mighty alembics of 'Argenecock. He sent from his rooms for a bottle of Bardolph's 'best wine,' to which summons the landlord replied that he kept no wine. The answer brought the southern gentleman himself down.'

'Landlord, haven't you got any kind of liquor?'

'I don't keep liquors at all,' replied the landlord.

'Don't keep liquors! How in the name of common sense do you accommodate travellers without it? I want some, and I had a right to expect that you kept it. I will tell all my friends to stop somewhere else where there is better accommodation.'

'Tell 'em what you please,' replied the independent landlord, 'but don't forget to add that there isn't a pauper here. either.

[Concord (N. H.) Indicvtor.

A Southern paper says:—A dentist in Washington has taken out a patent for generating gas from simple wood. This is no idle fiction. We examined the works, and saw the light burning in juxtaposition with that created from the Scotch coal, and it was equal to it both in purity and brilliancy. The inventor has entered into a contract with a company in Wilmington, N. C., to light up that town with his material. Pine wood, with which that country abounds, is preferred to any other, and the gas generated from it costs comparatively nothing. It is estimated that every house in Norfolk, and all the public lamps, can be lighted for a sum not exceeding a dollar per night. This is almost as cheap as moonshine. The apparatus for generating this gas is extremely cheap and simple, and we expect in a very few years to find it in universal use—accessible alike to the poor as well as the rich.

☞ The longer I live, the more I am certain that the great difference between men, the great and insignificant, is energy—invincible determination—an honest purpose once fixed—and then death or victory. That quality will do anything that can be done in the world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunity will make a two-legged creature a man without it.

Abstemious Diet.

Many cases of illness, both in adults and children, may be readily cured by abstinence from all food. Headache, disordered stomachs, and many other attacks, are often caused by violating the rules of health, and in consequence, some parts of the system are overloaded, or some of the organs are clogged. Omitting one, two or three meals, as the case may be, gives the system chance to rest, and allow the clogged organs to dispose of their burdens. The practice of giving drugs to clear out the stomach, though it may afford the needed temporary relief, always weakens the system, while abstinence secures the good result without doing any injury.

Said a young gentleman to a distinguished medical practitioner in Philadelphia, "Doctor, what do you do for yourself when you have a turn of the headache, or other slight attacks?"

"Go without my dinner;" was the reply.

"And if that does not cure you, what then?"

"Go without my supper."

"But if that does not cure you, what then?"

"Go without my breakfast. We physicians seldom take medicines ourselves, or use them in our families, for we know that abstinence is better; but we cannot make our patients believe it."

Many cases of slight indisposition are cured by a change of diet. Thus, if a person suffers from constipation, has a headache, slight attacks of fever or dyspepsia, the cause may often be removed by eating rye mush and molasses, baked apples and other fruits.

GOOD AND TRUE.—A man, says Doctor Franklin, as often gets two dollars for the one he spends in informing his mind, as he does for a dollar he lays out in any other way. A man eats up a pound of sugar, and it is gone, and the pleasure he has enjoyed has ended; but the information he gets from a newspaper is treasured up in the mind to be enjoyed anew, and to be used whenever occasion or inclination calls for it. A newspaper is not the wisdom of one man, or of two men; it is the wisdom of the age, and of past ages, too. A family without a newspaper is always half an age behind the times in general information; besides, they can never think much nor much to talk about. And then there are the little ones growing up in ignorance, without any taste for reading. Besides all these evils, there is the wife, who, when the work is done, has to sit down with her hands in her lap, and nothing to amuse her or divert her mind from the toils and cares of the domestic circle. Who, then, would be without a newspaper? [Do you take the Temperance Chart?]

WHICH IS THE WEAKER SEX?—Females are called the weaker sex, but why? If they are not strong who is? When men must wrap themselves in thick garments and encase the whole in a stout overcoat to shut out the cold, women in thin silk dresses, with neck and shoulders bare, or nearly so, say they are perfectly comfortable when men wear water-proof boots over woolen hose, and encase the whole in india rubber to keep them from freezing, women wear thin silk hose and cloth shoes, and pretend not to feel the cold! When men cover their heads with furs and then complain of the severity of the weather, women half cover their heads with straw bonnets, and ride twenty miles in an open sleigh, facing a cold north-wester, and pretend not to suffer at all. And then is not women's mental strength greater than man's? Can she not endure suffering that would bow the stoutest man to the earth? Call not woman the weaker uessel; for had she not been stronger than man, the race would long since have been extinct. Her's is a state of endurance which man could not bear.

A Good Life.

The beauty of a holy life constitutes the most eloquent and effective persuasive to religion which one human being can address to another. We have many ways of doing good to our fellow-creatures, but none so efficacious as leading a virtuous, upright, and well-ordered life. There is an energy of moral suasion in a good man's life, surpassing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen but silent beauty of holiness, speaks more eloquently of God and duty than the tongues of men and angels. Let parents remember this. The best inheritance a parent can bequeath to a child, is a virtuous example, a legacy of hallowed remembrances and associations.

☞ Ardent spirits are said to be necessary in very warm weather; but it is proved that they inerease the heat, and at the same time render the system less able to withstand it. Dr. Bell says, "that when used in warm climates, whether habitually, moderately, or excessively, they always diminish the strength of the body, and render it more susceptible of disease, and unfit for any service that requires vigor or activity."

DEFINITIONS OF DRUNKENNESS.—The fact that the term "drunkenness!' is not generally understood by the numerous "victims" who are daily brought before the Police Court, is often apparent to the officers and other gentlemen having business in that court. But not until the present week has there been any criterion given, upon which the charge of drunkenness could be clearly established. The thing is now settled, and the modus operandi has become a fixed fact.

A day or two since in the Police Court, the Justice inquired of a watchman what signs of drunkenness he saw in the defendant? The watchman replied, "Well, your honor, he was so drunk that when he went to put on his boots, he could 'nt find the hole to put his foot in."

Yesterday, in the Municipal Court, a girl ten years of age was put on the stand as a witness in favor of her father-in-law, the defendant. The question put to the child was in effect—if she knew that her father was at home on a given night, three weeks since, and how she knew it.

The child, in the simplicity of her little heart, stated that she knew it, "because he was tight." The counsel then put the question:—"How do you know your father was tight?"—to which the innocent little girl replied, "Because mother had to pull his boots off for him."

From these two cases, one of which occurred in the Police Court, and both within twenty-four hours of each other, the fact seems to be established that when a man can't find the hole of a boot in order to put his foot into it—then he is drunk; and also, when a man's better half is obliged to pull her liege lord's boots off from his feet, the he is tight.—Boston Jour.

"A Little Tight."

We remonstrated with a young man of fine promise about indulging in the social glass. He replied, 'I do not drink enough to hurt me; when I find myself going into excess, I will quit right square off.' We told him that we were not ignorant of the fact that he had been drunk. In a laughing way he responded, 'Oh, well I have been a little tight two or three times, but that is nothing.' Day by day we saw the demon winding thread after thread of the cruel bond of appetite about him, and he still thought there was no danger. At length he waked up to the unwelcome truth that he was a drunkard. We appealed again to our young and beloved friend, and he declared that he could not restrain himself, that he had no power to resist the tempter. That friend is now in the grave of the drunkard. Oh, young man, just forming habits of life, we beseech you pause and reflect before you quaff the first glass of the damning poison. Dash it down!—Ohio Organ.

THE NEW TERRITORY OF WASHINGTON, created by the last Congress, comprises that part of Oregon which lies north of the channel of Columbia river, to where it crosses the 46th degree of latitude, and thence along said degree of latitude, to the top of the Rocky Mountains. The land occupied by missionary stations, not exceeding 640 acres to each, together with the improvements, is expressly confirmed to the Missionary Societies respectively, which established the same. Stations that were so occupied prior to the passage of the Act organizing the territory of Oregon, are also confirmed to the Societies which established them, even though they have since been abandoned.

ANECDOTE OF SHERIDAN.—The celebrated Sheridan was one day much annoyed by a fellow-member in the House of Commons, who kept crying out every few minutes, "Hear, hear!" During the debate he took occasion to prescribe a political cotemporary that wished to play the rogue, but had only sense enough to act the fool. "Where," exclaimed he, with great emphasis, "where shall we find a more foolish knave or more knavish fool than this?" "Hear! hear!" was shouted by the troublesome member. Sheridan turned round, and thanking him for his prompt reply, sat down amid a general roar of laughter.

☞ Every man is in danger of becoming a drunkard who is in the habit of drinking ardent spirits. 1st. When he is warm. 2d. When he is cold. 3rd. When he is wet. 4th. When he is dry. 5th. When he is dull. 6th. When he is lively. 7th. When he travels. 8th. When he stays at home. 9th. When he is in company. 10th. When he is alone. 11th. When he is at work. 12th. When he is idle. 13th. Before meals. 14th. After meals. 15th. When he gets up. 16th. When he goes to bed. 17th. On holidays. 18th. On public occasions. 19th. On any day. 20th. On any occasion.

☞ We seek happiness by heaping on our puny selves all we can, each one building, according to the joint force of his intellect and selfishness, a reversed pyramid, under which the smaller it rises, the lower he is crushed on the small spot his small self can fill.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

What we take for virtues is often nothing but an assemblage of different actions, and of different interests, that fortune or our industry know how to arrange; and it is not always from valor and from chastity that men are valiant, and that women are chaste.

Whatever discoveries may have been made in the territory of self-love, there still remain in it many unknown tracts.

Self-love is more artful than the most artful mad in the world.

The duration of our passions no more depends on ourselves than the duration of our lives.

Passion often makes a madman of the cleverest man, and renders the greatest fools clever.

The passions are the only orators that always persuade: they are, as it were, a natural art, the rules of which are infallible; and the simplest man with passion, is more persuasive than the most eloquent, without it.

The passions have an injustice and an interest of their own, which renders it dangerous to obey them, and we ought to mistrust them even when they appear most reasonable.

There is going on in the human heart a perpetual generation of passions, so that the overthrow of one is almost always the establishment of another.

The passions often engender their contraries; avarice sometimes produces prodigality, and prodigality avarice; we are often resolute from weakness, and daring from timidity.

Whatever pains we may take to disguise our passions under the appearances of piety and honor, they always discover themselves through these veils.

Our self-love endures with greater impatience the condemnation of our tastes, than of our opinions.

Men are not only prone to lose the remembrance of benefits and of injuries; they even hate those who have obliged them, and cease to hate those who have grievously injured them. The constant study to recompense good and avenge evil appears to them a slavery, to which they feel it difficult to submit.

The clemency of princes is often only a stroke of policy to gain the affections of their people.

This clemency, of which men make a virtue, is practised sometimes from vanity, sometimes from indolence, often from fear, and almost always from all three together.

The moderation of fortunate people comes from the calm which good fortune gives to their tempers.

Moderation is a fear of falling into envy, and into the contempt which those deserve who become intoxicated with their good good fortune; it is a vain ostentation of the strength of our mind; in short, the moderation of men in their highest elevation is a desire of appearing greater than their fortune.

Acknowledgments

Received of Jesse May and Martha Cate, Economy, $1 50; of D. Miller, 50; of M. & L. Nebeker, Covington, 75; of J. Little and Jno. Peacock, 1 50; of M. W. Diggs, Winchdster, 75; of J. J. Johnston, Georgetown, Ky., 37½; of S. R. Alley, Greensburg, 1 00; of James Irons, Belleville, 75; of H. B. Pershing, 2 25; of J. Mathers, for 16 copies 8 months, 8 00; of W. B. Slemans, Corydon, 75; of Jas. Ray, Shelbyville, 75; of Wilson Graham, Owensburgh, 1 00; of J. W. Wallace, Casey, Illinois, for 4 copies 8 months, 2 00; of W. Dewitt and Curtis Webb, Rushville, 1 00; of S. B. Baxter, Patriot, 5 00; of E. B. Guernsey, Blue Lick, 2 25; of W. Lagonier, Indianapolis, 75; of P. A. Edmonson, Clayton, 25.

☞ Can a man be considered a loose character, when he comes home tight, every evening? Will some of our metaphysicians elucidate this problem?

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR.
Indianapolis, Indiana

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00

To be directed to the G W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P., that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. of T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,

Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,

oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGAZINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—CHEAPEST OF ALL.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT

MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

FOR THE CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost INSTANTANEOUS relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, consequent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease, to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

Office at Adam's & Co 's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. RICHARD M. HALL. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

C. B. DAVIS & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Booksellers and Stationers,

No. 12, Washington Street,

june30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent

PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Athenæum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original;" and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates"

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D, Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B WELCH, Esq, after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGANTY, Ed of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently despaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the CHERRY PECTORAL which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

DR. AYER, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
EDWARD HITCHCOCK, M D LL D,

J. C AYER. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

PRESIDENT PERKINS, Vermont Med College.
PROF. SILLIMAN, Yale College
PROF. VALENTINE MOTT, New York.
PROF. CLEAVELAND, Bowdoin Med. College.
PROF. BUTTERFIELD, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. GEO. P. MARSH, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen EMANUEL BULNES, President of Chili
RT. REV. ED POWER, Lord Bishop of Toronto
Rev. DOCT. LANSING, Brooklyn, New York.
ARCHBISHOP PURSELL, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

---

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY

BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1853. NO. 41.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

Live to do Good.

"Not to myself alone,"
The little opening flower transported cries;
"Not to myself alone I bud and bloom—
With fragrant breath the breezes I perfume,
And gladden all things with my rainbow dyes;
The bee comes sipping, every eventide,
His dainty fill;
The butterfly within my cup doth hide
From threatening ill."

"Not to myself alone,"
The circling star with honest pride doth boast—
"Not to myself alone I rise and set;
I write upon night's coronal of jet
His power and skill who formed our myriad host;
A friendly beacon at heaven's open gate,
I gem the sky,
That man might ne'er forget, in every fate,
His home on high."

"Not to myself alone,"
The heavy-laden bee doth murmuring hum;
"Not to myself alone from flower to flower
I rove the wood, the garden and the bower,
And to the hive at evening weary come;
For man, for man the luscious food I pile
With busy care,
Content if this repay my ceaseless toil—
A scanty share,"

"Not to myself alone,"
The soaring bird with lusty pinon sings—
"Not to myself alone I raise my song;
I cheer the drooping with my warbling tongue,
And bear the mourner on my viewless wings;
I bid the hymnless churl my anthem learn
And God adore;
I call the worldling from his dross to turn,
And sing and soar."

"Not to myself alone,"
The streamlet whispers on its pebbly way—
"Not to myself alone I sparkling glide;
I scatter health and life on every side,
And strew the fields with herb and flow'ret gay.
I sing unto the common, bleak and bare,
My gladsome tune;
I sweeten and refresh the languid air
In droughty June."

"Not to myself alone:"
O man, forget not thou earth's honored priest!
Its tongue, its soul, its life, its pulse, its heart—
In earth's great chorus to sustain thy part;
Chiefest of guests at love's ungrudging feast,
Play not the niggard, spurn thy native clod,
And self disown;
Live to thy neighbor, live unto thy God,
Not to thyself alone.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Argument of David Paul Brown, Esq., Philadelphia, in favor of the Maine Law.

In the loss of every member of the commnnity the State suffers, in the flourishing vices of the community the State is disgraced, in the unprohibited drunkenness of the community the State itself becomes drunk—and to the legislators who may prevent all this, and who do not, the odium is legitimately attributable. Nay more, if the subject was considered merely in reference to the finances of the State, leaving its character out of the question, there is every possible reason as I have shown, for removing this curse of inebriety from our country. I say, that it is expedient. No man, at least no sober man, can doubt it. Nor would a drunkard doubt, if in the interval between his cups, he retains sufficient unbiassed reason to enable him to decide upon the question. The legislature can prosecute gaming, lotteries, brothels, unlawful assemblages, and tumultuous meetings. Nay, they punish drunkenness in various shapes and vagrancies of all description, in short regulate all matters that affect the safety, the health and prosperity of the State. Why then should they allow drunkenness which carries all those evils in its train, to flourish unmolested in its supremacy of horror? There is no living reason why they should; of course therefore, there can be no doubt of the expediency of the measure. Why then should the will be wanting—the want of will arises from the want of courage. A politician is the most timid of God's creatures—before he gets a post he is in constant fear that he will not get it, and when he gets it, is in constant fear that he will lose it.

As to the violation of the Sabbath, consequent upon the unrestrained traffic in intoxicating liquors, it seems to me most extraordinary that any man should be called upon to express an opinion in enforcement of the solemn command of the decalogue, the injunction of the almighty himself, "Thou shalt keep holy the sabbath day." Unless the advocates of intemperance can show that riot, reveling, &c., as embracing all beastly intoxication, is a compliance with this divine requisition, I think we should be spared the necessity of suggesting arguments in support of the laws of the Omnipotent. The municipal laws, it seems, may be invoked in aid of the divine law, and it is hardly, I should think, to be imagined that a municipal chief magistrate should be so regardless of his duty to this world and the next—to temporal and to eternal statutes, as to permit those vices to flourish and grow into a most pernicious harvest, while he is not only empowered to cross, but which he is bound by the sternest obligations of duty utterly to extirpate. He is called upon to do so, as I have said, by the law of God and man.—He is called upon to do so as the conservator of the peace and prosperity of the great city committed to his government.—He is bound to do so, for the preservation of the inebriates themselves. He is bound to do so for the benefit of those who may be dependant upon them, or connected with them, and he is under especial obligations to do so, for the protection of society against the contaminating and pervading influence of their example. It is said that among the Grecian youths, during the seasons appropriated to the Olympic games, the Athenians caused their slaves to exhibit themselves in a state of beastly intoxication, for the purpose of teaching their children by the means of this disgusting spectacle, a salutary lesson of the advantages of sobriety. This might do in Athens, or perhaps it might do any where, where the indulgence of the vice was confined to slaves, but it is to be feared that freemen may imitate rather than contemn the vices of freemen, and thereby fall a prey to the influence of example.

Vice, we are told by the great poet of nature, "shall sooner convert virtue from what she is to a bawd, than virtue can reform vice to her own likeness." The best mode however of preventing all those evils, which to be thought of are to be condemned, is the actual prohibition of their sale. It is no answer to say they may be obtained somewhere: If their sale be universally forbidden, they, at all events, will not be obtained everywhere, as is pretty much the case at present, and will be of difficult attainment any where. Let the legislature do their duty and the ministerial officers do theirs, and the great work of reform will soon be accomplished; but a vice of this sort can never be checked by partial modification. Whoever heard of a partial check of larceny; as for instance, no man shall steal with impunity any sum over five dollars or forge more then five promissory notes. Where is the surgeon, who, to eradicate a deeply seated and wide spread cancer, will direct and confine his skill and his knife to some superficial fibre of the devouring and destructive disease.

But it is said that the Constitution of the United States forbids any legislation, such as has been proposed upon this subject.—This Constitution is a very convenient scare-crow, and is resorted to upon all occasions when all other defences fail; and yet, as I understand it, it has no more to do with the State remedy proposed for the evils of intemperance, than it has to do with the Copernican system. Let us see what portion of it they refer to in their zeal; though in passing to it, we must not fail to observe, that a vast deal of the opposition to the proposed legislation is not confined to mere patriotism, but seems to be directed to supposed pecuniary advantage to individuals, as springing from the contamination and distinction of the masses of the community. By the 8th section of the constitution of the United States, Congress is "empowered to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to regulate commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States." And this is the clause upon which it is maintained that the provisions of the Maine Law, and of course, similar provisions in other States, are or would be unconstitutional. And in support of this doctrine, in obedience to the fashion of the times, the adversaries of temperance rely upon the argument of Mr. Webster in his professional opposition to a law of similar import, adopted by the State of Massachusetts some ten years ago. The substance of his argument in this, so far as it relates to the present inquiry—First, "No State can prohibit the sale of imported merchandize, either wholsale or retail." This I deny. Second, "When there is a collision between State law and a law of the United States, the State law must yield." This I admit, but the answer to it is, that there is no collision. "If Congress have power to regulate a subject matter, a State cannot interfere,"—true, I grant; but they fail to show that the State has interfered with any right possessed by Congress.—"The power of Congress in regard to Revenue, does not terminate at the boundaries of a State, but enters into its interior. And if a State can regulate trade and commerce within its limits, she may exclude foreign commerce and thereby injuriously affect the revenue of the government." Now in answer to all this I say, that a State exercises its power when that of the United States' power terminates with the collection of its duties. That the United States has no right to regulate the trade of an individual State—though she may regulate the trade with foreign States or between the several States of the Union. I make a distinction between the word Commerce and the word Trade—trade being applicable to the business within the limits of a State—and commerce being more properly applied to the business between foreign and domestic States. The language is "to regulate commerce with foreign Nations and among the several States," not to regulate the trade within the several States. How then this can be construed into a power incompatible with the internal regulations of a sovereign State, we may well be at a loss to imagine. But as I understand the matter, the question has been decided in analagous cases at least, both by the Supreme Court of the United States and by the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania, and if time would permit me to travel further, I think I could satisfy any man that it was virtually decided by one-half the States of the Union and never doubted by the other.

Whoever denied that it is constitutional to prohibit the sale of liquor by less measure than a quart—or to tax licensed houses, or prohibit the introduction of powder or poison in the city? Yet all these might remotely affect the revenue—but it is nevertheless a State right—and not in collision with a just construction of the Constitution. If we have the right to prohibit the sale of less than a quart—we may forbid the sale of less than a pipe.

You can prevent the introduction of disease into your State by Quarantine Laws. You can prevent peril to the safety of the community by excluding or removing powder or poison, or any other deleterious article. You can prevent the introduction of obscene books, which may corrupt the morals of the community. You can do anything that the efficiency of sound Police Regulations may require, and although in some of these matters Congress may have the authority to interfere—yet Congress never has interfered, and never will interfere, and therefore, there will probably be no collision between Federal and State rights.

It is not a possible collision, it is an actual collision that is to be regarded in this discussion.

[Here, various State authorities are referred to, as follows: 5 Howard 504; 9 Wheaton, page 1; 9th Wheaton, 203; 12 Wheaton, 410; 11 Pelus, 102, 132.]

These authorities appear to me to be sufficient for all the purposes of this occasion. They are authorities furnished by the sages of the Law before the Maine question was agitated or thought of. They are from the highest State and National Tribunals—and of course, free from the imputation of anything like bias, prejudice or passion. It is believed that in these views there is an entire unanimity among the judges of the Supreme Court of the Land. Not only so, but among most of the illustrious Jurists throughout the continent, the exercise of whose intellectual powers has not been impaired or perverted by an ambitious and overwhelming desire of an irregular political advancement, or obscured or drowned in the Circean Bowl.

But suppose the law were doubtful on the score of constitutionality, there is no conflicting National Legislation. The government is not compelled to exercise its power, to cure a small evil, which leads to the accomplishment of a great National good. Or if it were, the Supreme Court of the United States is entirely competent to decide the question between a State and the Federal government, without the clamor of the dram sellers and their purveyors of supplies from Maine to Mexico. I am no radical—no ultraist—no fanatic, but allow me to say that the annual Revenue of the United States would not pay for the ruin which is entailed upon the Nation by the simple importation of foreign poisons. The fortunes alone wasted as the almost inevitable and direct consequences would annually treble the amount of the imposts or duties; and the physical and moral and social evils attendant upon wide spread, legalized drunkenness, would not be compensated to this great and glorious country by the amount of England's national debt.

We say, therefore, and we ask you all to join in the practical enforcement of the doctrine, that the sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage should be prohibited by law, because:

1. They deprive men of their reason for the time being.
2. They destroy men of the greatest intellectual strength.
3. They foster and encourage every species of immorality.
4. They bar the progress of civilization and religion.
5. They destroy the peace and happiness of millions of families.
6. They reduce many virtuous wives and children to beggary.
7. They cause many thousands of murders.
8. They prevent all reformation of character.
9. They render abortive the strongest resolutions.
10. The millions of property expended in them is lost.
11. They cause the majority of cases of insanity.
12. They destroy both the body and the soul.
13. They burden sober people with millions of paupers.
14. They cause immense expenditures to prevent crime.
15. They cost sober people immense sums in charity.
16. They burden the country with enormous taxes.
17. Because moderate drinkers want the temptation removed.
18. Drunkards want the opportunity removed.
19. Sober people want the nuisance removed.
20. Tax payers want the burden removed.
21. The prohibition would save thousands now falling.
22. The sale exposes our persons to insult.
23. The sale exposes our families to destruction.
24. The sale upholds the vicious and idle.

THE annual amount of lead produced from the Wisconsin Lead Mines, is about 40,000,000 pounds, which at five cents a pound, (a low enough estimate now,) amounts to $2,000,000.

THE contributions to the Washington National Monument during the month of February, amounted to $1,604,22, and expenditures to $2,109,19.

Light and Love.

From the German of Herder.

BY MRS. ST. SIMON.

In the beginning all was void and desolate, a cold abyss of waters: the elements of things lay mingled in wild confusion.—Then the breath of Life came from the mouth of the Everlasting, and broke the chains of ice, and like the wings of a brooding dove moved gently across the gloomy chaos.

Every thing now stirred in the dark depth, striving upward to birth. Then appeared the first born, the soft, refreshing Light.

Sweet Light, united with Love, the almighty mother, hovered over the face of the waters; they soared up to heaven, and formed the golden azure; they descended into the depths, and filled them with life; they bore aloft the earth, an altar to God, strewing it with ever-reviving flowers; they animated the smallest atom.

And when they had filled the ocean, the depths, the air and earth with being, they stood taking counsel together, and said one to another:—

"Let us make man in our image, a likeness of Him who, by Light and Love created the heavens and the earth. Then Life entered the dust; then Light beamed upon man's god-like countenance, and Love chose his heart for a silent dwelling.

The everlasting Father beheld, and called the creation good; for his ever active Light, and his sweet daughter Love, filled and pervaded all things.

Why murmurest thou, dreamy sage, and gazest in wonder upon the world, as upon a gloomy chaos? The chaos is set in order: set thou thyself in order. Man's happiness is in activity alone; in Light and Love, the happiness of the Creator.

THE USEFUL AND THE BEAUTIFUL.—The tomb of Moses is unknown; but the traveller slakes his thirst at the well of Jacob.—The gorgeous palace of the wisest of monarchs, with the cedar, and gold, and ivory, and even the great temple of Jerusalem, hallowed by the visible glory of the Deity himself—are gone; but Solomon's reservoirs are as perfect as ever. Of the ancient architecture of the Holy City, not one stone is left upon another; but the pool of Bethesda commands the pilgrim's reverence of the present day. The columns of Persepolis are mouldering into dust; but its cisterns and aqueducts remain to challenge our admiration. The golden house of Nero is a mass of ruins; but the Acqu Claudia still pours into Rome its limpid stream.—The temple of the sun at Tadmor in the wilderness, has fallen; but its fountains sparkles as freshly in his rays, as when thousands of worshippers thronged its lofty colonades. It may be that London will share the fate of Babylon, and nothing be left to mark its site, save mounds of crumbling brick-work; but the Thames will continue to flow as it does now. And if any work of art should still rise over the deep ocean of time, we may well believe that it will be neither a palace nor a temple, but some vast reservoir; and if any name should still flash through the mist of antiquity, it will probably be that of the man who in his day sought the happiness of his fellow-men rather than their glory, and linked his memory to some great work of national utility and benevolence. This is the true glory which outlives all others, and shines with undying lustre from generation to generation—imparting to works something of its own immortality, and in some degree rescuing them from the ruin which overtakes the ordinary monuments of historical tradition or mere magnificence.—Edinburg Review.

ETHIOPIAN PHILOSOPHY.—"Mr. Crow, can you explain to de subscriber why dat 'licious wegitable called de nutmeg neber comes to maturity?"

"Neber comes to maturity?"

"Yes; why dey am always small potatoes?"

"Why dey always small 'taters?"

"Yes, Mr. Crow. Why dey neber get to be some punkins?"

"Why dey neber"——

"Yes, yes, Mr. Crow. "Why don't de nutmegs, as a class, grow large instead of alway growin' small?"

"No, Julius Cæsar, I don't know noffin about it. You must ax some gardener man about wegitables."

"Well, Mr. Crow, I kin tell you why nutmegs, as a class, don't grow large. It's because every individual nutmeg knows dat de largest nutmeg in de world am liable to come across a grater!"

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1853.

Temporary Absence of the Editor.

Circumstances require us to be absent for a month or six weeks in the South.—It is, therefore, due to the readers and patrons of the Chart, that we should inform them who will have the oversight of THEIR ORGAN, during our absence. This information we take pleasure in giving them; for we feel quite certain that they will be the gainers by the arrangement.

The Rev. G. W. MAXWELL has kindly consented to superintend the editorial department of the paper, during our absence. We need not say what are his qualifications for the position; for the readers of the Chart have some knowledge of his abilities, from his productions published in its columns already. His works will constitute his best praise.

It will be our pleasure still to keep bright the links that have bound us to the readers of the Chart during the last six months, by an occasional communication. So far as correct observation can enable us to present them with a plain statement of the cause at the South, they shall have it, together with such other observations as may from time to time seem to us worthy of their consideration. Meanwhile, farewell!

Honor to whom Honor is due.

The following notice, though not as strong as it might be, nevertheless smacks pretty strongly of progress; and promises a "good time coming." When business men, and corporations begin to put their foot on the serpent to destroy it, it can't live long. Many thanks to PRESIDENT BROUGH, and the directors of the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad for making this step forward in the right direction. Here is the notice.

ATTENTION!—The business and interests of this Company render it necessary that the drinking of ardent spirits or malt liquors, during working or business hours, by those in the employment of the Railroad Company, should be absolutely and positively prohibited.

The Conductors, foremen, and others, will see that this rule is enforced. Prompt dismissal from the service will be visited upon its violation.

JOHN BROUGH, President.

The Election.

The votes were not all counted out when our paper went to press, but as far as counted "No License" was 177 ahead, in Centre Township. It is probable there will be from one to two hundred majority for "No License."

Pike Township gave a majority of two to one against License.

We will give full returns next week.

☞ We have just received the February and March Nos. of Peterson's Ladies' Magazine. (The January No. we have not received). It is undoubtedly a tasty book. Each No. contains beautiful engravings, and a large amount of original matter, both prose and poetry, by our best writers. Ladies wishing a Magazine of high literary merit, artistic skill, and moral tone, will find this the Magazine It is published at Philadelphia by T. B. Peterson.

☞ We have just received the April No. of the "Illustrated Magazine of Art." It is a splendid number, and we think surpasses any of the preceding ones in the number and beauty of its illustrations. It contains a large amount of valuable and interesting scientific and literary information.

Indianapolis Groggeries

In looking over our description of Groggery number two, and its sign, we observe a slight mistake. Instead of "two bucks" in a recumbent position on the east side of the sign, we should have said one buck; and added, that near him stands an innocent doe upon the same side of the transparency. This renders the sign still more significant. The doe fitly represents those unfortunate females who plead in vain with the Whisky fiend to spare their husbands the disgrace of filling a drunkard's grave. The painter blundered upon a device well adapted to express the truth; and warn the public from the worse than Centipede that lurks below for the souls of men.

3. Number three will be found on the corner of Washington and Illinois streets, in immediate connexion with the Palmer House. In order to make the descent into this hill easy, the bar-room of the Hotel has been converted into its immediate purlieu, a narrow door being opened in the floor, and stairs erected to lead the victim down to the slaughter pen. It may well be questioned whether since the erection of the bridge from the infernal regions to this world by SIN and DEATH—the prototypes of our whisky venders and their aiders and abettors—a bridge more fatal to the passenger has been erected, than these stairs. But that nothing might be wanting to guide the simple ones to their own ruin, the bar-room is desecrated with an index pointing downwards to that gulph—the Saloon below. A hand is pictured on the wall, one finger of which, long, lurid and ominous, points to the slaughter-house of souls; and it requires but little imagination to deem that the fires of the infernal pit are reflected by that bloody hand, that points the unwary to those flames. Again, on the outside fronting Illinois street, another hand precisely similar, and for precisely similar purposes, may be seen pointing by a different route to the same place.—But the greatest outrage ever perpetrated is to call this horrid stew below by the name of the patriotic Tell. Not more unfit would be the names of the Apostles to designate the different torture rooms in the abode of eternal regrets than is the name of Tell for such a monstrous purpose. But the men of drams and death have neither sense of right or shame.

Further Temperance Agitation.

The Editor of the State Sentinel, true to his native tendencies, can neither speak the truth himself, nor consent that others shall do so if within his power to prevent. In an article in his issue of Thursday last, he comes forward with an amount of insinuation and misrepresantation only equalled by certain efforts heretofore made in the same quarter, in regard to the Maine Law. He has fixed up a batch of expressions, and a code of principles for ultra temperance men, as he is pleased to call them; and does all he can to make the "further agitation" of the Temperance question odious, by this false pretence. It is too shallow to succeed. He also threatens, that if we do not say that we will rest satisfied, we "will find many laggards who will fold their arms and say," what the Editor wanted to say for himself, but had not the moral courage to speak it out as his own. If these moderate men really desire to stop agitation, one would think they would do it, by enforcing the present law, and showing that it is efficient "for the suppression of the evils arising from the traffic." That, and that only, will stop further agitation, and satisfy any honest Temperance man that such men really mean what they say.

Curious Ancient Document.

Among a quantity of old papers found in the Wentworth House—the seat of the Earl of Fittzwilliam, in England—was the following curious bill.

The Rev. T. McGuire to John Jones.
Repairs at the Roman Chapel.
Nov. 1, 1605.

	s.	d.
For solidly repairing St. Joseph,	0	4
Cleaning and ornamenting the Holy Ghost, - - - -	0	6
Repairing the Virgin Mary and making her a new child, - -	5	6
Furnishing a nose to the Devil, putting a horn upon his head, and glueing a piece to his tail, -	4	6
Total.	10	10

The Seminoles of Florida.

In a recent debate in the Senate on the proposition to raise a force to expel the Seminoles from Florida, Senator Houston did himself credit by the following just remarks:

"Why press upon this little handful of Indians? Are the necessities of Florida so great that, extended over a vast area of country, with sparse population, her people cannot find employment within the settled limits of their country for the investment of their capital, without running in upon the hammocks of the Indians, interfering with their fisheries and their hunting grounds? There is no necessity for it. Let us use a little forbearance. Billy Bowlegs is not such a terrible scare-crow, or so anxious for war when he cannot be advantaged by it, that he is going to invade the formidable State of Florida. I will not vote for the amendment. I am satisfied that any encouragement given to the Executive of the State will be succeeded by demands upon the Executive of the United States—they will be so importunate, and newspapers will get up stories of combats, the most melancholy and terrible details will be narrated, but all will turn out to be fustian at last. Yet such tales will be circulated throughout the United States, and there will be a great cry raised of the cruelty of the Indians, and of their massacres of the people on the frontier.

"The country will be alive with the cry, and people will be ready to fly to the standard of Florida, to defend her against a few hundred poor, miserable half-starved Indians, whom humanity requires that you should feed rather than exterminate. The Indians want justice, and I wish there were an abler man than myself to stand up on this floor, and demand, in their behalf, that jutice shall be done them. Sir, they are despoiled of everything. Their territory is taken from them. They are robbed of their annuities, and the purchase money for their lands is taken by felons. Is not this something that should be looked at and considered? They have no one here to appeal in their behalf, or to tell their griefs and wrongs to American ears; but it is nevertheless true that their history is a history of wrong untold. If Senators, independent of their position, cannot stand forth and vindicate the wronged Indian, where is he to look but to the Great Spirit for redress? and that comes slowly, when compared with the activity of the wicked."

Facts for the Voters.

During the last year there was expended something near $30,000,000 for intoxicating drinks in this State; 20,000,000 of this was expended in New Orleans alone.—There were made about 16,000 arrests, directly and indirectly, for drunkenness in the city or State. About 300 deaths by delirium tremens; about 75 murders, besides a host of other crimes. Over 1,000 have been reduced to vagrancy and puaperism; the resources of the State have been crippled; thousands have been kept out of employment; society at large has been seriously, deeply damaged in all its relations: the health and energies of some of our best citizens have been destroyed and ruined for life. All this has been done and more, and yet we have men who tell us that the rumseller is as innocent as a child.

In view of this dark picture we ask, what better right have rumsellers to run at large than mad dogs? They do a thousand times more damage and cause their victims to die as horrible a death. We have a vast deal of sympathy expended in their behalf, and men who call themselves good citizens and patriots, and forsooth, philanthropists, are very much alarmed indeed, for fear the people, in their sovereign right, will put a stop to this black and bloody business by a few simple legal enactments, which will prevent these human slaughter houses from the further work of death.

We shrewdly suspect the people intend to do this thing; and, therefore, if you have tears to shed prepare to shed them soon.—Southern Organ.

INDIAN LIQUOR LAW.—A trader from Chicago had recently made his appearance among the Indians at Grand Traverse, with ten barrels of whisky, one of which he tapped and commenced business. The Indians immediately assembled in a body and knocked the hoops off the barrel, and he saved the barrels by putting them on board of a vessel in hot haste. The Missionary seconded the Indians by taking out a warrant against the trader, which, however, we believe was not prosecuted. The trader left and went among the fishermen, where he found no difficulty in selling out; but when he got to Mackinac, more than half his money was Wild Cat and counterfeit.—Northern Islander.

☞ There are fifteen hundred grog shops in Connecticut. If the average receipts of each is but five dollars daily, the yearly expenditure for liquors in that State, would amount to two millions seven hundred and thirty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

☞ A Western editor, in noticing a new and splendid hearse, thinks it will afford much satisfaction to those who use it.

Remarks by Mr. Steele,

In the Legislature, on the Temperance Law.

The question being upon a motion of Mr. Ryan to indefinitely postpone the motion of Mr. Graham. Mr. Graham's motion was to refer the temperance bill by its friends to a Select Committee of one from each Congressional District.

Mr. STEELE said it was a course in legislation that he would not sanction, here at the close of the session, that this bill after its friends devoting so much time and labor in Committee to its perfection, that it should now be taken away from the hands of its friends and put in the hands of those who are seeking its destruction—as they have honestly avowed that that is their intention. Now, Sir, I do not expect to vote for this bill, for reasons that I think I am fully justified; in which I will probably be able to point out to the House hereafter. But, Sir, for me to stand by and let the petitions of those who have petitioned this Legislature, through me, their representative, to be trampled under foot in this way, is a thing I shall not do. I would be unworthy the name of a representative if I should do it.

You, Mr. Speaker, at the commencement of the session wisely selected from amongst the members of this House the friends of temperance upon that Committee. They after much labor have reported to this House a bill that they think is right upon that subject. Well now, what is proposed by the motion of the gentleman from Pike? Why it is to take out of the hands of the friends of temperance the bill on that subject, and put it in the hands of himself and ten others—one from each Congressional District. He, as a matter of parliamentary rule, will be chairman of that committee. I have never suspicioned him for drinking over a quart a day, and I suppose the balance of the committee, whoever they may be, are not in the habit of taking more than that quantity. As the gentleman seems entirely dissatisfied with the present committee on that subject, who are temperate men as a matter of course, his object must be to get the subject into the hands of a committee that will not return it the present session. Could any one imagine for a moment that this House will see the Bill again this session, if the motion of the gentleman from Pike prevails. Now the gentleman says he wants the bill perfected. If so, why not move to recommend it with instructions to the same committee? and then the House will get a vote upon it, so that our constituents may see our hands. This thing of shrinking from responsibility is a thing I know nothing about—I hope I shall never know anything about it. I have presented the petitions of from six to seven hundred as respectable constituents as you could select from any county in the State, praying some law upon that subject. These people will want to know what went with their petitions; they will want to know whether the present House was in favor of granting their prayers or not. I should dislike to tell them that I had voted to send a bill away upon that subject where it would not be heard of again the present session. I could tell the temperance men that I was for the law if we could have got a vote upon it. I could show those opposed that I had helped to slip it out of sight where it would not be heard of again. Now sir, this is not my way of doing business. I want the friends of temperance to perfect their bill here by common consent, and then let us take a vote upon it so that we may not deceive those who sent us here. My way of doing is, to obey the will of my constituents, if I have any way of judging of that will. If I have no means of knowing I take my own judgment.—Obey that will, and whether you vote with me or against me, I will be satisfied. But my opinion is this: it is too grave a subject to treat in this manner the tens of thousands of petitioners that have petitioned the present Legislature upon the subject of temperance. They would not be satisfied with such indifference upon the part of their representatives; neither would others, as they all want to see how we stand and how we act. I shall content myself with voting for the indefinite postponement of the motion of the gentleman from Pike.

A SAD STORY.—A young man from Van Buren, Arkansas, recently attempted to commit suicide at one of the hotels of Louisville, and the journels of that city relate the sad story: The cause that induced the rash act, was the loss of his money by gambling and dissipation. He was on a visit to his mother and relatives in Ohio, and while on the boat coming up the Mississippi had been persuaded to play "a little game of cards," for amusement, by a set of sharpers, who are always travelling up and down the river to prey upon the unwary. He was plied with liquor, the bar being handy, and then induced to hazard his money at the card table, and was soon fleeced of $500 or $600, all he had. He is a mechanic, and his hard earnings by his trade were swept off in a few hours. This is but one of the many coils brought about by the tolerance and encouragement of the splendid and extensive bars on steamboats.

The Home of the Habitual Drunkard.

The habitual drunkard has no home. I do not mean to say that he is always so destitute as to have no place to lay his head. He may have a habitation which shelters him from the chilling wind and rain. He may know of some place where of right he can go when welcome nowhere else, and where, free from the sneers and harsh reproofs of unfeeling men, he may hide in miserable solitude the sad evidence of his degradation and shame. But do you call this Home? Does such a place deserve so sacred a name? Who that has a home, and loves it, does not feel that more than the mere bricks and boards that shelter him, is signified in this little, but expressive word? Would it be Home if a mother's tender love, a father's watchful eye, were not there? Is it not because, and consecrated by these, and by the warm attachment of sisters and brothers, or by the gentle confiding affection of wife and children, that we feel, "be it ever so humble, there is no place like home?" Would we experience the joyous emotions which thrill our bosoms, when after an absence, we return once more to the old paternal mansion where was spent the happy season of our boyhood days, if there were wanting that fond maternal embrace—that cordial grasp, warm from a father's heart—that sister's smile of welcome, and the fraternal greeting of affection which welcome us home? Home—because we have there those around whom cluster the warmest affections of the heart. Home—because all things there eloquently speak of kindness and of love. This is home; and this is the hallowed place of which the intoxicating bowl robs the inebriate. It extinguishes the purest sensibilities, and the best affections of his heart, and incapacitates him for those virtuous and exalted enjoyments which flow from the tender and endearing relations of kindred and affection. One of the first indications of intemperance is a disrelish for the society of those who live at home. It is an early symptom of the approach of this fearful malady, that the family circle loses its attractiveness; that evening after evening must be spent abroad, or the time passed in listless weariness. The things which once gave delight, no longer possess their power to please; the once-loved society of wife or parents, the innocent prattle of childhood, the fond caresses of artless infancy, the fireside discourse of brothers and sisters—all are tedious and dull; all ready to be relinquished for the society and obscene merriment of the dissolute and the vile, or for the boisterous revelings found in some polluted haunt of impiety and shame. How many, once blessed with a happy home, have sacrificed all that made it home to the delusive pleasure found in these base receptacles of infamy and sin! See that wretched man returning from his midnight orgies. He approaches the place of his abode—his once happy home—with threats and imprecations on his tongue, with deeds of violence in his heart. See his fear-stricken wife, clasping her little one to her bosom, and trembling for its safety and her own. Listen to that agonizing prayer which her woman's heart sends up to He ven for protection, as she hears her husband coming maddened by his intemperate revel. Witness the throbbings of her distracted heart, as his footsteps sound upon the threshold of her chamber. See him enter, and despise his sick child's tears, his poor wife's prayers; heed not her fond, confiding eyes, still fixed upon him; hearing not her piteous tones, as she asks, "Who have I but thee to protect me, and where shall I find help when thine is the assailant's arm?"—see him, trampling on her love, abusing her angel confidence, hurl her from him to grasp the deadly steel with which in blood to wreak his demoniac rage—and tell me where was his home?—where, short of the cold narrow tenement, beside the one his murderous hand provided for his wife and child?—Jas. Tupper, Esq., from the Amer. Temp. Magazine.

A SIGNIFICANT FACT.—The city of Lexington, a few weeks since, determined by a majority of its voters to suppress the Liquor Traffic within its corporate limits. The licenses to sell intoxicating drinks all expired, and the newly elected council refused to renew them. On the 22d of February, only a few weeks after the new regulation had gone into effect, the jailer and keeper of the workhouse announced that both their houses were tenantless, a fact which, as stated by Rev. Dr. Robt. J. Breckenridge, in his speech at Mozart Hall, on Wednesday evening, never had been a fact before, since Lexington had been Lexington.—Louisville Herald.

The editor of this paper would announce his return again to the duties of his station, which he has for four weeks been obliged to place in other hands on acccount of severe cold. It is with pleasure he acknowledges his indebtedness to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for cure from it, and great relief from suffering by its use, and now would from experience recommend it heartily to others who may be afflicted as he has been, with a belief that they may also be benefitted by its use.—Christian Advocate.

Novel Engineering Project----A Marine Railway One and a Quarter Miles in Length.

THE introduction of railways has produced many astonishing changes in the course and channels of our internal trade, and not least among these changes is that which is just being shadowed forth by the completion of the several lines of railroad in the States of Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, and Ohio, through the various points on the Ohio river. What this change is to be is already indicated by the delivery, on the sea board, of cotton, pork, and other Western produce, by way of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, now completed to Wheeling. The advantages which must accrue by thus delivering produce in the sea board markets in from ten to twenty days, instead of as formerly, by way of New Orleans in about three months, are too evident to be overlooked. Some enterprizing gentlemen engaged in the Western trade have investigated this subject thoroughly, and have become satisfied that the present means for passing steamboats around the fall of the Ohio (by the Portland canal) will soon become entirely inadequate to the increased commerce of the Ohio, which must result from these new outlets. With these views they have projected the following novel plan for increasing the facilities so as to pass steamboats of the largest class around these falls.

It may be premised that the only present mode of passing boats in times of low water, is by the Portland canal, on the Kentucky side of the river; this canal can only pass boats the dimensions of which do not exceed 180 feet in length and 48 feet beam over the guards, consequently the business must then be carried on by boats within these dimensions. Referring again to the project above mentioned:—It is simply to construct upon the Indiana bank of the river a railway, the length of which will be about one and a quarter miles, and the width about 72 feet, with proper locks at each terminus; the whole to be of such magnitude as to be able, without discharging cargo, to pass steamboats of the largest class, or say about 350 feet in length and 80 feet beam over the guards. The difference in level between the head and foot of the falls may be assumed at about 24 feet, and it is proposed to lift the boat a part of this height in the lock, and the balance by the grade of the railway. The power to be used will be one or more stationary steam engines, applied to the moving of the carriage upon which the boats will be transported, by means of a tow rope or chain.

This project, although when first presented to the mind it appears chimerical and difficult of execution, will be found, upon thorough examination, to be perfectly practicable, and to present less engineering difficulties than many other important works already successfully executed.

The plans have been submitted to several eminent engineers, to obtain their views as to the feasibility of the project, and without exception, they have all concurred in the opinion that the work can be executed without difficulty, and at moderate expense.

The estimated cost of the work is $600,000, and it is estimated from reliable data that very soon after it is in successful operation, the receipts from tolls alone will not be less than $150,000 per year.—Scientific American.

☞ Mr. McLeod, an English writer, puts the following language in the mouths of those who visit the rumseller's den:

"There's my money—give me drink! There's my clothing and my food—give me drink! There's the clothing, food, and fire, of wife and children—give me drink! There's the education of the family and the peace of the house—give me drink!—There's the rent I have robbed from my landlord, fees I have robbed from the schoolmaster, and innumerable articles I have robbed from the shopkeeper—give me drink! Pour me out drink, for more I will yet pay for it! There's my health of body and peace of mind—there's my character as a man, and my profession as a christian—I give up all—give me drink! More yet, I have to give! There's my heavenly inheritance and the eternal friendship of the redeemed—there—there—is all hope of salvation! I give up my Savior! I give up my God! I resign all! All that is great, good, glorious, in the universe, I resign forever, that I may be DRUNK!"

There's a volume of meaning in this brief extract, but it needs no comment. We have all seen its aptness illustrated. How vividly reflection upon it brings before us all the horrors of the murderous traffic!—"all that is great, good, glorious, resigned forever!"—Fountain and Journal.

☞ There is a difference between seeing a good book and reading it—between reading it and remembering it—between remembering it and understanding it—and between understanding it and applying it to practice.

THE sugar crop of Louisiana, it is said, will be larger for 1852 than ever before. It will reach fully 290,000 hogsheads.

Preserve your Health.

The world abounds with books, essays, pamphlets, and paragraphs, all going to point out the modus operandi of preserving the health, but they are generally looked upon as dull and unprofitable, arising, probably from the fact, that the well care nothing about the subject, and to the sick they come too late. Millions upon millions are annually spent in efforts, in too many instances fruitless efforts, to regain that health which a moderate exercise of common sense would have preserved free from disease.

"Temperance in all things," is the philosophy of health, and this carries with it the idea of simplicity and regularity in all our habits. Health is the natural condition of the body, with all the functions of the organic structures in full play; use the machinery well and it will work on to the end of its appointed way.

But reason ever so soundly on the subject, and you will find that not one in a thousand will spend a few dollars to prevent sickness; but every one, when sick, will put themselves to a great deal of trouble to regain health—posting in hot haste from "Dan to Beersheba" for this doctor and for that medicine, turning and twisting from old schools to new ones, trying one while steam doctors, then water doctors; changing again, they fall upon the infinitesimal doses of the homœopathist; then eclectic, Indian, and as a last resort, they give themselves up to the regulars under the pill, bolus, and a calomel administration. It is astonishing to see with what a restless anxiety they will cross seas, span continents, and travel from the South, North, and from the North, South—from East to West, up and down, in the search of health. They will undergo the most humiliating pains and even tortures—cutting, lancing, cupping, bleeding, blistering, leeching, freezing, roasting, splashing with cold water, then hot water, taking it first externally, then internally from the regular M. D. down to the meanest charlatan, no matter what the prescription or expense.

Down jingles the dollars, and with a gulp down go the pills and powders, draughts and mixtures, elixirs, panaceas, potions, boluses and potations—hot and cold, sweet and bitter, sour and crude enough to slay the black dragon of ancient times. Wretched victims, all bloated and stiffened, all swelled and dropsied, nervous and palsied; shot through liver, lungs and kidneys with the whole materia medica, they hie away to hot springs and cold springs; they seek the watering places and try fresh water; bathe, scrape, rub, sweat, and undergo all sorts of toils, and all this for health. But talk to such about the prevention of disease, what cares he for these? They seem like idle tales and women's whims, and old wives' fables.

A man might as well beat the air as attempt to beat any thing of this kind into the heads of men or women. Good, earnest, common sense truths, that have reference to the laws of nature and God, are of no avail. Wise people know these things, and therefore, they do not care for them.

ALAS! POOR MEXICO!—It was recently stated that Don Juan de los Reyes, Governor of the Mexican State of San Luis Potosi, had been publicly assassinated, and died of his wounds. An extract from a letter in the National Intelligencer states that the affair occurred in the most public part of the Paseo, or public walk. The Governor left his carriage, and while engaged in conversation with a number of his friends, and a number of persons by, the party was suddenly fallen upon by some eight men on horseback, who singled out their unfortunate victim, and ferociously butchered him on the spot, inflicting upon his body fourteen mortal wounds!—The Intelligencer says:

"Thus (says a friend who sent us the above extract,) was destroyed one of the best men of all Mexico. Butchered in open day, in the most public place of that city of which he was the chief benefactor. He had improved its buildings, its streets, and all its public works, and at the time of his death was adding new institutions for the public good.

"He had established poor-houses, asylums, and public schools. By the economy and honesty of his administration he had extinguished a large public debt of the State by paying it off; and San Luis Potosi, under the government of Juan de los Reyes, had reached a degree of prosperity unknown since the days of the independence of Mexico.

"This spirit of enterprise, of justice, and philanthropy, had raised him up many enemies, who were constantly plotting to overthrow his government. But his vigor was always able to defeat their plans, and put down every revolution. At last, despairing of success by other means, they have thus publicly butchered him. In all probability, these savage assassins will never be brought to justice. Thus go the good Governors and the good men of unhappy Mexico."

We have all of us sufficient fortitude to bear the misfortunes of others.

Intemperance and Crime.

Great interest is being manifested in Pennsylvania in relation to the subject of taking some legislative action for the suppression of intemperance, the people having began to feel and realize the tax which it imposes upon them. The Criminal Courts of Pittsburgh are not the only ones crowded with culprits, whose crimes are traceable to the maddening bowl; but we think the Cincinnati Courts are ahead of all competition in this respect; the greatest difficulty we have to encounter here, however, is to keep the bottle from jurymen who are called upon to sit in judgment upon criminals, long enough to obtain from them sane decisions. Judge McClure, of Pittsburgh, in a late charge to the Grand Jury of Allegheny county, spoke upon the subject of intemperance and crime, in the following emphatic manner:

The Court has been in session since October Term, without intermission, dispatching the criminal business of the county.

I have kept a docket and table of contents, causes, time, &c., in my own way, collateral to and independent of the usual records of the Court, and without wearying your patience with the process I have gone through, I will give you the results, which is that, had it not been for the use and abuse of ardent spirits in Allegheny county, every case on the October calender would have been disposed of in one week (and the District Attorney confirms this statement) with the utmost ease, and the cases would have been of a trifling nature. There would not have been one case in the Oyer and Terminer.

I shall cease to prate any more to Grand Juries about this omnipotent parent of crime, alcohol. If a century of imbecile legislation has not sufficed to convince reasonable men; if crime and poverty before their faces has failed to convince; if a ceaseless drain upon their charity, from destitution, caused by drink; if their increased taxes; if men's eyes and ears will not convince; if the evidence of our understanding, in this behalf, and cause in the community corresponding acts, prompted by duty and common sense, then to talk of this theme longer here, is time thrown away. If society choose to indulge in this costly luxury of woe, and in the causes that produce it, I have no more to say, for society has the power to select its own peculiar enjoyments, and indulge itself therein. Its RIGHT to do so is more questionable.—Ohio Organ.

JOHN ERICSSON.—The name of John Ericsson, says the Albany Register, now takes rank with Franklin, Fulton, Watt, Morse, and other great benefactors of mankind. He is a man of 50 years of age, of a muscular, well-developed. and strongly-knit frame; he is of the middle size, has a firm tread, a person who gives assurance of reserved strength, and the head with all the proper intellectual developments, the high forehead and prominent brow, marking the man of thought and the philosopher; he has a dark complexion of hair, somewhat whitened by time, black eyes introspective and reflective rather than observing, a decisive mouth and the mixed temperament combining the nervous and billious, which distinguishes the powerful in action and the steady in endurance.—His head rises in a phrenological summit of benevolence; he was heard to remark the only sign of self-gratulation on his triumph that he was proud to be the means through his invention of saving life.

He was born in Sweden in 1803. He early showed a taste for mechanics, and at the age of eleven attracted the notice of Count Platen, who obtained for him a cadetship in an engineer corps. He afterwards entered the Swedish army, and was employed in the survey of northern Sweden. While occupied with his favorite study of mechanics, he projected his flame engine. In 1826 he visited England. While these in 1829, he competed for the prize offered by the Liverpool and Manchester railway for the best locomotive, and produced an engine that made the wonderful speed at that time of 50 miles an hour.

His propeller, hie semi-cylindrical engine, his centrifugal blower, his distant instrument for measuring distances at sea, his hydrostatic guage, his pyrometor, and other ingenious inventions, have already made the name of Ericsson famous in the scientific world. The caloric engine, which has now arrived at the consummation of success, was first brought before the scientific world at London twenty years ago, and was rejected by men of science as an impracticability and as involving the absurdity of perpetual motion. Faraday, Brunel, and Ure, after a short resistance, finally conceded the practicability of the invention, and Faraday endorsed the caloric engine in those famous lectures of his before the London Institution. Fox, whose name is identified with the success of the great London Exhibition, was a pupil of Ericsson.

THE public debt of the United States due 1st of July, 1853, and which the Secretary advertises will be paid on presentation, amounts to within a fraction of six millions of dollars.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

The constancy of sages is nothing but the art of locking up their agitation in their hearts.

Those who are condemned to be executed affect sometimes a firmness and a contempt of death, which is, in fact, only the fear of looking it in the face; so that it may be said that this firmness, and this contempt, are to their minds what the bandage is to their eyes.

Philosophy triumphs easily over past, and over future evils, but present evils triumph over philosophy.

Few people know what death is. We seldom suffer it from resolution, but from stupidity and from habit; and the generality of men die because they cannot help dying.

When great men suffer themselves to be overcome by the length of their misfortunes, they let us see that they only supported them through the strength of their ambition, not through that of their minds; and that, with the exception of a good deal of vanity, heroes are made just like other men.

It requires greater virtues to support good, than bad fortune.

Neither the sun nor death can be looked at steadily.

We often make a parade of passions, even of the most criminal; but envy is a timid and shameful passion which we never dare to avow.

The evil which we commit does not draw down on us so much hatred and persecution as our good qualities.

We have more power than will; and it is often by way of excuse to ourselves that we fancy things are impossible.

If we had no faults ourselves, we should not take so much pleasure in remarking them in others.

Jealousy lives upon doubts—it becomes madness, or ceases entirely, as soon as we pass from doubt to certainty.

Pride always compensate itself, and loses nothing, even when it renounces vanity.

If we had no pride ourselves, we should not complain of that of others.

Pride is equal in all men; and the only difference is in the means and manner of displaying it.

We promise according to our hopes, and perform according to our fears.

Interest speaks all sorts of languages, and plays all sorts of parts, even that of disinterestedness.

Interest, which blinds some, opens the eyes of others.

Those who bestow too much application on trifling things, become generally incapable of great ones.

We have not strength enough to follow all our reason.

A man often fancies that he guides himself when he is guided by others; and while mind aims at one object, his heart insensibly draws him on to another.

Strength and weakness of mind are badly named—they are, in fact, nothing more than the good or bad arrangement of the organs of the body.

The capriciousness of our humor is often more fantastical than that of fortune.

TO KEEP YOUNG.—Mrs. Cowden Clark says: "No surer destroyer of youth, youth's privileges, and powers, and delights, than yielding the spirit to the empire of ill-temper and selfishness. We should all be cautious, as we advance in life, of allowing occasionally sorrowful experience to overshadow our perception of the preponderance of good. Faith in good is at once its rectitude and reward. To believe good, and to do good, truly and trustfully, it is the healthiest of humanity's conditions. To take events cheerfully, and promote the happiness of others, is the way to insure the enduring spring of existence. Content and kindness are the soft vernal showers and fostering sunny warmth that keep a man's nature and being fresh and green. 'Lord keep my existence fresh and green,' would be no less a wise prayer than the one so beautifully recorded respecting man's memory. If we would leave a gracious memory behind us, there is no way better to secure it, than by living graciously. A cheerful and benign temper, that buds forth pleasant blossoms, and bears sweet fruit, for those who live within its influence, is sure to produce an undying growth of green remembrances that shall flourish immortally after the present stock is decayed and gone."

RECIPE FOR GOOD HUMOR.—Rise betimes in a morning, and go early to rest, that the body may be preserved in health; let your reflection be, how short are your hours before you, if devoted to business, study, social enjoyment, or other rational recreation; and then find time, if you can, to indulge in spleen and ill-humor.

BEGIN RIGHT.—Nothing will be of more consequence towards the success of a young gentleman's endeavors for his own improvement, than his getting early into a right track of reading and study: for by that means he will save infinite trouble, which many go through, by beginning at the wrong end; who after distressing themselves in pursuing what they have not the necessary accomplishments for, find themselves obliged to give up what they had undertaken, and go back to first principles: men thus suffer great loss of time and labor; meet with discouragement in their studies; and the structure of learning which they raise, proves in the end but a piece of patchwork. Others, by being at first put upon a wrong course of reading, find themselves plunged into mystery, fanaticism, or error of one kind or other; out of which it costs them many years to extricate themselves. Others, attaching themselves too early and too closely to one narrow track, as pure mathematics, or poetry, cramp their minds in their youth; or, by giving too great a loose to fancy, unfit them for expatiating boldly, and at the same time surely, in the fields of knowledge. To avoid these radical errors, let a young gentleman carefully study the best books, and through the whole course of his reading, take all opportunities of conversing with, and consulting men of judgment in books; of a large and free way of thinking, and of extensive knowledge.—The consequence of which judicious manner of proceeding has, in many instances, been improvement in most branches of science, to a masterly degree, at thirty or forty years of age. But this supposes a superior natural capacity, and various other advantages.—Old Author.

DURING the month of February there arrived at New York 12,280 immigrants. The number of vessels which arrived during the same period was 213—total tonnage 115,098.

ELDER & HARKNESS'

Book and Job Printing Office.

WE are constantly making additions to our assortment of Job Type, and have no hesitation in saying that we have as complete and full an assortment of new and good Book and Job Type as can be found in the State, rendering our establishment a COMPLETE

Book and Job Office.

We are prepared to execute in the neatest and best manner, in a style that will compare favorably with any printing done East or West, and on the most reasonable terms,

All Kinds of Job Work:

Books,	Cards,	Receipts,
Pamphlets,	Labels,	Blank Notes,
Catalogues,	Hat Tips,	Bills Lading,
Circulars,	Bill Heads,	Dray Receipts,
Policies,	Checks,	Concert Bills,
Programmes,	Hand Bills,	Posters,

And Blanks of Every Description.

☞ We have on hand a superior article of Eastern Pamphlet and Cover Paper, and the best of Ink, and as we are practical workmen, with the advantage of 17 years experience, part of the time in the best offices in New York and Philadelphia, and do a large portion of the work ourselves, we guaranty all work entrusted to us to be accurately and neatly executed, and within reasonable time.

☞ For the character of our work, we confidently refer to any Book or Job bearing our imprint—our work speaks for itself.

☞ Orders from a distance will be promptly attended to, and accuracy guarantied.

☞ Office on Meridian street, immediately over the Post Office.

ELDER & HARKNESS.

Indianapolis, March 1, 1853.

What can be had for Five Dollars!

THE UNDERSIGNED have entered into an arrangement by which they agree to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, (monthly,) the Home Journal, (weekly,) and the Musical World and Times, (weekly,) to new subscribers, at the very moderate price of five dollars a year for the three publications; all orders, enclosing that amount to Dyer & Willis, will be promptly attended to.

SAMUEL HUESTON,
Publisher of the Knickerbocker.
MORRIS & WILLIS,
Publishers of the Home Journal.
DYER & WILLIS,
Publishers of the Musical World & Times,
257 Broadway, New York.

GRAND LITERARY AND ARTISTIC COMBINATION!

Arrangements have been made to furnish the KNICKERBOCKER MAGAZINE, the HOME JOURNAL, and the NEW YORK MUSICAL WORLD AND TIMES, to new subscribers, for Five Dollars a year! This is cheap literature, with a vengeance. The Knickerbocker is $3 per annum; the Home Journal, $2; and the Musical World and Times, $3; making $8 a year at the usual rates. That three such works can be obtained for five dollars a year, is a fact truly worthy the Caloric age, which is just now being ushered in. Of the Knickerbocker Magazine, edited by Lewis Gaylord Clark, it is unnecessary to speak; for twenty years it has been the most genial, humorous and spicy "monthly" in the world—and the present volume will be better than any which preceded it. The Home Journal, edited by Geo. P. Morris and N. P. Willis, is well known as the best family newspaper in America. And the Musical world and Times, edited by Richard Storrs Willis, with Lowell Mason, Geo. H. Curtis, Thos. Hastings, Wm. P. Bradbury, Geo. F. Root, and other musical writers contributing, and which gives, among other things, over $25 worth of music, and a full course of instruction in harmony, annually, is the very best musical journal ever published. These three publications will post a family up in regard to nearly everything worth knowing:—Art, Science, Literature; Music, Painting, Sculpture; Inventions, Discoveries; Wit, Humor, Fancy, Sentiment; the Newest Fashions and other attractions for Ladies; Choice New Music for the Sabbath, the Church, and the Fireside; Reviews and Criticisms of Musical Works, Performers and Performances; in short, the very pick and cream of Novelty, Incident, History, Biography, Art, Literature and Science—including whatever can be given in periodicals to promote Healthy Amusement and Solid Instruction in the family, and help to make it better, wiser and happier—may be now obtained for FIVE DOLLARS. Address

DYER & WILLIS, 257 Broadway.

☞ Editors publishing the above three times, and sending the papers containing it to Dyer & Willis, will receive the three works named, for one year. mar1

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Story for Boys.

It is related of a Persian mother, that on giving her son forty pieces of silver as his portion, she made him swear never to tell a lie, and said, "Go, my son, I consign thee to God, and we shall not meet again till the day of judgment."

The youth went away, and the party he travelled with, was assaulted by robbers. One fellow asked the boy what he had got, and he said, "Forty dinars are sewed up in my garments." He laughed, thinking he jested. Another asked him the same question, and received the same answer.

At last the chief called him and asked the same question, and he said, "I have told two of your people already that I have forty dinars sewed up in my clothes."

He ordered the clothes to be ripped open, and found the money.

"And how came you to tell this?" said he.

"Because," replied the child, "I would not be false to my mother whom I promised never to tell a lie."

"Child," said the robber, "art thou so mindful of thy duty to thy mother at thy years, and am I insensible at my age of the duty I owe to my God? Give me thy hand that I may swear repentance on it." He did so, and his followers were all struck with the scene.

"You have been our leader in guilt," said they to the chief, "be the same in the path of virture," and they instantly made restitution of spoils, and vowed repentance on the boy's hand.

There is a moral in this story, which goes beyond the direct influence of the mother on the child. The noble sentiment infused into the breast of the child is again transfused from breast to breast, till those who feel it know not whence it came.

[Mrs. Whittlesey's Magazine.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

A Magazine of Pure Morals: PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGAZINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—Cheapest of all.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, consequent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,

North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15 40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age.

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind. june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE, Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law. can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHEs,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq, the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott. Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D, Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,

Elward Hitchcock, M. D. LL D,

J. C. Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med. College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili
Rt. Rev. Dr Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archibishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY

BROWN'S COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1853. NO. 42.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

Office—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Office, must be made to J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

Lines

Affectionately inscribed to the Sons and Daughters of Trenton, in response to the call from the Rev. John Chambers, in his Temperance Address, on the evening of January 29th—"Mothers, Write." A mother asks:

WHAT IS WINE?

Tis a river of woe through the earth darkly flowing,
Whose current leads onward to death and the grave;
And many have stood on its margin unknowing,
To drink of the waters—then sink in the grave!

But, though bright on the surface the foam may be sparkling—
Oh, let it not lure thee to sip from the spring;
For far, far below, where the waters lie darkling,
"Fell adders" are coiled, and sharp is their sting.

And though many their way on its borders are wending,
Believing the current is healthful and pure—
No eye ever saw its promise descending,
Or found that its "waters were troubled" to cure.

And he who would give of that wave to to another,
And tell him the draught is the fountain of bliss,
But filleth a vessel of death for his brother,
Betraying, like Judas of old, "With a kiss."

Then flee from the death-stream, ye Sons and ye Daughters,
If ye list to the tempter, his arts may prevail;
For deadlier far as these venomous waters,
Than taints from the Upas that poison the gale.

And woe is his portion who stands by that river,
And lures the unwary to bow at his shrine;
For he who is tempted shall never—no, never,
Find peace while he drinks of the "bright rosy wine."

Mill Hill, Jan. 30, '53. Lucinda.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the American Phrenological Journal.

WHAT SHALL I DO FOR A LIVING?

This question occurs more frequently to the young mind than any other, and perhaps is less frequently solved to the satifaction of the inquirer, than any one of equal importance. To throw some light on this subject is our purpose, whether we occupy a place in one number of the Journal or in six, to give expression to our view. To do this, we shall invoke Phrenology and Physiology, as the exponent of human nature, and employ what we may be able to command of plain common sense and practical facts. The employment of a man, the peculiar kind of business he follows, is a mighty agency in the formation of his character. A boy of twelve or fifteen years of age has the elements of character; but they are plastic, and, like the tender twig, easily made to assume a harmonious or contorted form, according to the training that is brought to bear upon them. In this process of training, the business and its associations exert a commanding influence.—Some pursuits call into requsition the heroic and manly qualities of our nature to such an extent, that a mean, craven spirit, either cannot follow them, or if they do they will be ultimately elevated in character to something of a respectable standard. Other pursuits serve to make men careless, dilatory, and effeminate. Some pursuits that men follow, blunt the conscience, and make a man mean and contemptible; others serve to fortify and enoble the virtuous inclinations.

With this view of the subject of pursuits, how momentous the inquiry, "What shall I do for a living?" The young have their fortune and charactes to make. Their occupation will do much to determine what that fortune and character shall be. In the course of this examination, we shall, of course, have the careful attention of all who have yet to choose a pursuit, and those who desire to select one for a son.

In our country, there are few persons who can obtain a supply for their returning wants without effort. Everybody must do something; must either produce, or manage to gain a livelihood by appropriating the productions of others, either legitimately or otherwise.

The producing class, in general terms, for our present purpose, we define to be, all those who produce useful objects and ends, by labor of hand and brain.

The non-producing class embraces idlers, and those who produce that which does the world no good or positive harm. As the true object of life is to do good, and in doing it to get good, those who do not add to the stock of human happiness, labor in vain, and are virtually non-producers.

"What is "a living," in regard to which such universal anxiety and effort are put forth? Is it to eat, and drink, and sleep, and to keep the body comfortable? It is this which constitutes animal life; but man is more than a mere animal; and hence, as a moral and intellectual being, capable of culture, and a high order of mental enjoyment, he needs more than mere animal pleasure to constitute "a living for him."

What, though thousands of the human race

"creep
Into the world to eat and sleep;
And know no reason why they were born,
Except to consume the wine and corn,
Devour the cattle, fowl, and fish,
And leave behind an empty dish," shall this be regarded as the summum bonum of a living by beings "made a little lower than the angels, and crowned with glory and honor?"

The full development and harmonious activity of all the mental faculties is as necessary to a "living" for the mental nature, as food, clothing, and rest, are for the body. Nothing short of this is worthy the name of "a living." For this let the youth of our land hope and work. Let them guard against gross animalism in all its forms—develop the body by healthful food, exercise, and air; repelling with tireless vigilance every habit that vitiates the health and purity of the temple of their souls.—With this principle before them, as it relates to their own minds and bodies, we may remark that, as "no man liveth himself," but his character and business radiate a ceaseless and potent influence upon the character and destiny of those around him, it is an imperious duty to choose a pursuit that shall bless, and not curse the world; that shall purify and elevate, not deprave and depress the soul of him who follows it.

In the contemplation of this subject we propose first to consider negatively what one should not "do for a living," and then positively what may be pursued with profit to the purse, pleasure to the mind, honor to the character, and benefit to the world, without harm to either.

First, then, we have to do with the "non-producing class," or those whose efforts and productions do the world no good.

In this class we may justly rank the idler, the genteel loafer, who have inherited the surplus earnings of a former generation, and, from erroneous training, or from a lack of sound sense, imagine any occupation which earns anything, disreputable. They can drive fast horses at the iminent peril of their own useless necks, of the wind and limbs of the poor abused beasts they drive, and of the lives and limbs of all women, children, and other quiet citizens who may chance to be on their race-course. These are the men who hunt, and fish, and gamble, and attend races for pastime, or lazily lounge in elegant ease and pleasure at hotels and fashionable watering places, or promenade the prominent thoroughfares of cities to quiz ladies of their own stamp, and cast contemptuous glances and degrading epithets upon the laboring classes, the industrious, useful million.

The influence of the example of this class upon society, especially the young, is most unfavorable. It inspires in the mind of the toiler, the artisan, the clerk, an idea that wealth and idleness or vicious pleasure constitute an enviable life, and that these brainless butterflies are the happiest of men. It begets the corrupting idea, that it is the use of industry and frugality to procure riches, that with it luxury and idleness may be enjoyed.

My son, enter not into their counsel!—My daughter, avoid them as you would a poisonous serpent.

To all young men, we say, if you are poor, crave not an estate for such a purpose; if rich, spend not thus your time and money. It is a wicked perversion of all your nobler faculties and of the wealth which gives you power to do good. Therefore, "do not that for a living."

The second class of non-producers, and yet a class who work, we may name those who mannfacture any sort of gambling apparatus—cards, dice, billiards, dominoes, marbles, &c. That some persons have used these things without detriment to their character, may be true, but their tendency is to evil, and that continually. Tens of thousands are ruined by their use, are made bankrupt in estate, in morals; are driven from the happiest prospects and social relations, to misery, the mad-house, and to suicide. With results such as these, shall we not warn men against pursuing the business of their manufacture, though they do not stand ostensibly sponsors for all the told and untold evil which is sure to accrue from their use. In all our large cities, gambling is the procuring cause of more bankruptcy of character than any vice that does not put on the garb at once of beastly appetite and passion, and yet this vice is the gateway to all else that is evil. The vice of gambling begins with marbles among school-boys, in the streets and play-grounds; and no faro-bank or card table ever evinced more excitement and wild passion than we see among marble players. The whole system of gambling is robbery—obtaining money without an equivalent. The prosperity of the successful is at the direct cost of the party that is fleeced. Every thing that fosters this vice, even in its incipient and apparently innocent stages, should be nipped in the bud. In this category, we may mention mock auctioneering, the most barefaced system of villany that ever disgraced a civilized community. It is as much worse than theft and highway robbery, as robbery and hypocracy combined are more mean and malevolent than a mere war on one's property. They approach their victims often by an address to sympathy and the best feelings of our nature, and at noon-day, in New York, thus treacherously rob the verdant and confiding without remorse. Who, then, can make the tools and the spurious goods and jewelry with which to do this devil's work, and not be indirectly guilty? Such money should burn every honest man's pocket, and sear the fingers that touch it. Therefore, follow not this "for a living." Speculative stock-jobbing should also be ranked with the non-producing pursuits of life. It is, in the main, a purely artificial operation of creating or depressing nominal value; it is a needless process, and a system of legalized gambling. As leeches and musquitoes live on the blood which other bodies generate, so this horde of financial leeches live on the vitality of industry without adding anything to the general stock of wealth. Let this, also, be proscribed as a mode "of living."

Tobacco, in all its forms, is destructive of health, and is consequently at war with the happiness of the human race. Every acre of land, and every day's work, devoted to its culture, is worse than lost to the world. No crop exhausts land equal to this; and, whoever has traveled over the wide extent of worn-out tobacco lands in Maryland and Virginia, and considers that so much of the ertile bosom of earth has been made barren by such a prostitution, must regard it with sorrow. Yet this desolating crop, both to the land and to the consumer, is being widely introduced, of late years, throughout the Western, Northern, and Eastern States. The smiling valley of the Connecticut is turned into a tobacco field, and cultivated by presidents of temperance societies, who, declaiming in word and deed against the effects of cider-brandy, have cut down their orchards, and planted the soil with tobacco, and are now, with pious philanthropy, preaching temperance with tobacco in their mouths, cigars in their pockets, and fields of the weed at home drinking in the honey-dew of heaven, and ripening to curse mankind with its deadly narcotic power. The manufacture of tobacco into cigars, snuff, and the various forms in which it is used for chewing; all the shops and stores for its sale, indeed all the expense of raising, transporting, manufacturing, and sale of this noxious and nerve-shattering, health-destroying weed, is not only entirely wasted to the world, but produces untold injury to the human family. We know that men make money by raising, manufacturing, and selling tobacco; but who do they make it from?—From the consumer of course. Does its use do him any moral, intellectual, or physical good? If not, and moreover, produces ill-health, and, in thousands of instances, death, as we defy the world to deny, is not all the capital and labor involved in its production, not only a dead loss to society, but a positive injury? With this view of the case, who would be a "cigar girl?"—What young man of correct notions of manliness and honor would attend a cigar store? Who, that is ambitious to do good and not evil, to fill up life with usefulness, and not detriment to human weal, will engage in any branch of the tobacco business? Therefore follow not this for "a living."

We come now to the hydra-headed evil, the demon of iniquity, the scourge of all scourges to abused human nature—Alcohol. On the tobacco question we expect opposition to our views, arising from self interest and a lack of information relative to the evils of its use; but on this question of alcohol so much light has recently been thrown, that few, even of those who are so lost to decency and the good of mankind, as to engage in retailing it to the slaves of a perverted appetite, will dispute our assertion, that it is, in its effects, an unmitigated evil. But in our discussion of the liquor question in its remote and collatteral branches, as an honest business, we take ground higher than some will be disposed to follow us. Our position is this:

Every man that devotes land to the culture of grain and fruit for distillation, is a non-producer, at least of good, and renders to the world no just equivalent for what he receives. The fruit of his labor makes man worse, and no better, and the direct tendency of his business is to destroy the health, happiness, and morals of mankind. The same grain which, when distilled, destroys a family, would give them bread and comfort at less expense than they pay for it in the form of alcohol.

The property and labor devoted to distilling; all the freight and transportation of the liquor to its place of consumption; the million of dollars involved in liquor-selling establishments, with all the labor incident to attending them, we regard as worse than a total waste.

Who that contemplates the blight and wide-spread desolation produced by alcoholic drinks, can regard those who employ their land, and capital, and time, and labor, to minister to this perverted appetite, in any other light than non-producers of good to the world. Better far, for society, would it be to burn the fruit and grain, or sink it in the ocean, than to send it forth, a fire, to consume the bodies and blast the souls of men, and flood the earth with tears. In the first instance, the labor and property would be only lost; in the latter it is lost, and with it the time and usefulness, the character and health, the honor and happiness of its million devotees. Tobacco and alcohol we consider destructive to human happiness, and of course all the labor devoted to their production is worse than lost; it is a curse to the world.

So long as public sentiment is governed in the choice of occupations by no higher motive than the immediate pecuniary profit of the vocation, we may expect young men, with the best of motives, will become distillers, liquor-dealers, and bar-tenders; and become, in due time, bankrupt in character by the baleful effects of such associations. But when men shall look upon the immediate and remote results of their business, upon the condition of individuals and of society, and charge themselves with being "present aiding and abetting" in the production of physical and moral desolation, we may hope for a radical reformation respecting the pursuits of life. What though a man do not drink himself, if he makes or sells liquor to be drank, he holds the accursed cup to his neighbor's lip, and indirectly sends him headlong to ruin.

What a precious catalogue of faculties do those engaged in this nefarious business employ! Who will enumerate them, and tell us their tendency when thus acting, not only without the guidance, but in direct contravention of every moral and refining mental power. Acquisitiveness seems to be the principal one employed; a good faculty, when exercised under proper restraint, and elevated in its aims by all the nobler elements of the mind; but left without guidance to seek gratification by base means, it sinks a man almost beneath the reach of contempt. Who does not pity or despise a miser? If it be base to hoard and worship money honestly gained, is it not equally, nay ten times more base, to gain money by diffusing a deadly virus throughout the vitals of society, ruining not him only who gains the money, but thousands who contribute to swell his gains are cursed with poverty, degradation, and a living death, and their families made the unwilling victims of all the privations that intemperance in the husband and father can inflict.

Follow not this business "for a living."

Having disposed of the principal features of the negative side of this subject, our object in future articles will be to present such vocations as may be legitimately and with propriety engaged in; with hints relative to the mental qualifications required for each, and suggestions as to the influence upon character and talent of the various pursuits and professions.

From the Ohio Organ.

Lord Chesterfield on Distilleries.

We commend to the people of Ohio the following extract of a speech made by Lord Chesterfield, in the House of Lords, in 1743—one hundred and ten yeurs ago.

It was true then, and it is true now, and the distinguished Lord saw and recognised the necessity of the Maine Law—the necessity "of bursting the vials" that contain the palatable poison." Are not his positions right, and his arguments conclusive?

"The noble lord has been pleased kindly to inform us, that the trade of distilling is very extensive, that it employs great numbers, and that they have arrived at exquisite skill, and therefore the trade of distilling is not to be discouraged. Once more, my lords, allow me to wonder at the different conceptions of different understandings. It appears to me that since the spirit which distillers produce are allowed to enfeeble the limbs, vitiate the blood, to pervert the heart, and obscure the intellect, that the number of distillers should be no argument in their favor, for I never heard that a law against theft was repealed or delayed because thieves were numerous. It appears to me, my lords, that really, if so formidable a body are confederated against the virtue or the lives of their fellow-citizens, it is time to put an end to the havoc, and to interpose, while it is yet in our power, to stop the destruction. So little, my lords, am I affected with the merits of the wonderful skill which distillers are said to have attained, that it is, in my opinion, no faculty of great use to mankind, to prepare palatable poison; nor shall I ever contribute my interest for the reprieve of a murderer, because he has by long practice obtained great dexterity in his trade. If their liquors are so delicious that the people are tempted to their own destruction, let us at length, my lords, secure them from their fatal draught, by bursting the vials that contain them. Let us crush at once these artists in human slaughter, who have reconciled their countrymen to sickness and ruin, and spread over the pitfalls of debauchery such bait as cannot be resisted. I am very far, my lords, from thinking that there are this year any peculiar reasons for tolerating murder; nor can I conceive why this manufacture is to be held sacred now, if it is to be destroyed hereafter."

☞ Young man! avoid gaming, for among many other evils which attend it, are these—loss of time—loss of health—loss of reputation—loss of money—loss of temper—ruin of families—defrauding of creditors; and what is often the effect of it, the loss of life both temporal and eternal.

☞ Beauties, whether male or female, are generally the most untractable beings in the world. The handsome fellow is so much a gentleman, and the fine woman has something so becoming, and both expect such great allowances that there is no enduring either of them.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS
Lms.09
v.2 #42

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1853.

☞ The Dr. gives promise to the readers of the Chart that some of our endeavors are to be put forth, during his absence, to keep his columns supplied. This is true. We feel in a measure prepared for it. We rumaged over a drawer at home to-day and turned up a pair of scissors rusty and rivetless; these we took down to friend Beck's gun-shop, and there, one skilled in such mysteries, supplied the missing rivet, screwed them up and set an edge on them that is most delicious. Indeed, we consider the scissors now as quite competent to edit an ordinary paper alone. We hardly dare lay them down among the exchanges on our table lest when we come back in the morning, we find a rival of the "Journal" or "Sentinel" all ready to be issued. If some of our booksellers now would only send us a box of Gillott's best 303's, our readers would only have to wait to see—what we shall see.

Election Day.

Our citizens have reason to congratulate themselves on the result of last Monday's work. While many feared for the result, we have yet carried the day by nearly two hundred majority. This shows a cheering advance on the state of things last year when no License was carried by only 14 votes. Fellow citizens, keep the ball rolling and complete success will soon be ours. We have never had, perhaps, a sharper conflict than last Monday's proved to be. As nearly as we can ascertain not a blank vote was cast. Two thousand one hundred and seventy-two votes were polled on the liquor question; a larger number than was cast for candidates to office. For example, for Treasurer, where there were two candidates, two thousand and sixteen were cast. For Clerk, nineteen hundred and ninety were cast. This shows that temperance was the question of the day and that no man dodged it. This is what we want; bring the opposing parties front to front on this question. Let Rum come out from its cellars and dark holes and meet us at the ballot-box and we know what the result will be. We have had a little touch of the "fight" we heard about last winter in the Hall of the House of Representatives. We want more of it. What we have yet had is only the Bunker Hill Hill conflict to what is to follow.

"License" Arguments.

We saw at the polls, on Monday, what must have filled every right-feeling mind with sadness. Whisky was brought on by the gallon and distributed among all who would drink; there, half drunk, men went to the ballot-box to discharge the highest duty of the freeman. Much disturbance and rowdyism was the result.

Gentlemen liquor-sellers! Do you abandon all other arguments and now acknowledge that you are compelled to retreat down the throat of a vile whisky jug?—That is good. We have got you cornered at last. Very soon Neal Dow's sledge-hammer will come along and do the business for you. It is war to the jug is it? Very well—we will meet you.

☞ We have just received a number of the Ladies' Christian Annual, formerly published at Cincinnati, but now in Philadelphia, Pa. It is devoted to religion, morality, and literature; more especially to Western literature. It is highly deserving of patronage. Address James Challen, Philadelphia, Pa.

Terms: $1:00 per annum in advance.

Our Vantage Ground.

Whatever defects some may charge upon our present Temperance Law, it must be obvious to all that our cause stands on such vantage ground now, that if all will work we can accomplish much. Success is possible under any law only as we exert ourselves. If any think mere law is to do away the evils of intemperance, they will find out their mistake. Let the most stringent enactment be made, and what is it? So much printed paper. We want law sustained and executed. Only see what enactments there are on the statute book of Heaven! "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him and makest him drunken also." But what does the liquor seller care for this? Some present penalties there are which he feels now, but these he can brave; the full measure of wrath there is wrapt up in that sentence he knows will burst upon him at some future day, but as it is future he puts off the consideration of it for the present. "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."

In respect to human laws especially, it is true that penalty must follow swift and sure upon the heels of transgression in order to make the law a terror to evil doers; and therefore, as we said, we want law sustained and executed. On this condition our present law will do much for us.

We have now the current of legislative influence in our favor. Hitherto it has been against us. That is, now our Legislature has done something to protect the innocent citizen, and not everything to fatten and protect the heartless rumseller.—It is no small advantage that we have got the scales turned in this manner.

That most deceptive of all pretences for advocating licensed grog-selling—revenue—is now taken away. Our most worthy municipal and county officers can now no longer drop a dime into the little end of the horn, while the golden eagles roll out at the big end.

We can ferret out every noisy doggery in our cities, and send our Marshal after them with his sharp stick; for of all the nuisances in creation, these are the greatest—excepting, always, the fashionable "Oyster Saloons" and bar-rooms. And if we are vigilant, we can catch the saloon-keepers in transgression—even if they have a license; for who ever knew a thirsty toper possess his soul in so much patience as to wait till he could get off the premises before he swallowed his potation?

It will be no small embarrassment in the way of many to get the requisite security; and such security will effectuully prevent their evading the fines and penalties that may be imposed on them.

On the whole, we have gained a great advantage in this law, far as some may believe it falls below what we need. Let us go to work in hope, and by administering this law energetically, show that we can also administer a better one when we get it.

Advice to Tobacco Chewers and Smokers.

In giving the following bit of advice to to this class of our fellow-citizens, we are aware that there are some who do not need it at all, being already proficients in the matter alluded to; indeed it is their example that has enlighted us on these points.

Whenever then you get into a room where there is a little fresh air, make sure there is none there when you go out of it; keep your cigar agoing till one can have a feeling realization of what Coleridge says about "the body and soul stinking town of Cologne." And when you wish to spit, look about for the brightest object in the room. There it is—the stove—the house-keeper has blacked it and polished it till you might use it for a mirror; but never mind, hit it right in front and centre. There now, who can say you have not a decided taste for the fine arts?

A friend showed us the other day a stove that seemed a perfect picture gallery—and the wall paper too behind the stove had not been neglected. If there is nothing better, the carpet will do to spit on, especially the white portions of the figure. The wood box is often resorted to. Disgorge your quids there so that the ladies delicate fingers may lay hold of one instead of a stick of wood when she wishes to replenish the fire. It creates lively sensations to run your hand into a puddle of tobacco spittle. It is almost the next thing to a wasp's nest. Some put their quids under chairs, behind sofas, &c.; but that practice is to be discouraged; they are too much out of sight there. We have known gentlemen on sitting down to dinner at a friend's table, take out their half-chewed quid and lay it on the clean damask beside their plates till dinner was over, when it resumed its position in their mouths and was again rolled as a sweet morsel under their tongues.

But seriously, we only wonder there is not much more drinking than there is.—If you were continually stirring up the fires, under a boiler that has no water in it, you would get it pretty dry after awhile. But the tobacco chewer or smoker is pursuing a practice similar to this—for with every wag of his jaws or inhalation of tobacco smoke he is creating a thirst which cries out for ardent spirits; and hence we see drinking and smoking so often going together. The one habit leads on to the other.

Young man, do you know where that cigar points to which is steering your face through the streets? It's a finger board pointing to the dram shop and thence to perdition. What a biped man is. He begins his existence with drawing life and health from the pure fountain of a mother's breast, and then as soon as he is weaned, he goes to sucking a dirty roll of tobacco all the rest of his life.

Election.

The following are the official returns from the several townships of Marion co., on the question of license.

	For License.	Ag. License.
Centre,	987	1183
Franklin,	155	59
Perry,	60	120
Washington,	101	102
Wayne,	124	157
Warren,	116	67
Lawrence,	50	116
Decatur,	7	95
Pike,	37	101
Total vote,	1637	2000
		1637
Majority against License,		363

Last year the majority against license was 14.

Seven townships voted against license and two for license.

MAJORITIES.

Against License.—Centre, 196; Perry, 60; Washington, 1; Wayne, 33; Lawrence, 66; Decatur, 88; Pike, 64.

For License.—Franklin, 96; Warren, 49.

The following is the result in the principal towns in the State so far as heard from:

For License.	Against License.
Brookville,	Wilmington,
Aurora,	Lafayette,
Madison,	Lebanon,
Laurel,	Centreville,
Cambridge City,	Danville,
Terre Haute,	Noblesville,
Harrison,	Jeffersonville,
Mount Vernon,	New Maysville,
	Lawrenceburgh,
	Richmond,
	Greencastle,
	Rushville,
	Plymouth,
	South Bend.

Honor to whom Honor is due.

We have been exceedingly gratified at one indication apparent on Monday last. Our foreign born fellow-citizens have hitherto been generally against us on the Temperance question in this city. We have felt that they sadly misjudged as to their own best interests and ours. And now they are beginning to see it. We had valuable help from them in our late contest, and without such help we probably could not have carried the day. We have been credibly informed that at least one-fourth of our German voters cast tickets endorsed "No License." Such a result as this we have been expecting from what we knew of German honesty and sagacity, and we are gratified to see it coming so soon. The sons of Erin were not wanting either on that day. Such recruits to our ranks are doubly welcome—knowing how much their withdrawal weakens the ranks of our opponents.

We are never so happy, or so unhappy, as we imagine.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

Weekly Benefits.

The propriety of an unrestricted system of weekly benefits, alike applicable to the rich and the poor, the worthy and unworthy, has long been a subject of doubt by many, and is now justly exciting much interest in the minds of those who are zealously promoting the prosperity and welfare of the Order of the Sons of Temperance.

Too long already have many Divisions allowed this subject to pass unnoticed, though of vital interest to them, and threatening in its consequences their final dissolution and all visible means for promulgating successfully the great objects for which they were united.

Brethren who have felt it their duty to speak out upon this subject have been detered by fear of wounding the feelings of some beneficiary, and in consequence lavish expenditure has progressed unrebuked and without accomplishing the objects originally designed by benefits, and without subserving the interests of pure benevolence. I do not wish to be understood as opposing a judicious restrictive system of benefits adapted to the real wants of afflicted brethren; but I anxiously desire an entire fulfilment of benevolent obligation in the disbursements of the Treasury, and in administering to the wants of the needy. The past has afforded melancholy proof of the unhappy consequences of a general system of weekly benefits; in the downfall of many Divisions, consequent upon an impoverished Treasury, and in the development of many unhappy forebodings of impending danger which have long threatened many others.

Benefits have been presented in a conspicuous manner as an inducement for unworthy persons to identify themselves with the Order, while more important considerations have been presented as only secondary, if at all: and in consequence, numbers have sought an interest in pecuniary rewards, while they have been totally destitute of the spirit of Temperance Reform, and unfit to engage in an exterminating war against the liquor traffic. However ungenerous it may seem to many, it is no less true that more than two-thirds of all the benefits bestowed have been upon those least attached to the great interests of the order; who have been first to advocate the exclusive doctrine of "moral suasion;" a friendly intercourse with the doggery-keeper; a total abandonment of stringent enactments, and an easy compromising spirit upon all points touching the criminal practice of making drunkards; and have at last afforded more positive proof of their destitution of love for temperance reform, by a withdrawal from the order, or which is more common, by a violation of Article 2d, and consequent expulsion, after having realized all the pecuniary benefits which they could possibly expect. These are facts too notorious to need vindication, and are amply proven in the history of every well organized Division of which I have any acquaintance. Then where is a remedy? A Brother's private opinions of the best means of accomplishing desirable ends ought not to be urged as a reason for his not receiving weekly benefits; neither can we conscientiously debar any one from the same so long as they exist. Consequently, let them be abolished and no longer held up as an inducement to increase our brotherhood. Let those who seek our embrace do so from a desire to be benefitted himself, and to benefit others; then they will be prepared to engage immediately in the glorious work of rescuing their fellow-men from drunkenness.

I would say, let all appropriations from the Treasury, as benefits, be confined alone to those who shall be reported by the chairman of the Visiting Committee, in actual need, and then leave it discretionary with the Division to appropriate any amount for the relief of such afflicted brother. Then, every contributor can feel much consolation in the reflection that his effects will be appropriated for charitable purposes, instead of being handed over to some one less needy than himself. In this way, the objects of benevolence will be fulfilled; the streams of lavish expenditure will be dried up; and with a fruitful treasury, halls may be fitted up in a suitable style; the "Chart" may be given a wide circulation, and effectual means adopted to give currency and power to truth; which will tell at the fireside of the inebriate, and cause his wife and children to hope for better days to come.

W. R. SHERMAN.

Mt. Pleasant, Ind., March 30, '53.

BOUNDARIES OF CHRISTENDOM.—Take the map of the world and encircle with your pencil every country where woman is not a slave, or a prisoner; where life and property are secured by just laws; where civilized manners are found; and where the enlightened sciences have burst the fetters of the mind, and you will encircle precisely the regions on which the rays of revelation shine.

Items of News.

The number of persons actually engaged in digging gold in California does not exceed 100,000. During the month of January last the export of gold from California amounted to $4,576,013, which gives a monthly yield of $45.76 to each man engaged in mining.

☞ A new Methodist Church has been erected at Salem, Oregon Territory, at a cost of $9.000, and was opened free of debt. The congregation at the dedication numbered 500 persons.

☞ The iargest mercantile ship in the world will be launched at Blackwell, England, the present year. Its tonnage will be 3,300 tons, and it is to be propelled by screw machinery of seven hundred horse power.

☞ At Philadelphia, on the evening of March 24th, the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree against Arthur Spring, for the murder of Mrs. Lynch and Mrs. Shaw. The prisoner, on the announcement, manifested the greatest indifference, and even took off his hat and cheered, as the officers were taking him from the court-house. An immense crowd had assembled, who manifested their satisfaction at the verdict by terrific groans, as the murderer was hurried back to prison.—Christian Advocate.

☞ Australia contains 3,120,000 square miles; the United States, 2,963,460.—The Murray river, in Australia, is one thousand miles in length; her two principal cities are Sidney, containing, in 1850, sixty thousand inhabitants, and Melbourne, containing, in 1845, sixteen thousand inhabitants. The total population of Australia, in 1845, was astimatad at 460,000, of which 356,000 were British colonists.

DEATH OF MRS. CASS—Detroit, April 1. Mrs. Cass died at the residence of her husband last night.

DEATH OF MRS. FILLMORE—Washington, March 30.—Mrs. Fillmore died at Willard's Hotel at nine o'clock this morning. She had been suffering with pneumonia for some time past, but no serious apprehensions had been ascertained until within the past few days. The immediate cause of her death was suffocation, caused by an accumulation of water on her lungs. The family and friends accompanied her remains to Buffalo.

☞ An American lady had been arrested at Hiedelburg, charged with having revolutionary pamphlets in her possession. She was direct from America.

☞ The town of Cremona has been placed in a state of siege in consequence of a sentinel having been killed.

☞ It is denied that Mazzini escaped on board of an English frigate. He is supposed to be in Piedmont.

☞ Marshal Haynau died at Vienna on the 4th of March.

☞ The January yield at Australia is reported larger than ever. One hundred thousand men were engaged at the Karons diggings; the average is ten ounces per week. Trade was brisk and prices sustained—excepting flour.

☞ Later news from Mexico represent that Santa Anna has accepted the presidency, and would arrive at Vera Cruz by the 1st of April. The wooden-legged hero may have to leave his government in as much of a hurry as he once left his cork-leg.—Exchange.

CALIFORNIA YIELD OF GOLD.—Private letters from California, speak of the yield of gold as very large, and predict that the shipments in March will be six and a half to seven millions of dollars. One very remarkable and important feature we hear of from several sources by this arrival.—The beds of streams which were worked out and entirely abandoned during the first year or two after the discovery of gold in that country, are now being worked over again with equal, and in many cases, greater success than originally. The tremendous floods of the last season have apparently brought down from the hills large supplies of the precious metals, and deposited them in the beds of the streams. If this recuperative operation is to continue, the greatest croaker must abandon his fears of a failure of the gold crop for many years.

☞ As we were turning a corner on Washington street, a few days ago, one of two passers by dropped this remark to his companion: "If ye are thirsty ye'l git a dhrap under the Capital House the best of any place I know of."

Now we would like to know what right had he to charge the functionary who burrows there with selling liquor contrary to express statute made and provided?

☞ The sweetest hour of life is not always love's young dream. A mortal stick of taffy, the last rose of summer, and the first buck-wheat cake, all have their attractions.

Bridal Wine-Glass.

BY MARY A. DENISON.

"Pledge with wine—pledge with wine" cried the young and thoughtless Harvey Wood; "pledge with wine;" ran through the brilliant crowd.

The beautiful bride grew pale—the decisive hour had come. She pressed her white hands together, and the leaves of the bridal wreath trembled on her pure brow; her breath came quicker, her heart beat wilder.

"Yes Marion, lay aside your scruples for this once," said the Judge in a low tone, going towards his daughter, "the company expect it; do not so seriously infringe upon the rules of etiquette; in your own home act as you please; but in mine, for this once, please ME."

Every eye was turned towards the bridal pair. Marion's principles were well known. Henry had been a convivialist, but of late his friends noted the change in his manners, the difference in his habits—and to-night they watched him to see, as they sneeringly said, if he was tied down to a woman's opinion so soon.

Pouring a brimming breaker, they held it with tempting smiles toward Marion.—She was still very pale, though more composed; and her hand shook not, as smiling back, she gracefully accepted the crystal tempter, and raised it to her lips. But scarcely had she done so, when every hand was arrested by her piercing exclamation of "oh! how terrible!"

"What is it?" cried one and all thronging together; for she had slowly carried the glass at arms length, and was fixedly regarding it as though it were some hideous object.

"Wait," she answered, while an inspired light shone from her dark eyes, "wait, and I will tell you." "I see," she added, slowly, pointing one jewelled finger at the sparkling ruby liquid—"a sight that beggars all description; and yet listen—I will paint it for you if I can. It is a lonely spot; tall mountains crowned with verdure rise in awful sublimity around; a river runs through, and bright flowers grow to the water's edge. There is a thick, warm mist, that the sun seeks vainly to pierce. Trees, lofty and beautiful, wave to the airy motion of birds; but there—a group of Indians gather; they fit to and fro with something like sorrow upon their dark brows. And in their midst lies a manly form—but his cheek how deathly, his eye wild with the fitful fire of fever. One friend stands beside him—nay, I should say kneels; for see, he is pillowing that poor head upon his breast.

Genius in ruins—oh! the high, holy-looking brow! why should death mark it and he so young? Look how he throws back the damp curls! see him clasp his hands! hear his thrilling shrieks for life! mark how he clutches at the form of his companion, imploring to be saved. Oh! hear him call piteously his father's name—see him twine his fingers together as he shrieks for his sister—his only sister—the twin of his soul—weeping for him in his distant native land.

"See!" she exclaimed, while the bridal party shrank back, the untasted wine trembling in their faltering grasp, and the Judge fell, overpowered, upon his seat—"see! his arms are lifted to heaven—he prays, how wildly, for mercy! hot fever rushes through his veins. The friend beside him is weeping; awe-stricken, the dark men move silently away, and leave the living and the dying together."

There was a hush in that princely parlor, broken only by what seemed a smothered sob from some manly bosom. The bride stood yet upright, with quivering lip and tears stealing to the outward edge of her lashes. Her beautiful arm had lost itts tension, and the glass, with its little troubled red waves came slowly towards the range of her vision. She spoke again; every lip was mute. Her voice was low, faint, yet awfully distinct; she still fixed her sorrowful glance upon the wine-cup.

"It is evening now; the great white moon is coming up, and its beams lay gently on his forehead. He moves not; his eyes are set in their sockets; dim are their piercing glances; in vain his friend whispers the name of his father and sister, death is there. Death—and no soft hand, no gentle voice to bless and soothe him.—His head sinks back! one convulsive shudder! he is dead!"

A groan ran through the assembly, so vivid was her description, so unearthly her look, so inspired her manner—that—what she described, seemed actually to have taken then and there. They noticed also that the bridegroom hid his face in his hands and was weeping.

"Dead!" she repeated again, her lips quivering faster, and her voice more and more broken; "and there they scoop him a grave; and there, without a shroud, they lay him down in that damp, reeking earth. The only son of a proud father, the only, the idolised brother of a fond sister. And he sleeps to-day in that distant country, with no stone to mark the spot. There he lies—my father's son—my own twin brother! a victim to this deadly poison. "Father," she exclaimed, turning suddenly, while the tears rained down her beautiful cheeks, "father, shall I drink it now?"

The form of the old Judge was convulsed with agony. He raised not his head, but in a smothered voice he faltered—"no, no, my child, in God's name—no."

She lifted the glittering goblet, and letting it suddenly fall to the floor, it was dashed in a thousand pieces. Many a tearful eye watched her movement and instantaneously every wine glass was transferred to the marble table on which it had been prepared. Then as she looked at the fragments of crystal, she turned to the company, saying, "let no friend hereafter, who loves me, tempt me to peril my soul for wine. Not firmer are the everlasting hills than my resolve, God helping me, never to touch or taste that terrible poison. And he to whom I have given my hand—who watched over my brother's dying form in that last solemn hour, and buried the dear wanderer, there by the river in that land of gold, will, I trust, sustain me in that resolve—will you not, my husband?"

His glistening eyes, his sad, sweet smile, was her answer. The Judge left the room, and when an hour after he returned, and with a more subdued manner took part in the entertainment of the bridal guests, no one could fail to read that he, too, had determined to banish the enemy at once, and forever from his princely home.

Those who were present at that wedding, can never forget the impressions so solemnly made, many from that hour foreswore the social glass.—Olive Branch.

From the Temperance Advocate.

The Good Creature of God.

BY LAURIE SHEIRE.

"Mother, is there not a crust of bread, that I can have?" said a little boy to his mother as he looked with the eager eyes of hunger into her face.

"No, my son, there is not," is the answer of the mother. But why is that look of anguish upon her countenance? and why are those tears that are now stealing down her cheeks, as she answered him thus.

The little boy perceives her grief, and forgetful of his own sorrow, clambers upon her knee, and says, "Mother, what makes you cry? Have I done anything to give you pain?"

"No, dearest, you have not, you have always been good to me. I was only thinking where I should get you something to eat," the mother answered.

"Don't cry for that," said the little boy. "Have you not often told me that God will feed the hungry? And will he now forget your little Charley? But where is father now? he don't come home as he used to, when we lived in the big white house. Then he came home every night, and I would run out to meet him, and he would take me up in his arms and kiss me; but it is not so now, for he hardly ever comes home, and when he does, he is so cross and beats you so hard, that I wish he never would come again."

"Why, Charley," says the desponding mother, "what makes you talk so about your father? God does not like to hear you say this, and we must not complain, for your father has done nothing but use the good things he has provided for us, and it is that which makes him so cross.—God made the whisky, the brandy, and the rum, and placed it where your father could drink of it. The ways of God are wise, and we must thank him for his good creatures, however hard they may seem to us, or he will think us ungrateful."

"What!" answered Charley with surarise, "did you say that God made whisky, rum and brandy? Did God make the poison that takes away my father's reason, pnd places him below the brute? Did God tell the rumseller to take the last cent my father has to buy bread for us, and give him poison in return? Did God make my father drunk and lay him low in the ditch? Did God make my father swear so dreadfully, and beat you so cruelly? and did God take away our food and clothes and make me so hungry and ragged, as I am now? Tell me! mother, did God do it all?

"Yes, my son, I suppose he did; but we must put up with it," says the hopeless mother.

"Then," exclaimed the little boy, almost with indignation, "who made the food to grow for us to eat? Who made the pure water for us to drink? Who made the Bible that says, 'No drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven?' who told the preacher to speak of heaven, and say nothing about whisky, rum or brandy being there? who made our neighbor that lives on yonder hill, so free and happy, with reason far above the brute, and so good and kind to his family? who made his whole family happy? and who gave them plenty of food and clothes?—I ask you, who did it, did Satan? for surely if God made whisky, rum and brandy, it must be Satan that made pure water; if God made us unhappy, it must be Satan made our neighbors happy, and if God took away our food, it must be Satan that gave them plenty to eat."

"My son, the mother again replies, I cannot tell you, the ways of God are above my comprehension; but hark! your father is coming, go to bed now, forget what you have said, and it may be, that we, in the morning may find something to eat."

Charley retired, but not to sleep.—He heard his father enter the house, and demand in guttural tones something to eat; then he heard his mother say that she could not get it, as there was not a mouthful of bread in the house.

"You wont get it, eh? then I'll make you," answered his father in a rage. He heard the sound of a blow, and something fall heavily on the floor, then all was silent for a few moments, when he heard his father exclaim, in a voice of utmost despair, "My God! My God! I have done it at last!" and immediately rush out of the house.

Charley could lay still no longer. He arose and returned to the room where he left his mother; but sad was the sight that he beheld. There lay his mother on the floor, her head covered with blood. He rushed to her, clasped her in his arms, and called aloud the endearing name of mother; but no mother answered, her spirit had taken its flight beyond this vale of tears. The good creature of God had slain Charley's mother.

Some two or three days after the above occurrence, a body was discovered in the river near by, which proved to be Charley's father.

He was brought to the house, where Charley stopped, who, when he saw the ghastly countenance of his father, burst into tears, placed his arms around his neck, and sobbed aloud, "My father, you have been unkind to me, yet still you loved me once, and for that, I'll love you now; but why did you kill my mother? O tell me! why did you do it?

No father answered to the emphatic appeal of the son: he too had become a victim of the good creature of God; and Charley was left alone, an orphan, in this friendless world.

Since that time many years have passed away, and Charley has grown up to manhood; but he believes not in the good creature of God, for his continual cry is, Down! down! with the rumseller! Root him out of this earth, root and branch, for he by selling the poison, that Satan invented to destroy the happiness of man, hath spread more suffering, ruin, and devastation throughout this world than war, pestilence and disease.

Singular Phenomenon.

A severe snow storm, accompanied by lightning, occurred in a part of Maine on the 13th ultimo. A correspondent of the Gardiner (Me.) Fountain, writing from Bass Harbor, Mt. Deseret, describes the storm, as it appeared there, as awful and sublime. A thunder cloud passed over the place, which, for terrific appearance, exceeded anything ever witnessed there. The correspondent adds:

The lightning was of a purple color, and sometimes appeared like balls of fire, coming in through windows and doors, and down the chimneys, while the houses trembled and shook to their very foundations.

Mrs. E. Holden was near a window, winding up a clock; a ball of fire came in through the window, and struck her hand, which benumbed her hand and arm.—She then, with all in the house, retreated into the entry. Another flash succeeded, and in the room from which they had retired, resembling a volume of fire, whirling round and producing a crackling noise. A similar appearance of fire was seen, and crackling noises were heard in a large number of the houses. Some who heard the noise, say that it sounded like breaking glass.

Captain Maurice Rich had his light extinguished, and his wife was injured. He got his wife on to a bed, and found a match; at that instant another flash came and ignited the match, and threw him several feet backwards. John L. Martin received so severe a shock that he could not speak for a long time.

A great many persons were slightly injured. Some were struck in the feet, some in the eye; while others were electrized, some powerfully and some slightly. But what was very singular, not a person was killed or seriously injured, or a building damaged; but a cluster of trees, within a few rods of two dwelling houses, was not thus fortunate. The electric fluid came down among them—taking them out by the roots, with stones and earth, and throwing all in every direction. Some were left hanging by their roots from the tops of the adjacent standing trees, roots up, tops down.

The lightning, after entering the earth to the depth of several feet, and for a space some eight or ten feet in diameter, divided into four different directions. One course which it took led through the open land, making a chasm to the depth of several feet, and continued its march unobstructed by the solid frozen ground, or any other substance, to the distance of three hundred and seventy feet; lifting, overturning, and throwing out junks of frozen earth, some of which were ten or eleven feet long by four feet wide; and hurling at a distance rocks, stones, and roots. The power here displayed was truly awful, and had it fallen on a building, it would have thrown it, with its inmates, into ten thousand fragments.

I understand that in Southwest Harbor and Northeast Harbor (in this island) several vessels had their mast rent in pieces; one had some plank torn from her, and one man was knocked down, but not killed.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Our humor sets its price on every thing we get from fortune.

Happiness lies in the taste, and not in the things; and it is from having what we desire that we are happy—not from having what others think desirable.

Men who fancy they have merit, take a pride in being unfortunate, to persuade others and themselves that they are worthy to be the butt of fortune.

Whatever may be the apparent difference between fortunes, there is a certain coupensation of good and evil which renders them equal.

In order to establish themselves in the world, men do all they can to appear established there.

Although men pride themselves on their great actions, these are often the result, not of any great design, but of chance.

Fortune turns every thing to the advantage of her favorites.

The happiness or unhappiness of men depends as much on their humors as on fortune.

Aversion to lying is often an imperceptible desire to render our testimony important, and to give a religious aspect to our words.

Truth does not do so much good in the world as its appearances do evil.

Grace is to the body what good sense is to the mind.

There is no disguise which can long conceal love where it does, or feign it where it does not, exist.

As it never depends on ourselves to love, or to cease to love, a lover cannot complain with justice of the inconstancy of his mistress, nor she of her lover's fickleness.

If we judge of love by the generality of its effects, it resembles hatred rather than friendship.

It is possible to meet with women who have never had an affair of gallantry; but it is rare to find any one who have had only one.

There is only one sort of love, but a thousand different copies of it.

Love, like fire, cannot subsist without continual movement; as soon as it ceases to hope and fear, it ceases to exist.

The pleasure of love is in loving. We are happier in the passion we feel than in that we excite.

There are people who would never have been in love if they had never heard of love.

It is with true love as with apparitions. Every one talks of it, but few have ever seen it.

☞ According to the returns of the assessors of New Orleans, there has been a decline in the value of property in the city of three million three hundred and ninety-two thousand three hundred and forty-two dollars, within the past year.—Exchange.

Thus it will be where they sell intoxicating drink. If they had voted 'No license' at the prior election, the price of property would have arisen 10 per cent, but if the owner of the real estate will conduct in such a manner (by their regardlessness of the effects of their acts) as to decrease their own income—let them do it. There are many Temperance men in New Orleans who are trying to increase the income of those who have property, but they will not consent. Banish Rum, and no property will decrease in value, for the increased population and money saved from the still will enable men to give higher prices, and still be richer.—Crusader.

FEMALE SOCIETY.—What makes those men who associate habitually with women superior to others? What makes that woman who is accustomed and at ease in the society of men, superior to her sex in general? Solely because they are in the habit of free, graceful, continual conversation with the other sex. Woman in this way lose their frivolity; their faculties awaken; their delicacies and peculiarities unfold all their beauty and captivation in the spirit of intellectual rivalry. And the men lose their pedantic, rude, declamatory, or sullen manner. The coin of the understanding and the heart is changed continually. The asperities are rubbed off, their better materials polished and brightened, and their richness, like fine gold, is wrought into finer workmanship by the fingers of woman, than it ever could be by those of men.—Neal.

A NEW GUN.—The New York Tribune says that Col. P. W. Porter, of Tennessee, has invented a repeating rifle, whereof the cylinder revolves vertically, (instead of horizontally, like Colt's), and carries nine charges. The gun primes and cocks itself, and may be fired once a second, or as often as the trigger can be pulled. With the magazine of sixty charges which is furnished with it, it may be fired nearly sixty times in a minute. It seems to be quite simple in construction, is little heavier than the ordinary rifle, shoots with great force, and is said to be easily kept in order. To a marksman of our sort, who might chance to tree a squirrel or other game, we should think such a gun would not come amiss. In a fight with a Grizzly Bear, a Californian would find it useful, provided the bear would keep proper distance, which some badly educated cubs seem not to understand. Its cost (without magazine) is sixty dollars.

☞ An old lady once said, that her idea of a great man was, "a man who was keerful of his clothes, didn't drink spirits, kin read the Bible without spelling the words, and kin eat a cold dinner on wash day, to save the wimmen folks the trouble of cooking."

☞ In America there are three hundred and fifty daily newspapers, while in England there are only ten.

Grand Division.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of Indiana, will commence its semi-annual session, on the 26th day of April, next, at 2 o'clock, P. M., at Cambridge City, in Wayne county.

ELDER & HARKNESS'

Book and Job Printing Office.

WE are constantly making additions to our assortment of Job Type, and have no hesitation in saying that we have as complete and full an assortment of new and good Book and Job Type as can be found in the State, rendering our establishment a COMPLETE

Book and Job Office.

We are prepared to execute in the neatest and best manner, in a style that will compare favorably with any printing done East or West, and on the most reasonable terms,

All Kinds of Job Work:

Books,	Cards,	Receipts,
Pamphlets,	Labels,	Blank Notes,
Catalogues,	Hat Tips,	Bills Lading,
Circulars,	Bill Heads,	Dray Receipts,
Policies,	Checks,	Concert Bills,
Programmes,	Hand Bills,	Posters,

And Blanks of Every Description.

☞ We have on hand a superior article of Eastern Pamphlet and Cover Paper, and the best of Ink, and as we are practical workmen, with the advantage of 17 years experience, part of the time in the best offices in New York and Philadelphia, and do a large portion of the work ourselves, we guaranty all work entrusted to us to be accurately and neatly executed, and within reasonable time.

☞ For the character of our work, we confidently refer to any Book or Job bearing our imprint—our work speaks for itself.

☞ Orders from a distance will be promptly attended to, and accuracy guarantied.

☞ Office on Meridian street, immediately over the Post Office.

ELDER & HARKNESS.

Indianapolis, March 1, 1853.

What can be had for Five Dollars!

THE UNDERSIGNED have entered into an arrangement by which they agree to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, (monthly,) the Home Journal, (weekly,) and the Musical World and Times, (weekly,) to new subscribers, at the very moderate price of five dollars a year for the three publications; all orders, enclosing that amount to Dyer & Willis, will be promptly attended to.

SAMUEL HUESTON,
Publisher of the Knickerbocker.
MORRIS & WILLIS,
Publishers of the Home Journal.
DYER & WILLIS,
Publishers of the Musical World & Times,
257 Broadway, New York.

GRAND LITERARY AND ARTISTIC COMBINATION!

Arrangements have been made to furnish the KNICKERBOCKER MAGAZINE, the HOME JOURNAL, and the NEW YORK MUSICAL WORLD AND TIMES, to new subscribers, for Five Dollars a year! This is cheap literature, with a vengeance. The Knickerbocker is $3 per annum; the Home Journal, $2; and the Musical World and Times, $3; making $8 a year at the usual rates. That three such works can be obtained for five dollars a year, is a fact truly worthy the Caloric age, which is just now being ushered in. Of the Knickerbocker Magazine, edited by Lewis Gaylord Clark, it is unnecessary to speak; for twenty years it has been the most genial, humorous and spicy "monthly" in the world—and the present volume will be better than any which preceded it. The Home Journal, edited by Geo. P. Morris and N. P. Willis, is well known as the best family newspaper in America. And the Musical world and Times, edited by Richard Storrs Willis, with Lowell Mason, Geo. H. Curtis, Thos. Hastings, Wm. P. Bradbury, Geo. F. Root, and other musical writers contributing, and which gives, among other things, over $25 worth of music, and a full course of instruction in harmony, annually, is the very best musical journal ever published. These three publications will post a family up in regard to nearly everything worth knowing:—Art, Science, Literature; Music, Painting, Sculpture; Inventions, Discoveries; Wit, Humor, Fancy, Sentiment; the Newest Fashions and other attractions for Ladies; Choice New Music for the Sabbath, the Church, and the Fireside; Reviews and Criticisms of Musical Works, Performers and Performances; in short, the very pick and cream of Novelty, Incident, History, Biography, Art, Literature and Science—including whatever can be given in periodicals to promote Healthy Amusement and Solid Instruction in the family, and help to make it better, wiser and happier—may be now obtained for FIVE DOLLARS. Address

DYER & WILLIS, 257 Broadway.

☞ Editors publishing the above three times, and sending the papers containing it to Dyer & Willis, will receive the three works named, for one year. mar1

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR.
Indianapolis, Indiana

CHILDHOOD.—How artless is childhood, even in its arts! How transparent, how easily seen through. When wisely dealt with, children shed the purest tears of penitence that are ever shed on earth.—And how full of trust is early childhood! The child lives and moves, and has its being in eternity. It knows nothing of the beginning of life, or of its ending.

"A simple child
That lightly draws its breath,
And feels its life in every limb,
What can it know of death?"

Over it immortality brooks like the day. But above all, how absolute, and uncompromising and godlike is a child's sense of right! He recognizes no limitation to the law of duty. He knows not policy until he learns it from the evil practices of the world. Repeat to a child the immortal lessons of peace and love which Christ uttered, and he instantly recognizes the very commandments of God, and asks, "Why do men ill treat one another?"—With a terrible fidelity of application he turns your instructions directly upon you, and demands, since such is God's law, why you do thus and so. Children cannot understand, until the world teaches them, how any necessity should interfere to render entire obedience impossible.

☞ It is far from being true, in the progress of knowledge, that after every failure we must recommence from the beginning. Every failure is a step to sucess; every detection of what is false directs us to what is true; every trial exhausts some tempting form of error. Not only so; but scarcely any attempt is entirely a failure: scarcely any theory, the result of steady thought, is altogether false: no tempting form of error is without some latent charm derived from truth.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

A Magazine of Pure Morals: PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGAZINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does. Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—CHEAPEST OF ALL.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost INSTANTANEOUS relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hacking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfuly testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN
STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,
North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.80

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age.

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week,
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.
S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE, Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. RICHARD M. HALL. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it; and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C.; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon. John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.
Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the CHERRY PECTORAL which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

DR. AYER, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
EDWARD HITCHCOCK, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. AYER. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

PRESIDENT PERKINS, Vermont Med College.
PROF. SILLIMAN, Yale College
PROF. VALENTINE MOTT, New York.
PROF. CLEAVELAND, Bowdoin Med. College.
PROF. BUTTERFIELD, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. GEO. P. MARSH, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen. EMANUEL BULNES, President of Chili
Rt. Rev. ED POWER, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. DOCT. LANSING, Brooklyn, New York.
ARCHBISHOP PURSELL, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind. by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SHIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of
Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,
WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be warranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY
BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy. Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1853. NO. 43.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.
OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75
☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.
Cuts double the above rates.
☞ Advertisments must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.
☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the "Agitator."

The Doomed.

BY C. JILLSON.

One pleasant morn in early June,
My footsteps chanced to stray,
Where I had seldom roamed before
Since winter passed away;
The tendrils of the vine were there,
With fragrance fresh and new,
And roses blushed like maiden pride,
All gemmed with drops of dew.
Soft zephyrs sighed along the vale,
Yet scarce a leaf was stirred,
But 'neath the arch of every bow'r
Was sweetest music heard.
The robin and the blue-bird sang
Their gentle notes of glee,
And others gave the echo back
From every shrub and tree.

A child was there—a merry child—
Alone among the flowers,
And o'er her brow but few short years
Had passed like fleeting hours.
Dark ringlets clustered on her cheek,
And in her guileless eye
Was seen those tints that never fade,
Reflected from the sky.
The cares of life had traced no lines
Upon her fair young brow,
Nor at the shrine of want or wo
Was she obliged to bow.
* * * * * * * *
Her name was Mary—sacred name—
Dear to my youthful days—
A name that none can fail to love,
But one that all can praise.

Years passed away—seasons changed—
And Mary stood beside
The chosen one of her young days,
A fair and blushing bride.
He promised, and his words were meant;
He swore by all above,
That nothing but the hand of death
Could controvert his love.
Time passed away, and once again,
They called me there to gaze
Upon a scene—a fearful scene
That told of better days.
I stood once more by Mary's side,
But oh! the tears I shed,
While gazing on that lovely form,
Por Mary there lay dead!

That youth who promised to protect,
To cherish and adore,
The object of his youthful love,
But ten short years before,
Had been ensnared by evil men,
And step by step led on,
Till drink had ruined all his powers,
Till all his hope was gone.
His wife was left to pine and die,
'Mid poverty and wo;
Her anguish and her suffering
No human heart can know,
She died at midnight, all alone,
When winter winds were high,
And no one closed her eyes in death,
No one but God was nigh.
Oh! ye who read this simple tale,
Boast not of moral strength,
You've not measured passion's chain,
One link is not its length.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Philadelphia Sun.

Eleven o'clock Lunch.

CHAPTER I.

"Eleven o'clock, Ned, don't you hear the State House clock striking?"

Thus spoke a young man, one of the junior partners of the house of Carton & Co., one of the wholesale houses that line Market street. The person addressed as Ned was the head salesman of the establishment.

"Wait a moment, Thomas, I will be with you directly. I think the morning has passed very rapidly."

"Rapidly!" replied Thomas, "I have been thinking that eleven o'clock would never come. It appears to me the hours grow longer day by day."

Ned having got through with what he had been busy with, took the arm of Thomas, and together they proceeded to a neighboring tavern, kept by one Harry Blight. Harry was said to provide the best lunch of any landlord in the vicinity of Market Street. In fact, as Thomas remarked, it was more like a regular dinner than a lunch. Stepping in at the door, they soon surrounded the well-filled board.

Thomas, ravenous with hunger, soon had the carving knife in his hand, cutting off a slice for Ned. He helped himself; laying it upon a piece of bread, he mustarded and peppered it to his satisfaction; and then was heard the accompaniment of mastication, to the music of the brandy bottles, as they rattled upon the counter.

"Now Neddy, my boy, what will you have?"

"I'll take a gin sling to-day, Thomas."

The sling and toddy were soon deposited beneath their waistcoats, and calling for segars, they lighted them and took a seat, to regale themselves with their flavor.

"I say, Ned, this saloon of Harry's is a snug place to while away half an hour in, before dinner. A more gentlemanly or clever fellow I never knew. He keeps the best liquors, segars, and lunch, of any landlord in town; and I am glad he is so well patronized."

"Well, Thomas, what will you have?—my treat, you know."

"I'll take brandy and sugar, Ned."

"Here waiter, bring us a gin-sling and a brandy and sugar."

Thomas having prepared his brandy and sugar to his liking, sat sipping it and smacking his lips—a stranger to the glass would have smacked his lips too, if he had tasted it, not for its flavor, but for its fiery taste, no water having been mixed in them; Thomas having lately always asserted that water spoiled brandy and sugar. Having finished their glasses, they returned to the store to attend to their regular business.

Thomas Marloe was a young man whose energy had enabled him to reach the post of junior partner in the house of Carton & Co. He had a young wife and one child, a sweet little girl three years old. They lived in the upper part of the city, in a snug two story house, and the comfort within was due to Mary, his wife. She was a lovely woman; one whose exemplary life, and sweet disposition, endeared her to all her acquaintances. Thomas fully appreciated her, and nought was left undone by him to contribute to her happiness.

Thomas, introduced by his companions to Harry Blight's eleven o'clock free lunch, soon became a regular attendant at it.—He never dreamed of danger, but under the guise of seeking the lunch, he would seek the gratification of an appetite, that bade fair to prove his ruin. Eleven o'clock soon became too long to wait, and nine o'clock would find him at the bar, with a cracker in one hand and a glass of brandy in the other. He made many excuses to himself, and often tried to silence the accusing conscience within, when it spoke in thunder tones to his mind. Often the face of his sweet uncomplaining wife would rise up before his mind, as he stepped upon the threshold of Harry's saloon. And often his frenzied eye would fire with tears, as he felt the power of the tempter, like an anaconda, drawing its coils around him.

But what of Ned? Ah, Ned saw the fatal dart fixed in the shaft, ready to be sped into his heart, and like a prudent man, he forsook the eleven o'clock lunch, and tried all his powers of persuasion to induce Thomas to follow his example. It was, however, of no avail. Thomas had become spell-bound—the charmer knew his power, and well he used it. He visited regularly his old haunts; but, as he became seedy, or what is called a shabby genteel loafer, his former companions forsook him and declined his acquaintance.

CHAPTER II.

Five years have passed away upon the wings of time. Thomas has waded through these years, days and hours of sorrow; and his skirts have been defiled with the gutter and the kennel. He who had been so careful of his person and dress, has become a dirty sloven. Mary had often supped on blighted hopes and departed joys—her uncomplaining was the wonder of her friends and neighbors. Oh! they knew not the depth of affection in that young heart! When expostulated with by her friends, for living with her husband; when told that nought had been left undone; that persuasion, kind admonition, friendly advice and entreaties had all failed; and there was no use in attempting his reformation, she would, with clasped hands, and lifted eyes, bend to her knees, and taking her little daughter Clara's tiny fingers between her own, raise her voice in supplication to her God.

Long and patiently would she sit over her work to secure for her husband and little one a morsel to keep them from starving. Her labors at night affected her eyes—and her constant application to her needle, and want of exercise had faded the rose from her cheeks, which had given place to the lily. At this present time, she was laboring under a cold, contracted in going out to a neighboring tavern, to seek for his insensible, bloated form. The cold grew worse, and soon the hectic flush upon her cheeks told the friends who visited her, that the worm which eateth into the vitals was at work upon her system.

Her disease had assumed a fatal character; and one evening as returning from the store where she procured work for her needle, she misstepped, and fell at full length upon the sharp cobble stones in the street. A stream of blood gushed from her mouth, and all she was able to inform the bystanders was of the place of her residence. They raised her gently, and placed her in a carriage, and drove to her apology for a dwelling.

Bearing Mary gently, they laid her down upon a bed, and propped her head with some pillows her poor neighbors had brought in. Mary was beloved by all in the court; wherever the sick and the dying were, there was she found to comfort the mourner, and wipe the tears of sorrow from the eye.

The doctor soon came, and after attentively observing her, shook his head, with an involuntary motion, thus showing the thoughts within.

Dr. Graham spoke to her kindly, and asked if she had any friends she would like to see. She raised her glassy eyes to his face, and fixed them upon him with an earnest gaze—

"Doctor, I understand you—speak out plain, it will not affect me. Say, is my time of probation on earth drawing to a close?"

The Doctor, with tears flowing down his cheeks, assured her in the affirmative.

"Then, Doctor, all I ask is, that you will try and stimulate my body until my poor Thomas can be found."

"I will put forth all my skill, madam, to gratify your wishes."

CHAPTER III.

Thomas that morning had gone out sober, and with a determination to procure work, (if he could,) to enable him to provide some food for his wife and child. He wandered up and down the street, endeavoring to obtain a job of work, but he walked in vain. Half-famished, he sauntered down Market street, hoping to meet some familiar face, and procure work sufficient to accomplish his object. There was one friend who had often assisted him; this was Ned, the companion of better days. Slipping into the store of Carton & Co., he inquired if Edward Torbet was in? The porter replied that Edward had gone with a customer over to Harry Blight's to lunch.

To lunch! Eleven o'clock! And a series of years, all shrouded in mourning, flashed across his brain! He staggered, and would have fallen, had not the porter sustained him. The porter placed Tom upon a chair, and procured a tumbler of water for him to drink. The cool beverage revived him, and visions of rounds of beef rose up before his view.

Thanking the porter for his kindness, he arose and took his way to Harry Blight's tavern. It was past eleven o'clock when he entered the bar-room.—His appearance was shabby genteel.

Ned was sipping some Sherry wine, while conversing with his customer.

Harry Blight happened to cast his eyes towards the lunch table, and caught the form of Tom, as with vigorous jaws he packed away the lunch into his stomach. With one bound Harry crossed the counter, and confronted Tom.

"Hey! you sponging, loafing rascal! what are you doing here? Begone, or I will kick you into the street."

For one moment Tom glared upon Harry, and then in a torrent of words thus addressed him:

"You kick me into the street? You call me a loafing sucker? Who made me what I am? Who spread the tempting bait? and silly was I to take it? Who brought upon my soul a curse, and who has barred my way to heaven with the poison of the still? What has been the cause of making—what you now call a sucker and loafer? Who? why you, Harry Blight. Your accursed eleven o'clock lunch first led me astray. Gentlemen," continued he, turning and addressing the frequenters of the bar-room, "some years ago, I was one of the firm of Carton & Co., respected by all who knew me, beloved by my companions, and in the full confidence of my co-partners. In an evil day, Harry Blight opened this tavern, and spread what he calls a free lunch, at eleven o'clock in the day. I was induced to visit it, and the first silver I ever rung on the counter of a bar, I rung on that marble before you. I began with mineral water, then took wine, and at last, induced by the flaming encomiums heaped upon his fancy drinks, I took to drinking them. The temptation of the lunch was the first inducement to visit, and soon the thirst created by salted beef, salted pretzel, and sheeps' tongues was quenched in the liquid fire of the bar. I have spent money, health, and peace of mind, in this accursed place. It has been the cause of sorrow to my noble-hearted wife. And to-day, sick, disheartened, and half famished for food, I entered this house, with the ostensible object of seeking that gentleman; but also with the hope that I might cull some of the waste bits of the lunch, to which I am entitled. The landlord sets it out as a free lunch. Free—to be partaken of, and therefore, gentlemen, I appeal to your decision, whether I have committed a trespass, or sponged upon the landlord? I know it is called a free lunch—but I am also aware that Harry Blight laughs in his sleeve, when he retires at night to calculate what each man has paid for the slice of meat and bread he has partaken of. Gentlemen, I appeal to you.

"He is right," said they all.

"He is right," said Ned, "and Harry Blight, you are wrong in threatening to kick him into the street, and I for one, will not see it done."

Here Tom's eyes, which had been flashing with anger—dropped their lids and the tears fell pattering like rain drops at his feet. The fountains of his soul had been broken up by the friendly voice of Ned—it melted his heart, and he sobbed like a child.

"Come, none of your whining here"—said the landlord; "you may thank your friend Edward that your bloated carcase does not at this moment lie in the street."

As if stung by an adder—Tom sprang towards Harry, his eyes glaring with fury, and screaming at the top of his voice, exclaimed—

"Curse you! May God curse your body! May worms destroy it, ere the spirit leaves it! And may the fiends of hell wrap you in flames that shall burn but never kill! And may the drunkard's curse lie on your soul!"

The effort cost him what little strength he had; and ere the bystanders were aware of Harry's purpose, he had caught Tom by the throat, and hurled him headlong into the street. They rushed out in a body, picked him up, and carried him to Carton & Co.'s store. The blood flowed in a stream from a deep wound in his head. Edward, perceiving his lips move, placed his ear near his mouth, and heard these words—

"Oh God, have mercy on me a sinner! Mary, Clara, wife, child!" and he ceased to breathe.

They procured a settee, and carried him to his late home.

Mary had sent in every direction for her husband, but the messengers had returned without any tidings of him. Presently a number of footsteps were heard pattering over the pavement. In a moment, as if divining the cause, she raised herself up on her arm, and murmured, "Bring him up here; I know all; let me see his body before I die."

They brought his body up stairs. As a statue, with glazed eyes, she looked upon the corpse; then clasping her emaciated hands in supplication, she murmured—"Father, turn the drankard maker from the error of his ways. Lord, help me to forgive."

Edward approached her and said, "Forgiveness lies only with God, it is God only who can forgive such iniquity. Mary, Clara shall be my child if you will give her to me, and she shall be the object of my heart's best affections."

Mary turned her eyes upon him, in which the tears now shone with a lustre that betokened death.

"The Lord reward you, Edward; take her and teach her always to love and forgive."

Springing up, she clasped her husband's cold form to her bosom, and her mind appeared to wander for a moment. Then gently pushing back the dark hair from his cheek, she imprinted kiss after kiss on it, and then suddenly, as if recalled to her recollection, she gave a mournful wail and sunk upon his breast a corpse.

Let us draw a veil over the scene, and forever remember that many a drunkard has dated the commencement of his career to the "eleven o'clock free lunch."

J. K. G.

Philadelphia, March 5, 1853.

Hints to promote Harmony in a Family.

1. We may be quite sure that our will is likely to be crossed in the day—so prepare for it.
2. Every body in the house has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and therefore we are not to expect much.
3. To learn the different temper of each individual.
4. To look upon each member of the family as one for whom Christ died.
5. When any good happens to any one, to rejoice at it.
6. When inclined to give an angry answer, lift up the heart in prayer.
7. If from any cause we feel irritable, to keep a strict watch upon ourselves.
8. To observe when others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness and sympathy suited to their state.
9. To watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and to put little annoyances out of the way.
10. To take a cheerful view of every thing, and to encourage hope.
11. To speak kindly to servants, and praise them for little things when you can.
12. In all little pleasures which may occur, to put self last.
13. To try for "the soft answer that turneth away wrath."
14. When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed, to ask ourselves,—"Have I not often done the same thing and been forgiven?"
15. In conversation not to exalt ourselves, but to bring others forward.
16. To be gentle with the younger ones, and treat them with respect, remembering that we were once young too.
17. Never judge one another, but attribute a good motive when we can.
18. To compare our manifold blessings with the trifling annoyance of the day.

A Touch of Nature.

A car full of passengers recently passed over the Western Railroad, in which occurred a simple but touching scene, worthy of record. One of the passengers was a woman, carrying in her arms a child, who annoyed every one by its petulance and cries. Mile after mile the passengers bore the infliction of its noise, which rather increased than diminished, until at last, it became furious, and the passengers nearly so. There were open complaints, and one man shouted—"take the child out." The train stopped at a station, when an old gentleman arose, and made the simple statement that the father of the child had died recently, away from home; that the mother had been on a visit to her friends and had died while on the visit; that her dead body was on board the train, and the child was in the arms of a woman who was a stranger to it. It was enough.—There was a tear in nearly every eye, and all were melted into pity and patience.—All selfishness was lost in thinking of the desolation of the poor little wanderer, who would have found a warm welcome in hands that a moment before, would almost have visited it with a blow.—Springfield Republican.

We often persuade ourselves that we love people more powerful than we are; and yet it is interest alone which produces our friendship. We do not associate with them for any good that we wish to do them, but for that which we would receive from them.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1853.

Grand Division.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of Indiana, will commence its semi-annual session, on the 26th day of April, next, at 2 o'clock, P. M., at Cambridge City, in Wayne county.

☞ We are under great obligations to our friends at Trenton, Randolph county, for their efforts in behalf of the Chart.—The Division at that place is reported in a flourishing condition, and they are all working nobly in the good cause, and not without their reward, as the result of the recent election testifies. Their township only cast 7 votes in favor of license.

☞ We have received some poetry from a correspondent at Leesburg, which contain some fine sentiments and in some places poetically expressed; but the difficulty with it is, the measure is not right. First, the measure of the articles is a little too long for our columns; and secondly, the measure of the verses is irregular and incorrect. With condensation, and correction, (which we have not time to give it) it might do well for publication.

A Word for the Chart.

In the Doctor's absence, it will be difficult, no doubt, to sustain the interest his influence and personal presence throws about this paper. But, in his absence, we may say some things his modesty might forbid him to say. We believe that the cause of Temperance requires the support of such a paper as this in Indiana. It is an auxiliary we cannot dispense with. As a bond of union and intelligence, no other paper can take its place. But, to make it most useful, it must be well sustained—better sustained than now. It is worthy of better support than it now receives; and a little effort, that would do every man good that makes it, would double its subscription list and quadruple its influence for good. A few hundred additional subscribers would be a very cheering welcome to the Doctor when he returns, and the fittest testimony the friends of Temperance can give to the worth of the paper. As Spring is opening now, and you are preparing to put your seed into the earth, put this paper into every family in your neighborhood, and see what fruit it will produce before autumn.

Who will send us the Returns?

It is very important that we should have complete returns from the whole State, in regard to the late temperance vote. Is there not some one in every county who will forward them to us? Gather up the result, friends, and send us the figures and we can then see what the true state of the case is. Such information will be very important to us in view of future operations.

☞ We this week chronicle another death to be added to the list of millions that have been ruined soul and body by the liquid demon. The subject was a German, who resided near Milan, Ripley Co. He had become intoxicated, (a thing not uncommon for him,) and while in that condition committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn. He had, it appears, attempted the same crime several times before, while under the influence of liquor, but had been prevented by his wife.

☞ Dr. J. S. Bobbs has removed his residence and office to the south side of Market street, between New Jersey and East, one square north of Little's Hotel.

Temperance Ammunition.

Next to a full stomach and a clear conscience, is a pocket full of tracts to a temperance lecturer. And as we are just entering into the last battle with rum in this State, it becomes us to be well furnished with all of the above ammunition. At the Tract Depository in Mr. Merrill's Book Store, can be found as good Temperance Tracts as our language contains. They can be had in quantities, or put in packages just fitted to the pocket. And we can assure our readers that one of these packages look much better in the pocket than a pint flask of whisky would. We had the pleasure too, not long since, of sending to New York for a quantity of Maine Law tracts, for the Daughters of Temperance in this city. At the Depository of the American Temperance Union, 149 Nassau street, New York, the genuine article can be obtained. At Mr. Merrill's, as above, a good assortment of Tracts, in German, can be had. Wake up to this work—circulate the documents—scatter tracts—enlighten the people, for success in this cause, to be worth anything to us, and to be permanent, must rest on the intelligence of the masses.

Make way for "No License."

Returns come in rather slowly from our late election; but, on the whole, what we have received are as encouraging as we could expect. A goodly array of our leading towns outlaw the business of rum-selling. Considering all the influences we have had to contend against, we will put the Railroad City at the head. Old Alcohol made a desperate rally. It seemed as if the very dram-shops themselves were coming to the polls. Some of the jugs did come;—and perhaps the jugs might as well have voted, as some of those that brought them—for the jug was often the soberest of the two, and had least whisky in it. But temperance triumphed, as it always will on a fair field and in open battle. And now it only remains that Indianapolis give to all her sister cities a pattern of mild but firm and efficient enforcing of the law. We put Indianapolis at the head of the column; but perhaps our neighbor, Lafayette, will be disposed to dispute the palm. Our brethren did do well in Lafayette. We had had many misgivings concerning the result there. Our observations there last winter had led us to suppose that the liquor interest was very strong in that city. At that time, one could see some of the finest brick buildings, new and old, devoted to the traffic—wholesale and retail;—low doggeries sat crouching down upon the banks of the canal, ready to seize upon the watermen the moment they set their foot upon land. Alcohol had all his forces in active operation—heavy artillery, infantry, and rangers. But in the face of all this discouragement, there was one hope. It is a good old promise, "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." We did hope that the revival of religion enjoyed in Lafayette last winter would lead to all such good works as purifying the place of intemperance, &c. Such fruits are fruits meet for repentance. We rejoice to see them now; and we need only say to our friends in Lafayette, enforce the law.

Other places fall gallantly into the line—Jeffersonville, Lawrenceburgh, Richmond, Greencastle, South Bend, &c., not to mention the half of those who have decreed the downfall of Alcohol, so far as their own precincts are concerned.

But on the other side appear some few names we had hoped to see with us. Aurora, with its gigantic distilleries, is perhaps consistent in voting "license;" but what excuse can Madison render? Friends of temperance in Madison! is it from supineness that you have suffered the day to go against you? Then, during the coming year, with your repentance for past neglect, blend such efforts that when we chronicle the result of next year's vote, you may stand with us on the side of "no license." And it grieves us, too, to write Terre Haute among the delinquent. We had certainly counted on a different result there. The city certainly occupies ground now very different from what its name indicates. We had regarded Terre Haute as one of the garden spots of our State, both for beauty and for morality. Perhaps we were correct, for we remember now that the tempter did his first work in a garden, as see Gen. 3d chap. And we have a promise, too, that Eden bloom shall yet spread over our earth and efface the trail of the serpent. And may we not look, too, for the speedy redemption of Terre Haute from her present thraldom? Tell us, did your clergymen speak out from the sacred desk? Did your wives and daughters and sisters plead as they should around the fireside? Can your Division-rooms bear witness to your wakefulness before the election? and then did all who love order, and sobriety, and peace, go up to the polls and vote "no license," and after all were you defeated? Nay, verily. No one took the locks of Sampson and his strength with them, till he went to sleep in the lap of a Delilah; and truth is rarely overcome, even for a time, except when its friends are remiss.

It is important now that even the defeated should not be discouraged. Remember the day of battle comes again next year; and if you have failed this time, then gird yourselves up for the next contest—in the meantime doing your utmost to counteract the evils that will flow from the disastrous decision "license," wherever such a decision has been made.

Drinking in Indianapolis.

It seems to us sure that our city has seen more drunken men on its streets within the past week than during any previous week. Why is this? Is it that now, as the old license laws are removed, every one disposed thereto, regards himself as at liberty to retail? It would almost seem so. We see men coming up out of cellars, and out of "saloons" that have red curtains before the windows, and out of certain groceries, smacking their lips and rubbing their stomachs even as aforetime. And the monster even shows his hydra head where previously it has not been visible. Here is matter to be looked to. It is enough for most of our citizens to know that a law has been passed forbidding any practice; they at once and spontaneously discontinue that practice. So will all good citizens do. But there is one class that does not belong to this honorable number. Laws may be solemnly enacted by our Legislature, and forcibly endorsed by the people at the ballot-box, and yet these men will pay no attention to them. Like some boys at school, they get no ideas but what are driven into them with the rod. It would seem now, that there is a class of our fellow-citizens who are not at all aware that we have a statute forbidding the retailing of intoxicating liquors, and that sec. 3 of that statute reads thus:

"Any person offending against the provisions of the preceding sections shall, for each offence, be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred dollars."

Now, where are the appointed guardians of this city? Where are those whose duty it is to see that our laws are executed? Do they reply that they wait for information to be brought against retailers, and that then they will act? But the true state of the facts is already as palpably before their eyes now, as before those of any other citizen. We do hear that some miserably low Irish doggery is occasionally broken up—and that is well so far. But, gentlemen, that is not laying the axe at the root of the tree. These low doggeries are only the fragrant flowers and ripe fruit that grow on the topmost branches of the system.—The roots of this deadly Upas are the fashionable drinking places. The keepers of these flatter themselves they belong to the upper crust. But they are mistaken. They are the foundation stones that bear up the whole immense structure. They are merely the front porches to the lowest doggeries. They are the purveyors, the whippers-in, the pimps; they scare up the game, while only the bald-whisky dealer, who inhabits some cast-off shanty, is in at the death. If, then, we would dry up the stream, begin at the fountain. The whole business, from the doggery down to the saloon,—and that is as low as you can get,—is now outlawed. And it will be a burning disgrace to our city, if we go to thrashing round valiantly among a few of the "finishing shops," and dare not touch the places that are the head and front of the whole offending. Nothing would please the saloon keepers better than to have all the low doggeries exterminated. Then, fellow-citizens, if our city officers lack information, let us see to it that they are supplied. As every man is personally interested in sustaining the law, let us see to it that all transgressors, small and great, are brought to justice. A man who has knowledge of a transgression of law, and does not communicate information of that transgression to the proper person to take notice of it, becomes accessory to the crime—so all law and common sense declare.

☞ "Wissing & Balke, two Germans, who have been selling liquor in the south-end of town, were taken by the Marshal before Mayor Scudder yesterday, for violation of the new law prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors. Seven cases were proved on them, which cost them sixty-five dollars fine and costs. They promised to quit the business."—Journal.

The above extract shows how our new law is destined to work, if we can have it efficiently executed. And why should our city officers be obliged to enforce the law upon any one? Since our Legislature in its wisdom has enacted a law making it penal to sell liquor, without a license, except in certain specified cases, and since the legal voters in this township have sanctioned that law and forbidden the granting of license, and that too by an impressive majority, why will not all our citizens conform to the law? Why will not those who have hitherto been engaged in the traffic now prove themselves to be good law-abiding citizens, and quit the prohibited business? We call upon them to do so. No man certainly can say that his conscience binds him to sell liquor. God requres no man to sell liquor, but forbids it. Then we appeal to all to come out manfully and give up the traffic—let ALL abandon it. One hotel cannot plead now that a liquor saloon is necessary in order to compete with other hotels. It is forbidden everywhere, and when all obey the law then all will be on an equality. Now, gentlemen of Capital House, of the Wright House, of the Palmer House, and of every other house, show your respect for law by bowing to its requirements, and your sleep henceforth will be sweeter, and all good men will honor you.

The Sunday Liquor Traffic.

Our new law prohibits the selling of liquors on the Sabbath even where license is granted to retail on other days—this is a wise provision; for our earth witnesses no more monstrous perverson than that of turning the sacred day of rest into a day of drunken reveling and debauchery. And in all our principal towns great need is felt of the enforcement of this provision. How often are our peaceful sabbath evenings disturbed by the shoutings and whoopings of home-going bacchanalians! This seems like setting up a dram shop fast by the gate of Heaven; for is not our Sabbath designed to be a type and foretaste of Heavenly rest. Last Sabbath, at noon, we encountered on the side walk a genteelly dressed young man so intoxicated that he could stand with difficulty. His appearance did not indicate that drinking was a fixed habit with him. Perhaps, instead of going to the house of God, he had strayed into some saloon to pass off the time, and there drank with some companion for sociability's sake. All his actions indicated that he was not accustomed to being intoxicated. Perhaps it was the first time. Whose heart would not bleed at such a spectacle? a young man of respectable appearance reeling through the streets at noonday, on the sabbath!

A Suggestion.

What we most need now is firm but kind actions. The wind-work has been done, a law has been passed, and an election too has gone by. All are looking now to the friends of Temperance to see what they will do next. Some retailers are probably confident, judging from past experience, that nothing will be done to enforce the law, and they are expecting to have a good time of it, scraping up the hard earnings of those whom they can persuade to exchange their money for poison. Others are not quite so sure the law will not be enforced, and they are keeping a sharp look-out too see which way the wind blows, intending to trim their sails accordingly.—Many eyes are fixed upon us to see what is to be done. Of these obervers, some watch us in hope, some in fear, and some in scorn and hatred. In these circumstances we must ACT or we shall richly merit the contempt of those who oppose us.

Now why cannot the ladies, either the Daughters of Temperance, or all who are interested in the subject, take a share in this work? A vigilance committee of ladies of half a dozen, would do more than half a regiment of men. Their moral influence is greater. They can do the thing up in the right way, too, for we do not want bluster and noise and threatening; but a firmness that will let no transgressor go unwhipt of justice, blended at the same time with a mildness that would disarm opposition. We throw out the suggestion now, intending to say more about the ways and means at another time.

A correspondent hands in the following: What the punishment for editorial plaguarism is we have never learned, and though this seems a pretty plain case, yet we presume if the Dr. were here, would extend pardon to the culprit on very easy terms.

Stolen Thun er.

Doctor Gordon, in an article to his correspondents upon writing for his paper, makes the following remarks:

"It is always a real gratification to us to receive well written communications from the friends of Temperance in different parts of the State; but it seems to us that those who can write seldom try. On the other hand we are in the constant receipt of letters, which have no merit either in their subject matter, or the manner in which they are written. We cannot publish any article that has not some claim to originality or artistic finish; and, however it may disappoint the writer, we will not.

The readers of the "Chart" will remember that these remarks were made by the Dr. on the 30th of March last.

It appears that Daniel G. Mark, editor of the "Greenup (Ill.,) Tribune" had been badly bored by numerous persons who were not competent to write a decent article for publication. "Harken oh ye heavens, and give attention oh earth" to what he says to them. He bursts forth in the following language.

"To CORRESPONDENTS.—It is always gratifying to us to receive communications from our subscribers and friends, that are calculated to be of general interest, and further the cause of justice. But it seems that those who are capahle of writing an able article seldom try, and that those who cannot are constantly trying. We are in constant receipt of communications which have no merit, either in their subject matter, or the manner in which they are written. We cannot publish any article that has not some claim to originality or artistic finish, and although we may disappoint the writer we will not.

Truly, "great is Diana of the Ephesians."

All the readers of the "Chart" know that Dr. Gordon is not at home, and for one, I am not willing for other persons to steal his thunder while absent. The editor of the Tribune knew full well the Dr. was at the South, and eagerly embraced the opportunity to show his correspondents that he was some "punkins." He desired to show them some of the original productions of his (?) prolific brain.

What have you to say Mr. Mark about the above charges. Is it true or not.—Please answer in your next. J. C. B.

Indianapolis, April 12.

SUPREME COURT OF VERMONT ON THE LIQUOR LAW.—This Court has passed a decision on the constitutionality of the Maine Law in Vermont. The Christian Repository says:

"The decision embraces and sustains several of the most important principles of the Vermont Liquor Law—such as the right of search and seizure without a warrant, in certain cases—the right to anticipate and prevent evil in society—the right to destroy property in cases where the public good requires it."

☞ It is our painful duty to record the death of Bro. G. W. HULETT, who died of apoplexy on the 24th of March, at the residence of his father in Montpelier. The deceased was a faithful member of Montpelier Division, No. 237, and an ardent friend of the Temperance cause.

Appropriate resolutions were adopted by the Division.

A CALORIC ENGINE ON THE OHIO.—We are informed that a responsible business house in this city has contracted for the building of a first class packet boat, to run hence to St. Louis or New Orleans, which is to be propelled by a caloric engine. All honor to the men who first introduce Ericsson Engines on the Ohio.—Cin Gaz.

Items of News.

☞ Petitions have been presented in the Nova Scotia Legislature with 25,682 signatures, praying for a prohibitory law.

☞ During the past year 114 persons died of delirium tremens in New York city. This is a very large number, considering that no one dies of that disease, who has either money or friends.

☞ One of the most interesting relics in Philadelphia may be seen in North Second street, viz: the first lightning-rod erected by Dr. Franklin, which still points its attenuated fingers towards the heavens.

☞ Florida has a white population of less than fifty thousand—smaller than any other of the thirty-one States—yet St. Augustine is the oldest town in the United States, having been founded in 1564.

☞ The household furniture of the late Hon. Daniel Webster, was disposed of at Washington by auction, and brought very high prices. There was great anxiety among those present to purchase, and everything was readily sold. Many of the relics were bought at prices double their value. Among other things an ordinary looking cane seat chair was sold for $15, an old common clock $39, and other things in proportion.

Railway Accident.—The train of cars on the Baltimore and Ohio Railway ran off the track, seventy miles west of Cumberland, on the afternoon of the 27th. The locomotive, when running round a curve, was thrown off the track, and it and two cars, containing fifty passengers, were precipitated down an embankment one hundred feet in depth, and in descending, the cars turned over four times. It is stated the accident was unavoidable. Fourteen persons are said to have been killed and most of the other passengers severely injured.

☞ "Come in, Joe, and let's take a drink." "Thank ye, Thomas, can't afford it." "Well, but I'll pay for it." "Oh, I'm not speaking of the money." "What then!" "Loss of health and energy; for I tell you what it is, Thomas, I find it up-hill business to work steady on, under liquor—it does well enough for half an hour, and then I get lazy and moody, want more, and become reckless, and that's why I can't afford it; so here's home to dinner."

☞ The influence of the rumseller is always exerted to make their infatuated customers believe that the temperance people are all enemies of the drinking man. How false—and yet large masses of the latter are made to believe the lie. Thus are we kept from reaching the hearts of the drinking man.

☞ There is some talk in England of introducing the Maine Liquor Law. There are in England 130,000 houses open for the sale of intoxicating drinks, at a cost of £65,000,000 annually.

A Liquor law, more stringent than the old one, passed the Maine Legislature, on the 25th inst., by a vote of nine-four to forty-three.

The Maine Liquor Law was killed in the Assembly of Wisconsin, by one vote.

It is stated that the whole number of books published in the United States during the year 1852 was 1,288. Of these 322 were reprints of English books and translations, leaving the 966 as the number of American works.

The King of Sweden, in consideration of the great scientific practical value of Lieut. Maury's labors, has ordered that the Swedish navy co-operate with this officer, by making observations according to the form prescribed for his "Wind and Current chart.

Wisconsin, with a sparse and emigrant population, has a school and University fund of $850,000, and outlay for the instructing of her children of $120,000; 90,000 of her 120,000 children have attended school during the past year.

Natural Phenomenon.—On last Friday night our streets were covered with a yellow powder not unlike Sulphur; it was tasteless, and fell in the shower of rain.—The same occurred at other and remote places at the same time. The whole air seems to have been impregnated with it. It is said to be the principle of fecundity in flowers, contained in the stamen, which Botanists term Pollen. The hope is expressed that there will be no lack of flowers this season, because of the waste of this principle.—Exchange.

In the late California news, it is stated that a remarkable stone has been found near Columbia, in Tuolumne county. It is said that the stone has been scientifically tested, by Dr. Banks, a graduate of the Medical University of Louisiana, who pronounces it a diamond of very rare purity. It is about the size of a pigeon's egg; but it is still, of course, in the rough. If it is a diamond, and the report about it is true, its value is enormous. The Crown Diamond of England, which is valued at ten millions of dollars, can bear no comparison with it. It is to be brought to New York.

World's Temperance Convention.

The gathering at New York for a mutual Industrial Exhibition by the different civilized nations, is likely to prove of more benefit than was first suggested. As progress depends upon the extermination of error, and the establishment of truth, in every branch of society, moral, political and religious, we trust that the Temperance movement now on foot, may be carried out successfully; and that while our people, and those of other nations, are engaged in exhibiting their works of art, etc., they will not forget to give their attention to this important element in the progress of nations and wellbeing of mankind. The following article upon this subject is from the New York Tribune:

"It is judiciously suggested that a World's Temperance Convention be held in our city at some time during the approaching World's Fair—say in August next.

"We hope the suggestion will be appropriately seconded and generally responded to. We would have no one neglect his business and devote time and means that he can ill spare to this object; but in every State, and almost in every county and considerable township or village, some one can be found who will naturally be coming to our city at some time during the Fair, and who will readily consent to time his visit so as to attend the Convention if due notice thereof be seasonably given.

"We have no excessive estimate of the value of Conventions. We readily concede that time and effort might possibly be otherwise employed so as to aid the Temperance cause more than by attending remote conventions; but we believe a movement like that contemplated will not diminish but rather increase local exertion. And beside, it will tend to convince the doubting or indifferent that the friends of Total Abstinance are in earnest—that they are determined not to remit their efforts until Alcohol is universally recognized as a poison, and so spurned by all save those intent on suicide."

☞ Another argument for the discontinuance of the rum traffic, was exhibited in this city on Friday last. A woman—a mother, with her child in her arms—was taken to the jail by the officer—drunk! She passed up Genesee street, reeling and chattering, her features clothed in the sickly smile of drunken idiocy.

It is seldom that our blood is more fiercely stirred. The disgrace which such a scene stamps upon a community, will redden the cheek with shame; but the rascality, worse than cruelty, of thus degrading womanhood, heats the blood in every vein. Innocence slumbering on her breast of drunkenness! A tear comes unbidden at the thought.

It would be but a slight expression of our feelings were we to wish that those who sold the woman rum, might go to jail with their victim. We would like to see their backs cut with a cool hundred well laid on. Were the woman one of our kindred, by the higher law of the right arm we would seek that protection which laws do not afford, from fiendish, cent-plundering scoundrelism, and avenge the outrage upon decency and womanhood, by leaving a brand which should fade out only at the grave.

—"Property" is at stake, and all that's womanly must be blotted out, and the infant at the breast be educated in a school of drunkenness and prostitution! Devils may stand down and human brutalizers go up.—Cayuga Chief.

A Match for a Distiller.—A distiller went to hear a reformed drunkard, thinking to brow-beat him by his presence.—The reformed man, with much eloquence compared Alcohol to Juggernaut, and said he had a temple in that place, pointing to the distillery, whose floor was strewed with human bones, and if he had a chance, he should like to preach a sermon there. On coming out, the distiller said, "So, my old fellow, you would like to preach a sermon in my temple, would you? When will you come?" "Soon as you get a congregation together," said the reformed man. "And what will be your text?" was asked. "Out of the belly of hell, cried I, and thou heardest my voice!" The distiller was posed.

☞ We have often heard of trees in Oregon that were so tall that it took two men and a boy to look to the top of them; but the following account of a tree in Jackson county, Ind., as given by the Jackson County Democrat, is pretty hard to beat in its dimensions:

The largest tree, perhaps, that can be found this side of Oregon, is a sycamore standing on the land of Stephen Crabb, near this place. It measures 89 feet in circumference and has a cavity measuring in diameter every way 23 feet. This tree is large enough to make a commodious depot for the Ohio and Mississippi railroad. We suggest that it be appropriated to that use.

English Maine Law.

It appears from the St. John's (New Brunswick) Temperance Telegraph, that the English Government has, in two instances, recently put in force laws of prohibition against the sale of intoxicating drinks. At the Australian gold mines the sale of liquor is positively forbidden, and the Government officials have authority to burn to the ground all shops or shanties used for the purpose of vending the interdicted article. And, by an act "relating to the carriage of passengers by Sea," which received Her Majesty's sanction, June 20th, 1852, it is provided that

"If in any passenger ship any person shall, during the voyage, directly or indirectly, sell, or cause to be sold, any Spirits or Strong Waters, to any passenger, he shall be liable for every such offense to a penalty not exceeding Twenty pounds, nor less than Five pounds Sterling."

How direct and pointed is the testimony which such regulations as these bear to the pernicious and evil effects of the use of intoxicants? Why are they prohibited? Because, in the cases under consideration, peace, quietude and good order are essential, and strong drink promotes rioting and disorder, stimulates every evil and malignant passion into activity, sets laws and rules at naught, and renders good government impossible.

☞ Our British brethren of New Brunswick are as wide awake upon the subject of Temperance as we, as the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted at a recent Temperance Convention will show:

Resolved, That the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, is the cause of a very large proportion of the ills which afflict communities, in producing crime, poverty, disease and demoralization.—Carried unanimously.

Resolved, That it is the duty of all Governments to legislate for the happiness, comfort and prosperity of the people; to prevent, not to protect evil; to remove, not to patronize or regulate it.—Carried unanimously.

Resolved, As the opinion of this meeting, that it is the duty of Temperance men to exercise their influence in securing the return of such Representatives to the Legislature as will pledge themselves to advocate such Laws as will secure the annihilation of the traffic in all intoxicating beverages.—Carried unanimously.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every holder of office under Government to aid in sustaining and carrying out the laws of such Government, and that the course pursued by the Magistrates of this county at the last general Sessions, in granting licences for the sale of intoxicating liquors for twelve months, was at variance with the spirit of the law passed at the last session of the Legislature, to prevent the traffic in intoxicating liquors, prejudicial to the best interests of the inhabitants of this county, and subversive of the kind and benevolent intentions of Her Majesty towards her loyal subjects in this Province—Carried unanimously.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this Convention, no person should be appointed to any responsible office who is not practically a Temperance man.—Carried unanimously.

Singular Coincidence.—A letter from England, dated December 31, 1852, published in the Church Register, has the following curious passage:

"Such of your readers as may have studied the subject of prophecy, will perhaps recollect a curious work of Faber's, published between thirty and forty years since, and entitled the 'Sacred Calendar of Prophecy.' In this book the author described the dynasty of Napoleon as the seventh head of the 'secular beast' representented in the Apocalypse as sustaining Rome. He predicted the revival of that dynasty under a new Napoleon, who would finally, in alliance with the Papacy, meet with utter destruction. Recent events have brought to remembrance this interpretation, and a few have been struck with the fact, that the numeral letters in the word LVDOVICVS, (the Christian name of the Emperor) amount to the mystical 'six hundred three score and six.'"

Death of the Oldest Man in New England.—Mr. Charles Wiley, of Nottingham, N. H., died on the 23d of January, 1853. He was born in that town on the 25th of March, 1746, and would consequently have been one hundred and seven years of age last month. He was a soldier in the revolutionary war, and has been a pensioner. He has been a healthy, robust man, and until recently has been an active laborer. According to his own account he learned to mow when he was ten years of age, and used his scythe until he was a hundred; he then left it, as he thought ninety years was long enough for any man to follow that business. He has left a son, Mr. Jonathan Wiley, between 70 and 80 years of age, who is also a pensioner for services in the war of 1812.—Portsmouth Journal.

Character for the Young.

Character is every thing to the young, as it is the surest means of success in life. It is better than the most ample fortune; it is better than honorable parentage; it is better than the parentage of rich and powerful friends. A young person of established character, of virtuous principles, of good conduct though he be poor, and left to his own unaided efforts, will rarely fail to make a way for himself in the world. He may be assailed by misfortune, he may lose his health or fall into adverse circumstances, and so be embarrassed and oppressed in his course; but as a general rule, it cannot be questioned, that a fair character, a character for intelligence, virtue, and worth, is the surest pledge of success in life. For many years I have been accustomed to watch, with great interest, the fortunes of the young in their progress in life; and long since have I come to the settled conclusion, that in so far as success is concerned, whether in the learned professions, or in the ordinary business of men, character, virtue, intelligence, a well regulated mind and heart, is of higher value than heirship to the richest estate; than all outward advantages whatever. Such an estate, such advantages are apt to inflate with pride, to lead to imprudence, to idleness and vice; and where this is the case, it takes but a short time to squander a fortune and bar every door to respectability and happiness. But character, I repeat, never fails. It makes friends and subdues enemies, creates friends, opens the gates of opportunity, draws around its possessor patronage and support, makes him a sure and easy way to wealth, to honor and happiness.

Woman.—A California State Senator, speaking upon some bill affecting the property or business of women, pays them a handsome tribute thus:

"I love woman: I have loved her all my life—through boyhood, youth, manhood, and mature years. I expect to love her all my life, and dying, to be found still faithful to the same high and inspiring sentiment, for amid all the varied scenes, temptations, struggles and hopes of existence, one star, brighter than all others, haslighted and guided me onward. If I had any high and noble ambition, the exciting energy had been in the approving smile coming from the eye of woman. And I judge that her influence is upon others. Gentle in her affections, yet mighty through her influence, her medium of rule is as powerful as the ballot-box. She has ruled me from my boyhood with the soft and winning influence of her virtues and her beauty. I remember my first love; my baby affections at four years of age. I have been in love nearly every month of my life since, save the dark and rayless days and years which succeeded the desolate hearth and made the heart too desolate.

And never, sir, while I remember my mother, long since in her grave—I remember the night she died—never, while I hold in my memory one other—and her memory is all that is left me—shall I refuse to give my voice, my influence and my vote, for any measure necessary to protect and cherish the weaker and better part of creation, against the oppression, neglect and abuse of my sex."

Increase of Intemperence.—There has been a fearful increase of drunkeness in our State sincet he decision of Judge Curtis against the constitutionality of the liquor law. In Scituate, Foster, and several other towns in the neighborhood, the change in the habits of a large class of people has been such that the enemies of the law openly remark upon it, and admit that some restraints are necessary to save them from complete ruin. Drunken revels are kept up through the day and through the night, and men are found by their friends horribly bruised, and mutliated, and frozen. We have heard of instances of this charactar, which sicken and almost freez the life-blood. All admit that we must find a remedy for this state of things, and nearly all admit that prohibition is the only thing practicable. Temperance men will sit down by nothing short of this. Let them labor for it earnestly and persevereingly, and in the meantime do all they can to save from utter destruction those victims of the traffic for whom the law did so much.

The pathway of the inebriate is lined with rum shops, and dangers beset him at every corner. Said a weeping drunkard in one of our friend Joy's meetings not long since, "I cannot now go to meeting or to mill, for my appetite controls me, and I cannot resist temptation. But pass the Maine Law and I could die a sober man, and I think, go to Heaven. Without it, I must die a drunkard. There is a tear in every word. And yet men who know not the strength of the devil which binds the drunkard, will deliberately place temptations in his path, endangering ruin in two worlds.—Cayuga Chief.

☞ Have patience, oh quiet, hoping heart! What is denied to thee in life, because thou couldst not bear it, the happy moment of death bestows.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Silence is the best course for any man to adopt who distrust himself.

The reason we are so changeable in our friendships is, that it is difficult to know the qualities of the heart, while it is easy to know those of the head.

What men have given the name of friendship to is nothing but an alliance, a reciprocal accommodation of interests, an exchange of good offices; in fact, it is nothing but a system of traffic, in which self-love always proposes to itself some advantage.

Love of justice in the generality of men is only the fear of suffering from injustice.

Reconciliation with our enemies is only a desire of bettering our condition, a weariness of contest, and the fear of some disaster.

When we are tired of loving we are very glad of some act of infidelity towards ourselves to disengage us from our own fidelity.

It is more disgraceful to distrust one's friends than to be deceived by them.

Our mistrust justifies the deceit of others.

How can we expect another to keep our secret if we cannot keep it ourselves?

Self-love increases or diminishes in our eyes the good qualities of our friends in proportion to the satisfaction we derive from them, and we judge of their merits by the kind of intercourse which they keep up with us.

Every one complains of his memory, and no one complains of his judgment.

There are no people who are so troublesome to others as the indolent: when they have satisfied their indolence they wish to appear diligent.

The greatest ambition has not the least appearance of it when it finds the absolute impossibility of reaching the height it aspires after.

The mark of an extraordinary merit, is to see those most envious of it constrained to praise.

To undeceive a man persuaded of his own merit, is to do him as ill a service as that rendered to the Athenian madman, who fancied that all the vessels entering the harbor belonged to him.

Old men are fond of giving good advice, to console themselves for being no longer in a position to give bad examples.

Died, on Saturday evening, the 9th inst., at 9 o'clock, Mrs. Julia Ann, consort of John R. Elder, after a sickness of nine days, of Puerperal Fever.

Indianapolis, April 11, 1853.

At a called meeting of Sigourney Union, No. 3, D. of T.; on motion of Sister Bassett a committee of two was appointed to draft resolutions pertaining to the death of Sister Elder.

The following preamble and resolutions were presented and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Death has once more entered our little band, and removed from our presence Sister Julia A. Elder, one of our most efficient members, thereby admonishing us of our mortality, and reminding us that "even in the midst of life we are in death," therefore,

Resolved, That we remember with mournful satisfaction the many virtues of our departed sister, and that we imitate her example in her untiring zeal in the cause of Temperance, her unwavering integrity and unbounded philanthropy.

Resolved, That this dispensation of Providence not only reminds us that we are gradually passing from earth, but it also behooves us to be diligent in every good word and work.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved husband and friends our sincere condolence for the loss they have sustained, feeling confident that our loss is her eternal gain.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded upon the minute-book of our Union, and that they be sent to the Locomotive and Temperance Chart for publication.

Julia A. Anderson, } committee.
Anna C. Baggs. }

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

We are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.
Manufacturers of
Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,
Of Every Size and Description,
Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.
CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does. Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—Cheapest of all.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No. 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Lococks Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hcking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN
Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,
North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.
Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.
Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,
Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different sets of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

---

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHEs,
South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq, the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D, Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First— To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.
june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,
DEALERS IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.
Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

For the Cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all treee for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med. College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen. Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili
Rt. Rev. Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. Doct. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archibishop Pursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

---

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.
CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,
Dealers in all kinds of
Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,
WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY
BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1853. NO. 44.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post paid.

OFFICE—In second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, - - - $0 75

☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 5000 copies.

One Square (12 lines,) for one week, - -	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion, -	25
" " for 3 months, - - - -	3 00
" " for 6 months, - - - -	5 00
" " for 1 year, without alteration, -	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes, - -	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisments.

Cuts double the above rates.

☞ Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday of each week, to insure insertion.

☞ Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

Keep Steadfast on your way.

Ho! ye who start a noble scheme,
For general good designed—
Ye workers in the cause that tend,
To benefit your kind—
Mark out the path ye fain would tread,
The game ye fain would play,
And if it be an honest one,
Keep steadfast on your way.

Although you may not gain at once
The points you most desire,
Be patient—time can wonders work—
Plod on, and do not tire;
Obstructions, too, may crowd your path.
In threatening stern array,
Yet flinch not! fear not!—they may prove
Mere shadows in our way.

Then, while there's work for you to do,
Stand not despairing by—
Let "Forward" be your cry,
Let "Onward be your cry,
And when success has crowned your plans
'Will all your pains repay,
To see the good your toil has done;
Then droop not on your way.

The Child's Garden.

BENEATH the budding lilacs
A little maiden sighed—
The first flower in her garden
That very morn had died.

A primrose turf, transplanted,
And watered every day,
One yellow bud had opened,
And then it pined away.

I thought, as that child's sorrow
Rose wailing on the air,
My heart gave forth an echo,
Long bound in silence there.

For though time brings us roses,
And golden fruits beside,
We've all some desert garden,
Where Life's first primrose died.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Friends of Prohibition

In counting on the friends and foes of the Maine Law, it would be natural to put all those whose appetites have taken them captive, on one side, and that the side of opposition to the law. Those who reason thus, however, make a most decided mistake. Among the friends of that law are many who are conscious of the little power for good in them. As a sample of the way in which such men reason, the following from the Congregationalist, may be taken.

"Some months since, when the adoption of the 'Maine Law' was about to be submitted to the suffrages of the people in a neighboring State, I had occasion to be driven a short distance in a covered carriage from a railroad depot in that State to a village a few miles off the track. Upon taking my seat in the carriage I found I had for a driver a man whom I had known when I was a boy, as one of the young men then prominent in the circle of young people as the 'prince of good fellows.'—His appearance was very changed from what I remembered it in those times to which my thoughts instantly carried me back.—The change was not one for the better. There were manifest signs in his face, and person and speech, that excesses at the bowl had wrought sad havoc upon him.

Said he, "I s'pose you don't remember me; though I know you."

"Oh yes I do," I replied, "though you have altered a good deal since I have seen you."

He seemed to feel it, and was silent for a moment, then without any very remote transition began again.

"I am working hard for the election."

"Well, how is it going?"

"Oh," said he, "I am a whig; I always was a whig, and I always mean to be—I go that ticket."

"What," I inquired, "Liquor Bill and all?"

"Yes sir, if I never was a whig before, I would be now, to put that bill through."

Had I mistaken the character and cause of the change I had noticed in him! I looked at him again to correct or confirm my judgment. He seemed to understand the significance of the glance and went on.

"Yes, I go for that. They laugh at me at the tavern there for that. They all know I like a glass of rum and take it too. But I tell them I am the very man to vote for that law. If ever a poor fellow knew what such a law would be worth to him, I am that man. I do love rum, and I do drink it, and I will have it as long as I can get it; I can't help drinking it when I see it, and I can't keep away from it where it is."

The tears started out of his eyes.

"Well," he resumed, "it will be a happy day for my wife if ever that bill becomes a law."

"I remember her I think."

"Well, she's been a good wife to me, and she'll be glad when there's no more rum to be had."—Ex.

Who will be Injured.

It is generally acknowledged that the evils of the Liquor Traffic are lamentably great, and that instead of diminishing they are rapidly on the increase. That some system of prevention is called for, is no less widely conceded.

acted for hundreds of years. Acts, almost innumerable, and as diversified as the conditions of society under which they have originated, loudly and plainly proclaim the long admitted need of something to meet and subdue them. And yet, after all that has been done, the curse still riots unchecked in our midst, and thousands pay to it a compliant tribute ten times more cruel and degrading, than was ever wrung from man under the worst and most tyrannical system of human servitude the world ever saw. This has not been for a day, or a week, or a year, but from time immemorial, in greater or less degree, as the traffic has been limited or extended.—Nor have these evils been confined to any particular class or condition of men. None so high as to escape them, and none so low that they have passed them by. A cry of lamentation and woe for the loss of a 'first born,' has gone up from almost every house in the land.

Who will be injured by the destruction of the traffic? There are many imaginary injuries to be inflicted in the result of our success, we are well aware. But have they a foundation in sound reason? As a beverage, all experience, physological investigation, and even the most casual observation abundantly demonstrate that alcoholic drinks of every name, are, without exception, perniciously hurtful. As true is it, that they are an unparelleled bane and curse of social and domestic life—a breeder of contentions, inspirator of crime, destroyer of labor, and multiplier of taxes. This position we need no argument prove.

Who, then, with any show of reason, can put in a claim of being injured in the event of the success of the friends of temperance. Classify them, and we have the distiller, the trafficer, keepers of houses of ill-fame, proprietors of gambling hells, all others who pander to the depravities and vices of men, undertakers and grave diggers. These would be the important sufferers, by the passage of a prohibitory law, although we might throw in a part of the secular press and a score of petifogging politicians, to make up the compliment.

For the accommodation and support of these, (if we leave out undertakers and grave diggers, whom, we trust, will pardon us for the association,) the continuation of the traffic is demanded, which demand, if it is worth anything, is worth a thousand times more for prohibition than against it. The cholera, small-pox, and all other forms of pestilential disease that afflict and depopulate the world, could they reason and 'utter speech,' would, no doubt, as earnestly plead to be let alone, and with just as much propriety. There is nothing that prospers from the sale of, or has an existence in alcoholic drinks, that deserves heed or consideration from any man or body of men. Hence we conclnde that no real interest or condition of things established in truth, would be injured or hurtfully touched, was the whole beverage traffic annihilated to-day.

From this hot-bed of vice and corruption springs the opposition which is taken up by the deluded and misinformed, and all others who can, by rewards or the fear of punishment, be brought in to the rescue. Of such, there is always a surplus in every community—those, who for gain, political emolument, and party elevation, would sell their birth-right—would not scruple to take the place of Judas—only let them hear the ring of the thirty pieces of silver.

Shall we heed the opposition, or the more worthy and intelligent claims of the cause? On its side are arrayed the virtuous and the philanthropic of every sphere in life; connected with these are other thousands; the mothers, wives, fathers, husbands and children that are now suffering or have suffered the unspeakable evils of the traffic. On which side is it right and most honorable to be found arrayed? Pressing upon you are the claims of all that is holy and just; and to that God who sitteth in judgment, and whom, perhaps, you profess to serve, must you answer for your decision. The hand of death is even now near unto many who may be saved from it, or consigned to its cold grasp, by the part you take in this matter. The fate of many now ready to perish, hangs suspended on the action of our next Legislature. Perchance, you may save and restore them to health, happiness, and the world, or doom them to suffer on, and perhaps to die, bruised and crushed by the tyrant wrong.—Advocate and Home Circle.

happened in one of the towns of Arkansas. A man had been drinking untill a late hour at night, before he started for home. honest folks had been long in bed, and the houses were all shut and dark. The liquor he had taken was too much for him; he did not know where to go. He at last staggered into an empty wagon shed, and fell upon the ground. For a long time he lay in the unconsciousness of a drunken sleep, and would have undoubtedly frozen, for the snow on the ground showed the night to be very cold, had not others less insensible than himself been around him. This shed was a favorite rendesvou for the hogs, who rushed out when the new comer arrived, but soon returned to their bed. In the utmost kindness, and with the truest hospitality, they gave their biped companion the middle of the bed; some laying on either side of him, and others acting the part of the quilt. Their warmth prevented him from being injured by his exposure. Towards morning he awoke; finding himself comfortable, and in blissful ignorance of his whereabouts, he supposed himself enjoying the accommodations of a tavern, in company with other gentlemen. He reached out his hand, and catching hold of the stiff bristles of a hog: exlaimed, "Why mister, when did you shave last."

☞ A SOUTHERN paper says: A dentist at Washington has taken out a patent for generating gass from simple wood. This is no idle fiction. We exanined the works and saw the light burning in juxtaposition with that created from the Scotch coal, and it was equal to it both in purity and brilliancy. The inventor has entered into a contract with a company in Wilmington, North Carolina, to light up that town with this meterial. Pine wood, with which that country abounds, is preferred to any other, and the gas generated from it costs comparatively nothing. It is estimated that every house in Norfolk and all the public lamps can be lighted for a sum not exceeding a dollar per night. This is almost as cheap as moonshine. the apparatus for generating the gas is extremely cheap and simple, and we expect in a few years to find it in universal use—accessible alike to the poor as well as the rich.

☞ HIT 'EM AGAIN.—"Go it old fellow," said two idle scapegraces to an honest laborer at work—"Work away while we play—sow and we'll reap."

"Very likely my lads," replied the old man, coolly, "I'm sowing hemp."

It is a proof of very little friendship not to notice a cooling in that of our friends.

Gentlemanly Accomplishments.

Swear! Out upon such common attainment. So do the lowest and meanest that swim in the sinks of vice and drunkenness. There is not a ruffian who cannot boast the same accomplishment. Every reeking den of deviltry has its proficients. The most degraded of humanity can swear as roundly as you. Hark! You hear it on the Highway. In every spot where tipplers congregate the oath is part of every breath. At night it comes with fearful distinctness from the dram shop. And yet you are as proud of your foul-mouthed weakness, as though the vilest of earth could not boast of the same.

Chew Tobacco! A loathsome spitting machine, eh! Beautiful and interesting apparatus truly! A self-spitting squirt-gun to eject the filthiest compound in creation! A lama on two legs bespattering all within your reach, without provocation even! And because you eat tobacco and spit out the juice with mock dignity, you are a gentleman! Ho! Ho! the race of fools are not yet extinct. Why you slavering beast, it is no rare accomplishment to eat tobacco! You can't make your mouth fouler than the old vagabond who spends a shilling he has begged for the rum and a pound of plug. He can act as filthy as you can. Can't you believe it? See him spit once! Mark the dark lines from each corner of his mouth, and the noisome stains of his shirt bosom. Rare accomplishment indeed for a gentleman!

Drink Champagne? Ha! Ha! Dear sir, the whole land is full of just such suckers. The raggedest, wiry haired, red nose, blear eyed old bloat in christendom, can get as rich and foolish and as drunk as you can. And what's the difference?—From the actions, a looker on could not determine what liquor the two had got drunk on. The one spews in the gutter and the other in his room. There is a [illegible] of drunkenness. The common sot can get as "owly" on common whisky, as you can on pure champagne. You drink with respectable tipplers and drunkards, he with those who are graduated in the common whisky cellar.

You are a gentleman, are you? Why are you? Go well dressed, do you? And so that makes a gentleman. Your whole aim of life is to adorn your person in a fashionable suit of clothes, practice a most unnatural gait and whirl before the glass. A fine suit of clothes, sir, cannot give a man a heart. You wear a moustache or imperial! and so does a goat. A face may be covered with hair and no brains in the head. Bear's grease and a fashionable twirl are all your dependence.

[FANNY FERN.

Persian Proverbs.

The man who returns good for evil, is as a tree which renders its shade and its fruits even to those who cast stones at it.

A man passes for a sage when he seeks for wisdom; but if he thinks he has found it, he is a fool.

The diamond fallen into the dung-hill, is not the less precious; and the dust raised by high winds to heaven, is not the less vile.

An ass which bears his burden, is of more worth than a lion which devours men.

Patience is a tree whose roots are bitter, but the fruit is very sweet.

Ten men can sleep tranquilly upon a mat; but two kings are not able to live at peace in a quarter of the world.

A PROMISE.—A promise should be given with caution, and kept with care. A promise should be made by the heart and remembered by the head. A promise is the offspring of the intention, and should be nurtured by recollection. A promise and its performance, should, like the scales of a true balance, always present a mutual adjustment. A promise delayed is justice deferred. A promise neglected is an untruth told. A promise attended to, is a debt settled.

☞ SET not your judgment above that of all the earth; neither condemn that as falsehood which agrees not with your own apprehension. Who gave you the power of determining for others? Or who has taken from the world the right of choice?

HON. Jonathan Phillips has made the liberal donation of five hundred dollars to the U. S. Agricultural Society.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

We are mistaken in supposing that intellect and judgment are two different things. Judgment is merely the greatness of the light of the mind; this light penetrates into the recesses of things; it observes there every thing remarkable, and perceives what appears to be imperceptible. Thus it must be allowed that it is the greatness of the light of the mind which produces all the effects attributed to judgment.

Every one speaks well of his heart, but no one dares to do so of his head.

Politeness of mind consists in the conception of honorable and delicate thoughts.

Gallantry of mind consists in saying flattering things in an agreeable manner.

It often happens that things present themselves to our minds in a more complete state than we could by much art make them arrive at.

The head is always the dupe of the heart.

It is not all who know their heads who know their hearts.

Men and things have both their proper points of view. Some require to be seen near to be judged well of; others are never so well judged of as at a distance.

He is not reasonable man who by chance stumbles upon reason; but he who derives it from knowledge from discernment, and from taste.

To know things perfectly, we should know them in detail; but as this is almost infinite, our knowledge, is always superficial and imperfect.

It is a species of coquetry to make a parade of never practising it.

In youth the tastes are changed from heat of blood; in old age they are preserved from habit.

The defects of the mind, like those of the countenance, augment with age.

There are some good marriages, but none that afford many delights.

We are inconsolable at being deceived by our enemies, and betrayed by our friends; and yet we are often content to be so by ourselves.

The more we love a mistress, the nearer we are to hating her.

Nothing is less sincere than the method of asking and giving advice. The man who asks it appears to have a respectful deference for the opinion of his friend, while he intends to make him approve of his own; and he who gives the advice repays the confidence shown in him by an ardent and disinterested zeal, though, in the advice he gives, he has generally nothing in view but his own interest or fame.

Young Men.

There is no moral object so beautiful to me as a conscientious young man. I watch him as I do a star in heaven; clouds may be before him, but we know that his light is behind them, and will beam forth again; the blaze of others' popularity may outshine him, but we know that, though unseen, he illuminates his own true sphere. He resists temptation, not without a struggle, for that is not a virtue—but he resists and conquers; he hears the sarcasm of the profligate, and it stings him—for that is a trait of virtue—but heals with its own pure touch. He who says in his heart, but not with his lips, "there is no God!" controlls him not; he sees the hand of a creating God, and rejoices in it.

Woman is sheltered by fond arms and loving counsel; old age is protected by experience, and manhood is protected by strength; but the young man stands amid the temptations of the world like a self-balanced tower. Happy he who seeks and gains the drop of morality.

Onward, then, conscientious youth, raise thy standard and nerve thyself for goodness. If God has given thee intellecutal power, awake in that cause. Never let it be said of thee, "He helped to swell the river of sin by pouring his influence into its channels." If thou art feeble in mental strength, throw not that drop into a polluted current. Awake, arise, young man! assume that beautiful garb of virtue! It is dificult to be pure and holy. Put on thy strength then. Let truth be the lady of thy love—defend her.—Mrs. Caroline Gilman.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS
Ino.073
v.2#44

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1853.

☞ We received a communication from the Cambridge City Division, S. of T., requesting us to say to the members of the Grand Division, which meets there on the 26th, that the public house in that city knows as the "Mansion House," kept by J. Cunningham, is strictly a Temperance house, and is every way worthy of patronage. We did not recive this communication until our last No. was printed, or we should have then inserted it.

☞ Every township in Scott County voted "No License," notwithstanding every effort was put forth by the groggery keepers and their servants to prevent such a result. A correspondent tells us that one the members of the Legislature, and an infamous doggery keeper of New Lexington, labored side by side in defense of their whisky drinking and whisky selling rights.

ONCE MORE TO YOUR POSTS!

The election of municipal officers for this city, which is to take place on next Tuesday, is scarcely less important in its bearing on the cause of Temperance, than the election which has just passed. An effort will be made at the ensuing election to mollify, practically, the late decision "No License." Men are in nomination mon cause with the defeated liquor sellers, and whose votes stand recorded against our Temperance law—men who, if elected, will act an important part in the administration of that law. We ask no man's politics in this election; we only ask, what is his position with respect to "No License." Friends of TEMPERANCE! once more answer with authority, through the ballot-box, "Who shall administer our laws?"

Somewhat for our Farmers.

At Bradshaw's, a few days since—where almost everything is found that is good for temperance folks to eat and drink—we saw a barrel of butter just brought from Cincinnati, and made in the northern part of Ohio. The sight of it led to a good many reflections. It is in this way our railroads will bring about an equalization of the comforts and luxuries of life over all parts our country. It shows an activity in business too that is commendable. But then, it strikes us, our farmers ought to be a little ashamed of the fact that our citizens are compelled to go to Cincinnati for butter. During all this Spring, we have found it exceedingly difficult to procure butter, at even higher prices than they are paying in Cincinnati for it. Why is this? Our State is certainly not deficient in natural resources—our broad prairies and fertile fields are not surpassed in productiveness by any part of our country; everywhere the farmer is invited to exertion, and everywhere his exertions are richly repaid. But notwithstanding this our markets are but scantily supplied with many articles considered necessary. To account for this, we must suppose there is some deficiency in enterprise on the part of our farmers. They need to wake up more fully to their interests. When an article becomes scarce, and bears a good price, they should be ready to furnish it. Every farmer should have some cows giving milk in the spring of the year, when other cows are dry. In this way they would greatly accommodate their customers, and bring good profits to themselves—when fruits and vegetables are scarce, they should be ready to take advantage of the demand. In summer and autumn, when butter, eggs, fruits, &c., are a drug in the market, all come flocking in then with a supply, get poor prices, and become disgusted with the attempt to make any profit by such means. Now who would run into the garden with his watering-pot while it is raining in torrents?

But there is another difficulty. Too many of our fertile acres are cultivated to feed the immense distilleries which are pouring a tide of death and woe through our land. Too many of our farmers feel that if they can raise a hundred acres of corn, they are doing a great business, and when they take their corn to a distillery and get the money for it, they count up the pile, and think themselves getting rich rapidly; while the fact is, the nett profits of a small farm, with a dozen cows, poultry, vegetable gardens, &c., are far greater than on any corn field in the State. The sooner the fires of our distilleries go out, the better; and the sooner the efforts of our husbandmen are directed to supplying the real necessities of man, and not ministering to his basest passions, the better.—Let habits of drinking be extended among our population—let the production of whisky be increased, and soon we shall not only have to go to Ohio for our butter, but to New York for our hogs, to Pennsylvania for all our coal and iron, and anywhere out of our own limits for mechanics to build our poorhouses and jails. But give us a temperate, industrious, and moral people, (and the last qualities will be found where the first is,) and in a few years the sun will not look upon a happier and richer commonwealth than that of Indiana.

Is the Dealer in Intoxicating Drinks, as a beverage, a criminal?

This question is a plain one, admitting we believe of a plain answer and therefore we wish to discuss it in a few successive paragraphs in this paper in plain language. We wish to use plain language, not only because the question is a plain one, but because we wish to be understood. We are not tilting for amusement or with rye straws, but we are called to do battle for some of the dearest hopes and sweetest desire that the naked spear point of truth may ring upon the rumseller's armor with a sound that will show him we are in earnest. The best reason we should not discuss this question, as it appears to some, is, it does not need discussion; because the public mind is already sufficiently enlightened on the matter. There is some force in this reason we confess. And then too, it seems almost like an outrage upon our moral sense to question the matter at all, as to whether the liquor seller's business is an immoral business or not; for does not the moral sense of every right thinking man respond at once—"of course it is all wrong—no question about it?"—Such certainly is the response. The most troublesome business the dealer has to do is to keep down—silence the voice of this inward monitor. The chink of his victims money in his drawers is the music that comes nearest to it, though even this does not always avail.

To come directly to the question then, Is the dealer in intoxicating drinks a criminal?

A criminal is a violator of law divine or human.

In the case of the liquor seller we can easily show that he violates laws both divine and human, and his violations have all those qualities, too, which go to enhance the guilt of the perpetrator.

At the bar of common sense and an enlightened judgment, let him confront his business with the plain precepts of God's law, and how does it abide the test? Let him confront his business with the plainest obligations which bind us as members of society, and how does it abide the test?—Let him confront it with the plain requirements of human laws, and how does it abide the test?

To begin with the highest authority—

The traffic in ardent spirits violates the plainest precepts of the Bible.

Here we are met by the assertion that the Bible no where expressly forbids this traffic. Even if we were to admit that the Bible does not mention the traffic by name, and say in so many words that it is wicked, what then? Ardent spirits were not known for hundreds of years after the Bible was written, and this would be a very good reason it should not mention them by name. But does it follow that nothing is criminal but what the Bible mentions by name? The Bible says nothing about gambling, about counterfeiting, about forgery, and about duelling; that is it does not specify these crimes by name. Are they any the less wrong because they are not so specified? If the Bible were to name all the immoralities of which man is guilty, it would have a catalogue so long that the world could hardly contain it. No! the Bible has a better way of pronouncing upon immoralities. It lays down general principles which cut up all immoralities by the roots. It strikes at once at the foundation of things. Human legislators, in their imperfection, must enter into the minutest specifications, and then rogues will elude all their enactments. But the divine Legislator has given us an enactment so concise it may be written on a sixpence, and so comprehensive that a flaw has never yet been detected in it. Instead, then, of aiming a single passage here and there against the traffic, the whole spirit of the Bible is against it—its whole influence is to overthrow it—the whole broadside of its denunciations is poured in upon it. If any ones till insists upon express passages, does the Bible give any doubtful hint when it says—"WOE unto him that giveth his neighbor drink"? If the man who is putting his bottle to his neighbor's lips does not see the woe pointing its artillery, and if he does not know who is meant by that woe, then what can open the eyes of one so blind?

☞ The editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican exhorts as follows. Hear him, ladies. He speaks feelingly, as if he knew. Do leave all spouting before promiscuous audiences to the men. Most of them are ugly enough to get up anywhere without being at all abashed by glances of admiration. And many of their mouths, and throats, too, have gone through such a process of tanning, with tobacco juice, that speaking doesn't hurt them any more than it would an old boot leg. According to our way of thinking, there is much draws—

"We respect, admire, and love a female woman. We amire her in the beauty of her person, her moral presence, and her position; we respect her simple truthfulness and innocence, and we love her as the embodiment of the highest charms and sweetest attributes of humanity, But a male woman, who can bear? We cannot read of monster meetings, in which women perform the most conspicuous parts; of lectures on the subject of marriage, to promiscuous audiences, by female tongues; and of the perambulating female spouters, without an involuntary emotion of disgust. Many of these women are mothers, who have families of tender age at home, and husbands who should have tender heads. Home duties are forsaken, and the misguided mistresses go about teaching other people their duties! What comfortable wives they must be! What kind and assiduous mothers! How they must hallow a home that is too small to hold them!—Gods of war! We would as soon live with a hyena or a steam engine! Don't come this way, we beg of you!"

☞ Here is one of the many beautiful thoughts to which Fanny Forester has given expression—

"Oh, let me die in the country, where I shall not fall, like the single leaf of the forest, unheeded; where those that love me need not mask their hearts to meet the careless multitude, and strive as a duty to forget me! Bury me in the country, amid the prayers of the good and the tears of the loving, not in the damp, dark vault, away from the sweet scented air and the cheerful sunshine, but in the open fields, among the flowers I loved and cherished while living."

Who would not be buried in the country, and have HEART-MONUMENTS to stand above his grave?

GLASS PENS.—Wonders will never cease. Glass is now made into all sorts of things. There is cloth manufactured in England of glass, and it has even been used as the mainspring of a chronometer and answered well for such a purpose; but for a pen to be made of glass, who would have believed it? Yet it is so, and most excellent pens they are. It is well known that with a flux of lead in combination with the silicon in right proportions, glass can be made very ductile. The pens are now becoming not uncommon, and they are perfectly anti-corosive by the most impure ink.—Scientific American.

A Laughable Notice---Yet a Proper one.

We are indebted to the Warrington, (N. C.) News for the following advertisement, which was posted up in a tavern, while the Legislature was in session. Mine host it seems was an honest, well-meaning fellow, who had conceived the idea, that the members of the Legislature were the salt of the earth, and had listened to the complaints of certain of them, relative to the doings of a few wilder characters, who did not belong to the fraternity. Here is the notice which he posted up in the most conspicuous place in the house.—Ohio Organ.

LOOK HERE!—The following rules of order will be observed in this Hotel—"Members of the Legislature will go to the table first—and the gentlemen afterwards."

After reading it over he did not exactly like it—it did not say anything about drunkards, rowdies and blackguards. So to caution them particularly, he added:

N. B.—Drunkards, rowdies, and blackguards will please not mix with the members of the Legislature, as it is hard to tell one from the other."

If it were not that our Legislature does not meet again for two years, (let all coming generations call our constitution-makers blessed for this,) we would lay away the above in our drawer, till what time it could be of practical benefit to certain of our own law makers we know of; but we fear it would get lost, and it is too good for such a fate as that.

Rhode Island.

The vote on the anti-Liquor law is to be had in Rhode Island on the 6th of April, The Advocate says:—"We can assure our distant readers that the Temperence men of little Rhoda are now walking up. Everywhere in the State the cry is to the work! We have a host of lecturers on the field—more than appear by the appointments in our paper—and a guard in reserve which will come to the work when necessity calls for them. In almost every town, the people are moving not wildly and blindly, without order or purpose, but yet earnestly and strongly forward. There is no unnatural and unhealthy excitement; but an interest is felt which was never felt before, and a determination is fixed which cannot fail of its object."

EARTHQUAKE IN CANADA.—We find the Journal:

Evident signs of an earthquake were felt on Sunday morning last, for several miles around this neighborhood. Just about 5 o'clock, A. M., a heavy shock was felt, accompanied by a rumbling sound, as if hundreds of heavily laden wagons were passing the street; then followed three other shocks, which caused every thing to tremble to its very centre. It was felt in the neighborhood of Grimsby, Jordon, Thorold, the Falls, Queenston, and Niagara. At Fort Mississaugua everything reverberated again with the crash. The cause of this unaccountable freak of nature has not as yet been ascertained, but we have no doubt it has had its origin in the Niagara river, or some part of Lake Ontario adjacent to this neighborhood.

Pneumatic Telegraph.

In a few weeks we expect to be able to present engravings of a pneumatic telegraph, invented by J. S. Richardson, of Boston, which prssents features of a new and important character. This kind of telegraph is composed of a tube, which, by exhausting the air from it by a steam engine working a huge air pump, is intended to send packages from one place to another through it with great velocity. The idea of sending packages in this manner from one place to another is not new, many attempts have been made to carry it out, some of which we have witnessed.—Mechanical difficulties, however, have prevented the success of such a desirable mode of expressing parcels, and these it is believed have been overcome by Mr. Richardson. His atmospheric tube telegraph and railway is very ingenious, and in a tube one mile long, it has operated successfully for some time. We will present a more full description of the invention when we illustrate it. A joint stock company is about to be formed for a line of this telegraph, between this city and Boston.—Scientific American.

The San Francisco Bible Society, according to the accounts by the late papers, held its 3d anniversary in December. During the past year the number of Bibles issued was 4,119, being an increase of 1400 copies over the preceding year. Several new local societies have been formed, from Humbolt on the north, to Los Angelos on the south, and through the mining regions from Shasta to Sonora. Thirteen hundred copies in Spanish had been given away, and several copies in Chinese, some of which had been received with great eagerness.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

EDITOR OF THE CHART:—In an article entitled "the World on Fire," in the April No. of the "Literary Miscellany," we noticed a great error concerning the increase of temperature as we descend into the earth; it says, "the rate of increase is one degree for every foot of descent." Now supposing this to be true, we would have the temperature of boiling water at the depth of 212 feet, and that of "ignited rocks," at a depth of about a quarter of a mile. These conclusions are far from correct; the true average increase of heat, is about one degree for every 54½ feet of descent—giving us the heat of boiling water at the depth of between two and three miles, and that of granite in a state of fusion, at the depth of about 21 miles.

The internal condition of the earth has been, and is, a subject of much interest among philosophers, and one about which there has been some difference of belief. Some assert that beneath a crust of from 40 to 100 miles in thickness, the earth is a liquid incandescent mass; that originally the whole earth was a liquid globe of fire; that it cooled by the radiation of its heat to the surrounding medium until the surface became solidified into a crust, which has continued to increase in thickness up to the present time, although the increase now is very slow indeed—so little heat passing, from the centre to the surface, that it has been estimated, that the surface temperature is only one-seventeenth of a degree higher, than it would be if the central part of the globe were ice. Another theory is, that as the superficial portions of this fiery globe cooled and solidified, they sank towards the centre, while the hotter portions arose to occupy the surface, and so on, until the earth was solidified, from centre to circumference. The former theory is the one generally maintained. The evidences of it indeed amount almost to a demonstration. In fact it is only by this view, that satisfactory explanations can be given of the phenomena of volcanoes, earthquakes, boiling springs, &c. These billows of fire are rolling beneath our feet; they shall roll for ages after we have passed away (should the earth continue); for so slow is the cooling process at present, that it will require millions of years for it to cool one degree.

HESPERIUS.

PETERSBURGH, April 6th, 1853.

EDITOR TEMPERANCE CHART:

At a regular meeting of the Pike County Family of Temperance, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we consider it an imperative duty in us thus to express our thanks and obligations to the Hon. Wm. Hawthorn, our present Senator from the counties of Pike, Gibson, and Dubois, for the bold and efficient support of the present Temperance Law of Indiana.

Resolved, That we recognize in Mr. Hawthorn, a true friend of the great Temperance cause, and that we view with pride his course in supporting what we believe the best law in the Statute of our State.

Resolved, That he deserves the approbation of all true friends of morality and temperance in our senatorial district more particularly, and the State at large.

Resolved, That a copy of the above resolutions signed by our President and Secretary be furnished the Editor of the Temperance Chart, with the request that he publish the same.

JOHN McINTIRE, Pres't.
J. R. ADAMS, Sec'y, pro tem.

Metereology.

Our foreign exchanges [illegible] mention of a curious phenomenon that lately presented itself in the Gironde, France, being nothing less than the descent of an aerolite weighing over 90 lbs., by which a horse was killed from the injuries received. It appears that the phenomenon was seen by a child that was tending the animal, and who was some yards off at the time of the occurrence; a sudden noise like thunder at a distance, caused him to look up, and he perceived a black mass, the sight of which terrified him so much that he could not take to flight, cleaving the air and falling in the direction towards him.—Fortunately he escaped, and the mass fell upon the horse's back, which was knocked down by the blow. The aerolite has been examined by different persons, who, from a close examination, judge it to contain a large quantity of iron mixed with other earthly and metallic substances.—Scientific American.

Great names debase, instead of elevating, those who cannot sustain them.

Items of News.

It is stated that in the city of Glasgow twenty thousand people go to bed drunk every Saturday night.

The town of Newton, Mass., has voted against selling liquor for even medical or mechanical purposes.

A wild horse was recently purchased in Cincinnati for $4,000, and will be exhibited in New York at the World's Fair.

☞ True humility, the basis of the Christian system, is the low, but deep and firm foundation of all real virtue.

A Great Change.—Thirty five years ago, there were thirty distilleries in Fayette county, Ohio, and no church; now there are thirty churches and no distillery.

The House of Assembly of Prince Edward's Island has refused the prayer of 3,300 petitioners for a Prohibitory Law, only four members voting in favor of it.

Some students of the University of Prague have been sentenced to be "beaten with rods for making wanton demonstrations in favor of the traitor Kossuth."

The full vote on the question of repeal of the amended Maine Law of Rhode Island, shows a majority against repeal of about one thousand. Nearly all the principal towns voted against repeal.

In Mexico the official returns of the election of President were declared on the 17th inst., they are as follows: For Santa Anna, 17; for Uraga, 3; Ceballas, 1; Trias, 1; and one vote for whoever should obtain the majority.

On the Island of Martha's Vineyard there has not been a criminal case in any of its courts for eighteen years! Couple another fact with that: During that time not a glass of liquor has been sold on the island!

New Jersey is aroused as she never was before. They have had an immense temperance gathering, at which a silver pitcher was presented to Neal Dow, and a petition of 50,000 names was presented to the legislature. Dr. Jewett and John B. Gough were there.

Liberal.—A presbyterian of Zanesville, a Mr. Wm. Sturges, has offered to donate $10,000 for a nucleus of a library at the Methodist University at Delaware, O., if before the first day of next June, fifteen thousand dollars in cash be raised to erect a building for the same.

Queen Victoria, it is said, is haunted with an idea that she will be driven from the English throne by a revolution, and is therefore investing largely in U. S. securities. It is even said that the Barrings have purchased for her at least half a street in the city of New York.

Thirty-six years ago there were seven daily papers in New York city, whose united circulation was but 9,500 copies. Of these seven, the Commercial Advertiser and Evening Post are the the only survivors. In 1852, the aggregate circulation of but three of the New York dailies is over 100,000 copies.

The Missouri Legislature has made the following appropriations —For the erection of a Deaf and Dumb Asylum, $36,400; Lunatic Asylum, $57,000; Blind Asylum $20,000; to forward products to the World's Fair, $4,000; to State Agricultural Fair, $4,000; to geological survey of the State, $10,000.

An Artesian well of great depth is now being bored at St. Louis. It has reached the depth of 1590 feet, which is a little more than half the depth of the celebrated Artesian well of Westphalia, Germany, which is 2385 feet deep. The object of this well is to obtain other than limestone water, which is the only kind that can be found at ordinary depths in that vicinity. It was commenced in 1849.

A recent Chinese edict against the promulgation of Christianity declares that 3000 ounces of silver must be given as a reward to whoever will arrest an European minister, who shall be executed immediately; and 100 ounces of silver to whoever will arrest a native priest, who shall also be put to death. The catechists will be equally condemned to death, as also the chiefs of the villages in which they shall be arrested, and those who may have given them hospitality.

The Madiai were released from prison on Tuesday, the 15th of March, and were immediately smuggled on board the French Post Office Steamer Hellespont, and left Leghorn next morning for Marsailles.—They were not allowed to communicate with their friends before they left, and were not allowed to get their clothes which were waiting for them at the hotel. An English gentleman on learning their situation, sent them some clothes. Rose Madiai is an intelligent and interesting woman, but the mind of her husband, has been sadly injured by the privations he has undergone.

What we Labor for.

We have often been asked this question —what are you laboring for? It would seem that no answer was necessary—that the state of society would itself point out what we labor for and the neeessity of that labor.

Look at that gathering at a fair; see some of them stagering about under the vilest agency which Hell has employed to people its dominions! No sense of pride keeps that poor fellow from rolling in the mud—no love for the partner of his bosom prevents him from spending his money for Rum—no love to his children keeps him from degrading them by his drunken frolic and why? Rum has stolen his honest pride—crushed his love from his wife—and his hopes for his children. It is to prevent this we labor.

Look at this house—or hovel. There sits a poor women, plying her need with earnestness and softness that shows that she is not given to laziness. The room is scantily furnished—the furniture is broken; the crockery is in a likely condition; the clothing of the woman and the covering of the bed are scarce enough to keep the cold from her. And why is this? why does the poor woman toil thus, long and hard, and yet have so few necessaries?—She has not a depraved look—there is pride; even nobility in her eye;—and though now thin and sallow, and her eyes red with weeping, and working long long and late, she has the impression of former beauty—she has seen better days. Why is it thus, why so poor—so forlorn—so wretched? Her husband is a drunkard—and steals, yes steals her earnings, to fire his brain with Rum—It is for such as her we labor.

Look at that poor little boy selling newspapers. No shoes over his feet, his hat is minus of a rim, and shows the little fellows hair through the top; his pants have a rent at the knee, and various patches are seen on his coat. All these betoken poverty, wretchedness and woe. But why does this little boy roam the streets to sell papers—he is a child that could learn—he should go to school. His eye and brow show that he is not a dull fellow—they betoken intelligence, descision and perseverance. Ask him—"my father is a drunkard, mother is sick, and I must work thus to keep us from starving." It s ifor such as him we labor.

Look at that young tailoress girl; she is dressed neat but plainly. She is just returning to her humble home, but she carries her work with her; she will sit up late and work, that she may earn the bread she daily eats. She is strong now, but her hard labor is begining to take the roses from her cheek, the elasticity from her step, and the brightness from her eye. She will soon be worn out, and her form will be laid on a sick bed—consumption will claim her, and she must surrender—But why need she labor so, why wear out her life; Her father is a drunkard, and oft he will steal her earnings, and the comforts of life that she has purchased, and pawned them for rum! She has a mother, who is also working hard, and two or three little sisters who she is trying to keep from starving and from rags! It is for such as her we labor.

This is our work—this our end! To assist the poor—to shield the innocent to save the erring! To battle for that law which will remove all these sad evils—will make cheerful those firesides now the abode of sorrow and wretchedness! And is not this a glorious work? Is not this a work of love? Does not the present temperance man exult in the glorious cause he is pursuing? Does he not thank his God that such a noble work has been given him?—Such should be his feelings—for 'tis a noble lot, 'tis a sacred calling. And then let us pursue that calling with energy—untiring zeal—and with the blessing of God we shall succeed. Future generations will look with joy to the present, and revere the memory of those who the second time brought liberty to the land—liberty from chains of despotic Rum.—Cruisade of Reform.

National Outrage,—If reports be true a foul blotch of the depest die is to be placed upon our fair escutcheon. The chrystal palace is to be rented for a grogshop, the lessees paying $26,000 for twenty-six weeks, to deal out refreshments and make the nation drunk. At the fair in London they would not even permit liquors to be placed on exhibition; but we not only have a niche especially set apart for the poisons but the whole establishment is rented for a grog-shop! Truly, we shall be set down as a nation of drukards. Oh! shame shame where is thy blush! A nations scorn should flood at the heels of men who are willing thus to disgrace the nation in the eyes of the whole world. We hiss at such proceedings; we brand it as infamous!—Southern Organ.

A young lady, a sensible girl gives the following catalogue of the different kinds of love: The sweetest, a mother's love; the longest, a brother's love; the strongest a woman's love; the dearest, a man's love; and the sweetest, longest, strongest, dearest love—a love of a bonnet.

Rum and Death.

The Excelsior, which we are happy to see is reviving, tells a horrible fact, which occurred in Rome. A tavernkeeper winding up his rum selling, left his liquors in the bar. His own lovely little boy, aged nine years, on Sunday, went into the bar room with other little boys, and proposed to drink with them, as he had seen men do. They declined, for that it would make them drunk. To show them he was bold, he turned out a glass of the liquor and drank it. After a while, he took another. He soon showed his intoxication, became senseless, and died on Tuesday.

Another case. Rochester Advertiser says that a little boy and girl, one six and the other three years old, children of an Irish woman who sells whiskey, were found by the physician in a dangerous state. The little boy first drank of the whisky and gave to his sister. The youngest was beyond relief when the doctor came and shortly died. A dreadful punishment to a mother who does not drink herself, but makes money by selling it to others.

O rum is a poison to be kept under key, and the key in good hands.

Intemperence.—The following is the most graphic delineation of the miseries and effects of intemperence that we have ever seen. "It is from the arguments advanced by certain citizens of Portage county Ohio, in a memorial to the Legislature on the subject in 1838. And yet its march is onward still. It reaches aboard to others; invades the family and social circles, and spreads woe and sorrow all around. It cuts down youth in its weakness. It breaks the fathers heart; bereaves the doating mother; extinguishes natural affection; erases conjugal love; blots out filial attachment; blights parental hope; and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness not health; death not life. It makes wives widows: children orphans; fathers fiends, and all of them paupers and beggars. It hails fevers; rheumatics; nurces; gout; welcomes epidemic; envites cholera; imparts pestilence, and embraces consumptions.—It covers the land with idleness, poverty disease and crime. It fills your jails; supplies your almshouses, and demands your asylums. It engenders controversies; fosters quarrel; cherishes riots. It condemns law; spurns order; and loves mobs. It crowds your penitentiaries; and furnishes the victims for your scaffolds. It is the life blood of the gambler; the ailment of the counterfeiter; the prop of the highwayman and the support of the midnight incindiary.

It countenances the liar; respects the thief, and esteems the blasphemer. It violates obligation; reverences fraud; and honors infamy. It defames benevolence; hates love; scorns virtue; and slanders innocence. It incites the father to to butcher his offspring; helps the husband to massacree his wife; and aids the child to grind his paracidal axe. It burns the man; consumes women; detests life; curses God; and dispises Heaven.

It suborns witnesses; nurses perjury; defiles the jury box, and stains the judicial ermine.

It bribes voters; corrupts elections; pollutes our institutions, and endangers our government. It degrades the citizens; debases the legislator; dishonors the statesmen; and disarms the patriot. It brings shame, not honor; terror not safety; despair with the malevolence of a fiend it calmly surveys its frightful desolation, and insatiate with havoc, it poisons felicity; kills peace; ruins morals; blights confidence; slays reputation; and wipes out national honor, then cures the world and laughs at its ruin.

The Sandwich Islands.—The recent census of the Sandwich Islands exhibits some facts of startling interest, and which illustrate in the most unmistakable manner the vital law that the inferior race must give way to the stronger. The present population of the seven Islands forming the group, is 80,641. The deaths during the last year were 7943, while the births were only 1478—an average of sixty deaths to one birth. The foreigners mumbered only 1787. This is an extraordinay state of things, and we doubt whether a parallel can be found in the history of the world. In the time of Cook this people numbered 400,000; thus in seventy years they have decreased 320,000. In 1836 they numbered 108,579—decreased in 17 years nearly 28,000. Such a rapid decrease of native population is a deeply melancholy spectacle. At the preasent rate of decrease, another generation will hardly have passed away ere this people will be blotted from the earth.—Boston Jour.

British Literature.—The "New Quarterly Review," London, speaks sadly of an apparent "decadence in British Literature:"

"We have importations wholesale from America, * * * but this is not British literature. When those who have the care of the current literature of America, Germany, and France, have taken away their volumes from the mass before us, how little remains to the merely English critic."

Liquor Law in Sweden.

In Sweden, whoever is found drunk is fined, for the first offence, $3; for the second, $6; for the third or fourth, imprisonment is added to the fine, the right of voting at the elections, or of holding office, is withheld, and the offender is subject to exposure by the church on Sunday. If the same individual is found committing the same offence a fifth time, he is imprisoned six months and condemned to hard labor. If a professor of religion, it is still more severe, and he is cut off from the church. An ecclesiastic who falls under the offence loses his benefice. It is strictly forbidden to give or sell spirituous liquors to students, servants or apprentices. Whoever is found drunk in the streets or making a disturbance in a public house, is imprisoned and fined; one half of the fine goes to the informer, and the other half to the poor. Twice in a year these ordinances are read aloud in the churches by the clergy, and every tavern keeper is bound to keep a copy hung up in the principal room of his house, under heavy penalties. Under these regulations, scacely a drunkard is to be found.

The Vermont Liquor Law.—The liquor law which went into operation recently in Vermont, has one singular provision, in which it differs from those which have been enacted or discussed in other States. The section we allude to is that which provides for the arrest of a person found intoxicated, and his detention untill he will disclose where he obtained his liquor. This section of the law is likely to give considerable touble. A case under it has already arisen in the town of Woodstock. A man named Powers was arrested for intoxication, and loged in jail. On examination he was questioned as to where he obtained the liquor. He said he found it under the Uuiversalist church, and this is all the answer he would give. It was not deemed satisfactory by the justice, and Powers was recommitted. Another examination was had with the same result the man being remanded to jail. The opinion of the Supreme Court has been obtained and the particular section referred to is pronounced constitutional. Powers still refuses to divulge, and the justice says he will keep him in jail for a year unless he owns up. At St. Albans the law has been carried out in three instances. The witnesses having the alternative of a term in jail, owned up, and the liquor taken on their information was destroyed. At Rutland, the law, it is said, is executed, and the people hope to get rid of liquor entirely.—Journal.

Extraordimary wealth.—The New York Tribune translates the following from a German paper:

A rich planter, Mr. Dalabitzscher, descended from an ancient French family, recently died in New Orleans. He was a young man at the time of the first French Revolution, and fled from the guillotine to become a merchant's clerk in the Crescent City. After a time he married the daughter of a rich planter, and carried the plantation so skillfully, as in a comparatively short time to acquire the reputation of one of the richest men in Louisiana. Since his death the division of his property has shown its aggregate to be an amount, which, from a European point of view, is almost fabulous. It consisted of thirty-one plantations, upon branches of the Mississippi, affording an anual profit from the cultivation of coffee and sugar of $60,000; twelve steamboats upon the Mississippi, three on the ocean, and thirty-four merchant vessels, the aggregate income of which, at the lowest caculation, is $150,000 per annum; shares to the amount of $5,000,000 in railroad stocks, producing $250,000; seven limited partnerships in Europe, one in each of the cities of Lonon, Paris, Bordeaux, Lisbon, Cadiz, Naples and Constantinople, each producing an annual profit of $80,000, in all $560,000; cash to the amount of $7,000,000 in the bank of England, drawing two per cent, producing $140,000, making in all an annual income of $2,350,000, or about 14,000,000 frances. His property in houses, furniture, collections of works of art, books &c., were in proportion. The property falls to three heirs.

Liberty.—Some of our gin-loving neighbors are croaking and hiccuping loudly about the loss of their liberty which must naturaly fololw the passage of the Maine Law. We don't acknowledge the applictiaon of the word to any but the rumseller. It gives him a scope for liberty broader than the pirate assumes when he trifles with the purses, and then the lives of those whom he may chance to meet on the high seas. There is a town in Ohio, containing less than 2000 inhabitants, where the same rumseller's liberty is enjoyed, and out of that number they succeed in giving one man every month, on an average, the supreme felicity and sweet liberty of going to the grave, a miseraple, debaced, and degraded drunkard. This is the liberty which is so highly prized by the rummies and which they are so fearful of loosing.—Crusader.

A Touching Incident.

A correspondent of the Knickerbocker, writes from Albany the subjoined touching incident:—

"Although we are unacquainted, I cannot well resist communicating the following circumstances to you. Mr. S——, whose residence is next to mine, had a son six years of age last winter: and we a daughter of the same age. So fond were the children of each other's society, that the commands of the parents were all that prevented them from being in each others' company both night and day. About a month since, the boy was attacked with the scarlet fever, and soon after died. The next day I took our 'Fanny'—who mourned, and mourned deeply, her loss—to see the remains of her former playmate.

I think I never saw mental agony so strongly depicited in one so young; until, after gazing perhaps a minute at the remains, she turned calmly to Mrs. S——, and with a tremulous voice asked her if she might 'pray for poor willie;' but without waiting for an answer she kneeled beside a chair, and with clasped hands and face turned heavenward, recited the Lord's prayer. There was about a dozen persons present, but not one with unmoistened eyes. Friend Clark, that child is loved; but with all the love her parents bear her, I cannot beleive she is loved on earth as she is loved in heaven. May good sngels watch over her.

Plain Truth.—Girls that are daily gadding the streets in silks, while their poor mothers are sweating in the kitchen in linsey, will make miserable wives, if men are foolish enough to marry into such a tribe. If they succeed in getting husbands, which appears to be the object of their lives their only chance of happiness is in the fact that men of talent will not have them, and the ones they get are two big fools to discover their unworthiness. They seem to think if they can gain the man, no matby what means, their object is accomplished, that he is caught, and must make the best of it. Poor fools! they ought to know the heart must be bound, as well as the hand, or happiness will vanish with novelty, and misery be the household God and preside over the family circle.

"As well may heavenly concord spring,
From two old lutes without a string,
Or none besides the bass—"

as happiness from such a union. At least so say the—School Mistress.

Condition of Southern Europe.—A correspondent of the Boston Traveler, writing from Florence. says:

"Italy is troubled to her heart's core. In Florence we can not, of course, learn the true extent of the late revolutionary movements at Milan. Rimini, Mantua and elsewhere. We only know that blood has been shed on both sides, and the scaffolds are again erected. On the part of the Italians, the movement was premature, but at present all Italy is one volcano, slumbing it is true, but acquiring strength for an eruption that will eventually force foreign despotism and civil papacy from its soil. The deep, silent hatred borne to the priests and Austrians is frightful. It pervades the very atmosphere, and is drawn in at every breath by all classes but the few sold to their rulers by interest or circumstances.—Disguise it as we may, there is a general uneasiness in Europe. Monarchs and Governments distrust each other; the people distrust both; peace is maintained bp bayonets.

☞ An address is in circulation, signed R. H. Walworth, of New York, Neal Dow, of Maine, and others, inviting the friends of temperance in each State and in Canada to appoint some person or persons, to meet in the city of New York on Thursday, the 12th of May next, at 9 o'clock, A. M. to make arrangements for holding a great temperance convention during the World's Fair.

We give away nothing so liberally as advice.

Acknowledgments.

Of R. Miller, Noblesville, 75; E. Hitchens, Williamsport, 1 00; P. M., Knightstown, 1 00; J. C. Baker, Mt. Auburn, 25; Geo. Robinson, Jeffersonville, 1 00; J. W. Shell and A. Feather, Bainbridge, 1 00; Charlotte Norton, Laporte, 1 00; M. J. Howard, Boloxi, Miss., 75; C. C. Tuttle, Lafayette 75.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

We are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. Woodward, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. Eliza Richmond, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.
Manufacturers of
Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,
Of Every Size and Description,
Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.
CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does. Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—Cheapest of all.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost Instantaneous relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hcking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfuly testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. Locock's Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. Locock's Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS. and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS
WHOLESALE DEALERS IN
Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Stationery, Notions, Trimmings, Groceries, Hardware, Queensware, and Glassware,
North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street. New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.
Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.
Leonard Jewell, President.
James Peacock, Treasurer.
John C. Sims, Sec'y and Actuary.
Thos. S. Smith, Solicitor
John F. Bird, Fred. A. Fickardt, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. Life Insurance benefits our successors, while Health Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD. Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. Mothershead, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,
Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
Wm. Burnet, President.
S. W. Reeder, Sec'y J. W. Donohue, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. Richard M. Hall. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.
Also:
General Agency for the sale of
Grand and Subordinate Regalia, Emblems, Costumes, &c., for the Orders of Masons, Odd Fellows, Temple of Honor, Son, Daughters, and Cadets of Temperance. oct27 1y

---

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,
South side of Washington. between Illinois and Meridian streets,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture. Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commenmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott. Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting Five Dollars, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,
DEALERS IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.
Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all treee for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would sufficate me when I laid down. Having used many r medies without much relief, I at last tried the Cherry Pectoral which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

Dr. Ayer, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
Edward Hitchcock, M. D. LL D.,

J. C Ayer. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

President Perkins, Vermont Med College.
Prof. Silliman, Yale College
Prof. Valentine Mott, New York.
Prof. Cleaveland, Bowdoin Med. College.
Prof. Butterfield, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen Emanuel Bulnes, President of Chili
Rt. Rev. Ed Power, Lord Bishop of Toronto
Rev. Dect. Lansing, Brooklyn, New York.
Archibishop Pursell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

---

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.
CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,
Dealers in all kinds of
Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,
WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY
BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy. Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1853. NO. 45.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.
OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:
Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.
☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,)	for one week,	$0 50
" "	for each subsequent insertion,	25
" "	for 3 months,	3 00
" "	for 6 months,	5 00
" "	for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" "	for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Advocate and Home Circle.

The Battle.

BY VIRGINIA F. TOWNSEND.

Ye fling no silken banners
Upon the morning air,
The booming of your cannons
No mountain echoes bear;
We hear no distant mutter—
Of armed men—the tread,
Nor watch the white plumes flutter
Upon the warrior's head.

And yet 'ho! for the battle!'
And throw your plough-shares down,
And leave your meek-eyed cattle,
Amid your furrows brown;
For wild the voice of wailing
Along our shores doth rise,
And on their breezes sailing,
It reacheth to the skies.

For round those hearth-stones holy,
Where in the by gone day,
Our fathers knelt them lowly—
Our fathers knelt to pray;
There now a shadow sleepeth—
The shadow of a foe—
And there the young child weepeth,
And woman's sad tears flow.

Ye arm not for the battle,
Ye gird not for the strife,
Yet fiercely must ye grapple,
As though for love and life;
Ye gather 'neath no standard,
Ye sheath no weapon bright,
'For God,' your only watchword,
'For God, and for the Right!"

Then rouse ye to the battle,
And dream not of delay,
Our land has worn the shackle
For many a weary day;
The angels hang above you
Their truce-flags, long and bright,
And God, who watcheth o'er you,
Shall smile upon the Right.

NEW HAVEN, March, 1853.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Beautiful Maniac.

"The fire that in my bosom burns,
Is lone as some volcanic isle."

In the morning train from Petersburgh, Virginia, there was a lady closely veiled, in the same car with ourselves. She was dressed in the purest white, wore golden bracelets, and evidently belonged to the higher circles of society. Her figure was delicate, though well developed, and exquisitely symmetrical; and when she occasionally drew aside her richly embroidered veil, the glimpse of her features, which the beholder obtained, satisfied him of her extreme loveliness. Beside her sat a gentleman in deep mourning, who watched over her with unusual solicitude, and several times, when she attempted to rise, he excited the curiosity of the passengers by detaining her in her seat.

Outside the car, all was confusion; passengers looked to their baggage, porters running, cabmen cursing, and all the usual hurry and bustle attending the departure of a railroad train. One shrill warning whistle from the engine, and we moved slowly away.

At the first motion of the car, the lady in white started to her feet with one heart-piercing scream, and her bonnet falling off, disclosed the most lovely, and yet most unhappy features we ever contemplated. Her raven tresses fell over her shoulders in graceful disorder, and clasping her hands in prayer she turned her dark eyes to heaven! What agony was in that look! what beauty too, what heavenly beauty, had not so much of misery been stamped upon it. Alas! that one glance told a melancholy tale.

"————she was changed
As by the sickness of the soul; her mind
Had wandered from its dwelling, and her eyes
They had not their own lustre, but the look
Which is not of the earth; she has become
The queen of a fantastic realm."

Her brother, the gentleman in black, was unremitting in his efforts to soothe her spirit. He led her back to her seat; but her hair was still unbound, and her beauty unveiled. The cars rattle on, and the passengers in groups resumed their conversation. Suddenly a wild melody arose; it was the beautiful maniac's voice, rich, full, and inimitable. Her hands were crossed on her bosom, and she waved her body as she sung with touching pathos:

"She is far from the land where her young hero sleeps,
And lovers around her are sighing,
But coldly she turns from their gaze and weeps,
For her heart in his grave is lying!

"She sings the wild songs of her dear native plains,
Every note which he loved awakening—
Ah! little they think who delight in her strains,
How the heart of the minstrel is breaking!"

Her brother was unmanned, and he wept as only man can weep. The air changed, and she continued,

"Has sorrow thy young days shaded
As clouds o'er the morning fleet?
Too fast have those young days faded,
That ever in sorrow were sweet?
If thus the unkind world wither,
Each feeling that once was dear;
Come, child of misfortune come hither,
I'll weep with thee, tear for tear."

She then sung a fragment of the beautiful hymn:

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

Another attempt to rise was prevented, and she threw herself on her knees beside her brother, and gave him such a mournful entreating look, with a plaintive, "Save me, my brother! save your sister," that scarcely a passenger could refrain from weeping.

Again the poor benighted beauty raised her bewitching voice to one of the most solemn sacred airs:

"Oh where shall rest be found, Rest for the weary soul?"

and continued her melancholy chant until we reached the steamer Mount Vernon, on board of which we descended the James river; the unhappy brother and sister occupying the 'ladies cabin." His was a sorrow too profound for ordinary consolation; and no one dared intrude so far upon his grief as to satisfy his curiosity.

We were standing on the promenade deck, admiring the beautiful scenery of the river, when, at one of the landings, the small boat pulled away from the shore with the unhappy pair, en route for the Asylum at ———. She was standing erect in the stern of the boat, her head still uncovered, and her white dress and raven tresses fluttering in the breeze. The boat returned, and the steamer moved on for Norfolk.—They were gone! that brother with his broken heart, that sister with her melancholy union of beauty and sadness.

"Mr Paradox occasionallya takes some of the stiffening out of his dignity, when chatting at home with his wife. Said he, yesterady, at the breakfast table—

"Pray tell me, Sally, in what respect I resembled a Union Party man when I returned from Daboll's champaign supper, last evening?"

"I don't know' I'm sure," replied the worthy lady, as she poured out the coffee.

"Because," said Paradox, laughing loud enough to be heard half a mile, "I knew no North, no South, no East, no West!" —Boston Herald.

A RAILROAD has been opened between Chicago and La Salle, and the Tribune of the former place congratulates themselves upon the event.

Black-Eyed Joe.

Two or three years ago I went into a town in the state of New-Hampshire, to give a temperance lecture. There were not many persons in the village who did not drink intoxicating liquors. But many persons came to hear me, and I noticed, just as I commenced speaking, a little bright-eyed boy, just about your age, who came into the hall, and sat down near the door. He listened very attentively; and when I spoke of the cruel treatment of wives and children from intemperate men, I saw him more than once take his handkerchief and wipe away the tears. I told them the pledge would prevent all this, and make men kind and pleasant; and I told the children to sign it, if they would prosper and be happy in the world. This little fellow was almost the first to put his name down; and when I asked the people who he was, they told me he was called Black-eyed Joe, and that his father was one of the worst drunkards in town.

It was his custom every morning to mingle rum and sugar with water, and pass it round to every one of the children, who took a little, as well as the father and mother. He would drink again at eleven o'clock, and at noontime, at four o'clock, and at supper; so that when evening came, he would always be intoxicated, cruel and revengeful. Sometimes he would beat his wife; sometimes beat his children, or shut them out of doors in the cold storms. It was this that made Joseph weep, when told of cruelty to children, and it was this that induced him to sign the pledge.

He went home from the meeting determined to keep his resolution. The next morning, as usual, his father took out the brown jug, wiped the pitcher of poison, and handed it to Joseph first. He shook his head, and declined taking it.

"Drink, Joe!" said his father.

"I do not wish for any again, sir," replied Joseph.

His father looked at him sternly a moment, and then said roughly, "Did you go to that temperance meeting, Joe!"

"Yes, sir," he replied.

"Did you sign the pledge?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did you that for, Joe?"

"Because, father," said Joseph hesitatingly, "if I am ever a man, I do not want to be as you are."

His father blushed, turned pale, stood confused a moment, and then opened the door and dashed the jug and pitcher to pieces, saying, "You shall have a father, Joe, that you won't be ashamed to be like!"

From that hour he has never taken any thing that can intoxicate, and is happy himself, and renders his family happy also; and I will venture to say that Joseph will have an answer ready for any one who asks him, "What good it will do" to sign the pledge?

"Uncle Edward, you may put my name down," said Henry, "and I thank you for telling me the story."

So saying, he put on his skates, went off upon ice with a quick motion, to tell the story of Black-eyed Joe to his companion.

[Sunday School Advocate.

A BEAUTIFUL IDEA.—I cannot believe that the earth is man's abiding place. It cannot be that our life is cast up by the ocean of eternity, to float for a moment on its waves and sink into nothingness. Else why is it that the glorious aspirations which leap like angels from the temple of our hearts, are forever wandering about unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and the cloud come over us with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off and leave us to muse upon their faded loveliness? Why is it that the stars who hold their festivals around the midnight throne are set above the grasp of limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And finally, why is it that the bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view and then taken from us, leaving the thousand streams of affection to flow back in Alpine torrents on our hearts? We are born for a higher world than that of the earth; there is a realm where rainbows never fade—where the stars will be put before us, like islets that slumber on the ocean—and where the beings that pass before us like shadows, will stay in our presence forever!

IT is estimated, by the San Francisco papers, that an increase of at least 75,000 was made to the population of California, during the year 1852.

Getting Married.

During the last summer a little incident occurred in one of the Eastern towns, which afforded some amusement to the spectators at the time, and furnished food for considerable gossip thereafter. It occurred in church, on one of those quiet Sunday afternoons, when all the world seems ready to drop asleep—when the flies buzz lazily, on the window panes, and the dog lies on the door-stone.

The afternoon service had ended, and the congregation were arraigning themselves for the benediction, when, to the great astonishment and manifest interest of the worshippers, the good parson descended from the pulpit to the desk below, and said in a calm, clear voice:

"Those wishing to be united in the holy bands of matrimony, will now please come forward."

A deep stillness instantly fell over the congregation, broken only by the rustling of silk, as some pretty little girl or excited matron changed her position, to catch the first view of the couple to be married.—No one, however, arose, or seemed in the least inclined to arise. Whereupon, the worthy clergyman, deeming his first notice unheard or misunderstood, repeated the invitation:

"Let those wishing to be united in the holy bands of matrimony now come forward."

Still no one stirred. The silence became almost audible, and a painful sense of the awkwardness of the position was gradually spreading among those present, when a young gentleman, who had occupied a vacant slip in the broad isle during the service, slowly arose, and deliberately walked to the foot of the altar. He was good looking and well dressed, but no one present knew him, and no female accompanied his travels. When arrived within a respectable distance of the clergyman, he paused, and with a reverent bow stopped to one side of the aisle, but neither said anything or seemed at all disconcerted at the idea of being married alone. The clergyman looked anxiously around for the bride, who he supposed, was yet to arrive, and at length remarked to the young gentleman in an under tone:

"The lady, sir, is dilatory?"

"Very, sir."

"Had we not better defer the ceremony?"

"I think not. Do you suppose she will be here soon?"

"Me! sir," said the astonished divine, "how should I know of your lady's movements? That is a matter belonging to yourself."

A very few moments more were suffered to elapse in this unpleasant state of expectancy, when the clergyman renewed his interrogatories:—

"Did the lady promise to attend at the present hour, sir?"

"What lady?"

"Why, the lady, to be sure that you are waiting here for."

"I did not hear her say anything about it," was the satisfactory response.

"Then, sir, may I ask why you are here, and for what purpose you trifle in the sanctuary of the Most High?" said the somewhat enraged clerical.

"I came, sir, simply because you invited all those wishing to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony to step forward, and I happened to entertain such a wish! I am very sorry to have misunderstood you, sir, and wish you a very good day."

When, after the church was closed, the story got wind among the congregation, more than one young lady regretted that her wishes had not been as boldly expressed as the young gentleman's who had really wished to be "united in the holy bands of matrimony."—N. O. Picayune.

Before the days of the teetotalers, a neighbor of Mr. Bisbee saw that gentleman at an early hour of the day crawling slowly homeward on his hands and knees over the frozen ground. "Why don't you get up Mr. Bisbee? Why don't you get up and walk?" said his neighbor. "I w-w-would, b-b-but it's so almighty thin here that I'm a-a-afraid I shall b-b-break through!"

An old toper who lately attended an exhibition where a learned professor caused several explosions to take place among gases produced from water, said—"You dont catch me putting much water in my liquor after this; I had no idea before that water was so dangerous, though I never liked to take much of it.

Loveliness of Christ.

"He is altogether lovely."—Sol. Song, v. 16.

Lovely in his person; in the glorious all-sufficiency of his Deity, gracious purity and holiness of his humanity, authority and majesty, love and power.

Lovely is his birth and incarnation; when he though rich, for our sakes became poor; taking part of flesh and blood, because we partook of the same; being made of a woman, that for us he might be made under the law, even for our sakes.

Lovely in the whole course of his life, and the more than angelical holiness and obedience which in the depth of poverty and persecution, he exercised therein; doing good, receiving evil; blessing, and being cursed, reviled, reproached, all his days.

Lovely in his death; yea, therein most lovely to sinners; never more glorious and desirable than when he came broken, dead, from the cross. Then he had carried all our sins into a land of forgetfulness; then had he made peace and reconciliation for us; then had he procured life and immortality for us.

Lovely in his whole employment; in his great undertaking; in his life, death, resurrection, ascension; being a Mediator between God and us, to recover the glory of God's justice, and to save our souls; to bring us to an enjoyment of God who were set at such an infinite distance from him by sin.

Lovely in the glory and majesty wherewith he is crowned. Now he is set down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, where though he be terrible to his enemies, yet he is full of mercy, love, and compassion, towards his beloved ones.

Lovely in all those supplies of grace and consolation, in all of the dispensations of his Holy Spirit, whereof his saints are made partakers.

Lovely in all the tender care, power and wisdom which he exercises in the protection, safe-guarding, and delivery of his Church and people, in the midst of all the oppositions and persecutions whereunto they are exposed. Lovely in all his ordinances, and the whole of that spiritually glorious worship which he hath appointed to his people, whereby they draw nigh and have communion with hm and his Father.

Lovely and glorious in the vengeance he taketh and will finally execute upon the stubborn enemies of himself and his people.

Lovely in the pardon he hath purchased and doth dispense, in the reconciliation he hath established, in the grace he communicates, in the consolation he doth administer, in the peace and joy he gives his saints, in his assured preservation of them unto glory.

What shall I say? There is no end of his excellencies and desirableness. "He is altogether lovely." This is our beloved, and this is our friend O daughter of Jerusalem.—Owen.

A BEAUTIFUL FIGURE.—Life is compared to a fountain fed by a thousand streams, that perish if one be dried. It is a silver cord, twisted with a thousand strings that part asunder if one be broken. Frail and thoughtless mortals are surrounded by innumerable dangers, which makes it much more strange that they escape so long, than they almost all perish suddenly at last. We are encompassed with accidents every day to crush the mouldering tenements we inhabit. The seeds of disease are planted in our constitutions by nature. The earth and atmosphere whence we draw the breath of life, are impregnated with death, health is made to operate its own destruction, the food that nourishes containing the elements of decay; the soul that animates it by vivifying first, tends to wear it out by his own action; death lurks in ambush along the paths. Notwithstanding this is the truth, so palpably confirmed by the daily examples before our eyes, how little do we lay it to heart! We see our friends and neighbors among us, but how seldom does it occur to our thoughts, that our knell perhaps will give the next fruitless warning to the world.

STEAMBOAT SEIZED.—The steamer P. H. White was seized, about three weeks ago, near Fort Gibson, Ark., by a detachment of the troops there, for violating the 'intercourse law between the United States and the Indian tribes. The boat was loaded with whisky, designed for sale to the Indians. The cargo was seized, and the officers arrested and placed in the guard house at Fort Gibson.

LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1853.

Sends us the Returns.

We hope some friend, in each county in the State, will send us the vote of their respective counties, on the license question. We wish to ascertain how the State went on this subject.

Mansion House, Cambridge City.

We wish to call the attention of the friends of Temperance, who may be travelling through Cambridge City, to the card of Mr. J. Cunningham, proprietor of the Mansion House.

We learn from members of the Grand Division, who stopped there during the session, that it is an excellent, and strictly a temperance house, and, should be patronized by all temperance men.

☞ Our Savior, among his other teachings, uttered this truth: "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light." All observation confirms this truth. We see illustrations of it in every city. What does a man do who expects to pursue a lawful, honest business? He puts an open front in his store. The more light he can have the better. The more openly he can display his goods, the better. Now-a-days we see light and graceful iron fronts, which give us, as we pass, a view of the whole interior. Buildings which are good enough in other respects, but which have not open fronts, are torn down, and structures erected which will afford more light. What are we to infer, then, when we see a man crouching down in cellars or in by-places, keeping his doors closed, and close, red curtains over the few panes of glass that would let in a single ray of light on his business? Are we not to infer that he is ashamed of it? And do not all his actions go to show that he regards his business as dishonest, mean, and one that will not bear the light? This is what we are to infer. We have asserted that liquor selling is a mean, dishonest business, and here we have the dealers own testimony to sustain us. Shame covers him like a garment, and his only refuge is to hide from the light of day.

Grand Division.

The Semi-Annual Session of this body was held at Cambridge City, convening on the 26th, and adjourning on the 28th ult.

We learn from the Representatives present, that about one hundred members were in attendance, and a considerable amount of labor done.

The Chart was endorsed, and it was voted to sustain it all hazards; and a call was made on its friends to rally in its behalf.

Ten Delegates were elected to attend the World's Fair Temperance Convention, to be held in New York.

In view of the financial condition of the Grand Division, it was thought best not to publish the proceedings of the session in pamphlet form, but to publish all matters of importance in the Chart.

The Annual Session will be held in this city in October, the day to be fixed by the G. W. P. and G. S.

☞ There are but few who do not overestimate their abilities. In remote ages, philosophers thought they so thoroughly understood the laws which control the universe, that they could receive no further instruction! And yet it proved, as they were told by Socrates, while rebuking them for their presumption, that they knew nothing about it.

Is the Dealer in Intoxicating Drinks a Criminal?

In confirming our statement that the liquor traffic violates the plainest precepts of the Bible, we assert,

1. The spirit of the Bible is utterly opposed to the traffic.

What a spirit of love, of concord, of peace, of purity, of benevolence the Bible breathes forth upon all who yield to its guidance! "Love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance:" these are the fruits of the Bible. And what are the fruits of the rum traffic? "Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, envying, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like." And if a traffic which produces these fruits is not opposed to the spirit of the Bible, then righteousness can have fellowship with unrighteousness, light have communion with darkness, and Christ have concord with Belial.

2. The practical influence of the Bible is utterly opposed to the rum traffic.

When a man honestly and fully yields himself to be controlled by the principles of the Bible—when he becomes a Christian—he forsakes the rum traffic. If he is a man who in other respects gives to community credible evidence that his life is governed by the principles of the Gospel of Christ, we find him abjuring the traffic, if he has been engaged in it before. Why is this? If it is an honest business, the Christian can engage in it as well as any other man. When it was thought to be an honest business, Christians did engage in it. Most of our readers will remember Deacon Giles, who kept Bibles for sale in his distillery, and had the streams of salvation and damnation flowing parallel.—If it is an honest business, why may not the preacher engage in it? But who does not feel that a Christian dram-shop would be something like holy sin? A Christian dram-shop! Reader, repeat that word to yourself a few times. How does it sound? It shocks every Christian sensibility within you. The dram-shop is a recruiting station of the infernal pit; and shall a Christian consent to be the recruiting officer? It is there that drunkards are made, and can a Christian have anything to do with such business?

3. But to come still closer to the point, the traffic violates the plainest laws of God.

One of the petitions embodied in the Lord's Prayer for our daily use, is this:—"Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Now if the traffic in ardent spirits does tend to lead men into temptation, and gives to temptation a peculiar power over men, so that they often fall into sin when otherwise they would not fall, then is not the traffic forbidden? Let those who have not yet quite forgotten the prayers they learned to lisp at a mother's knee, think of this.

Does it not tend powerfully to foster and promote the sin of idleness? Who can look in upon a dram-shop or bar-room without being struck with this. The workshop, the farm, the office, the domestic fireside, are forsaken to find a lounging-place in the dram-shop. As the habits of drinking increase, a taste for any useful labor diminishes. If there is a raising or log-rolling, where there is sure to be plenty of whisky, there you will find them of course; busy, boisterous, and in the end drunk.—They will at times, too, be marvellously busy in attending to every man's business but their own. The influence of the dram-shop in promoting idleness and profligacy is best understood, when we remember that they furnish three-fourths of the inmates of our poorhouses. Let the traffic cease, and three-fourths of the pauperism in the United States would cease with it. Husbands and fathers, now more than dead, would be restored to their families, and the poorhouse would be exchanged for happy homes. The traffic tempts to idleness, and therefore is our immorality.

☞ Man is naturally a creature of passion. Without it, his existence would be a blank. Turned in a proper channel, it may be productive of great good; but perverted, it is the most powerful engine of evil. Tears and laughter, joy and sorrow, love and hatred are all its offspring.

It is as easy to deceive oneself without perceiving it, as it is difficult to deceive others without their perceiving it.

☞ To the inquiry of "Constant Drinker," if the issue of 36 million 3-cent pieces is not a virtual governmental limitation of the price of liquor to three cents a glass, and a sort of contingent appropriation for 36 million drinks for the American people by "a wisely economical Democratic administration," we respectfully reply that we "don't know." It is doubtful whether there can be found 36 million drinks really worth 3 cents each, and it would be as oppressive for government to compel a man to pay that price for every description of liquor as it would be for a Trade's Union to compel a carpenter to pay 17 shillings a day to a workman not worth more than 12.—Express Messenger.

A single drink not worth a three cent piece? Then certainly there has been some wrong hereabouts in times past, for we venture to say that, though "figures cannot lie," yet figures cannot compute what the drinker has had to pay in these parts. He has been charged enormously for "drinks." He had a fresh, open countenance once, with rosy cheek and clear eye. He has paid that, and got nothing left but a yellow, flabby face, with two sore holes through it where the eyes used to be; and a carbuncled excresence in the middle in place of a nose. He had a manly form and firm step once, but these he has given up. He had a farm, well stocked: he has paid that too. His character went by piece-meal. A happy family—a wife he once loved—children he once smiled upon—all went for "drinks." See what he has paid! Property, health, happiness—all he has here or hereafter! And many a one, as his last, desperate throe, has cast himself upon the funeral pyre of his hopes, and appeared drunk at the bar of God! This is what men pay hereabouts for drinks, and, if we are correctly informed, the price is uniform all over the country. It needs no "Liquor seller's Union" to regulate this matter.

Strikes.—The bar-keepers, it is said, will "strike" for a shilling a drink after May 1st. This is the best strik yet, and if the three-centers would strike for six cents a drink, we should have no objection.—Journal of Commerce.

Have not these drinks produced striking enough already? Scarcely a blow is given, that a drink of some sort is not at the bottom of it. Think of that man who killed his wife with a mallet the other day: was that a sixpenny strike, or only a three center?—Express Messenger.

The "strike" they have made in Maine, and in a few other States, is what we would recommend. That is the strike that knocks the whole thing out of existence. The scale of prices grog sellers have adopted there is, "Can't have it at any price." That is the only scale at which dealers can either make a living or enjoy peace of mind. We are assured that the moment they sell at such prices, they at once begin to grow rich. We recommend it to our fellow-citizens, who are engaged in the business.

Improved Wagon Brake.—A self-acting brake for wagons on common roads has been invented by W. D. Williams, of Raleigh, N. C. This brake is intended for retarding the velocity of a wagon while going down hill, and is so arranged that the action of the horse in drawing, when arrived at the bottom, will restore the brake to its former position, where it will remain while the wagon is on level ground. The arrangement consists of two iron clamps encircling the front axle, and each connected to a front hound by a link and two joint pins. The hounds are secured to the sides of the reach as well as to a cross-piece, and the latter is connected to a similar piece by rods, which carries the bar for actuating the brake blocks. An additional advantage of this brake, due to its capability of swinging on a centre, is, that it can be thrown forward when it is desired to dump the load, and then replaced in its former position.

The Drunkard's Madness.—A case occurred near Maxville, Ky., recently, that illustrates this horrible species of disease.

A victim to strong drink, supposing himself pursued by two of his friends whom this demon had persuaded him were enemies, defended himself one whole night by throwing stones at them. At daylight he had a bushel of his ammunition piled up ready for a new assault, but finding the foe about to overcome him, he seized an axe and struck himself repeatedly, first with the back, afterwards with the edge. Failing to commit suicide in that way, he cut his throat dreadfully with a butcher knife; then placing the instrument against the wall, ran upon the point. Nothing but the great emission of blood prevented his final execution of his plan.

Usefulness and Evils of the Medical and Surgical Use of Alchohol.

Dr. Gilman, of Boston, in his recent course of three lectures at Worcester, on the Medical use of Alcohol, demonstrated exclusively,—that neither the medical nor the surgical use of alcohol is in any case absolutely necessary, that alocohol is often injurious when thus used,—that there is no lack of substitutes for it as stimulant as a solvent, and as a preservant,—that the doctors and apothicaries have therefore no excuse but custom, convenience, large profits, and the appetites of their patrons, for the multitude of medicines, that are prepared and palmed off, in alcohol, unthe name of tinctures,—that the oils and gumbs thus dissolved and administered in alcohol are instantly precipitated when blending with water, or the fluids of the mouth and stomach, and of course might just as well, or better be taken in their original state in some other medium and without the alcohol,—that the foundation of much, very much of the intemperance of the land is laid in the nursery by the little but constant, and untimely ruinous dosing of alcohol,—the alcohol, whether taken as a medicine or as a beverage, has the same natural and inevitable effect upon the system, and goes out, as it goes in, the same irritant poison, entirely nnchanged by the process of digestion,—that the person, who is taking monthly, weekly, daily, or hourly, a proportion of alcohol as or with a medicine, is just as inevitably forming an artificial appetite for intoxicating drinks, as if he was taking thus often as a social beverage in the drawing room, the hotel or grog-shop,—that multitudes of "reformed inebriates" have been thrown back into the pit of wretchedness and ruin, from which total abstinence had raised them to usefulness and honor, by the often heedless, and many times culpable and cruel alcoholic prescriptions of physicians and druggists,—and that until this bane of the human race is banished from the nursery, and the "medicine chest," the tide of intemperence can never be entirely rolled back.

Dr. Gilman is a learned, scientific and skillful physician of some twenty years of extensive practice, but has for the last five years, in that practice, entirely banished the use of alcohol, and that too, with the most signal benefit to his patients, himself, and the cause of temperance. He proposes to demonstrate nothing that he does not accomplish. He personally invited each of the alchoholic physicians of Worcester to hear his lectures, and there publicly question him, and refute his arguments if they could, but not a solitary one of them all, dared thus "to face the music" in defence or justification of their rumdosing practise. He proved by experiment in the presence of the audience, that none of the alcoholic tinctures will blend with water, while the same oils and gums, preparred in his way, without alcohol would do instantly and beautifully, without destroying in the least the crystal translucency of the water. Camphor, for instance, was, and can be easily dissolved in acetic acid, that is, pure distilled vinegar, which is as white and clear as water, and thus prepared, is much more elegant, convenient, economical, and harmless. Dr. Gilman is backed up in the positions he has taken by the highest medical authority in the union, such as Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston,—Dr. R Mussey of Cincinnati, Dr. Sewall of Washington, D. C,—and many other eminent physicians in different parts of the country, and he has done, and will do much good by these lectures, wherever he has been, or may be called to deliver them.—The Wor. Cataract.

Rumseller's Nest Egg.

At a late State Temperence Convention held in Maine, among other things said and done, "Rev. T. Hill, of Waterville, exhibited articles of rum confectionary which he said were purchased at the shop of one Bowditch, in Augusta. They were globular—about the size of a robin's egg,—and a cavity in the centre containing some kind of alchoholic drink, (probably kept there by a coating of gum not soluble in alchohol. He broke a few of them before the audience, and caught the contents in a phial. A dozen of them evidently contained the amount of an ordinary glass of liquor—perhaps more. These things (which Mr. H. called the 'rumseller's nest eggs,' and which Dr. Jewett calls Satan's sugar coated pills,') are sold two for a cent; and it is evident that little boys and girls can purchase them of the confectioners. He had even been told of boys being intoxicated by them. Here is a source of indefinite danger to our youth, and he would anxiously enquire if there was no legal means of avoiding it. He said he should, if possible, hate the rum traffic worse than ever."

☞ All the true honor or happiness there is in this world, follows labor. Were it not for working men, there could be no progress in either science or art. Working men are earth's true nobility. Those who live without work are all paupers.

☞ Sobriety and Virtue are angel-sisters, who administer peace and plenty to all their followers.

Drunkenness and Vice are demon-twins, who give nothing but misery and poverty.

The Death of the Drunkard.

I have just returned from witnessing a scene which I would be glad to believe I might never witness again. Another drunkard is before God—plunged into eternity with the stain of the destroyer upon his brow and soul.

Reader is any of the guilt of the rum traffic upon your soul? Do you stand at the bar with the cup in your hand? Do you lift you voice for the heathenish scourge which is daily sweeping its victims to the grave? Do you vote for the traffic? If you are a commissioner, do you put your hand to that which legalizes all this murder and protects the murderers?

Look into the Mohawk this morning.—The dark waters swept silently by, cold and dotted with cakes of ice. The night has been intensly cold, and the ice has formed far out into the river. Here as you stand upon the bridge, just at the foot of the main street and a half score of church spires within sight, your eyes sweep up and down the river, but sees nothing unusual. Down ten or twelve feet below you is the angry river, and you turn away with a chill creeping over you. You see nothing. Wait, sir. Let me hold you by the arm. Now lean over.—Further yet! Now look down at the end of the bridge with a steady eye. There is a man—a Sabbath-day Sacrifice—another drunkard dead—frozen perhaps while prayer was going up in the churches. The eyes glare out through the frost and upward to the wintry sky; a hand partly raised, and the legs and sides are locked in the ice which has frozen around him. His head has been cut and bruised as he fell, and the pool of blood has frozen into dark icicles as it has dripped from his wounds to the pillow of the earth. God! what a sight! The crowds are already thronged by. The citizen leans over a moment, and turns away with a shudder. They come with the axe and cut out the corpse and drag it up the bank through the snow, marking the rough hubs with blood. The river rolls on with a sullen murmer. The coroner will perform his duty, the sexton will bury the dead, the friends will weep over the horrible death, and the tragedy will be ended.

This morning the rumseller of this city commences another days crusade against socity. The death of one man is hindrance and but a momentary loss. There are more men to kill. Even the old drunkard who stands upon the bridge and lightly pronounces the dead a weak-minded man who 'made a fool of himself,' is already realing from the effects of his morning potations.

Well, the rumsellers of this city will not quarrel about the honor of this man's death. Had he been killed by an assassin and sent to a sober man's grave, the good people of Utica would have tried the assassin and hung him for crime. The drunkard was first degraded and then killed. His distroyers are licensed to kill more.—Editorial Correspondence of the Cayuga Chief.

A Congressional Scene

A correspondent of the New York Times relates the following incident:

"A rather ludicrous occurrence transpired, in connection with the vote by which the House concurred by the Senate amendment. The vote was taken by a 'division' and there was a very thin house the Speaker declared the amendment concurred in without counting the Nays—the Ayes being about 61 or 62. Pennsylvanians, of course, were universally opposed to the amendment, but a certain representative from one of the districts not far from the Mint city, having made frquent visits to the refreshment rooms during the evening, like many of his associates from all parts of the country, had reached a condition of 'betweenity,' under the influence of which local interests are broken down, and good-natured jollity reigned supreme in his heart. The vote being taken by count by the chair, this gentleman arose, signifying his vote in the affirmative. The movement was noticed at once by Col. Florence, of Philadelphia, who rushed over to him in great tribulation, exclaiming:

'Down, down, Mac—you are voting in favor of the New York Assay Office.'

'Go to thunder, Tom Florence,' was the reply.

'But,' again remonstrated the Col. 'see what you are doing; you are voting with Briggs and all these New Yorkers, when you vote against them. For Heavens sake sit down, Mac, if you ever expect to be reelected.'

'Go—to—thunder—Tom—Florence,' was the emphatic sur-rejoinder. 'Don't—I—know—what—I'm—about?"

During this time the Speaker had been counting the members, and the story is that, as the Colonel was so busy engaged in trying to relate his stubborn colleague, he forgot that he himself was standing; the consequences was, that he also was counted in the affirmative, as well as his friend. The incident gave rise to much good-humored joking at the expense of the Colonel.

We are never so ridiculous from the qualities we have, as from those we affect to have.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

The Rumseller's Soliloquy.

BY M. LOUISA CHITWOOD.

One, two, three—is it so late?—and yet I have not closed my eyes in sleep to-night. I feel restless and sleepless. I wonder if that is the moonlight, streaming so brightly through the shutters? Yes; and as I throw them back, it fairly dazzles me.—How quiet the streets are. I wonder if there is another human being in this city as unhappy as I am? But that is a foolish question—there are watchers sitting by the bedside of the dying, mute with sorrow, but not sorrow like mine. Let me see—it has been twenty-two years since I left my childhood's home; for that length of time I have struggled on and on with the one goal—"how shall I soonest get rich?"—always before me; and now that I am crowned with that so-called blessing, I am not happy—not half so happy as when I had only one dollar in the world. I wish I had never gone into the liquor business; and yet it has been a profitable one to me. I don't know as I am to blame much; true, I feel badly when females implore me not to sell rum to their husband, sons, or brothers—but if I did not, some one else would, and why not I receive the gain as well as others? Those Temperance men, too, how they draw themselves up when I speak to them on the street, and shrink from my extended hand as from pollution. Sometimes, when counting over my gold, I reflect the circumstances under which I received it, and it falls from my hands as a thing accursed. A few days ago, a young man entered my store, and flinging a piece of silver on the bar, said—"There, give me rum—that is my last cent in the world. We have not a crumb of bread in our house; but, sir, I cannot resist my appetite—give me rum, sir, or I shall die, my whole soul seems on fire." I gave it him; if I had not, others would. I cast that coin in my drawer; I piled dollars and dollars upon it, but I could not hide it; upon it seemed stamped, in crimson characters—"the price of blood." I am going to quit the traffic; I have gained wealth enough by it—had I gained by some other business I would have been happier.

Yonder is the morning star. How often have my eyes been lifted to it, in years agone. Sweet harbinger of day!—it is shining through the little window into my own room, at my old home, hundreds of miles distant. Oh! that I were a boy again, resting on my straw bed, and looking through the raised window at that star, thinking of angels, and all blessed beings, in peace and innocence. Let me see—the old orchard is full of blossoms now; I can fancy I see their fragrant leaves drifting down in the moonlight. The mill, too, a mile farther west, I expect is stopped long ago; its great dark wheel made dear music to my ear when a boy. The graveyard is half a mile farther—I wonder if that willow I planted over Ellen's grave is still alive?—Dear sister—she has been dead so long; and yet she seems near me, to-night, her soft hand resting on my shoulder. Then the forest near the school-house. Oh! that I could roam through its "long dim aisles," with dog and gun, and Harry Bell by my side. Poor Harry!—I loved him so; and he, too, is dead—fills a drunkard's grave! "I could weep my spirit from my eyes," but of what avail? For years I have been hugging his destroyer to my breast, and by it have I gained my wealth. Has not my influence destroyed many as noble and good a being as Harry? I feel, to-night, that I could collect all my wealth and destroy it in one huge bonfire, if by that means I could win back innocence. Is this blood upon my hands? How foolish I am!—if I had not sold rum, others would done so—and why am I so sensitive about it? Well, this is a poor consolation; and now comes up another thought. While I have been spending years of my life in doing evil, why could I not have been employed in doing good? Where I have led many to vice, I might have won many to virtue.—I am not guiltless. There are a thousand haunting images crowding upon me; I seem surrounded by ghosts, gliding noiselessly around my room.

I will break from this; I will become one of those glorious Temperance men—I will strive in the future to cancel the past. Witness, thou calm star within hearing of celestial music—witness, spirit of my dead sister, and thou companion of my boyhood hours, and thou high Heaven witness my vow of reform, my rejection of Satan, and enlistment under the glorious banner of Temperance.

A Scolding Wife.

Got a scoulding wife, have you? Well, it's your own fault, ten to one. Women are all naturally amiable, and when their tempers get crossed, it's the men that do it.

Just look at yourself as you came home last night! slamming doors and kicking every thing that laid in the way right and left—because—well you could not tell for life of you what it was for. You'd been laying your face under embargo all day to those who cared nothing about you smiling and nodding and hailing, and wanted to get where you could enjoy a little superlative ill nature.

No wonder your wife was cross, getting supper with a baby in her arms! Why didn't you take the baby and trot it and please it? "Room was all in confusion," why didn't you put to it rights? "You want a little rest"—so does your wife, and she gets precious little, poor woman. You are at your shop—walking briskly through the sunshine in the bracing weather—reading the paper—meeting friends and acquaintances—sitting cozily in the office. She is at home with clinging arms dragging about her neck, loveing, but still wearisome at times. She is dependant upon the call of a nighbor for a little break up in her monotonous life, or the opening of a window upon a stunted yard for what fresh air comes. Wake up, man alive, and look into this matter. Put on your best smile the moment your foots touches the door step. Treat the littered room to a broad grin and your wife to a kiss. Give the baby some sugar plums, and to Robby a new picture book to busy his bright eyes with. Tell that poor tired woman that you've bought her a book to read, and that you're going to stay home evenings. Our word for it, apologies well be plentiful, supper will come on like magic, every thing will have an extra touch. At times, there will be something like tears in the good woman's eyes, and her voice will be husky when she asks you if your tea quite suits you. Of course it will be to a charm.

It may be a little silent that evening.—You miss the complaining tone, the scolding and fault-finding; but your loss is her gain; she is thinking of the long past but considers on the whole that she is a happier woman to-night than she ever was in her whole life before.

Give the new plan a fair trial. Gradually, as you return, you will find the house in perfect order. Old dresses will be renewed. Home will grow more and more pleasant, and the brightest smiles upon our features during the day will be a reflection of the thought that evening is coming with its pleasant chat of wife and little ones.

Scolding wife indeed! If you men did as you should, wouldn't such a wife be an anomaly?—Olive Branch.

AUSTRIAN TYRANNY.—The extent of the reign of terror that prevails in Italy at this time may be judged from the following steps taken by the Austrian authorities in Milan, in which city they suppose the celebrated patriot MAZZINI to be concealed, in order to prevent his escape. They have opened coffins which were being carried to the burial ground in order to make sure that he was not concealed in one of them. The inhabitants are forbidden to appear on the bastions after seven o'clock, in the evening, and all householders are obliged to keep a lamp burning in front of their houses from six o'clock in the evening till daylight. In case of disturbance, they are obliged to close their doors, and every man found in the streets is to be treated as concerned in the affray. By order of the commandant, all the houses were illuminated on the 19th of February in rejoicing for the Emperor's preservation from the attempt that was recently made to assassinate him.

THE WRECK OF THE QUEEN VICTORIA, IN ENGLAND.—The plate in the Queen Victoria's cabin has been saved by a diver; but the man protests that nothing in the world should induce him to go down a second time, as the scene in the cabin was the most horrible he had ever witnessed. He thought he had entered a wax-work exhibition, the corpses never having moved from their positions since the vessel went down. There were some eighteen or twenty persons in the cabin, one and all of whom seemed to be holding conversation with each other; and the general appearance of the whole scene was so life like that he was almost inclined to believe that some were yet living.—English paper.

There is a philanthropy which looks after the heathen. It will give a five dollar bill if the donation can be trumpeted, to some object on the outskirts of creation, and at the same time, cheat the poor out of a sixpence at home.

Climate of Australia.

The climate of this new field of enterprise is not generally or sufficiently understood. Yet this knowledge is of great consequence to all who propose to supply its markets with articles whose value or preservation is at all likely to be effected by temperature or climate. To all interested in the Australian trade, the following articles will be found of interest and value:

"It is no wonder that there are such conflicting accounts of a region where everything is so widely different from what we are accustomed to elsewhere; where most of the quadrupeds come into this breathing world not half made up, and grow the rest in an inside pouch; where the swarms are black, and the eagles white; where the jay laughs like a jackass, the magpie breaths like an Æoleon harp, and other birds flutter about, cracking whips, grinding knives, and ringing chimes of bells; where the cookoo's notes startle the dull ear of night, and the owl's boding screech mocks the light of day; where the mole and the platypus lay eggs, and when they are hatched suckle their young; where maggots five inches long are eatean like maccaroni; where the bees are without sting, many of the most beautiful flowers without smell, and most of the trees without shade, shedding their bark instead of their leaves; where the north winds are hot, the south wind cold and the east wind healthy; where the mountain tops are warm and the valleys cool, and the rivers dwindle as they run and are lost before they reach the sea. It is no wonder we say, that a good deal of misapprehension still exists respecting a region like this. We must get accustomed to the oddities it presents; the European eye must cease to wonder as it follows the sun traveling northward—the European ear to be startled by hearing the word July asssociated with mid-winter, and the word January with mid-summer, before a true estimate can be formed even of ordinary facts. Spring begins early in September, and a geneal warmth goes on increasing as the rain diminishes, till about the middle of November when summer commences. The warmth is by this time heat, which waxes and waxes till by the end of the month the rivers have disappeared, vegetation ceased, and the whole country is an arid desert. At the close of February the temperature begins to sink; by the middle of March autum has begun; and in early April as at home—the April of the poets—showers and sunshine alternate the ground is covered with a carpeting of verdue, the air is clear, bracing and buoyant. In June winter comes—if that can be called winter, which is distinguished only by torrents of rain, and the river roaring like the sea. During this time and till the middle or end of August, there are delightful days and even weeks between the rains, more beautiful and exhilerating than the finest spring weather in England. The average of good and bad throughout the year is twenty-five extremely hot days, sixty wet or cold days, the rest 'indiscribably pleasant,' with the air bright and balmy and the deep blue sky unstained by a cloud. In winter the thermometer rarely ranges lower than 46 degrees Fahrenheit, and ice is rarely or ever seen: but in summer in the latitude of Sydney and Melbourn, the mercury frequently indicated 90 to 100 degrees or more. The variations in the temperature are sudden and extraordinary. At noon it is frequently higher 20 degrees than in the morning or evening; and the average heat of one day is greater by 15 degrees than that of the next. The northern winds is always dry, and often violent: in winter moderately warm; in summer, intensely hot, raising the thermometer in the shade sometimes to 130 degrees, drying up grass and fruit, and filling the air with so dense a cloud of sand and dust that the sun is obscured, and Milton's idea of darkness visibly realized. Occasionally this wind travels so slowly, that its movement is scarcely preceptible: and then the earth, exposed to the obstructed rays of the sun, and the scorching but almost motionless wind, becomes so hot that a thermometer, over another sunk just below the surface, stood at 151 degrees! During these sirroccos, sheet lightening sweeps through the atmosphere at night."

MY LITTLE FLOWER BUD.—Rapidly she grew worse, till the little fingers relaxed, and the crushed flower-bud, a pale, dead thing, laid on the coverlid, an emblem of her own fleeting loveliness.

The trial hour had come. Our angel smiled often and sweetly, as the white wings of death fanned the moisture from her brow. The sun came faintly in; it was near twilight. Her beautiful head rested wearily upon my bosom; her wax white limbs laid like marble upon my arm. Suddenly she looked up to me, and while a flash of wondrous intelligense shot from her dear, dying eyes, she whispered, "Mamma, I guess I'M God's little flower bud; shan't I be an angel tomorrow

☞ A barber desired a groggy customer of his, one Sunday morning, whose breath smelled strong of alcohol, to keep his mouth shut, or the establishment might get indicted for keeping a rum-hole open on Sunday.

The Most Important Thought of Daniel Webster

A correspondent of the Rochester American adds the following to the host of anecdotes of the statesmen, which his decease has called forth:

When Mr. Webster was Secretary of State some years ago, under another administratian than that of Mr. Filmore, he wrote to one of the proprietors of the Astor House in New York, saying that he would reach that house on such a day, and begged that some of his friends should invited to dine with him the same evening.

There were about twenty at the table, and Mr. Webster who seemed wearied by his travel, and speaking but little if at all, plunged into a darksome sort of reverie not well calculated to enliven his friends. This at length became so apparent, and the situation of all so unpleasant, that one of the company, urged upon by a very distinguished man present, a warm friend of Mr. Webster, to get him into conversation. He only needed to become jogged to become as lively as they wished.

The friend consented, and spoke aloud to Mr. Webster, asking him some question, that inor dinary circumstances and with ordinary men, would have led to conversation, but it failed in the present case. The dark secretary of State merely raised his head and answered simply, and crept into his cave again.

Again the gentleman, frightened by his failure, was urged to renew the attempt to draw him out. He summoned courage and said, "Mr. Webster" [Mr. Webster looked up out of his cave]—"Mr. Webster I want you to tell me what was the most important thought that ever occupied your mind." Here was a thumper for you, and so every body thought at the table. Mr. Webster slowly passed his hand over his forehead, and in a low tone said to a friend near him, "is there any one here who does not know me? "No sir, they all know you—are all your friends." Then he looked over the table, and you may well imagine how the tones of his voice would be upon such an occasion, giving answer to such a question. "The most important thought that ever occupied my mind," said he "was that of my individual responsibility to god!"—upon which, for twenty minutes, he spoke to them there, and when he had finished he got up from the table and retired to his room, and they, without a word, went into an adjacent parlor, and when they had gathered there some of them exclaimed, "who ever heard any thing like that?" What Mr. Webster said in advocacy of his sublime thought I do not know—no one ever repeated, and I presume no one can.

The Blank Book of Time.

"Consider each day as a blank leaf, which you are to fill up for eternity," is a sentiment, which, in substance, we have seen several times expressed. It is full of meaning. A blank leaf upon which we are all to write; rather, upon which we are every day writing characters for eternity. Life passes; childhood, youth, manhood, old age, press hard upon one another. Every hour will set down something that will enhance or diminish our happiness hereafter. Pause, reader, and reflect, thou art not writing characters in the sand, but in the Book of God. Thy whole life is but a book, a kind of day-book which is constantly filling up; all which is here written is carefully transcribed into the Book of God; and before assembled worlds, in the presence of angels and the justfied, everything is to be revealed. What is done in life, all thy words, thoughts, and actions, are sketched in the book of rememberance: and no bad action can be blotted out but by the blood of Christ. Many have lived away the summer of life, little heeding this; filling up leaf after leaf with what they all dread to see unfolded in the appointed day. By these be warned; shun the rock against which others have dashed. To-day thou hast filled up another leaf. It is written, and cannot be rewritten. What canst thou do? This only; haste thee to the throne or grace, and implore divine aid, that thou mayest fill up the remaining leaves of thy little volume with such characters as thou shalt delight to see written to thy name, when the lamb shall open the books for judgment.

Climate and Education.

IT is a remarkable coincidence that in most counties of Europe, the inhabitants of the northern are more intelligent and better educated than those of the southern provinces. The remark certainly applies to France. In the Netherlands, the Dutch provinces are far better educated than those of Belgium. In northern Germany popular education is very superior to what it is in the south; and in Italy, the Milanese, in this respect, offer a most advantageous contrast to the Neapolitans. Even in Russia, the centre of intelligence lies towards the north. May not the climate have something to do with this? Long winter evenings compel the inhabitants of a northern country to spend a greater part of their time within doors, and this materially tends to encourage a taste for reading.—[J. G. KOHL.]

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

The most subtle of all artifices is the power of cleverly feigning to fall into the snares laid for us; and we are never so easily deceived as when we think we are deceiving others.

A determination never to deceive often exposes us to deception.

We are so much accustomed to disguise ourselves to others, that at length we disguise ourselves to ourselves.

Men are more often guilty of treachery from weakness of character than from any settled design to betray.

We often do good, in order that we may do evil with impunity.

If we resist our passions it is more from their weakness than from our strength.

We should have very little pleasure if we did not sometimes flatter ourselves.

The cleverest men affect all their lives to censure all artifice, in order that they may make use of it themselves on some grand occasion, and for some great interest.

The ordinary employment of artifice is the mark of a petty mind; and it almost always happens that he who uses it to cover himself in one place, uncovers himself in another.

Treacheries and acts of artifice only originate in the want of ability.

The true method of being deceived is to think oneself more cunning than others.

Too great refinement is false delicacy, and true delicacy is solid refinement.

Coarseness is sometimes sufficient to protect us from being overreached by an artful man.

Weakness of mind is the only fault incapable of correction.

The least fault in women who have abandoned themselves to love is to love.

It is more easy to be wise for others than for ourselves.

The only good copies are those which exhibit the defects of bad originals.

We are sometimes as different from ourselves as we are from others.

Coldness in love is a sure means of being beloved.

SCHOOL EXCITEMENT IN BALTIMORE.—A Bill, dictated by the Roman clergy, is before the Legislature of Maryland, providing for a sectarian distribution of the School Fund of the State. An immense popular meeting took place on Monday evening at the Maryland Institute in Baltimore, in opposition to the bill. Ten thousand people were present, and crowds were unable to get into the hall. Speeches were made by Rev. Drs. John Fuller and others. The excitement is said to be very great.

GIVE NO PAIN.—Breathe not a sentiment—say not a word—give not an expression of the countenance that will offend another, or sends a thrill of pain to his bosom. We are surrounded by sensitive hearts, which a word, or look, even, might fill to the brim with sorrow. If you are careless of the opinion and expression of others, remember that they are differently constituted from yourself, and never, by a word or sign, cast a shadow on a happy heart, or throw aside the smiles of joy that love to linger on a pleasant countenance.

THE END OF THE WORLD.—To-day, tomorrow, every day, to thousands, the end of the world is close at hand. And why should we fear it? We walk here as it were in the crypts of life; at times, from the great cathedral above us, we can hear the organ and chanting choir: we see the light stream through the open door, when some friend goes up before us; and shall we fear to mount the narrow staircase of the grave, that leads us out of this uncertain twilight, into the serene mansions of life eternal?

Grand Temple of Honor.

The next annual session of this body will be held in this city, on Wednesday, the 25th inst., at 2 o'clock, P. M. A general attendance is requested.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

MANSION HOUSE,
Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,

Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,

oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—CHEAPEST OF ALL.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No. 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost INSTANTANEOUS relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hcking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,
Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.
S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. RICHARD M. HALL. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D, Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washingion Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would sufficate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the CHERRY PECTORAL which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

DR. AYER, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
EDWARD HITCHCOCK, M D. LL D,

J. C AYER. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

PRESIDENT PERKINS, Vermont Med College.
PROF. SILLIMAN, Yale College
PROF. VALENTINE MOTT, New York.
PROF. CLEAVELAND, Bowdoin Med. College.
PROF. BUTTERFIELD, Ohio Med College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. GEO. P. MARSH, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen EMANUEL BULNES, President of Chili.
RT. REV. ED POWER, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. DOCT. LANSING, Brooklyn, New York.
ARCHIBISHOP PURSELL, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY
BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1853. NO. 46.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperauce Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,		$0 50
" "	for each subsequent insertion,.....	25
" "	for 3 months,.....	3 00
" "	for 6 months,.....	5 00
" "	for 1 year without alteration,.....	8 00
" "	for 1 year, with changes,.....	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Dublin University Magazine.

Spring.

Spring is coming—spring is coming!
With her sunshine and her shower;
Heaven is ringing with the singing
Of the birds in brake and bower;
Buds are filling, leaves are swelling,
Flowers on field and bloom on tree;
O'er the earth, and air, and ocean,
Nature holds her jubilee.
Soft then stealing, comes a feeling,
O'er my bosom tenderly;
Sweetly I ponder, as I wander,
For my musings are of thee.

Spring is coming—Spring is coming!
With her mornings fresh and light,
With her noons of chequered glory,
Sky of blue and clouds of white.
Calm grey night falls when the light falls
From the star-bespangled sky,
While the splendor, pale and tender,
Of the young moon gleams on high.
Still at morn, at noon, at even,
Spring is full of joy for me,
For I ponder as I wander,
And my musings are of thee.

Still on thee my thoughts are dwelling,
Whatso'er thy name may be;
Beautiful beyond words telling,
Is thy presence unto me.
Morning's breaking finds thee waking,
Wandering in the breeze's flight;
Noontide's glory mantles o'er thee,
In a shower of sunny light;
Daylight dying leaves thee lying
In the silvery twilight ray,
Stars look brightly on thee nightly,
Till the coming of the day.

Every where and every minute
Feel I near thee, lovely one;
In the lark and in the linnet,
I can hear thy joyous tone.
Bud and blooming mark the coming
Of thy feet o'er vale and hill;
And thy presence, with lifes essence,
Makes the forest's heart to fill.
Low before thee; I adore thee,
Love creative, thee I sing;
Now I meet thee, and I greet thee
By the holy name of Spring!

Modern Girls.

In a remote corner of a Scotch paper we discovered the annexed libellous and attrocious lines:

"Ever ranging, constantly changing,
Sometimes teasing, sometimes pleasing,
Sometimes hoaxing, sometimes coaxing,
No expressing how much dressing,
Little knowing little sewing,
Little walking, greatly talking,
Mischief making, promise breaking,
Novel reading, dainty feeding,
Idle dreaming, sudden screaming,
Lap-dog doating, Byron quoting,
Piano-playing, gems displaying,
Body-bracing, tightly lacing,
Over-sleeping, often weeping,
Dandy-loving, white-kid gloving,
Thin shoe wearing, health despairing,
Daily fretting, sickness getting,
Ever sighing, almost dying,
What blessed wives to cheer men's lives!

There two sorts of tyranny; the one real, which arises from the oppressions of government—the other is seated in OPINION, and is sure to be felt whenever those who govern, establish things shocking to the turn of thought, and inconsistent with the ideas of a nation.

What appears true to us to-day may not appear so at another time.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Our Father.

Often in the morning when we waken, we hear a little childish voice saying, "come Bobby, let's say our prayers," and then together both little voices offer up that most beautifull of all petitions—

"Our father which is in heaven."

All over the world, in castle and hall, by the prince and by the peasant, is that most beautifull prayer repeated—but above all, it sounds sweetest when lisped by the sunny-haired child at its mother's knee. Mark the little bending form—the hair put sofly back, the tiny white hand folded, the reverend glance bent towards hers, as though it saw a Saviour in its mother's eyes.

Blessed little children; What a dreary waste, what a wild and fruitless wilderness would this world be without them! How often the toiling mother wakes almost despairing—there is no food in the house—her ceaseless labor will hardly buy bread.

As she looks upon the red sun rising, with sad forebodings and knows not how she shall procure a meal for her little ones—sweetly steal upon her senses the murmering of infnat voices. She listens. Her very babes are looking trustingly towards heaven. They have hushed their sports, and kneeling together by their poor couch they say—

"Give us this day our daily bread."

Her soul grows strong within her; she knows God will never forsake her—and with tears she thanks Him that she ever taught them how to pray.

And are there little children who never say "Our Father!" Are there mothers so lost to all that is holy and beautiful in Heaven and on earth, that they put their babies to sleep without teaching them upon whose arm they rest. When night folds her starry curtain about them, and the moon looks down silvering the meadows and spangling the trees, do they not tell them who in His goodness [illegible] beauty? and how with sweet confidence they should trust in Him.

We turn shudderingly from the picture of a prayerless mother. Parents, if your children have never repeated "Our Father," at their nightly orisons, teach them now. When you are lying in your silent graves, the memory of that little sentence, "lead us not into temptation," may bear them safely through a world of danger.

A NEW METHOD OF ROOFING.—A patent has been received granting, in England to Mr. Cowper, for improvements in coverings for buildings, by means of tiles, or plates of sheet iron rendered applicable for that purpose by coating it with an enamel or composition capable of enduring and protecting the metal from the weather.—Tiles, according to this mannfacture, may be of any suitable form, with a view to render them more or less ornamental, combined with utility. The body of the tile, which is of thin sheet iron, is cut or stamped of the proper size. It also has a head formed round the edge, to prevent the water from running off the tile, with the exception of the lower end, where it drops on to the next. Two holes are also punched for fixing the tiles on the wood work. The upper or narrow end of the tile is bent at right angles, which is introduced in an opening between supporting lathes or strips of wood. The hooks or right angled portion, sustaines the tile, while two nails introduced at the holes, steady and keep it in its place. In lieu of the nails, before referred to, to fix the tiles, the patentee sometimes rivets a hook so as to project on the under side of the tile; the stem of the hook is rivited through a hole in the metal plate before it is enameled, which when so coated, is impervious to water, and obviates the necessity of an India rubber washer under the head of the nail, which is required when fastened by nails through the holes. The coating of these tiles is applied in two seperate compounds the one as the body and the other as a glue for the surface of the composition.—The coating of the body consists of sand or silica; the glue or second coating is applied in the shape of fine powder, which is dusted on the wet coating until the entire surface is covered. The powder adhearing to the moist coating causes it to set in some measure, when the tile is deposited in a drying room, previous to baking or firing. The tiles may be rendered ornamental by the application of coloring matters, according to any design or patern which are burt in, and thereby rendered indellible as well understood in porcelain manufactures.—London Morning Journal.

The Wife.

An exchange paper gives the following comprehensive definition of the word wife:

The word wife does not, in our opinion, simply mean, as Walker has it, 'a woman that has a husband;' for some women have husbands, and good ones too, who are not wives, according to our understanding of the term. Wife does not mean woman or lady only, nor slave nor mistress, a mother nor nurse, a teacher nor a companion, a tool or a play thing; but she is all these things united in one beautiful transparent whole.

The office of wife, therefore, is the happiest, yet most laborious, the highest yet most humble portion that frail mortality can occupy. Nor is there any station on earth, to which the 'lord of creation' can aspire, the duties of which are more responsible, and the faithful and inperfect discharge of which will be rewarded with more sincerity, than that of a wife, which we believe to be one of the consequences of a violation of the high trust committed to the first wife in the garden of Eden, that should be a 'helpmate of Adam.'

To society she is an indispensable member. To the parlor she is the most important personage; in the nursery the most abject slave; in the dining room, the most absolute sovereign; in the chamber a guardian angel; in the sick room the best physician to her children, the wisest priest to her husband, the most valuable agent, the dearest and cheapest councillor, the most loved and loving companion at home, and in a word, the wife is every blessing that mortal mind can conceive, or hearts desire. Home without a wife, is 'a strange land,' a head without brains, a heart without conscience, a ship without sails, an ocean without waves, a world without religion, a heaven without a God.

A STRIKE AND ITS RESULTS.—Nearly every trade and calling has had, or is pre- [illegible] employers to strike for higher wages. The [illegible] ceded to the demands of the workmen, as reasonable and just, under the general advance in the prices of living and the products of manufactures. Others, however, resist the strike as injurious or destructive to their business, the profits of which do not justify the rate of increase demanded. Among the latter are the hotel keepers, who say that their profits are now too seriously affected by the great increase in the cost of all kinds of provisions to admit of their raising the wages of their employees. The waiters at the Franklin House the other day, struck for an increase of wages, and gave the proprietors notice that they would quit at the end of the week, if their demand was not acceded to. The keepers of the hotel immediately engaged a number of young women, and introduced them into the dining-rooms to wait upon the table. The male waiters instantly left the house, but the female waiters performed their duties so well, and so much to the satisfaction of the boarders and the employers, that the latter have concluded to retain them as attendants, dispensing entirely hereafter with male servants.—Phila. Ledger.

FIRST RATE—A "down east" paper published the following advertisement. It is certainly a decided hit at a very unmannerly and vulgar practice:—

WANTED—One hundred and seventy five young men of all shapes and sizes, from the tall graceful dandy, with hair enough on his upper works to stuff a barber's cushion, down to the little hump-backed, freckle-faced, bowleged, carrot-headed upstart. The object is to form a gaping corpse, to be in attendence at the church doors on each Sabbath before the commencement of divine service, to stare at the females as they enter, and make delicate and gentlemanly remarks on their persons and dress. All who wish to engage in the above corpse, will appear at the various church doors next Sabbath morning, where they will be duly inspected, and their names personal appearance quality and quantity of brains, registered in a book kept for that purpose, and published in the newspapers. To prevent a general rush, it will be well to state that none will be enlisted who possesses intellectual capacities above that of a well-bred donkey.

The best mode of suicide for Ladies is to wear thin shoes and lace with a bedwrench. By this means they may kill themselves without being generally suspected, and the coroner cheated out of his fair gains.

The History of one glass of Wine!

We find, in Harper's Magazine for April, a very interesting history of the birth, parentage, and rise to power of the present Emperor of France. Included in that article, we also find the history of "one glass of wine," as follows: "But there is another party who repudiate the claims of the Bourbons, and espouse the cause of the Orleans branch of the family. The Duke of Orleans, the eldest son of King Louis Phillippe, was the inheritor of whatever rights his royal father could transmit. He was a noble young man—physically and intellectually noble. His generous qualities had rendered him universally popular. One morning he invited a few companions to breakfast with him, as he was about to take his departure from Paris to join his regiment. In the conviviality of the hour he drank a little too much wine. He did not become intoxicated. He was not in any respect a dissipated man. His character was lofty and noble. But in that joyous hour he drank a glass too much. He slightly lost the balance of his body, and of his mind.—Bidding adieu to his companions he entered his carriage. But for that extra glass of wine he would have kept his seat. He leaped from the carriage. But for that extra glass of wine he would have alighted upon his feet. His head first struck the pavement. Senseless and bleeding he was taken into a beer shop and died. That extra glass of wine overthrew the Orleans Dynasty; confiscated their property of one hundred millions of dollars, and sent the whole family into exile."

How true it is, that the traffic in intoxicating beverages not only brings misery and sorrow to the poor, but also to the wealthy and afluent. It "spares not the high, nor the humble. It dishonors the gray hairs of age, all beauty it turns to corruption and conquers the might of the brave." The king on his throne, the [illegible] its sirrocco sweep. Look not on the wine. N. Y. Reformer.

Curious Discovery in Boston.

The Post of Saturday states that some workmen were on the previous day digging a hole upon the common, in which to plant a tree, they came upon a brick arch, which, upon opening, and waiting awhile for the nitrous gas to escape, one of the working men descended and explored this cave. It was about ten feet deep, fifteen feet in length, and six feet wide. Upon the north side was an iron door, from which issued a flight of stone steps. This door was nearly decayed with rust. The bricks were of a very quaint mould, differing entirely from any that we have ever seen or heard of before, being of a semicircular shape. Four small earthen jars or pots, of a curious form, with uncouth heads moulded upon them, were found in one corner of this vault; one of which was filled with amorphous pieces of silver, covered with a yellowish brown mould or rust. The other three contained a motley assortment of jewelry of the most singular form and make—consisting of heavy gold rings elaborately wrought, with chasings of beads and antique armor, entwined in scroll-work and flowers; bracelets, buckles, earrings, &c. In a crevice between the bricks was stuck a dagger, which upon touching, the blade immediately crumbled to pieces, being completely eaten up with rust. The handle upon a little rubbing, proved to be of fine gold, set with six costly diamonds.

Here is a problem for antiquarians to solve. The only clue or key to this strange affair is the inscription found engraven upon the handle of the dagger, which some of our learned pundits are now trying to translate; it reads thus—"LO. OF. L. IRP A."

The articles have been deposited in the City Hall; and the cave was to remain open for the examination of the curious.—North American.

SELF-EDUCATION.—We all of us have two educations, one of which we receive from others; another and the most valuable which we give ourselves. It is this last which fixes our grade in society, and eventually our actual value in this life, and, perhaps the color of our fate hereafter. All the professors and teachers in the world would not make you a wise and good man without your own co-operation; and if such you are determined to be, the want of them will not prevent it.—Randolph to his Nephew.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

We would rather speak ill of ourselves than not talk of ourselves at all.

One thing which makes us find so few people who appear reasonable and agreeable in conversation is, that there is scarcely any one who does not think more of what he is about to say than of answering precisely what is said to him. The cleverest and most complaisant people content themselves with merely showing an attentive countenance, while we can see in their eyes and minds a wandering from what is said to them, and an impatience to return to what they wish to say; instead of reflecting that it is a bad method of pleasing or persuading others, to be so studious of pleasing oneself; and that listening well and answering well is one of the greatest perfections that can be attained in conversation.

A man of wit would often be embarrassed without the company of fools.

We often boast that we are never weary of ourselves. We are such braggarts, that we do not like to allow that we are bad company for ourselves.

As it is the characteristic of great wits to convey a great deal in a few words, so, on the contrary, small wits have the gift of speaking much and saying nothing.

It is rather by estimation of our own sentiments that we exaggerate the good qualities of others, than by estimation of their merit; and we wish to attract praise for ourselves even when we seem to be praising them.

We are not fond of praising, and never praise any one except from interested motives. Praise is a clever, concealed, and delicate flattery, which gratifies in different ways the giver and the receiver. The one takes it as a recompense of his merit, and the other bestows it to display his, which, by a reaction, expose faults in those we are praising that we should not dare to discover in any other way.

We seldom praise but to be praised.

Few people are wise enough to prefer useful reproof to treacherous praise.

There are reproaches which praise, and praises which convey satire.

A refusal of praise is a desire to be praised twice.

The desire of meriting the praise we receive fortifies our virtue; and that bestowed on talent, courage, and beauty, contributes to augment them.

It is more difficult to avoid being governed than it is to govern others.

If we did not flatter ourselves, the flattery of others would be very harmless.

A POST MORTEM EXAMINATION OF ANCIENT NATIONS.—Rev. Thomas Starr King, in an admirable lecture, delivered not long since, upon "Show and Substance," held a post mortem examination over the remains of ancient nations.

The verdict was, that "they did not perish by the might of foreign conquerors, but by their own innate corruption. Babylon died of delirium tremens; Ninevah, of apoplexy; Persia, weakness of the spine; Greece, quick consumption; Rome, paralysis."

In the same lecture the present characteristics of existing nations were thus happily hit off: "Ireland was hungry and dirty; France was troubled with neuralgia and St Vitus's dance; Spain had the scurvy; Austria was bad off with colics and cramps, that required the utmost nursing skill of the Russian Czar; Germany was subject to the Gout and headache; England had a plethora; while even in our youthful nation signs of a great black cancer might be seen in our lower limbs."—Ladies' Repository.

WOMEN WITHOUT RELIGION.—A man without religion is, at best, a poor reprobate, the football of destiny, with no tie linking him to infinity, and to the wondrous eternity that is begun within him; but a woman without it is even worse, a flame without heat, a rainbow without color, a flower without perfume. A man may, in some sort, tie his frail hopes and honors with weak, shifting, ground tackle, to business or to the world; but a woman without that anchor which they call Faith, is a drift and a wreck!

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1853.

☞ Our municipal election Tuesday last, passed off very quietly, and on the whole very satisfactorily, to the friends of good order and temperance. The result is a re-iteration of the no license vote of last April. Mayor Scudder is re-elected by 431 majority. It must be awfully aggravating to our whisky loving citizens to find their case getting worser and worser at every election. They will have to give it up, for the fact is the monster evil intemperance must come to an end. The people are willing it, and the march of temperance legislation, in the shape of the Maine Law or something better, cannot be checked till every State from Maine to California, is brought under the protection of such legislation.

We expect from our incoming administration an efficient and prompt enforcing of our laws. Officers will be sustained who will do their duty fearlessly, and those who expect to get office by courting the whisky selling power, will be elected—to defeat.

Heavy Fines.—An Irishman named Caleb Parlan and his wife were arraigned before Esquire Sullivan yesterday, for selling spirituous liquors contrary to law.—One case was proved against the former and three against the latter. Parlin was fined $20, costs $7, and his wife $60 with $21 costs. Some of our other dispensers of violation of law, assess a fine to such an extent as will deter the guilty from again offending. A milk-and-water course, such as has been followed to a great extent, does more harm than good. It encourages violation of law.—Journal.

We endorse the concluding sentiments of our neighbor as altered above; and we add milk and water is poor stuff any where, whether it be in the cans of our milk carts at 5 cents a quart, or in the administration of our laws. We prefer our water and our milk in separate doses. We hope our City authorities will give us unmixed justice.

Now though we never made a dictionary, yet we will venture a definition.

To assess an inadequate fine upon an offender, is a milk and water course. To punish obscure offenders while great ones are suffered to go free, is the same kind of a course with a good deal more water in it; and if we are not mistaken we, as a community, are somewhat chargable with fault in this matter. Shaving a mad dog's tail won't keep him from biting the people; no more than shutting up a few Irish doggeries will put a stop to the evils of intemperance among us, while the "saloons," "depots," &c., are corrupting our young men and making our sober citizens drunkards. Again we say, lay the axe at the root of the tree, and let every tree that brings not forth good fruit, be hewn down and cast into the fire. Make the ringleaders in liquor selling walk up to Esq. Sullivan's office, and no doubt they will get justice as well as Caleb Parlin and his wife.

☞ Tell us, neighbor of the "Journal," can a paper which determines to take a high stand on all questions touching the interest and morals of our city, consistently insert liquor advertisements? Who is the better for such information? "A word to the wise is sufficient."

The citizens of Bennington, Vt., have formed a society for the maintainance of the Vermont liquor law, and the general suppression of all vices in violation of statute law.

Returns from the April Election.

These come in but slowly. Pass up the figures friends; we wish to make out a table soon exhibiting, if possible, the vote over the whole State. We subjoin a few returns:

VOTE ON THE LICENSE QUESTION IN CARROLL COUNTY.

Townships.	License.	No License.
Jackson,	61	78
Madison,	4	29
Deercreek,	64	189
Carrollton,	34	42
Washington,	20	25
Rockcreek, U. P.,	12	35
Rockcreek, L. P.,	42	24
Democrat,	49	54
Burlington,	41	68
Clay,	32	30
Adams,	64	43
Jefferson,	9	44
Tippecanoe,	18	126
Monroe,	3	64
	453	851

Majority against License, 398.

JACKSON COUNTY.

Townships.	For.	Against.
Driftwood,	2	23
Grassy Fork,	33	27
Salt Creek,	36	43
Jackson,	11	23
Carr,	28	5
Washington,	3	7
Hamilton,	61	15
Vernon,	7	6
Owen,	81	19
Redding,	82	122
Brownstown,	86	73
	430	363

Majority for license, 67.

Five Townships voting against, and six for license.

Posey county does not foot up quite as favorably. It is rather a wild posey we should judge, but a little cultivation will no doubt improve it. To our friends there we would say, do not be discouraged. We have heard the Father of Temperance in America say that the first move he made was to bring in a resolution before a body of clergyman that they should dispense with liquor on Ordination occasions, and they voted him down unanimously. You are not in so small a majority as that, and next time you can turn the scales.

POSEY COUNTY.

Lynn,	63	12
Point,	no vote.
Harmony,	148	63
Robb,	97	55
Marrs,	no vote.
Smith,	29	16
Bethel,	no vote.

Rather a hard vote that. But in the townships where there was no vote on the question, is not license prohibited? The retailer must have a majority of the votes cast on the license question. If no votes are cast then the game is blocked so far as granting license is concerned. There are some bright spots then, even in Posey county.

Is the Dealer in Intoxicating Drinks a Criminal?

Is not the traffic a powerful temptation to crime?

We can scarce enter upon this almost limitless topic. But those who are men of veracity and who have been conversant with our courts of justice, declare that seven-tenths of the crimes committed are tracable directly or indirectly to the liquor traffic. Where could the rum-seller of twenty years standing find the most of his customers? Either in a drunkard's grave, or in the poor house or penitentiary, except those whom he might now find in the cold water army. The statistics of crime in this city furnish complete evidence of what we have said, of four violent deaths which have taken place among us within two years past; liquor was the direct cause of all, and liquor has borne an almost equal portion in the production of other crimes—street brawls, midnight burning of houses, burglaries, are the fruits of the liquor traffic. Men go forth from the dram shops to do these things. They are prompted to thefts, and robberies, to obtain the means to gratify their passion for liquor; for he who is under the dominion of this appetite finds himself unstrung for any useful occupation; but liquor he must have, even if he steals the means for procuring it. Now the liquor seller knows that his business is the most prolific source of crime, and continuing it with this plain understanding of its consequences, he becomes a party to all the crimes the inebriate commits.

And here we must take into view the fearful bearing of this traffic as a temptation to drunkenness.

The facts which stare us in the face here, are such as no man can deny, least of all the whisky seller, for he is daily conversant with them. What are the facts? More than ten times as many become drunkards of those who use ardent spirits statedly, as of those who do not so use them. Indeed no one denies that the liquor traffic is the grand prevailing cause of drunkenness throughout our land. And is drunkenness forbidden, and yet the furnishing of the natural, the known and prevailing cause of drunkenness is not forbidden? Is drunkenness an immorality, and yet the business whose legitimate and sole tendency is to make drunkards not an immorality? Will drunkards be shut out of heaven and drunkard makers not be condemned? Who is the most guilty, the destroyer or his victim? The inebriate, blinded by his appetite, and led, he scarce knows whither, or the dealer who coolly and for hire tempts him on to temporal and eternal ruin?

Look at the traffic as we may, it is a temptation to evil, such as is utterly forbidden in the petition—"Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil," and therefore it is an immorality.

Can License be granted in a township where no vote was cast on the license question?

We do not know what our learned lawyers would say in reply, but it seems to us clear that as the law now stands, no vote effectually blocks the game for the liquor seller.

The new law makes retailing without a license an offence punishable in any sum not exceeding two hundred dollars. Retailing without license then is every where prohibited. But on what terms can license be obtained?

Sec. 1. "No person shall retail spirituous liquors, * * without the consent of a majority of the legal voters of the proper township, who may cast their votes at the April election."

It is a privilege no one can enjoy without regard it a natural right vested in a man requiring some positive action, in order to withhold the right. The tables are now turned. Our laws will the abolition of the liquor traffic. But if the citizens of any community wish a rum-hole opened in their township, they may, by a direct expression of that wish at the ballot box, confer upon some one the privilege of superintending that rum-hole, and having his own nose deepest in it. But if no vote be taken on the subject what then? Then plainly no permission is granted; the law expressly provides that votes not endorsed shall not be counted either way. Unless more votes are cast for license than against it, then license cannot be granted. But where there was no vote at all, there are not more for than against.

Wake up then friends, and where the matter was passed over at our April election occupy your vantage ground, and protect yourselves and your neighbors according to the provisions of our new law. Enforce the prohibition. The traffic is outlawed and do not suffer it to be practiced. Even Posey County is almost half redeemed, according to fair construction, and if there are ten righteous men there they can secure prohibition in at least three townships.

Working of our Temperance Law.—The moral power of this new statute is wonderful in our town. Most of our great "rum holes" were set in order by a removal of "the article" before the day of doom; and our streets are nearly free from the evils of the direful traffic. Still, the fiend is not everywhere cast out. On the 17th, a drunken man was arrested and imprisoned. On the 18th, when sober and on oath, he brought the man to light who furnished him with the means of intoxication; and the seller was fined $10 and costs, and remains in jail on the judgment. On the 19th eleven barrels of spirits, some half empty, were seized in a grocery below Water street; also three barrels buried in the sand in the cellar of a grocery on that street. These await the judgment of the law: while the friends of Temperance proceed calmly and firmly in the performance of their duty.—Burlington (Vt.) Courier.

A new gold region has recently been discovered at Malacca.

City Election.

The following was the result of the election for City officers, held on Tuesday last:

Caleb Scudder, elected Mayor by 431 majority.

Daniel B. Culley, elected Clerk by 469 majority.

Matthew Little, elected Assessor by 127 plurality.

A. F. Shortridge, elected Treasurer by 474 plurality.

Benj. Pilbean, elected Marshal by 25 plurality.

Napoleon B. Taylor, elected City Attorney by 154 plurality.

James Woods, elected Civil Engineer without opposition.

William Hughey, elected Street Commissioner by 217 plurality.

COUNCILMEN.

First Ward.—Samuel Delzell and Geo. Durham.

Second Ward.—Horatio C. Newcomb, and Wm. H. Karns.

Third Ward.—Douglass Maguire and Henry Nelson.

Fourth Ward.—George W. Pitts and David Strickland.

Fifth Ward.—Nathan Edwards and Daniel Carlisle.

Sixth Ward.—Nicholas McCarty and Livingston Dunlap.

Seventh Ward.—Wm. A. Bradshaw, and Edwin H. Wingate.

Rum.—We are sick of recording the triumphs of the rum traffic. Yet another must be written. A woman in the town of Conquest, left the drunkery on Sunday evening, and on Monday morning was found in the woods dead, the whisky bottle in her hand! Can a man learn such a fact, and his cheek not tingle with shame? A woman die drunk in the woods, bottle in hand! She died by the authority of the people of Conquest. They created the Excise Board which gave to rumsellers the right to sell the wretched woman her whisky. Will Mr. Brown claim the honor of furnishing the whisky which effected the end so fatally? Up, grave digger! Take your pick and spade, and away to the graveyard.—There is a funeral.

Invite the Board of Excise and the rumseller. Ho! bring out the corps. Steadily, now—there! in with the cold earth; good sexton, for the dead drink not. As strangers pass the sod mound, whisper to them with crimson cheeks—a woman lies there! She died drunk: the bottle her only companion in death!

Excisemen! Rumseller! Huzza! for the licence system, and down with the Maine law.—Cayuga Chief.

Railroads in the United States.

On the first of January, 1853, there were, in the United States, 13,227 miles of completed railroad, 12,928 miles of railroad in various stages of progress, and about 7,000 miles in the hands of the engineers, which will be built within the next three or four years — making a total of 33,155 miles of railroad, which will soon traverse the country, and which, at an average cost of $30,000, (a well ascertained averege) for each mile of road, including equipments, &c., will have consumed a capital amounting to $994,650,000.

13,227 miles completed,	$306,810,000
12,928 miles in progress,	387,840,000
7,000 miles under survey,	210,000,000
33,155 Total - -	$994,650,000

Or, in round numbers, one billion of dollars. In all human probability, by the end of the next five years the United States will have more miles of railway than all the rest of the world. There are now in operation in the United States about 24,000 miles of telegraphic wires, or more than double the amount in other parts of the world.—Scient. Am.

New Description of Umbrella.—H. Richardson and Bennett C. Perry, Conn., have taken measures to secure a patent for an arrangement to enable an umbrella to be folded into so small a compass that it can be placed in the pocket or packed conveniently for travelling. The stick forms several pieces, which screw together, and, by means of shoulders, are maintained in a steady position. A small link and swivel prevent the several pieces from becoming detached when the joints are unfastened, and yet do not check the action of the screws. Each rib is jointed, and is kept in a proper position by a spring and catch, which easily yield when the umbrella is required to be folded.

When the news of the persecution and imprisonment of the Madiai family, for reading the Holy Scriptures, reached us from Tuscany, the Boston Pilot and other organs of Popery seemed to be in raptures, and actually gloated over this persecution for opinions sake. Is not this a significant fact?—Ib.

Items of News.

China annually expends $40,000,000 for opium.

Water Melons from Cuba have made their appearance in St. Louis.

Wm. H. Sherburne, twenty-one years old, while cutting wood in Barrington, N. H., severed the tribiai artery of his foot by a stroke of the axe, and bled to death.

That is a mlserable apology of a temperance man who is in comfortable circumstances, and yet cannot afford to take a temperance paper, or find time to read one.

The Maine Liquor Law was defeated in the Canadian Legislature by a vote of 32 to 28.

Queen Victoria has got another baby! Parliament appropriated another $25,000 for the support of this National responsibility.

The "Sons of Temperance" states that the prisoners in the jail of the city of Toronto, some weeks ago, sent a petition to the Mayor and Council, stating that they came there through drunkenness, and asked the Council to abolish all licenses.

Death of the Vice President.—A telegraphic dispatch, dated at Philadelphia, the 19th inst., says that Mr. King reached his home in Alabama on last Monday morning, and died on the evening of the same day.

He that clothes the poor, clothes his own soul. He that sweetens the cup of affliction, sweetens his own heart. He that feeds the hungry, spreads out a banquet for himself, more sweet and refreshing than luxury can bestow.

Rappings.—Statistical accounts from various lunatic asylums throughout the United States, report 573 lunatics as victims of this destructive delusion, while 17 persons have committed suicide under its influence.

An Austrian Item.—Not long ago two wealthy Jews, who, since 1847, had lived quietly at Rabb, were suddenly seized and informed that they had forfeited property and life, because in 1848 they had sold provisions to the Hungarian army. Their considerable property was confiscated and they were hanged.

A Just Distinction.—In the hereafter of Mahomet, the eternal mansions of the Christians, the Jews, the Magicians, &c., are sunk below each other in the abyss, and the lowest cell reserved for the hypocrites who have assumed the mask of religion.

How to Receive Abuse.—Cato, being scurriously treated by a low and vicious fellow, quietly said to him; "A contest between us is very unequal; for thou cans't bear ill language with ease, and return it with pleasure; but to me it is unusual to hear, and disagreeable to speak it."

President Pierce's Health.—A correspondent writing from Washington to the Charleston Standard, says:—"The President's health is failing greatly, his lungs being quite irritated. He worries too much over conflicting claims for office, taking every such contest, involving bitterness on either side, greatly to heart."

Mysterious.—Mr. T. J. Humphreys, coroner of Jefferson county, held an inquest on Saturday last, at Adams & Co.'s Express office, over a human skeleton contained in a box. The box was shipped at Queensville, and directed to "Dr. A. Davidson, Huntington, Indiana," by some person unknown to the jury.

We see by the English papers that Mrs. Hitfeld, an American lady, who was apprehended at Heidelberg as an agent of the revolutionary propaganda, has been sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment in the prison of Mosbach, a town of Germany, in Baden.

Temperance in Maryland.—A bill was reported in the State Senate proposing to take the sense of the voters of Maryland, at the next November election, on the propriety of prohibiting the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors. If a majority vote in favor of the prohibition, no license is to be granted after the first of February next.

A young man, says the N. Y. Alliance, who staggered into their office, and in that situation signed the temperance pledge, and who had signed and violated it repeatedly, on being asked why he had so often violated his own voluntary pledge, gave the following emphatic answer:—"My father keeps a tavern, and I belong to a fire company."

The Crystal Palace Bar.—We take pleasure in saying that the Managers of the Exhibition have resolved to prohibit the sale of all intoxicating liquors at the Refreshment Bar of the Palace. This is wise and right, and will be approved by all whose favor is worth securing. It gives us the more satisfaction to note this prohibition, inasmuch as an impression was abroad that a contrary course was intended.—New York Organ.

PROCEEDINGS
OF THE
Fifth Semi-Annual Session
OF THE
GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA.

TEMPERANCE HALL,
Cambridge City, April 26, 2 P. M.

The Grand Division met, and opened in usual form.

After the initiation of Representatives, and the appointment of committees, the Grand Worthy Patriarch made the following report:

To the Grand Division of Indiana:

BRETHREN:—In accordance with the requirements of our constitution and by-laws, we have met to consult together in regard to the best interests of our common cause; and it becomes us as dependent beings, to offer up to the giver of all good, grateful thanks for the preservation of our lives since we last met, and for ability thus to meet again. When we take a view of the past, and consider what has been accomplished within a few short years, in favor of the glorious cause of temperance, we have great reason to take courage and press onward with the full assurance, that if we are faithful to the trust committed to our common guardianship, the time is not far distant, when our otherwise happy country will no longer be cursed with the demon of intemperance. Look around you and behold the change in community—in public sentiment—upon this subject. How was it but a few years since? He who was an avowed advocate of total abstinence, was a by-word and reproach, but now the most ultra friend of prohibition is esteemed a benefactor of his race. Then the subject and cause of temperance was but little considered. Now it is the most prominent of all the benevolent enterprises of the day. In a short time and by a little effort, has been accomplished this mighty change.—Only ten short years have passed, since the star of our beloved order lit up the eastern horizon, and now "behold its influence flowing o'er the whole earth to bless and beautify." The trophies of its victories over the tyrant king, are as the sands of the sea, and those who through its influence, have been redeemed and saved from a drunkard's grave, are producing joy and happiness in the hearts of thousands of earth's inhabitants. Let us then, my brethren, take courage, and resolve from this time to be more faithful in the work committed to our hands; and not lay off our armor, nor slaken our efforts, until the last vestige of Alcohol is driven from our land, and this, and generations yet unborn are "secure from its ravages."

In submitting this my first report, it is gratifying to be able to inform you, that the cause and order within your jurisdiction, with few exceptions, is in a sound, and in many localities, prosperous condition. And although I have received but few reports from Grand Deputies, still from the information I have received, I am convinced that our cause has more friends and fewer enemies at this time, than at any former period.

The system of obtaining reports and information in regard to the condition of the cause and order, through the agency of Grand Deputies, has proved, so far as my experience goes, almost an entire failure. If those only were appointed to fill that important office, who are good, thorough temperance men, and attached to the principles of our order, and who too have the ability and willingness to discharge its duties, then there would be little difficulty in obtaining the needful information. But in a majority of cases you are under the necessity of appointing those of whom you know nothing, except that they have passed the chairs of their respective Divisions.—Hence persons are frequently appointed, who have long since ceased to be members of the order; or, if they are still nominally such, care little or nothing for its prosperity. Others, feeling a desire to become noted, rather than useful, overstep the bounds of legal authority, and thereby often undo all that has been done by those who are working for the good of the cause. Hence difficulties frequently occur, which either break up Divisions, or greatly cripple their usefulness in the cause of "all mankind." It may be difficult, however, to remedy these evils, and it is a subject that should be approached with caution. Permit me, however, to suggest the propriety of requiring each Worthy Patriarch to report the condition of his Division to this office, at the close of each quarter, under the penalty of not receiving the pass-word for the next quarter; and that the fact be stated in the quarterly returns to the G. Scribe's office, that said report has been made to the G. W. P., before the pass-word is forwarded.

If it is necessary that you or your officers be correctly informed as to the prosperity or condition of the order under your jurisdiction, then is it equally necessary that a plan be adopted by which that information can be obtained from all parts, and at the proper time?

Under the present system of obtaining these reports, your officers are not, nor can they be prepared, to make to you the reports, and give you that information which our laws require of them; because they have but a scattered data, from which to glean that knowledge. But I leave the subject with you, in the full belief that you will take such action upon it, and adopt such measures as will in your judgment produce an object so desirable.

The cider question still proves a source of difficulty in a few Divisions. Among them is Bennington Division No. 353.—This Division adopted a by-law, which declared the drinking of sweet cider by its members no violation of its pledge, and received members with the understanding that they could drink sweet cider. Bro. William Hewitt, a member of that Division, wrote me upon the subject, asking my opinion of said by-law and their proceedings. I wrote the Worthy Patriarch of the Division, instructing him to have said by-law annulled, and to deal with those members who had drunk sweet cider, for a violation of Art. 2 of the Constitution. I was subsequently informed, that some of their members were disposed to take Walker or Webster as authority upon this subject, rather than this Grand Body, or the National Division. A second communication was sent them upon the subject, the effect of which, as I am informed by one of their members, was the annulling of said by-law. No action, however, has been had with those who used cider as a beverage. Not wishing to use what might be considered, by some, great authority, I have taken no further action in the case, but I lay it before you, and ask such action as will fully vindicate our laws, and teach those who violate their plain letter, that it cannot be done with impunity. I understand that this Division is in a prosperous condition at this time, and that harmony prevails among its members. All communications upon this, or any other subject, which I have received, together with my action upon them, are herewith submitted to you, for your approval or reversal.

Canaan Division No. 235, was organized March 11, 1852, and at their next meeting a proposition was received, acted upon, and the candidate initiated a member of the order. Some eleven months afterwards, a question was raised in said Division, as to the legality of the proceedings in the case, and my opinion asked. I replied, that they had violated the law; but under the circumstances of the case, I thought it best not to disturb their proceedings, but to refer the matter to you. The reasons which inclined me to this course, were, that initiation again would not make the individual any more a member, than he had been for eleven months past, and that if his membership was declared illegal, he would be entitled to receive back all dues which he had paid into the Division. Besides, at the time the act was performed, the Division was young, and its members not well informed in regard to our laws, or their duties. I ask your decision in this case.

A difficulty occurred in Gosport Division No. 332, between D. G. W. P. L. A. Banta, and the Worthy Patriarch of said Division, in which some of the members participated. After repeated trials, finding it impossible to settle it to the satisfaction of the parties, and to restore harmony and good feeling in the Division, I informed them I could do no more in the premises, than refer it to you for adjustment. I am satisfied that this, as well as most other difficulties which occur in Divisions, is the result of ignorance of our laws and usages. And we need not expect it to be otherwise, so long as men are elevated to the responsible offices of Deputies and Worthy Patriarchs, who have not the requisite qualifications to discharge their duties, or who are unwilling or too negligent to inform themselves in respect to them. If Divisions would select for the office of Worthy Patriarch the best qualified member, and continue him in office from term to term, both you and they would be saved much trouble and labor. I presume that a recommendation to that effect, from this Grand Body, would have a salutary influence upon Divisions in future.

It is a matter of regret, that all our efforts to obtain a law for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, has thus far proved unavailing. It is true that a law was passed by our late Legislature, that is, in one respect, in advance of all previous legislation in our State. I refer to sec. 8 of said law, and when we admit that so far as this section goes, it is an advance upon our previous legislation, I think all is conceded in its favor that any good temperance man can admit. I hold, that the effect of this law, will be to open anew the flood-gates of intemperance in our State. For who, let me ask, is not possessed of ingenuity enough, to obtain all the liquor he may desire, under the five exceptions in section 1 of this law? And yet as deficient as this law really seems, I fear that many who have heretofore labored with us for the suppression of alcoholic liquors as a beverage, will be content with it, and relax their efforts in favor of entire prohibition and confiscation of all that can intoxicate. Nothing short of this, will, or can accomplish the end desired. The entire prohibition or suppression of the sale of intoxicating drinks, is an essential feature of that protection from the evils of intemperance, which the people of this State have a right to demand from their public guardians, and it is a right which they should not withhold; nor should they attempt to palm upon community a substitute in lieu of a prohibitory act. Let us then, my brethren, as we have again been disappointed in our cherished hopes, take a bold and decided stand upon the platform of prohibition, and not lay down the weapons of our warfare until our beloved Indiana is freed "from the all-pervading destroyer." And as our principles are eternal, let us act them out in all we do or say, especially at the ballot-box; for it is there our influence can be most felt in behalf of suffering humanity, and it is there our enemies most fear and dread us.

I am unable to give you any account of the labors of Bro. Parsley, your Grand Lecturer. But from his labors heretofore, and the success which attended them wherever he went, I doubt not they have been of that kind, and attended with such results, as will warrant you in continuing him in the field for the next six months.

Should you find that the funds of this Grand Division would warrant it, I recommend that one or more additional efficient lecturers be employed, to canvass those parts of the State which have not been visited by your lecturers the last year. If it is important that lecturers be employed at all, it is equally important that every part of your jurisdiction share in their labors. This cannot be the case with only one in the field, and if it is expected, that those parts only be visited by them which are most needy, every town and neighborhood will, by its inhabitants, be considered that place. Bro. Parsley, I doubt not, can perform as much labor, and do as good service as any one man, but he cannot, nor should it be expected at his hands, perform all that is needed of that kind of labor in the State. Will it not be a matter of economy, even, in dollars and cents, to place a sufficient number of able and judicious lecturers in the field at once, and thus through their efforts convert the entire people to our opinions and belief upon the subject of the liquor traffic, rather than pursue the system of one lecturer for this great field, and thereby protract and continue the warfare for years to come? I consider this an important question, for upon its issue hang momentous results, both for time and eternity. This question should not be weighed by paltry gold, for the salvation of one man from a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell, is of more consequence than all the gold that earth can produce. And if by the preaching of our principles, men's consciences can be reached and their judgments convinced, is it not our duty to give of our substance with a liberal hand, to send forth our messengers of truth and love. Ours is the most efficient organization for the suppression of intemperance in our State, and it is to us that the wails and petitions of suffering humanity are wafted by every breeze. We have voluntarily taken upon ourselves the responsibility of this great work, and it behooves us as men who fully realize the position we occupy, to discharge these obligations as faithful stewards. If there was ever a time in the history of the temperance reform in our State, when bold, efficient, and judicious effort was imperiously demanded on the part of its friends, that time is now. Public sentiment is being aroused, and thousands, who heretofore have opposed our efforts, or looked coolly on, are beginning to view them with marked respect, and, in some degree, appreciate our movements and designs. It is therefore necessary, that as the dark clouds of error and superstition give way, and the chains of habit begin to break, that light and truth be poured in upon the public mind.

Another important auxiliary in the diffusion of correct principles among the masses, is the scattering broadcast over the land, papers and tracts devoted expressly to the subject of temperance, and the advocacy of the principles of prohibition. Many, who will not attend a public lecture, will, in their leisure moments, read a paper or tract, and not unfrequently from such reading, has conviction seized the minds, and truth found a lodgment in the hearts of those heretofore ignorant of, or opposed to our principles. I consider one of the first duties to be performed by us as individual members of the cause and order, is the increasing of the circulation of the "Temperance Chart," the organ of this Grand Division. Let every member of the Order, in a special manner, consider himself an agent for that purpose, and use his influence in its behalf; for unless this is done, and that speedily, the treasury of this Grand Division will have to meet a portion of the expense of publication.

I cannot close this report without adverting to a practice that is too common among many of the members of our order. I refer to the practice of profane swearing. This habit is unbecoming in any person, and especially in a Son of Temperance.—Besides it is a violation of the rules of the order. This Grand Division, at its January Session in 1848, page 10 of its proceedings, declared, "That, in the opinion of this Grand Division, no person can possess a good moral character who is a profane swearer or gambler." And as no person who does not possess a good moral character can become, or continue a member of our order, it is therefore absolutely necessary that Subordinate Divisions enforce the rules against those who violate them in this particular. Moreover, this practice by our members, is a serious objection in the minds of many, to their uniting with our order. Many, who are good temperance men, would, were it not for this one practice, enrol themselves in our ranks; but, knowing the habit to prevail to a great extent among those with whom they would be obliged to associate in the Division room, they prefer to stand aloof, and not thereby be partakers of this shameful practice. I can but hope, that this subject will receive some attention at the present session.

In conclusion, brethren, I trust that the business for which we have convened, will be transacted in that spirit which should ever characterize true Sons of Temperance, and that our deliberations will be such as will redound to the glory of God, and the good of our fellow-men.

Respectfully submitted,
P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

Referred to committee on the State of the Order.

(Continued in our next.)

The Wealth of a State.

IT is impossible to estimate exactly the mass of the public fortune. It is the national capital. It is a capital which changes, is modified, increases or diminishes according as the population of the country, increases or diminishes in numbers; according as that population clears, plants, sows, harvests, builds, traffics, more or less; according as new branches of industry give more or less value to the soil, the mines, the forests, the coal-mines, the elements of national manufacture; according as the seasons, those finances of God, second, more or less, the labor of man, and render the year prodigal or stinted in harvests; according as money, which is but the representative of the value of products, is more or less abundant or more or less active in circulation; according as bills of exchange, notes payable between individuals, a conventional money of paper, are more or less multiplied among the citizens; according, finally, as credit, that unlimited money, inspires all with more or less confidence in each, and each in all.—All these things have an influence on the value of the national capital, either separately or together.—[LAMARTINE.

THE MISSISSIPPI UNLIKE ALL OTHER RIVERS.—A river that runs East or West crosses no parallels of latitude, consequently, as it flows towards the sea, it does not change its climate, and being in the same climate, the crops that are cultivated at its mouth, are grown also at its sources, and from one end to the other of it there is no variety of productions; it is all wheat and corn, or wine, or oil, or some other staple. Assorted cargoes, therefore, cannot be made up from the produce which such a river brings down the market. On the other hand, a river that runs North or South crosses parallels of latitude; changes its climate at every turn; and as the traveller descends it, he sees every day new agricultural staples abounding. Such a river bears down to the sea a variety of productions, some of which, some one or another of the different nations of the earth is sure to want, and for which each one will send to the markets at its mouth, or the port whence they are distributed over the world. The assortments of merchandise afforded by such a river, are the life of commerce. They give it energy, activity, and scope. Such a river is the Mississippi, and the Mississippi is the only such river in the world.—Literary World.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—Dr. J. V. C. Smith, of Boston, says that immense crops of poppies are raised in Switzerland, not for opium, but for the oil extracted from the seeds. This oil is beautifully transparent, extensively used in house painting, colorless as water, and when mixed with white lead leaves a beautiful surface that never becomes yellow. Now that linseed oil is rising in price, and as much of our soil is unfit for flax, he advises the attempt at cultivating the poppy here, which does very well even on poor, sandy soil. He says, too, that the oil is quite palatable for salads.

COD LIVER OIL.—A physician of eminence desires us to state that this nauseous medicine may be administered without the least disgust to a patient, by chewing and swallowing a small quantity of the roe of a smoked herring both before and after taking the oil. A piece of sardine will answer if herring is not at hand, or is not palatable.

The disguise is perfectly effectual and the most delicate patient may thus use the substance with comfort.—Charleston Mercury.

EVERY young man should remember that the world will always honor industry. The vulgar and useless idler, whose energies of body and mind are rusting for want of occupation, may look with scorn upon the laborer engaged at his toil; but his scorn is praise, his contempt honor.

Elegant Extract.

The following elegant passage is taken from the address of Edward Everett, on Africa, recently made before the Colonization Society. In speaking of the impracticability, if not impossibility of civilizing the continent of Africa by white men, that speaker said:

"I say again, sir, you proud Anglo-Saxon, and self-sufficient, all attempting white man, you cannot civilize Africa.—You have subdued and appropriated Europe; the native race are melting before you in America, as the untimely snows of April before the vernal sun; you have possessed yourselves of India; you menace China and Japan; the remotest isles of the Pacific are not distant enough to escape your grasp, nor insignificant enough to elude your notice; but Central Africa confronts you, and bids you defiance. Your squadrons manage or blockade her coast, but neither on errands of peace, or the errands of war, can you penetrate into the interior. The God of Nature, no doubt for wise purposes, however inscrutable, has drawn across the chief inlets a cordon you cannot break through. You may hover on the coast, but you dare not set foot on shore. Death sits portress at the undefended gateways of her mud-built villages—yellow and intermittent fevers, blue plagues, and poisons, that you can see as well as feel, await your approach. As you ascend the rivers, pestilence shoots from the mangroves that fringe their noble banks, and the glorious sun, which kindles all inferior nature into teeming, bursting life, darts disease into your languid system.—No, you are not elected for this momentous work. The great Disposer, in another branch of his family, has chosen out a race—descendents of this torrid region, children of this vertical sun—and fitted them, by ages of stern discipline, for the gracious achievement.

From foreign realms, and lands remote, supported by his care,
They pass, unharmed. through burning climes, and breathe the tainted air."

The modest virgin, the prudent wife, or the careful matron, are much more serviceable in life, than petticoated philosophers, blustering heroes, or virago queens. She who makes her husband and her children happy, who reclaims the one from vice, and trains up the other to virtue, is a much greater character than ladies described in romance, whose whole occupation is to murder mankind with shafts from their quiver or from their eyes.—Goldsmith.

The "Cincinnati Commercial" of yesterday morning, says:—"The committee of one hundred appointed to wait upon Mayor Snellbaker and request him to resign his office, went to the Council Chamber on Monday morning and requested his presence. He refused to leave his office, but announced that he was ready to receive the Committee. Whereupon they grew indignant and resolved to appeal to the people in mass meeting on yesterday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, in 5th street Market-space."

RUM AND WATER.—We notice that at the recent municipal election in Louisville, Ky., a majority was given in favor of license for the sale of spirituous liquors, and a majority against bringing pure water into the city. We never knew of an old toper who wanted his grog stronger than 'alf and 'alf, but it seems our Kentucky neighbors prefer it clear. No doubt they are in favor of water for culinary purposes, but for steady drink prefer rum.

EARLY INFLUENCES.—Linnæus was the son of a poor Swedish clergyman. His father had a little flower-garden, in which he cultivated all the choice flowers which his means of taste could select. Into the flower-garden he introduced his little son from infancy; and this little garden undoubtedly created the taste in this child which afterwards made him the first botanist and naturalist of his age, if not of his race.

THERE are two sorts of corruption in governments—one, when the people do not observe the laws; the other, when they are corrupted by the laws.

Grand Temple of Honor.

The next annual session of this body will be held in this city, on Wednesday, the 25th inst., at 2 o'clock, P. M. A general attendance is requested.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

MANSION HOUSE,
Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,

Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,

oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—CHEAPEST OF ALL.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT

MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

FOR THE CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost INSTANTANEOUS relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hcking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfully testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week,
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2.50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD. Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. RICHARD M. HALL. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott. Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D, Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many remedies without much relief, I at last tried the CHERRY PECTORAL which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

DR. AYER, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
EDWARD HITCHCOCK, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. AYER. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

PRESIDENT PERKINS, Vermont Med. College.
PROF. SILLIMAN, Yale College
PROF. VALENTINE MOTT, New York.
PROF. CLEAVELAND, Bowdoin Med. College.
PROF. BUTTERFIELD, Ohio Med. College
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S C Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter
Hon. GEO. P. MARSH, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen EMANUEL BULNES, President of Chili
Rt. Rev. ED POWER, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. DOCT. LANSING, Brooklyn, New York.
ARCHIBISHOP PURSELL, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist. Lowell, Mass

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

---

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY

BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy. Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1853. NO. 47.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,		$0 50
" "	for each subsequent insertion,	25
" "	for 3 months,	3 00
" "	for 6 months,	5 00
" "	for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" "	for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

From the Temperance Advocate.

The subject of the following lines, was a lovely and beloved woman, the wife of an intemperate, but highly intelligent and honorable man. The particulars of their death are known to the public.

In memory of Mrs. Harriet Keeler.

BY MRS. E. HEDDON.

Her guardian angel hovered there that morn,
Aud whispered thoughts of gloom! Daylight looked dim,
And nature's music seemed a mournful strain!
What spell was round her! The mysterious sounds
Of inward voices breathing through the soul,
Touched sadly all the trembling strings of life,
And told of some portentous shadow near,
Hope and fear alternate tinged her sky
With light and shade, as fancy wandered back
To other years;—love's first sweet dream of bliss—
The bridal hour—when her heart's chosen stood,
In manly beauty, proudly by her side,
With vows of changeless love! O those bright hours
Threw back a radiance on the stream of life
That seemed a rainbow on its darkest cloud
And then love strove with fear and bade her trust
The deep affection of that cherished heart,
Which worshipped still, amid the direful wreck
Of reason's glorious powers: He was the same
High noble spirit yet; though blighted, dimned,
By earth's worst scourge the ever maddening cup,
Though crushed, degraded, frenzied, chained,
To the foul fiend that held him in his grasp,
She could not hate; she could not cease to love;
But fondly looking back to what he was,
She dared to hope he would be thus again.
Again the guardian spirit whispered "fly!"
Dark boding thoughts came hovering o'er her soul,
As with a trembling heart she silent lists
His coming footsteps; one short fervent prayer
She sends to heaven for him, then calmly waits,
While from her features beam a mournful smile.
O nature veil thy face in midnight gloom!
Weep tears of blood o'er thy poor fallen son!
The last dark hour had come! Wild passions burned;
Passions first kindled in the fiery bowl,
Thence flashed into the brain—turned love to hate,
Drove reason from its throne, and nerved the hand,
(That once held his in fond affection's clasp,)
To send the fatal messenger of death!
She died Love's martyr! Let her grave be strewn
With nature's fairest flowers, which friendship's tears
Shall water, and her memory embalm.

But who can paint,
Or who conceive the horror of those hours
He lived alone beside her bleeding form?
What agony, remorse and anguish wrung
His soul when reason re-assumed its throne?
He could not, would not live; ten thousand deaths
Crowded in one were then sweeter than life.
And thus he rushed self-doomed across the stream
Dividing worlds, to meet her on that shore,
Where earth's dark Upas blights the soul no more!

A voice comes from their tomb!
Oh! hear it ye who take the price of blood!
Who traffic in the crimes and groans of men!
And hear it ye who sip the poisoned cup,
Or smile complacently upon the foe!
Loudly it calls upon the living world
To drive this demon from the abodes of men,
And thus avenge its victims at one blow.
Look on this double grave once more and say
How many other martyrs yet must bleed!
How many hearts must break in silent wo?
How many noble intellects be dimn'd
Or quenched in frenzied darkness? Oh! how long
Shall the foul fiend walk in the face of day,
Feeding on human woes and human blood,
And what is worse upon the human mind?
Oh hear! by all the cherished ties of life!
By all your hopes of immortality!
By all your love of kindred, country, home,
Hear woman's prayer—humanity's appeal,
And God's command—'DESTROY THE FIEND!'

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Brookville American.

The Inebriate's Remorse.

BY M. LOUISA CHITWOOD.

Yes, I am spirit-haunted—if I walk
A step keeps pace with mine, and if I sleep
A figure clad in white sweeps through my dreams,
And so my life is but a weariness.

Shrouded under the dusts of many years, is one memory which all the waters of the Lethe would fail to wash from the cells of my heart. I have mingled with the crowd, but it followed me there. I have clothed myself as with the mantle of darkness; but it was not yet concealed. Is there a spot on earth where the steep bastions of oblivion rise up against memory? If so, let me seek it, for only there can I find balm. Sometimes when I am sitting by the quiet lake, beneath the willow whose long slender branches droop mournfully over her grave, I see a white sail far out on the waters, and a white form as of an angel guiding it towards the shore; but it sinks before me, and I live over again the agony of my desolation. Years ago our hearts were bound as with chains of steel, and neither time nor change, nor life nor death can separate them. The Pale Angel spreads his white arm between us, but his sword is powerless to separate our souls. To others cold and unkind, to her I was gentle and affectionate. To others unloving, to her the very spirit of adoration. I believe we always love those best who are our opposites in every thing, and we were certainly as unlike as two mortals could be. We had our trials, our misgivings, for our paths lay through the wide vale of poverty, yet they at last met. In yonder valley stands the old church where our life destinies were sealed. The The swallows twitter all day long beneath the mossy eaves; and through the broken windows and ivy-wreathed porch the winds sigh in mournful requiems. Deserted by the living—except some sad mourners who wander through the "city of the dead" near by reading the names of loved ones on the crumbling headstones—it is said that spiritual forms glide in and out at the massive doors in the dim starlight, and low melodies rise and die in very sweetness—that pale silver lights move up and down the long aisles, and then with one song louder, sweeter than the rest, all is silent again. Spirit haunted—I can almost believe it, for what tales could that old church tell, had it language, of the living and the dead—of burials and of bridals. But many of its children have gone down to rest now, and so has she of whom I am writing. Our united lives began very happily. Our humble home seemed situated in Eden, and whether the hill sloping away towards the south was carpeted with emerald or crowned with the yellow leaves of autumn, or white with the snows of winter, dove-eyed peace sat triumphant upon our hearts. I could labor all day until every energy seemed exhausted, and yet it was a very pleasure, for it was for her sake, the personification of all my boyhood's dreams.

I had been indolent heretofore, but love is a great strengthener, and now nothing seemed difficult. My whole nature seemed changed. I loved every one—from her face I caught that great life blessing, as clouds catch the beauty of sunset. But it is a hard thing to forsake old habits—as hard as to believe a friend unworthy—or forsake one you have once loved, and this new path, though beautiful sometimes, was kept with difficulty. There was another, spangled with flowers in whose hearts lingered deadly odors, fair to the visual sight, but leading away into darkness, where I lingered at times in sore temptation. How we strive to hide our faults from those we love, so I hoarded my secret in my heart, but it was like concealing an unsightly seed in the earth—it soon makes itself known, having gained new strength and depth of root. I fell in with old companions—I "looked upon the wine when it was red," and the forbidden path was entered. O, my lost one! thine eyes full of tears, are looking yet upon me as they looked that night. How miserably I felt. I could have hidden myself as beneath mountains as I reflected on my own unworthiness. Weeks glided on and I resisted temptation. The bird fascinated by the serpent cannot escape, struggle as it may—the ship nearing the whirlpool is fated—the MODERATE DRINKER, ah! what strong arms hold him in reach of the tempter. Not at once, I yielded. One step at a time bears us to ruin. At last I became unkind, almost cruel, to her who was my life's life. But it was only when under the maddening influence—Heaven knows I loved her too much for unkindness in my calm hours. How often I yet wake in the dark night hours with the heart cry of pardon on my lips, but she does not answer—the clay is too deep upon her now to admit the ceaseless moanings of remorse. I would perform a pilgrimage to the most remote spot of earth if by that means I might receive absolution. But I know she forgave me—I know she covered all my faults with the white mantle of love—but if I could only hear it from her lips, which are still forever. It was an evening in June. The honeysuckle over our lattice was pink with blossoms. All day long the winds had moved up and down the fields, now playing with glossy blades of corn, and now swaying the long grass in the meadows. The reapers were weary in yellow wheat—and the soft rushing of their sickles grew fainter as the sunset was brightening. The lake of which I spoke, sang the low moan of a restless heart, although its face was a sea of glass mingled with fire. Never had I loved my wife more than I did this day. I determined to give one more struggle, and come off victor or die. I had purchased a little pleasure boat, and often of lovely evenings we enjoyed a sail on the lake. I went down to the shore to get it ready for a trip this evening, and while there, came in contact with the man whom I feared more than any other on earth—his influence I mean, for there was something so irresistibly fascinating about him that he entered my heart in spite of myself, and when there I could not cast him out. He was the great instrument of my ruin; he had led me farther wrong than any one else I had ever met. He drew a flask from his pocket, and holding it up between me and the sunlight, said, "Most superior article, taste it." I refused. "Now, dear Frank, you certainly won't refuse to gratify so small a request"—he urged. I looked in his face—there was the same affectionate glance that had so often won me—the gentle smile wreathing the lips whose lowest murmur was music—the winning tones again urged and I yielded. Ah, I was ashamed to look my dear wife in the face. She did not suspect me, and passing my arm around her, we went down to the lake. Soon we were floating out upon the clear waters. The crimson glow had waned, but every wave was a belt of brightness. We sang old songs, until our very souls seemed wandering in Elysium. The stars came out quietly and beautifully as when the shepherds of old watched their sleeping flocks—and the full moon seemed looking on us alone, and not on the scenes of misery scattered over all the wide earth. But on her face, the star of my life, I was looking. Her face was as marble in the bright moonlight—the full lips were smiling—the azure eyes lifted Heavenward—the long golden curls, twined with white rosebuds, fell like sunlight about her, and almost floated on the rippling waters. I seemed in the presence of an angel. "I never felt so intensely happy in my life," she said, as if speaking to herself; there is not one human being beneath yonder moon who is happier this night than I. All pleasures of the past and present seem concentrated in this hour—every face I ever loved is smiling on me, not with the dark valley of Death between us in seeming, but with light beaming from every feature." Far, and farther, we went almost unconsciously. Presently I felt a dizzy sensation. Good Heavens! I said to myself, we must return immediately. We turned homeward—smoothly and pleasantly we glided along. All was silent except the gentle plashing of the oar; our hearts were too full for words. I still felt dizzy; oh, how I pushed for the shore.

Sing something, dearest, I said; for I could not bear to leave her alone to her thoughts. She sang the beautiful song of "The Messenger Bird," and then repeated the last two lines:

"We know thou bird! that their land is bright,
But say do they love there still."

"Yes, yes, she said, they do 'love there still," for is not love the one great watchword of heaven. You must remember this, dear Frank, and if I go first to that immortal shore, think not that because earthly bonds are broken, that spiritual union is dissolved also. I would then be your guardian angel, and never leave you for one momentin your life." She paused a moment and then continued—"What a strange mystery love is—I don't know exactly how I happened to love you, for you were so hard hearted and cruel to every one, but to me you were the embodiment of all virtues." She grew thoughtful, and I spoke:—"The world dealt very bitterly with me, my love, and by this only can I justify myself. It is natural to return evil for evil. For years I lived among strangers, cold, heartless creatures, and in childhood, when the way should be flowery, so that in after years one may have it a blessed remembrance, I do not remember a dozen kind words or looks. I could see other children of my own age smiling and happy, but for me there was no rest nor happiness. After a while, I lef the place forever, and went out in the wide world friendless. I was but a boy when I first saw you, and remember how bitterly I felt because you seemed so happy. Soon you became dear as life, and dearer, and when I knew that you loved me, the world became beautiful as dream land—I hated every one who spoke to you, for I feared they would win your love from me. But they did not, and oh, how unworthy I have been of you."

"Let us cast away, beloved,
In the future all the past,"

she answered, and our hearts were knit together forever, and stronger and dearer than ever. How wretchedly I felt, for the secret GLASS was burning, like fire, in my veins. I grew more dizzy; on, and on, and on, we swept until in the distance I could see the white spray lashing the shore. I do not think she noticed how ashy pale I was, nor how my heart trembled. I saw one high wave approaching. I felt my utter helplessness to meet it—and the next moment, we were cast forward into the deep waters. * * * I have an indistinct remembrance of grappling with the waves, but nothing definite, until I found myself seated on the shore, with her form folded closely to my heart. She was looking very lovely even though the seal of Death was on the marble pallor of her brow, The long golden curls were straightened with the heaviness of water, and her white dress was glittering with sand.

The moon was shining as brightly as she had shone a few hours before, when looking upon our happiness. I could have welcomed a storm, but that calm moonlight was terrible. The lake was comparatively calm, the winds were sighing through the willow leaves above me, for I was sitting then on the very spot where she is now buried. Only by degrees do we realize a great sorrow. I sat quiet, tearless—she seemed sleeping, and I, dreaming. I pondered over my past life—I recalled her every look and tone. Oh, then I thought of the future—suns would rise—spring, summer, autumn, and winter, would come and go, bringing their appropriate pleasures and blessings. But for me there never would be joy any more. I thought of the morrow, and wondered whether the reapers would be as merry as they were to-day; and if the robin would sing on the edge of the meadow. With such simple thoughts I tried to forget myself; and I remember of saying "when will the night be over." It is not over yet, the night brooding with sable wings over my heart—I thought again of the future, what would it be to me. How could I go through with the dull routine of cares? How could I strive when there was no goal at the end of the striving. My desolation came in one concentrated thought and I fell senseless by her side.

When next I awoke to consciousness, they had buried her away from my sight forever, and henceforth there was nothing to live for. I was lying in our home—our once happy home. The vines were drooping over the window, in the soft breeze "swaying,"—the sunlight streamed through the lattice—the clock was ticking lazily on the mantel—HER BIRD singing in his cage. But where was she who was the light, and life, and beauty and sweetness of them all. I saw the form of a man seated near me and recognized the serpent like L—— who had lured me to all this anguish. He turned his eyes towards mine. Ah what sweetness there was in their glance—his lips moved as if to speak. I sprang up in a moment. "Don't speak to me, villain," I said; "I can bear anything but the sound of your voice." "Dear Frank, do be quiet," he said with the same smile wreathing his lips which had so often fascinated me. Seizing a large book that lay near me, I threw it towards him with all the force I could summon, and exhausted by the effort, I fell backward on my pillow. "Delirious yet," I heard him say to some one who entered the room, and I said nothing more. The next morning I was stronger and calmer. He was seated again by my bedside. "L——," said I in a clear, firm tone, "I want to speak to you. You have done me more injury than any other mortal being. You have poured the very dregs of bitterness into my heart, winning by gentle looks and soft tones. Why you have done this I know not, yet I forgive all your wrongs but one—for that there is no atonement. I was happy once, but that is all over now. Of the present, not of the past I would speak. You are a murderer—nay, start not, you cannot escape to any spot on this earth, where this conviction will not follow you. You knew your power, you knew how I had avoided you for weeks, fearing your influence—you knew how much for her sake I tried to do right, and in the face of all this, you came to me winning me to woe. You know the consequences. "L——," I desire you to leave me in a few moments and forever. If you value your life never address another word to me when this interview shall have closed. Remember forever more the scene at the lake side, and reflect that your hand wrote her death warrant. Go now, and may your future be but the counterpart of my own." Poor L——! I have never met him since. God knows if he has been as wretched as I have been sinec then—if life's fruits have melted on his lips in ashes. What more can I write of her. It matters not to tell of ensuing years of darkness. But I think I have never been alone for one moment. I think she is ever hovering over me, and so I strive to do right. I have much to answer for, but how much more has he who led me as with an invisible hand down to the verge of sorrow. I was by nature weak, so I could not resist temptation. I had planted in my heart the seeds of a depraved desire. Ever on my lips was the insatiate thirst for the destroyer. I could resist it so long as it was out of my sight, but when it was before me, my hand reached for it as instinctively as a child reaches for blossoms. There are hundreds of youths now resting in drunkard's graves far more sinned against than sinning. Their murderers, perhaps, still live, rolling in pomp and luxury, but on their gloved hands are the stains of innocent blood; in their seared consciences moans the loud voice of Remorse; and in their costly mansions upon the gorgeous walls writes at night the avenging angel. They threw around young hearts the folds of deep temptation—they emptied in their coffers the filled purse—they smiled and talked—they pleaded "peace, peace, when there was no peace"—and then turned with folded arms from the sad procession, bearing the dead victim to his rest. Let them smile if their hearts are steel. They shall yet be melted—their retribution must come—sudden and terrible.

Grave of my loved one! thou art covered with blossoms. There is no feature of her who was once so lovely, but at times I hear the folding of her wings around me, and I know our spirits are united. Days lengthen to weeks, and weeks to months and years, and my life path grows shorter, and with one great hope, shining like a star above me, of our re-union, I fold my brow with sackcloth and move onward. The crown of thorns is sometimes lifted, and I know that at length it will crumble into dust, and rest come for the weary.

Mount Carmel, Ind.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1853.

☞ Once more. dear reader, it is our privilege to meet you in the columns of the Chart, and we are truly gratified for it. Whatever may have been your feelings in reference to our former relations, rest assured that we have derived sincere pleasure from them, and to break them up even for a short time, required on our part a painful effort. At that time we expected to have been able to address you occasionally as a correspondent, but the hurry of travel and business disappointed our expectations, and we were consequently entirely quite cut off from old associations for several weeks.

We are pleased to know, however, that we were the only looser by our absence; for it is quite certain that through the kind labors of Mr. Maxwell, your Organ was more worthy of your patronage than while in our far feebler hands. In saying this, we but give utterance to our own honest convictions, which yours will doubtless corroborate. It is also highly proper that we should say that the business department of the Chart, has been conducted by Dr. I. N. Craig, in a manner worthy of the highest commendation, thus improving its condition in every respect.

It is now our fond desire to improve upon the models, which in both departments these gentlemen have left. In this way, we too may be benefitted in the long run, by what now seems to impose a heavy burthen upon us; for should we succeed in maintaining the Chart as they have made it during our absence, we feel that we shall at least "deserve success."

Stand up to the Chart.

It will be remembered, that a large number of our present subscription list was obtained shortly after the Chart became a weekly paper, and while it was issued to subscribers at 50 cents a year. In six or eight weeks at least, two thousand of these subscribers will fall off; and unless something is done to secure the renewal of their subscription, the paper must suffer immensely in every point of view. Let this be remembered, and the necessary steps taken to meet the expected emergency.

Temperance Celebration.

We are requested to say that the Grand Temple of Honor will convene in this city, the 25th day of this month; and upon the 26th, the Templars of this city, intend giving a celebration, in connection with other members of the Order who may be here from abroad. Several Temples will be invited from surrounding cities, and a grand turn-out of this noble Order is anticipated.

We clip the above from the "Free Democrat," and would say to the friends of Temperance throughout the State, that the hour fixed for the celebration is 2 o'clock P. M. This hour has been selected in preference to others, as it will enable those desiring to attend to come in by the cars.

The Ladies of the Social Degree of our city have resolved to give the brethren a festival worthy of the cause and the occasion. This will come off in the evening, at some one of our public halls. The place where, and time when, will be duly announced. Come all!

☞ A friend writing us from "a far country," says: "I find that if a man has not 'Dei Gracia' in his pocket as well as in his heart, he can neither get through this world, nor into the good world to come."

☞ The Proceedings of the semi-annual session of the Grand Union of Indiana, have been handed us for publication. They will appear in our next.

Lieut. Gov. Willard.

In our homeward trip we met, in the cars between Jeffersonville and Edinburgh, a citizen of Kentucky, who gave us a piece of the history of our present Lieut. Governor, with which we were not previously acquainted; and as it reflects like honor both upon him and the institutions of our country, we publish it just as we received it. It is as follows: A few years since the Kentucky gentleman above referred to, wrote to a New York friend, requesting him to send him a school teacher. In complance with this request, the New-Yorker sent Mr. Willard duly recommended, to his Kentucky friend. On his arrival in Kentucky he was accordingly employed as a teacher, and continued to exercise the functions of that station in the same neighborhood for a year. During this time he read law, and seized upon every opportunity that offered, to improve his fine talent for public speaking. At the end of his year, he was prepared to enter the lists as a lawyer; and with a bold fearlessness and self-reliance characteristic of the man, he settled at New Albany, in Indiana, notwithstanding the just reputation of the bar at that place as one of the ablest in our State. His success has shown, that, although untried, he did not over-estimate his powers.

The Indiana State Journal: This paper has undergone a great change for the better, during our absence. It is improved in all respects, and is in every respect well worthy the patronage of those who desire to keep up with the times in our State. It flourishes and deserves to flourish under the new arrangement, that places a competent and efficient man at the head of each department,—thus evincing the wisdom of a division of labor in every business of a complicated character.

The State Sentinel: Not willing to be behind others in the race of improvement, this paper has donned a new dress, and is really a beautiful sheet. We are glad to witness the charge, and, laying aside past differences, we heartily commend it to the favor of the public.

It is no more than proper that we should say a word for the "Locomotive" and "Temperance Chart." We met them on our return, still in the old familiar habiliments they have worn ever since we knew them; and we could not avoid thinking of the reasons that might be given for their remaining unimproved, while the Sentinel and Journal have clothed themselves in "their beautiful garments." Modesty will not allow us to say what these reasons are in reference to the Chart; but in regard to the "Locomotive," it is respectfully suggested, that it is already superior to improvement.

The Indiana Free Democrat: This excellent journal meets us on our return, freighted as usual with valuable facts, suggestions, and arguments, on all subjects coming within the scope of its labors. We know of no newspaper in the State, which, merely as such, is more worthy of public patronage; and it maintains the principles of that political party whose organ it is, with decided power. Mr. Vaile possesses the ability to make a good paper, and proves it, by doing so.

A Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin: We have received of Messrs. Cox & Mathes "A Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin," prepared by Mrs. H. Beecher Stowe, in vindication of her world renowned book. It professes to present the reader with "original facts and documents upon which the story is founded, together with corroborative statements verifying the truth of the book."—These facts are partly couched in her own language and partly in that of the "original documents;" and, we regret to say, but too conclusively sustain all that is said of the cruelty of Slavery in the author's former work. It would be wisdom in the south to ask a truce at the hands of all those who scribble to vindicate their peculiar institution; for although it may be fun for the scribblers, "it is death to the subject of their defence."

The Book may be found at the Rail Road City Bookstore," on Washington Street, where nearly every thing else that is beautiful and good in their line may also be found, Indiana Reports.

Albert G. Porter, Esq., Reporter to the Supreme Court of Indiana, has laid upon our table a copy of his Reports, containing the cases decided by our Supreme Court, during the November Term, 1851. We have carefully looked them over, and do not hesitate to say that in every point of view, they are well worthy to succeed Blackford's Reports. In the preparation of these cases for the press, there has evidently been great pains taken to avoid every error or omission likely to occur in such works; and this care has attained its aim so perfectly, that we have little occasion to demand greater accuracy or freedom from mistake.

The text as heretofore, consists of the opinions of the judges as they were delivered by their respective authors; and although not always expressed in the very best style possible, they are generally clear enough to enable us to to follow without difficulty the process of reasoning by which the Court arrived at its conclusion. In the great hurry of business this is as much, perhaps, as any reasonable man should look for. It certainly would require extraordinary acquirements on the part of the Judges, to enable them to give their opinions a classic finish, when the time allowed them, owing to the great amount of business, is altogether insufficient to enable them to keep up with the docket. It is to be hoped some method for their relief will be provided before long; and that suitors in this court will not be compelled to wait for years to know the result of their causes.—This is due no less to the judges, than to the nature of our institutions and the rights of the public.

It is no disparagement to Judge Blackford, whose fame, both as a Judge and Reporter, is second to none, and furnishes a topic on which an Indianian in every part of the Union is continually addressed in terms, well calculated to awaken his State pride, to say, that Mr. Porter in the preparation of these cases has given unmistakable evidences of that good judgment and pains-taking which have given the Reports of his great predecessor, their unrivalled reputation with the bar. The abstract or analysis of each case, which, in Blackford, always presents us the law of the decision to which it is prefixed, will be found equally as perfect in the cases now before us. For brief, weighty sentences, expressing without any superfluity of words the rule of law in the case, Mr. Porter has no superior; and will doubtless become eminent as a Reporter, if he should continue for any considerable period to occupy his present position.

Owing to the fact, that the volume will be unusually large without notes, Mr. Porter has not given us a very copious supply of this kind of illustration of the text; yet his notes are more numerous than in Carter's Reports, and well calculated to throw light on the decisions to which they are appended.

Having said this much, we conclude by commending these cases to the favorable regard of the legal fraternity; and Mr. Porter himself, who is a young man of fair fame, good education and fine abilities, to the impartial justice of his fellow-citizens at large, knowing, from an acquaintance of near a score of years, that from that justice he has nothing to fear.

Election Returns

We are in the receipt of election returns by almost every mail, showing the result of the late election on the license question. We hope our friends will continue to transmit this intelligence until each county in the State is heard from, when we will publish a connected view of the whole subject. This is highly desirable, and we hope will not be forgotten by our brethren in the different counties. Let us have the returns.

Peterson's Ladies' National Magazine: In advance of its time, we have received the June number of this excellent and beautiful Magazine. In every point of view this periodical stands at the head of such works in America; and deserves the patronage of all who desire to promote pure taste and sound literature.

By some unintentional oversight of the Publisher, we have not received the January and April numbers, and would like to see them yet, as we wish to preserve the volume.

Roman Catholics vs. Free Schools.

We clip the following from the Chicago Tablet, a Roman Catholic paper. It is worthy of the serious consideration of every true friend of free institutions; for it indicates unmistakably the hostility in certain quarters to popular education, and, by consequence, to all free government. Our State schools are "infidel," our system of education "Godless," and Catholics are warned to remain "ignorant papists rather than incur the anger of their God and the loss of their souls" by attending them. To sustain this view of our educational system, and prevent the Catholic masses in our country from breaking the shackles of superstion, the terrible thunders of the Vatican are invoked, and we are told that on this subject, "the Prince of Apostles speaks no double or stammering tongue."

Now we frankly confess, judging from experience, that if slavery and not freedom, barbarism and not civilization were the objects of human endeavor and the end of human society, the course recommended by the Vatican and its satillites among us, would tend to their achievement. This is evident from the tameness and servility of the masses who repose in the shade of St. Peter's at Rome, or droop and die under the poison-vine of the same institutions on the green hills of Ireland. While we desire to be free, let our common schools be cherished; and such sentiments as the following quoted only to receive the unmeasured reprobation of every true hearted American:

"If any Catholic hitherto ignorant of duty in this matter, be desirous to know whether he can with a good conscience, patronize infidel schools, he need say only one word to his pastor, and he will be informed that the voice of Peter has been heard again and again, and in thunder tones condemning, denouncing, and anathematising the whole scheme of mixed or Godless education, and its founders and abetters! There is no mistake about this. The trumpet of the Vatican gives no uncertain sound, and the Prince of the Apostles speaks no double, stammering tongue. Peter has spoken; and the voice of solicitude, vigilance, and authority has been thrown across the loud sounding waves, of seas and oceans, and been echoed heartily by the assembled hierarchy of the United States, as well as by the Bishops individually, speaking from the pulpit and through the press. Catholic Bishops, pastors, journalists, writing with the general approbation of Bishops, have agitated the question from one end of the land to the other, until now there is hardly an excuse for ignorance on the subject.

If your son or your daughter is attending a State School, you may be as certain that you are violating your duty as a Catholic parent, and conducing to the everlasting anguish and despair of your child, as if you could take your oath of it! You ought not to be able to rest an instant, to bargain, labor, recreate, eat, drink, or sleep with common comfort, until you have removed your child from that proximate occasion of spiritual ruin in which, perhaps ignorantly, perhaps thoughtlessly, you have placed him! Do you wish him to be a reputable member of society, a comfort and a prop to your old age; an honor to your name; but above all, a Catholic man and an heir of Heaven, take him away from that school. Perhaps he has already contracted evil habits of vice, or infidel principles, which he will carry to his grave, and into the endless world beyond!

Take him away. Let him rather never know how to write his name, or spell his way through the plainest paragraph of a newspaper, or perform the simplest calculation, than become the bond and chained slave of Satan, than rise up at the last dread day of accounts to curse you in all the unavailing repentance and bitterness of final despair! Take him away if you do not wish your bed of death to be tormented with the spectre of a soul which God has given you as a sacred trust, surrendered to the great enemy of mankind. Take him away and let him be a poor hewer of wood and drawer of water; let him incur the scorn of the enlightened age; let him be accounted by lettered infidels and heathens only an ignorant Papist rather than incur the anger of his God and the loss of his soul! Take him away, let what will be the consequences!"

Illustrated Magazine of Art.—We have received the May number of the "Illustrated Magazine of Art." It sustains the high reputation arising from the previous numbers; and well deserves the liberal patronage of the public.

If we examine well the different effects of ennui, we shall find that it makes us neglect more duties than interest does.

Nature creates merit, and fortune brings it into play.

Jeffersonville and Indianapolis Railroad.

Arriving at New Albany late in the evening, on our return from the South, and finding that we would not be able to reach Madison in time for the cars the next morning, we determined to stop at Jeffersonville and reach Indianapolis by railroad. We were, however, disappointed in getting on the morning train, and were consequently compelled to wait till evening.—This gave us an opportunity to see "the sights" about Jeffersonville, and confess that we were somewhat surprised to find a city there of so much promise.

The cars left at half-past two o'clock, P. M., and we aboard of them; and we must say that our ride was as pleasant a one, as any other of the kind we remember to have taken. Besides, through the courtesy shown by this company to the corps editorial, our editorial hat was chalked, and our passage free. Every possible attention was given to the comfort of passengers by the gentlemanly conductor, and we arrived at Edinburg in advance of our time. After waiting some half hour for the Madison train, it arrived, and we were soon in the "Hoosier City." The great care and attention bestowed by Mr. Reed, the conductor on this train, upon his business, is both a guarantee of the safety of the train, and a testimony to his humane disposition as a man.

Improvement.—It is somewhat exhiliarating to witness the improvements begun and completed in our young city, during our brief absence. These consist partly in the removal of old buildings and rubbish—partly in the erection of new, beautiful, and permanent structures in the stead thereof. Among the removals we were intensely gratified to find the "old City Hotel," with all its viprous and pestiferous brood gone from its old site, and manifestations of an intention to build something better upon its ruins. Almost every square of the city is witness to great changes for the better. Here a large business house is gradually rising; there a magnificent church; and near-by a splendid family residence. The hum of active industry is never silent in our streets, and its fruits never hid from our observation. There is a fullness of life, and a heartiness of labor everywhere seen, that forcibly impresses a Hoosier with the notion, that "there is no place like home." Certain it is, that there are few places—very few, indeed—for which we would consent to exchange our own State of Indiana. Give us her soil, her improvements, her people, and we will abide with them forever, and not murmur at the spot in which circumstances have pitched our existence.

True Greatness will rise.

The following just observations on the power of talents to raise their possessor to his proper station in the estimation of mankind, are worthy of the attention of the young and rising generation. Men too frequently complain of the injustice of public opinion towards those who fail; for on examination such failures will be found to be more generally attributable to internal than external causes—to the want of mind or its proper culture in the aspirant, rather than to the want of an appreciation of it on the part of the public. Where there is one failure on the part of a man truly great, there are a hundred triumphs on the part of those who are unworthy of their honors; but this bestowal of public favor on the unworthy is due to the fact that specious appearances of merit are often mistaken by the people for the reality. While the unworthy, however, may rise and flourish for a time, the truly worthy must rise and continue forever to attract the admiration and homage of the race.—They can not be kept down, however lowly may be their origin, nor when once exalted to their proper sphere can they be degraded; and in this power to retain an exalted position once attained, consists the highest prerogative of greatness over littleness. The balloon is always liable to collapse, but solid greatness remains amid all vicissitudes the same. The toad may swell until it appears an ox; but the slightest puncture even with a pin's point will reduce it again to the dimensions of a toad. Let this be remembered by the herd of little great men who infest our country, while he who relies for success and fame on real merit, turns amid his trials and disappointments for consolation and hope, to the following beautiful passage from WIRT's "British Spy:

"Talents, wherever they have had a suitable theatre, have never failed to emerge from obscurity and assume their proper rank in the estimation of the world. The celebrated Camden is said to have been the tenant of a garret. Yet from the darkness, poverty and ignominy, of this residence, he advanced to distinction and wealth, and graced the first offices and titles of our island. It is impossible to turn over the British biography, without being struck and charmed by the multitude of correspondent examples; a venerable group of novi homines, as the Romans called them; men, who, from the lowest depths of obscurity and want, and without even the influence of a patron, have risen to the first honors of their country, and founded their own families anew. In every nation, and in every age, great talents, thrown fairly into the point of public observation, will invariably produce the same ultimate effect. The jealous pride of power may attempt to repress and crush them; the base and malignant rancour of impotent spleen and envy may strive to embarrass and retard their flight; but these efforts, so far from achieving their ignoble purpose, so far from producing a discernable obliquity in the ascent of genuine and vigorous talents, will serve only to increase their momentum and mark their transit with an additional stream of glory.

When the great earl of Chatham first made his appearance in our house of commons, and began to astonish and transport the British parliament, and the British nation, by the boldness, the force and range of his thoughts, and the celestial fire and pathos of his eloquence, it is well known, that the minister Walpole, and his brother Horace, (from motives very easily understood,) exerted all their wit, all their oratory, all their acquirements of every description, sustained and enforced by the feeling "insolence of office," to heave a mountain on his gigantic genius, and hide it from the world. Poor and powerless attempt! The tables were turned. He rose upon them in the might and irresistible energy of his genius; and in spite of all their convolutions, frantic agonies and spasms, he strangled them and their whole faction with as much ease as Hercules did the serpent ministers of jealousy that were sent to assail his infant cradle. Who can turn over the debates of the day, and read the account of this conflict between youthful ardour and hoary headed cunning and power, without kindling in the cause of the tyro, and shouting at his victory?—That they should have attempted to pass off the grand, yet solid and judicious operations of a mind like his, as being mere theatrical start and emotion; the giddy, hair-brained eccentricities of a romantic boy! That they should have had the presumption to suppose themselves capable of chaining down to the floor of the parliament, a genius so ethereal, towering, and sublime! Why did they not, in the next breath, by way of crowning the climax of vanity, bid the magnificent fireball to descend from its exalted and appropriate region, to perform its splendid tour along the surface of the earth?

When the son of this great man too, our present minister and his compeer and rival, our friend, first commenced their political career, the public papers teemed with strictures on their respective talents; the first was censured as being merely a dry and even a flimsy reasoner; the last was stigmatized as an empty declaimer. But error and misrepresentation soon expire, and are forgotten; while truth rises upon their ruins, and "flourishes in eternal youth." Thus, the false, the light, fugacious newspaper criticisms, which attempted to dissect and censure the arrangement of those gentlemen's talents, have been long since swept away by the besom of oblivion. They wanted truth, that soul, which alone can secure immortality to any literary work. And Mr. Pitt and Mr. Fox have for many years been reciprocally and alternately recognized, just as their subject demands it, either as close and cogent reasoners, or as beautiful and superb rhetoricans.

Talents, therefore, which are before the public, have nothing to dread, either from the jealous pride of power, or from the transient misrepresentations of party, spleen or envy. In spite of opposition from any cause, their buoyant spirit will lift them to their proper grade: it would be unjust that it should lift them higher.

It is true, there always are, and always will be, in every society, individuals, who will fancy themselves examples of genius overlooked, underrated, or invidiously oppressed. But the misfortune of such persons is imputable to their own vanity, and not to the public opinion, which has weighed and graduated them.

We remember many of our schoolmates, whose geniuses bloomed and died within the walls of Alma Mater; but whose bodies still live, the moving monuments of departed splendour, the animated and affecting remembrances of the extreme fragility of the human intellect. We remember others, who have entered on public life with the most exulting promise; have flown from the earth, like rockets; and, after a short and brilliant flight, have bursted with one or two explosions—to blaze no more. Others, by a few premature scintillations of thought, have let themselves and their partial friends, to hope that they were fast advancing to a dawn of soft and beauteous light, and a meridian of bright and gorgeous effulgence; but their day has never yet broken; and never will it break. They are doomed for ever to that dim, crepuscular light, which surrounds the frozen poles, when the sun has retreated to the opposite circle of the heavens. Theirs is the eternal glimmering of the brain; and their most luminous displays are the faint twinklings of the glow-worm. We have seen others, who, at their start, gain a casual projectility, which rises them above their proper grade; but by the just operation of their specific gravity, they are made to subside again, and settle ultimately in the sphere to which they properly belong.

All these characters, and many others who have had even slighter bases for their once sanguine, but now blasted hopes, form a querulous and melancholy band of moonstruck declaimers against the injustice of the world, the agency of envy, the force of destiny, &c., charging their misfortune on every thing but the true cause: their own want of intrinsic sterling merit; their want of that copious, perennial spring of great and useful thought, without which a man may hope in vain for growing reputation. Nor are they always satisfied with wailing their own destiny, pouring out the bitterest imprecations of their souls on the cruel stars which presided at their birth, and aspersing the justice of the public opinion which has scaled them: too often in the contortions and pangs of disappointed ambition, they cast a scowling eye over the world of man; start back and blanch at the lustre of superior merit; and exert all the diabolical incantations of their black art, to conjure up an impervious vapour, in order to shroud its glories from the world. But it is all in vain. In spite of every thing, the public opinion will finally do justice to us all. The man who comes fairly before the world, and who possesses the great and vigorous stamina which entitle him to a niche in the temple of glory, has no reason to dread the ultimate result; however slow his progress may be, he will in the end most indubitably receive that distiction.—While the rest, "the swallows of science," the butterfles of genius, may flutter for their spring; but they will soon pass away and be remembered no more. No enterprising man, therefore, (and least of all the truly great man,) has reason to droop or repine at any efforts which he may suppose to be made with the view to depress him; since he may rely on the universal and unchanging truth, that talents, which are before the world, will most inevitably find their proper level; and this is, certainly, all that a just man should desire. Let, then, the tempest of envy or of malice howl around him. His genius wil consecrate him; and any attempt to extinguish that, will be as unavailing as would a human effort 'to quench the stars.'"

PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

Fifth Semi-Annual Session

OF THE

GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA.

(Continued.)

The report of the Grand Scribe showed that six Divisions had been chartered and eight had surrendered their charters during the term.

The following is an abstract of the returns from Subordinate Divisions during the term.

Initiated	2287
Admitted by card	189
Suspended	346
Withdrawn	371
Expelled	940
Violated pledge	662
" second time	71
Reinstated	173
Died	43
Present No. of members	13,077
Receipts	$14,316 00
Expended for benefits	3,309 92
Cash on hand	42,035 53

The report of the Grand Treasurer showed that there was in the Grand Treasury, October 15, '52 ..... $861 83
Receipts of term 1,236 09

2,097 92
Expenses during term 2,683 42

Leaving Grand Division in debt, 585 50

The Grand Division made the following decisions on Appeals:

That a brother cannot be expelled for nonpayment of dues without notice and trial;

That a report and resolution cannot be discussed and adopted without a motion to adopt, duly seconded and stated by the chair.

When a Division refuse to sustain a charge against a brother they cannot reconsider that vote or take any further action, except on appeal.

The following resolutions were passed during the session:

Resolved, That the custom of some Subordinate Divisions in dispensing with the usual closing ceremonies in closing the Division, is unconstitutional and should not be allowed.

Resolved, That the action of the G. S. in refusing to grant a charter to certain colored persons of Clark county be and the same is hereby approved by this Grand Division.

Resolved, That a warrant be drawn in favor of Kent Division for one dollar, and the amount passed to the credit of said Division for money lost in the mail.

Resolved, That any Division in arrears to the amount of two dollars or more shall not be entitled to receive the password until the same be paid, and that the Grand Scribe cause this resolution to be transmitted to each Subordinate Division, together with the amounts due from each Division.

Resolved. That it shall not be lawful for the Worthy Patriarch to give the password to members outside of the Division room.

WHEREAS, it is of great importance to the cause of temperance in Indiana that the Temperance Chart should be sustained, and whereas, it is feared that the said paper will fail for want of adequate support, therefore,

Resolved, That ths G. W. P. be requested to issue at the cost of this Division, a circular to the Subordinate Divisions, and Deputies, urging on them the necessity of sustaining the Chart.

Resolved, That the Representatives from this Grand Division to the National Division be and are hereby requested to urge that body to appoint a National Temperance Convention, to be held in the city of New York, in connection with the World's Fair, and that the Grand Divisions be memorialized as to time, manner of representation &c.

Resolved, That this Grand Division elect ten Delegates, and five Alternates to represent this body in that World's Fair Temperance Convention, should such Convention be held.

Under the two last resolutions the following delegates and alternatrs were elected:

DELEGATES.

Bros. Charles Woodward, Wm. Hannaman, and James Hall, Indianapolis; C. F. Clarkson, Brookville; P. S. Sage, Allensville; R. T. Brown, Crawfordsville; J. B. Abbett, Columbus; John L. Starr, Cambridge; E. H. M. Berry, Milroy; E. H. Barry, Rushville.

ALTERNATES.

Bros. S. W. Kelley, Azalia; J. B. Stitt, Centreville; J. H. Jessup, John Crum, and S. D. Schooley, Cambridge City.

The committee on the State of the Order, made the following report:

The Order of the Sons of Temperance having passed the seventh anniversary of its introduction into the State of Indiana, has we think fairly demonstrated the falsehood of the prediction of certain self-constituted prophets who confidently asserted that "the Order would not outlive the eclat of its first institution." While there is much in the workings of the Order to humble our pride, and teach us that man even in his noblest conceptions is yet fallible and imperfect, nevertheless we rejoice in the many and unmistakable evidences of the salutary influences of the principles of our noble Order, and the presage of its perpetuity, and its inherent power to maintain itself against every opposition. The rapid increase of membership, and better, the diminution of apostasies and violations, call for the thank offering of our hearts, and give us hope for the future. We should "thank God and take courage." We would, however, admonish brethren that the hour of prosperity is the hour of danger. We war against a cunning adversary, a wiley foe, and every inch of ground we gain must be maintained by sleepless vigilance if maintained at all.

The reports of the deputies show what we have long suspected—that the lines of our public works—the great channels and thorough-fares of commerce will be the field on which the last great battle must be fought. Divisions situated on the lines of the various projected railroads in the State should be fully apprized of this, that being forewarned they be forearmed for the struggle. The greed of wealth that goes before, and the flood of meaner vices that follows in the wake of commerce, demands sacrifice on our part and exertions almost superhuman, if we would maintain even the ground we have gained. Those sacrifices must be freely offered up—those exertions must with energy be made; then trusting to God and the righteousness of our cause, we must, we will triumph. Judging from the tone and bearings of politicians, who it must be admitted are the only reliable barometers, indicating, infallibly, the pressure of public sentiment, we are evidently progressing toward the cherished end and object of our organization—the suppression of the manufacture of and traffic in intoxicating liquors, and the consequent abandonment of their use. Maine has had her noble "Liquor Law" in dry dock this winter, and has given the 'craft' a thorough overhauling—has caulked the seams at every point where there were indications of a leak, and tightened every bolt. Re-launched, she now rides the waves, a noble specimen of temperance architecture—worthy to bear the admiral's flag in our noble fleet. Rhode Island, having tried prohibition for a few months, declares she cannot live without it. Obviating the constitutional objections of Judge Curtis, she has re-enacted her law. The enormous monied interests are not able to procure the repeal of the law in Massachusetts. Vermont is enforcing the law with a vigor that tells of her earnestness. Michigan has submitted the question to her citizens; we hope they will look well to their interests. Even Indiana gives unmistakable evidence of progress. The law of the last session of the Legislature, if it is to be regarded as a finality, is utterly worthless. But as an evidence of the impression already made and an instrument of further progress, it is of great value. The concession in the very title of that act is above all price. It admits the right, and declares the duty of the Legislature to suppress the evils growing out of the liquor traffic. Now, that which is evil in its essence, and evil in all its results, when all "the evils arising therefrom" are suppressed, what will be left of it? This brings above the horizon a question which an enlightened Legislature (as we hope the next will be,) cannot fail to see.

In many Divisions too little attention is paid to the fostering and protection from temptation of newly reformed members. It is alike the duty and the interest of our Order to throw around such every possible safeguard—to give them, indeed, and in truth, "a brother's hand and a brother's welcome"—to assist them to employment—to give them our patronage in business—in short to open to them the free fountains of fraternal love, which will bind them with indissoluble cords to sobriety and virtue.

Many Divisions will profit by the excellent hints of the G. W. P. on the subject of the use of profane language by the members of our Order. We should ever bear in mind that the character of any particular moral reform, will always be measured by the general moral character of its advocates. Indulgence in profane language, gambling, &c., is not only inimical to the genius and spirit of our institution, but is a violation of our Constitution.

The management of a system of Deputies in a jurisdiction as large as ours, is necessarily involved in many difficulties, some of which we fear are unavoidable.—To take the oversight of the work of a Division—to see that the Constitution, Ritual, rules and usages of the Order suffer not from infringement or innovation, constitute the duty of a D. G. W. P. Now, to transfer this duty, or any part of it, to the W. P., would be to thwart the design, so far as the supervision of the Deputy was intended to operate as a corrective of abuses of power in the administration of the W. P. As to the penalty proposed by the G. W. P., to-wit, withholding the password, your committee have doubts of the powers of this Grand Body in that direction. The National Division, in the notable Maryland case, has made a precedent in a case very nearly parallel. Strictly enforcing our present penalty, we think should first have a fair trial; if it fail, then it will be time to cast about us for some other remedy for this remissness.

R. T. BROWN,
J. B. ABBETT,
E. O. CHAPMAN.

Concurred in.

The publication committee submitted the following report and resolution:

The committee on the publication of the Chart would beg leave to make the following report: That they deem the continuance of said paper of great importance, not only as the organ of this Grand Division, but as the able advocate of the Temperance cause in Indiana. The Chart, under its present editor, is ably and efficiently conducted; but the committee regret to report that its support is by no means commensurate neither with its merits or the cause it advocates. It is a melancholy fact, to which many past and painful failures bear witness, that political, and even literary papers are much more readily and zealously sustained, than temperance journals. This should not be. The limited support of the Chart is a melancholy indication that there is not the proper feeling amongst the friends of temperance in Indiana. By the returns to this Division, there are upwards of 13,000 Sons of Temperance in this State; yet the Chart only shows a subscription of some 3,306—showing that more than three-fourths of the Order in this State give no aid to their paper. The committee would appeal to the friends of temperance in the State to come up and sustain this paper, and sustain it soon, or it must stop its publication at the close of the present volume in November next.

Resolved, That in order to sustain the Chart, that each Subordinate Division be earnestly requested to subscribe for at least three numbers.

The Grand Division resolved to meet in Indianapolis on the 25th of October next, but reconsidered the vote and amended the resolution so that the time of meeting will be some time in October, the officers to fix the day. The amendment was made in view of the probability that the State fair would have been held here in October, and the desire to hold the session during the fair.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

The only merit of some people consists in saying and doing foolish things in a useful manner, and they would spoil all if they changed their conduct.

Kings do with men as with pieces of money—they give them what value they please, and we are obliged to receive them at their current, and not at their real value.

The glory of men should always be proportioned to the means they have employed to acquire it.

It is not sufficient to have great qualities; we must be able to make proper use of them.

However brilliant an action may be, it ought not to pass for great when it is not the result of a great design.

There ought to be a certain proportion between actions and designs, if we would draw from them all the results they are capable of producing.

There is an infinity of modes of conduct which appear ridiculous, the secret reasons of which are wise and sound.

It is more easy to appear worthy of employments which we do not, than of those which we do possess.

Our merit gains us the esteem of the virtuous—our star that of the public.

The world more often rewards the appearances of merit than it does merit itself.

Avarice is more opposed to economy than liberality is.

Hope, deceitful as she is, serves at least to conduct us through life by an agreeable path.

Indolence and timidity often keep us to our duty, while our virtue carries off all the credit of doing so.

It is difficult to determine whether an open, sincere, and virtuous action is the result of probity or artfulness.

The virtues are lost in interest, as rivers are lost in the sea.

☞ We are requested by the Grand Scribe of the Grand Division, to say that the reason why Charters are not issued to those Divisions which have recently applied for them, is, that he is out of Rituals and is waiting to receive some from Philadelphia.

They will be attended to shortly.

EXERCISE IN EARLY LIFE.—To fetter the active motions of children, as soon as they have acquired the use of their limbs, is barbarous opposition to nature; and to do so under the pretence of improving their minds and manners, is an insult to common sense. It may, indeed, be the way to train up elevated puppets for short-lived prodiges of learning; but never to form healthy, well-informed, and accomplished men and women. Every feeling individual must behold with much heartfelt concern, poor, little, puny creatures of eight, ten, or twelve years of age, exhibited by the silly parents as proficients in learning, or as distinguished for their early mastery of the languages, elocution, music, or even some frivolous acquirement. The strength of the mind, as well as of the body, is exhausted, and the natural growth of both is checked by such untimely exertions.

Acknowledgments.

Received of S. Massy, of Carmel, 75 cts.; S. Record, Rising Sun, $3.00; J. W. Fugit, Sidney, Ohio, 50 cts.; Dr. A. May, Indianapolis, 75 cts.; O. W. Wilson, Crawfordsville, 75 cts.; H. C. Wilson, New Albany, 75 cts.; W. B. Reed, Dublin, 75 cts.; J. Oldaker, Hagerstown, 75 cts.

Grand Temple of Honor.

The next annual session of this body will be held in this city, on Wednesday, the 25th inst., at 2 o'clock, P. M. A general attendance is requested.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less) $5 00
200 " 8 00
300 " 10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

MANSION HOUSE,
Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,

Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,

oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth.

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

A Magazine of Pure Morals:
PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST LADIES MAGARINE.

A NEW Volume of this popular periodical will commence with the January number for 1853, which will be ready by the 1st of December, and will be the most superb ever published.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL MAGAZINE.

This is now the only Magazine that gives original articles exclusively: Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, the editor, and all the best American writers, are regular contributors. More thrilling stories, tales and novels have appeared in this periodical in the last ten years, than in all the others put together. The tone is that of the highest moral purity, so that every family, where there are daughters, should have it. Receipts, patterns for embroidery, and every thing useful to the sex appear monthly.

COLORED FASHIONS HERE ONLY.

No other Magazine now gives colored steel fashion plates, as this does. Full letter-press descriptions accompany each monthly plate. This is in fact the text book of fashion, and indispensable to all who would know how to dress elegantly yet economically. It enables every lady to be her own dress maker.

MAGNIFICENT MEZZOTINTS AND OTHER ENGRAVINGS.

The mezzotints and steel engravings, one of which at least, appears in every number, are unrivalled for beauty. In illustrations, as well as reading matter, indeed, this Magazine is without an equal. In fact, this is the only illustrated Magazine in the country which has steadily increased in circulation every year which proves how superior it is.

TERMS—CHEAPEST OF ALL.—One copy one year $2; three copies $5; five copies $7 50; eight copies $10; sixteen copies $20.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS—To repay persons getting up clubs, the following splendid premiums will be given: For a club of three or five, a premium plate, 16 by 24 inches—a magnificent offer. For a club of eight, a copy of the Magazine for 1852.—For a club of sixteen, an extra copy for 1853, and a premium plate in addition. Address post-paid to

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
No. 98, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Editors who shall copy this prospectus shall receive a copy of the Magazine for the year 1853.

N. B. Specimens sent when desired. Every postmaster is authorized to act as agent.

Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers.

THE GREAT
MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.
FOR THE CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, and all affections of the Chest and Lungs.

THESE Wafers operate like a charm—producing almost INSTANTANEOUS relief. They allay at once, the tickling and irritation in the throat, which give rise to hcking and coughing, and finally result, if not arrested, in a disease of fatal type.

For Bronchitis, so fearfully prevalent in this climate, these Wafers stand perfectly unrivalled. No Public Speaker should attempt to address an audience without a supply of LOCOCK'S WAFERS in his pocket. They lubricate the throat and facilitate delivery to a most astonishing degree. Professional singers, and all members of Church Choirs will experience immense benefit from their magic effects. All who use them cheerfuly testify to their wonderful efficacy. There is but one opinion of their matchless virtues, in all complaints for which they are recommended. One box will satisfy you that we cannot speak too highly in their favor.

BEWARE! The rapid sale of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, conseqvent upon their world-wide reputation, has tempted heartless speculators in the life and health of mankind, to palm off upon the unsuspecting a worthless imitation of Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers. Be sure that you ask for Dr. LOCOCK'S Wafers, and see that the name of E. TAYLOR, the Proprietor be written on the top of each box. ☞ None other can be genuine.

For sale by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING, W. W. ROBERTS, and HANNAMAN & DUZAN, Indianapolis; and by Druggists generally, throughout the State. jan12 3m.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.
A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.
Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"
Over fifty and under sixty.
$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,
Capital $100,000.
JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,
CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.
WM. BURNET, President.
S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't
Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.
Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE,
Of Indianapolis.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A Full Course of studies in this Institution are those necessary for a complete and thorough Mercantile Education, and comprehends four distinct classes of subjects, to wit: Book Keeping by Double Entry; the Laws, Usages, and Customs of Trade and Commerce; Mercantile Arithmetic, and Commercial Law.

Partial Course, embracing the Scientific part of the full course, as illustrated in five different setts of books, together with lectures on Mercantile Arithmetic and Commercial Law, can be taken at any time, leaving it optional with the pupil, after the completion of the partial course, to continue through the entire course of studies.

Price of "Card of Admission," to Commercial Department, Full Course $25; Partial Course, $12 50; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

WRITING DEPARTMENT—Under the charge of Mr. RICHARD M. HALL. The Writing Department of this Institution is now open for the reception of pupils, in which by a series of Exercises, Illustrations, Combinations, and Arrangements, in the true principles of the art, the pupil will in a short time acquire a style characterized for beauty and legibility, as well as ease and rapidity of execution.

Price of "Course in Writing Department.—Business Penmanship $5; Ornamental Penmanship, $20; which must in every instance be pre-paid or secured.

For further information apply for catalogue or personally to W. M'K. SCOTT, A. M., Principal.
aug 11-1y

JAMES HALL,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,
Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.
COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington. between Illinois and Meridian streets,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

T. B. Welch's Magnificent
PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS superb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considereu a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washingion Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq, Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,
A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF
General Jackson,
Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.
UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,
Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,
DEALERS IN
DRUGS AND MEDICINES,
Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,
june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

"And by the river, upon the bank thereof shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

Here was hope for the sick recorded long ago, and every year adds new proof to the assurance that these promises shall not fail.

As Medical Science discovers and designates the remedies nature has given, one by one, the diseases that afflict our race yield to the control of art. Of all the maladies we suffer from, none has carried more victims to an untimely grave than Consumption of the Lungs. Subjoined we give some evidence that this too may be cured, and that Pulmonary complaints, in all their forms, may be removed by Cherry Pectoral.

Space will not permit us to publish here any proportion of the cures it has affected, but the Agent below named, will furnish our Circular, free, whereon are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

Sufferers: read and judge for yourselves.

For Influenza and Whooping Cough.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 26, 1851.

Sir: I have repeatedly used your Cherry Pectoral for Whooping Cough and Influenza, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it a complete remedy.—Four of my children have been afflicted with these diseases, and the free use of the Pectoral has always afforded almost instant relief.

JAMES GLOVER.

We attest the truth of the above statement.
M. McGINTY, Ed. of Nashville Whig.
J. M. ZIMMERMAN, Druggist.

For a Consumptive Cough.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25, 1851

Dear Sir:—For three years I have been afflicted with a Cough, so distressing that I frequently dispaired of recovery; much of the time I was obliged to sit up all night in my chair, as my cough would suffocate me when I laid down. Having used many r medies without much relief, I at last tried the CHERRY PECTORAL which under Providence has cured me altogether.

I am with gratitude yours,
JAMES M'CANDLESS.

This is one of the numerous Cures of Asthma which have been accredited to Cherry Pectoral.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848.

DR. AYER, Lowell. Dear Sir: I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form, so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breathe on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my physician prescribed, as an experiment, your Cherry Pectoral.

At first it seemed to make me worse; but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

GEORGE S. FARANT,
Commission and Forwarding Merchant.

From the President of Amherst College,
EDWARD HITCHCOCK, M. D. LL. D.,

J. C. AYER. Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated bronchitis, and am satisfied, from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion, as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK.
Amherst, Sept. 12, 1849.

Among the other distinguished authorities who have lent their names to recommend this preparation as the best known to them for affections of the lungs, are:

PRESIDENT PERKINS, Vermont Med. College.
PROF. SILLIMAN, Yale College.
PROF. VALENTINE MOTT, New York.
PROF. CLEAVELAND, Bowdoin Med. College.
PROF. BUTTERFIELD, Ohio Med. College.
Canadian Journal of Medical Science.
Boston Med. and Surgical Journal.
Charleston, S. C. Medical Review.
New Jersey Medical Reporter.
Hon. GEO. P. MARSH, Am. Ambassador to Turky
Gen. EMANUEL BULNES, President of Chili.
Rt. REV. ED POWER, Lord Bishop of Toronto.
Rev. DOCT. LANSING, Brooklyn, New York.
ARCHBISHOP PURSELL, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Also, many eminent personages in foreign countries.

Not only in the more dangerous and distressing diseases of the Lungs, but also as a family medicine for occasional use, it is the safest, pleasantest and best in the world.

Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYER, Practical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Indianapolis, Ind by CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING; in Madison by F. E. SUIRE, and sold by the druggists every where throughout the State and country. jan. 6 3m

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

TRY
BROWN'S
COUGH CANDY!

NEVER fails to cure the most obstinate COLD or COUGH of recent origin, and for the alleviation of PTHISIC, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, and all other diseases of the organs of respiration, thousands bear testimony to its efficacy. Sold at the proprietor's prices, by

jan 19 2m ¶ CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1853. NO. 50.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

The Golden Bowl Broken,

OR THE HUSBAND LEFT ALONE. *

'Twas midnight, and he sat alone—
  The husband of the dead,
That day the dark dust had been thrown
  Upon her buried head;
Her orphan'd children round him slept,
  But in their sleep would moan:
Then fell the first tear he had wept—
  He felt he was alone.

The world was full of life and light,
  But ah, no more for him!
His little world, once warm and bright,
  It now was cold and dim;
Where was her sweet and kindly face,
  Where was her cordial tone?
He gazed around his dwelling-place,
  And felt he was alone.

The lovely wife—maternal care—
  The self-denying zeal—
The smile of hope that chased despair,
  And promised future weal;
The clean bright hearth, nice table spread,
  The charm o'er all things thrown—
The sweetness in whate'er she said—
  All gone; he was alone!

He looked into his cold, wild heart,
  All sad and unresigned;
He asked how he had done his part
  To one so true—so kind?
Each error past he tried to track—
  If torture would atone—
Would give his life to bring her back—
  In vain; he was alone!

He slept at last, and then he dream'd,
  (Perchance her spirit woke)
A soft light o'er his pillow gleamed—
  A voice in music spoke:
"Forgot, forgiven all neglect,
  Thy love recalled alone;
The babes I love, oh love, protect!
  I still am all thine own."

---

* In comparison with the loss of a wife, all other bereavements are trifling. The wife! she who fills so large a space in the domestic heaven—she who is so busied, so unwearied for the precious ones around her, bitter, bitter is the tear that falls upon her cold clay! You stand beside her coffin and think of the past. It seems an amber-colored pathway, where the sun shone upon beautiful flowers, or the stars hung glittering overhead. Fain would the soul linger there. No thorns are remembered above that sweet clay, save those your hand may unwillingly have planted. Her noble, tender heart, lies open to your inmost sight. You think of her now as all gentleness, all beauty, all purity. But she is dead! The dear head that laid upon your bosom, rests in the still darkness, upon a pillow of clay. The hands that administered so untiringly, are folded, white and cold, beneath the gloomy portals. The heart, whose every beat measured an eternity of love, lies under your feet. The flowers she bent over with smiles, bend now above her with tears, shaking the dew from her petals, that the verdure around may be kept green and beautiful.

There is no white arm over your shoulder; no speaking face to look up into the eye of love; no trembling lips to murmur, "Oh, it is so sad."

There is so strange a hush in every room! No light footstep passing around. No smile to greet you at nightfall. And the old clock ticks and strikes, and strikes and ticks—it was such music when she could hear it! Now it seems to knell only the hours through which you watched the shadows of death gathering upon her sweet face.

And every day the clock repeats that old story. Many another tale it telleth, too—of joys past, sorrows shared, of beautiful words and deeds that are registered above. You feel—oh, how often. that the grave cannot keep her.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Interesting Discovery.

The following letter, which we copy from the Boston Herald, will claim attention. The letter of it is attached to a party who so engaged in making a survey for the location of a division through New Hampshire [illegible] the eastern part of New England. The [illegible] stated by him must excite curiosity and study, and if they be fully established, may well demand the fullest investigation.

NESTOR Gap, Franklin co., March 27, 1853.

DEAR B——:—We are in the small hamlet which bears the name of Nestor Gap. We have been groping about, for the last two weeks, under the most discouraging circumstances. We have had snow, hail, sleet, ice, rain, floods, mud, and all other unbearable things to contend with. Yesterday freezing, to-day thawing. But I must forego the account of my personal experience and sufferings, and hasten to give you a sketch of a most extraordinary discovery made by us.

Yesterday we were surveying near the brow of the range of hills which makes up from this gap. The air was piercing and chilly, and filled with driving snow. Suddenly the sun closed in and rain mingled with hail, drove us to seek a shelter.—There was no house or sign of human habitation within eight miles of us. Captain Edwards, who leads our party, had met with a severe sprain in the early part of the day, and was incapable of exerting himself; from this cause he suffered severely. While painfully tracing our way in quest of shelter, Mr. Samuel Emerson, my companion and chum, discovered a cleft in the side of the mountain, which could be approached very easily, and would afford a sufficient retreat for our party. We reached the spot, and bestowed ourselves as cosily as possible.—We were protected from the wind and storm. The reaction of our feelings, and the sudden rush of blood to the surface, which always follows exposure like that to which we had been subjected, caused us, in a short time, to be very comfortable.

Emerson, who never can be long quiet, began to explore every side and corner of our retreat. He noticed a large flat stone which sounded hollow as he struck it. It appeared to be laying upon the ground, disconnected with any other rock. Besides, his quick eye detected that the stone was of a different character from the natural formation of the mountain. This was enough to excite his curiosity. With the help of myself and another, the stone, which was lying at an angle, was removed, and we found an aperture beneath, lined with rude steps. This was a spur to further explorations. After half an hour's rather hard work, we succeeded in making an opening sufficiently large to afford an entrance.

Before us lay a cave. Emerson would have entered it at once, but Captain Edwards restrained him until such times as ventilation would render it safe. Emerson went in first, I followed, and the rest came after us. After descending seven steps, the aperture widening all the way, we found ourselves in a spacious cave with the roof ascending until it reached a height of nearly forty feet. The size of the chamber was, by actual measurement, ninety-four feet long, and sixty-three feet at its widest part. Beyond this another flight of steps, seemingly deeper than the first, extended to another chamber, but we have not yet explored it. What lay beyond the first room, to what extent the cave reaches, or what it contains, remains to be seen. But judging from what we have already discovered, the investigations that are to be made will possess the most overpowering interest. When we had been in the cave long enough to accommodate our eyes to the dim light furnished by the opening we had made, we began to make our observations. We were filled with astonishment at what lay before us. The cave or grotto had evidently been used as a hiding place for treasures, and a place for concealment by those who had used it. Implements of defence lay in groups upon one side.—They were of an exceedingly antique form. Hoar antiquity rested upon every article before us. The dust of ages had settled down upon all things in the cave.

In one corner we found three earthen vessels of singular construction and shape. These were filled with coin, of silver, brass and iron, but mostly of brass, of various shapes. The coin bore no image, were coarsely but most curiously wrought, and Capt. Edwards, who boasts some knowledge of coins, declares them to be entirely unlike anything he had ever seen or read of, and of a very ancient date.

But the most singular and interesting discovery of all consists in our having found, in a niche, several rolls and packets, composed of a material entirely unknown to us, upon which were inscribed figures and characters, the meaning of which, as yet, we have not been able to determine upon, or make out the nation or date to which they may have belonged.

We go to-morrow to the cave, having made ample preparations for exploring its utmost extent. We take with us provisions for a week, and bedding for our accommodation. We shall occupy the chamber already discovered. Capt. Edwards is so deeply interested in the investigation, before him, that he has abandoned, for a week, at least, his surveying expedition. He is filled with the highest hopes, and, although a cold an unimpressive man in the ordinary concerns of life, he is now animated with the greatest enthusiasm.

Conversing on this topic this afternoon, he declares his belief that both the coin and the scrolls have a date anterior to the Christian era. If this be so, we certainly have a clue that will conduct us to an inquiry that has hitherto been clouded in mystery and the silence of the grave,—What was the condition of this country centuries ago, and who inhabited it? It cannot be supposed that this vast continent has been permitted to be a howling wilderness for so many thousand years; or that our mighty rivers have flowed through rich and fertile valleys since the creation, without the intelligence to sound the praises of the Lord and Maker of them all.

Capt. Edwards has forwarded a small quantity of the coin, and a scroll of the manuscript to his brother, Cornelius R. Edwards, Esq., of the Exchange Coffee House, with a request that he would lay them before the learned and scientific men of Boston, and also before the faculty of Harvard University. His letter and package will doubtless reach the city by the same conveyance that brings you this, and I recommend you to call upon him and view the curiosities of our cave. Besides, he may have other and more minute descriptions from Capt. Edwards himself, than I am able in this hurried letter to give. You may depend upon hearing from me next Sabbath on our return to this place. We have a mail but once a week, which passes every Wednesday, so you may expect to hear from me more at length, by Thursday night of next week.

I remain, yours, &c.,

CHARLES G. PROCTER.

Speak Kindly.

In our daily intercourse with those we love—in our family relations as husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and sisters—a constant watchfulness ought to be maintained over our words and actions, in order to avoid inflicting unnecessary pain. How frequently does it occur, that a word unkindly done to those we once loved, but who have been since removed by the hand of death, will haunt our memory long afterward, like an avenging demon, causing us poignant and vain regrets! Years after the circumstance had passed out of our own minds and the mind of the friend we may have grieved er wronged, if some sudden calamity befals him, or some unexpected summons calls him away from earth, and removes him from the scope of your ability to make redress, will the awakened memory of the unkind act or word cloud the melancholy reflections of our waking hours, and even haunt our dreams. But the most bitter and poignant reflections arise, when we have parted in unkindness from some one connected with us by the tenderest ties; and then no opportunity occurs to effect a reconciliation, the person we have injured is removed from us suddenly by death; then comes the period of vain regrets and unavailing self-reproach. What would we give for a moment of time to ask and obtain one word of forgiveness from that loved one we have wronged! but, alas! too late! too late!

The experience of an acquaintance, related by himself not long ago, illustrates most forcibly the above position. He had been living, he said, away from home for several months, and was on a visit of a week or two, at his father's house. The father was a man of the most uncompromising integrity, and cherished strong, though honest, prejudice against all light or transient amusements. He had never allowed his children, while under his control, to attend dancing parties or shows, or to mingle in the sports which most men regard as unobjectionable, or at least not altogether to be condemned. The consequence was, that the children, as is usual under similar circumstances, were fond of indulging in the interdicted pleasures, and were apt, when an opportunity did occur, to carry them too far. They felt that their father was prompted by a sincere conviction of, and a desire to discharge the duties of, a parent who feels the weight of his responsibility to God—but they felt also that he was unnecessarily stringent in his interpretation of what he considered right or wrong. As a consequence, they did not hesitate, when circumstances favored it, to evade their father's mandates upon the subject, and even, when they dared, to set them at defiance.

"I shall never forget," said the narrator, "nor cease to regret the incidents of my last visit home during my father's life. There was to be a ball at a neighboring tavern, by no means a reputable place, and it was to come off the evening before I was to return to my employment in a distant town. Feeling myself emancipated from paternal control, (for I had just reached my majority,) and priding myself upon the idea that I was now master of my own actions, I signified my intention to be present. My father, as usual, forbade my attendance. I answered him in anger, stating that his authority over me was henceforth ended; that he had treated me like a boy, and I had submitted like a boy until now; but since I had reached the age at which the law permitted me to think and act for myself, I was determined to assert my rights. I even went so far, and was so unjust to my father, as to intimate that a desire existed on his part to tyrannize over us, from a love of paternal authority. He was a man of strong and naturally irritable feelings, but his motives were always of the purest kind; and my conscience smote me as I uttered the sentiment, which my pride would not permit me to recall.

"An angry blush passed over his countenance at such an unusual reception of his commands, but he checked himself instantaneously and answered with unusual mildness: 'Charles, I may have erred in many points touching the government of my children, but I have endeavored to do my duty as a parent and a man. The time may come when you will be sorry for what you hove uttered to-day!'

"And that time did come more speedily than even he anticipated. They were prophetic words, and even at this late day, they haunt me in my dreams.

"I went to the ball, but I did not enjoy myself; I was jovial, and full of glee; my associates thought me in unusually good spirits, but it was all feigned and hollow-hearted as a sepulchre. 'Charles, the time may come when you will be sorry for what you have uttered to-day!' rung in my ears.

"It was near morning when the party broke up, and I returned home, jaded in spirit, exhausted in physical energy, and worn down with excitement. I went to bed and fell into a troubled sleep, which lasted until near noon. When I arose a dizziness and pain in the head incapacitated me from mental exertion; still I half resolved, ere I left home in the afternoon, to confess my fault to my father. I met him at the dinner table, but no allusion was made by either of us to the incident of the previous day; and when we arose from the table, it was near the hour at which it was necessary for me to take the coach. I followed my father into our little parlor, whither he had gone, as if desirous of affording me an opportunity to to speak with him alone; but I was ashamed to confess that I was wrong; and merely said I must bid him good bye, as the coach was coming.

"'Have you nothing more to say, Charles?' he inquired.

"'No,' I answered, and we parted. I took the coach for the scene of my labors, displeased and angry with myself, but now penitent; and for a week succeeding was industriously employed in my vocation, having allowed the unpleasant circumstance to pass out of my mind, when an express came requiring my immediate presence at home, for it was stated that my father, in a state of apparently perfect and florid health, had been stricken down by an apoplectic fit.

"Although still alive when the messen- left, he was insensible, and was not expected to survive. Then, indeed, I felt the full force of the ominous prediction, 'The time may come when you will be sorry for what you have uttered to-day.' I hastened home full of anxiety and grief, only to find my father at the point of death. He never gave a token of recognition of my presence, and resigned his spirit into the hands of God, amid the grief of a sorrowing household, of whom mine was infinitely the most bitter. Once, indeed, before my arrival, he rallied sufficiently to inquire if I had come, and on being answered in the negative, relapsed into a state of insensibility, and never spoke again. As I stood beside his bed, and gazed upon the lifeless features of one of the best of fathers, whose every command it was my duty to have obeyed, (and which, as a general thing, I did obey,) the thought of the last act of disobedience and unkindness tortured me like an avenging fiend; and I felt as if a word of forgiveness from those cold lips would have been received more joyfully than a welcome admission to the bliss of heaven."

"I want to be an Angel."

A child sat in the door of a cottage at the close of a summer Sabbath. The twilight was fading, and as the shades of evening darkened, one after another of the stars shone in the sky, and looked down on the child in his thoughtful mood. He was looking up at the stars and counting them as they came, till they were too many to be counted, and his eye wandering all over the heavens watching the bright world above. He was so absorbed that his mother called to him and said:

"My son, what are you thinking of?"

He started as if suddenly aroused from sleep, and answered,

"I was thinking—"

"Yes," said his mother, "I know you were thinking; but what were you thinking about?"

"Oh," said he, and his little eyes sparkled with the thought, "I wanted to be an angel!"

"And why, my son, would you be an angel?"

"Heaven is up there, is it not, mother? and there the angels live, and love God, and are happy; I do wish I was good, and God would take me up there, and let me wait on him forever.

The mother called him to her knee and he leaned on her bosom and wept. She wept too, and smoothed the soft hair of his head as he stood there, and kissed his forehead, and then told him that if he would give his whole heart to God, now while he was young, that the Savior would forgive his sins, and take him up to Heaven when he died—and then he would be with God forever.

His young heart was comforted. He knelt at his mother's side and said:

"Jesus, Savior, Son of God:
  Wash me in thy precious blood;
I thy little lamb would be,
  Help me, Lord, to look to thee."

The mother took the young child to her chamber, and soon he was asleep, dreaming perhaps of angels and heaven.

A few months afterwards sickness was on him, and the light of that cottage, and the joy of that mother's heart went out. He breathed his last in her arms, and as she took her parting kiss, he whispered in her ear:

"I'm going to be an angel."

Little reader, do you not wish to be an angel?

Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams—a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of a ship—a bridle bit is a little thing, but see its use and power; hairs and pegs are little things, but they hold the large parts of large buildings together; a word, a look, a frown—all are little things, but powerful for good or evil. Think of this and mind the little things. Pay that little debt—it's a promise, redeem it—if it's a shilling; hand it over—you know not what important event hangs upon it. Keep your word sacredly—keep it to the children, they will mark it sooner than any one else, and the effect will probably be as lasting as life. Mind the little things.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS
v.2 #50

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1853.

ORIGINAL POEM.—We publish this week a beautiful poem from the pen of the gifted Miss Chitwood. It is sufficient for its own commendation. Her efforts have been well received by the press all over the Union; and although no prophet, it is safe to predict that many years will not pass before her name will be a household word wherever sweet song is admired and cherished.

☞ There are now pending in the Supreme Court several cases involving the constitutionality of the existing liquor law. SENATOR PETTIT, we are informed, has presented an elaborate brief to show that the law is unconstitutional; but this we know has been ably answered by Messrs. TAYLOR and COBURN, of this city. We will give the decision as soon as rendered.

☞ The news from the elections comes in slowly upon us; but so far as received, it is most cheering; and plainly shows that the people want but the opportunity to sweep the whole liquor traffic from the State. Still, let us have the returns. Our State is full of the right spirit, and the returns will show it.

Our Police,

There is manifest fault in our city police. Our streets are seldom altogether clear of drunkards, who annoy the passers. Now, these poor fellows must get their whisky at some one of our numerous under-ground roads to ruin; and one would think that proper vigilance might ascertain where the poison is sold. It is sold; for the liquor fiend never gives it away. And if it is sold, it is sold without legal authority—in violation of law; and is, therefore, crime. To discover and bring to punishment the criminal is the proper end of police regulations. To that end have we assumed the prerogatives of a city, elected officers, passed by-laws, and levied taxes. If our laws are so defective that offenders escape punishment in consequence thereof, let them be amended. If our officers have forgotten their duty, let them remember it soon, or we shall be flooded with hosts of grog-made furies, who will prey upon our people, and eat out our substance.

But few days pass without witnessing scenes in our streets, which should be ended by official interference. At one time may be seen and heard some isolated victim of our retailers belching forth indecency and profanity at the top of his voice; and at another, a crowd of kindred spirits, stung by the worm of the still to madness, go whooping along the streets to the shame of the decent and the terror of the feeble and unprotected. Are our officers elected that they may wink at these things? Is our marshal's staff bestowed that he who bears it may be the protector of the law or of its violators? It is with no design to impugn any man's motives, or censure his conduct that we have said this much. Our police may be doing all it can to suppress crime, but if it is the whisky vendors must be doing something extra in their line.

The Maine Law for the Indians.

The following document has been placed in our hands, by Lawrence M. Vance, Esq., of this city. It is both curious and interesting, and well deserves the consideration of those who think we are progressing too rapidly in reference to intemperance. Our forefathers thought it right to protect even the Indians from the ruinous effects of intoxicating liquors. If Congress had the right in those early times to prevent the liquor traffic among the Indians, is there no right in the States, or any other part of our system of government, that will enable us to rid ourselves of the same curse?—Have we power to protect only the savages of our borders?

By WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, Esquire, Governor and Commander in Chief of the Indiana Territory, and Superintendant of Indian affairs for the same:

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, by an act of Congress, of the thirtieth of March last past, the President of the United States is authorized to take such measures as he may deem expedient for preventing the introduction of Ardent Spirits amongst the Indian tribes; and whereas, I have received instructions and authority from the said President to suppress the sale of Ardent Spirits to the Indians within this Territory, I do by this, my Proclamation, strictly enjoin upon all traders, and other persons, to forbear in future to sell any Ardent or Intoxicating Liquors to any Indian, or Indians, whatever. Such traders as may heretofore have taken Liquors into the Indian country, are allowed until the 1st day of December next, to remove the same, after which period it shall be considered as an infraction of the regulations for the government of the Indian department, if any such Ardent Spirits shall be found in their possession, and their bonds will be forfeited accordingly.

Given under my hand, and the seal of the Territory, at Vincennes, this fourteenth day of Oetober, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and two, and of the Independance of the United States, the twenty-seventh,

WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON.

By the Governor,
JNO. GIBSON, Sec'y.

Is he a Man?

Have you ever, gentle reader, almost, if not altogether, stumbled over some victim of vice, or misfortune, as you were merrily bustling along the highway of life? Perhaps he was down even in the gutter, covered over by so dire a cloud of filth, as to prevent the man from shining out? And, thus taken aback, have you never felt degraded by contemplating one so fallen; and turned away, saying in your heart—or perhaps audibly—that he had descended below the reach of human sympathy, and merited his fate, even though it were to perish, like a brute, in the streets? Nay, have you not felt as if to touch him, would be pollution; and that to own him as your brother—partaker of the same human nature,—and heir of the same immortality with yourself,—would be the profoundest stoop?

If such thoughts have ever come up on such occasions, they were unworthy of you as a man. They came not from above, but from beneath; not from the giver of good and perfect gifts, but from the enemy of all righteousness. That same man, however fallen he may be, is still thy brother; and could the trials and temptations that humbled him from the proud height of manhood to his present brute level, have fallen in thy path, perhaps thou too wouldst have fallen as low as he. Until his heart-history is known—the power that tempted him, and the resistance made by him, laid open to the world—he, who has no heart to pity and no hand to rescue such a one, proud as may be his position in life, is possessed of no attribute of soul above the wretch he despises and spurns.

We have before now seen upon the gravelled sidewalk of one of our streets, a handsomely clad young gentleman, as the world styles him, down upon his knees—his kid gloves off, and his rattan laid aside—turning over the gravel with his taper fingers, and manifesting the utmost care. Sympathizing with his apparent axniety, we have asked him what he had lost, deeming that we might aid him in his search. On one occasion we were answered—"a gold dollar;" and the search went forward for an hour or more, although the winter blast was keen and the ground wet. But after all, the gold dollar was not found, and indeed there was very little hope that it would be from the first. But the exquisite searched for it carefully—unbending his dignity, and even soiling his clothes in the pursuit. And well he might, for a gold dollar was lost; and what a world of enjoyment even that might purchase for a being, whose highest joy is to have a handsomely greased and curiously curled head of hair, or a finely trimmed mustache or goatee; or to waste his days and nights with maidens silly as himself, who deem him wonderful nice, and mistake his impudent pertness for an indication of brains.

Again, we have seen that same exquisite, turning up his lip in scorn, or passing some vulgar jest at beholding a man prostrated in the street by the vice of intemperance. He is above stooping to lift him up, and endeavor to restore him to himself and friends. There he his, lost to both, and ready to perish; but he who searched an hour for a gold dollar, and felt no humiliation in the search, feels that he would be degraded by finding an immortal being, and restoring him clothed and his right mind to his owner—the Father above.

Is this the tendency of the age? Is a gold dollar really to be preferred to our brother and the salvation of his manhood? There is too much in the practices of our people—too much in what they smile at and approve, that goes to answer these questions affirmatively. It is to be feared that with all our progress, our humanity is gradually becoming extinct. It is seldom that we act with reference, as we should, to the highest good of the race, and from a design to produce that result. The world needs another visit from Him, who, more than eighteen hundred years ago, came from Heaven to Earth to rebuke hypocrisy and to teach humanity. Could the Christianity that flaunts our streets in gaudy finery and silvered carriages, while poverty and wretchedness cry in vain for bread, or even a word of consolation, behold the "man of sorrows" walking, as then, with the humblest, the poorest, and even the vilest of the race, and hear him saying for their comfort—"Blessed are the poor in spirit," it might feel constrained either to doff all pretension to what it professes; or, like the priests of old, to crucify him again as a vile pretender. It was to humanize humanity—to restore the feeling and sympathy of a common brotherhood, that he labored and suffered while here; and until that is our aim, we must forever fall short of the standard of manhood he has given us—"He that loveth not his brother abideth in death."

Is he a man, that needs our assistance, our sympathy, our care? Let that be enough to incite us to labor for his weal. He may be poor. So was his Redeemer. He may be hated and despised by the children of fashion, and the votaries of fashionable religion. So was his Redeemer. He may have no house to shelter him from the storm. "The foxes had holes, and the birds of the air had nests, but the Son of Man had not whereon to lay his head." Be careful, therefore, that you despise him not; but that you labor more, far more for him, than for many gold dollars; for in "as much as you do it to one of the least of these His brethren, you will receive credit for having done even so to Him." If he is fallen, then, help him rise; if he has sinned, strive to lead him to repentance; and, in all things, show to him and the world, that you regard him as your brother, and of more worth "than many sparrows."

Three Books.

ANOMALY:—Taking up an old book the other day, which we acknowledge to have too much neglected, we stumbled upon the following injunction: "BE NOT CONFORMED TO THIS WORLD." The simplicity and directness of the injunction struck us as not likely to be misinterpreted by any but those who "wrest the Scriptures."

In another book—a special favorite of ours—we also read the following picture of one of the gayest and most voluptuous scenes of this world—avowedly so.

"There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Belgium's capital had gathered then,
Her beauty and her chivalry, and bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men;
A thousand hearts beat happily! and when
Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes looked love to eyes that spoke again,
And all went merry as a marriage bell."

Byron.

Again, we read in the Indianapolis Journal—

"Great pains were taken to decorate the Hall. We had then been traveling from ten o'clock in the day until nine at night, and when we entered the Hall, just from the noise, dust, and darkness of the railroad, a scene resembling fairy land burst upon our vision. Delicious perfumes ravished the senses, sylph-like forms glided along, mirth and gay laughter prevailed,

'And when
Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spake again,
And all went merry as a marriage bell.'

"To come down to the material: we have not seen the figures, but presume that it paid a handsome sum toward Church purposes. The item of epistolary communication was brisk. Eleven dollars were taken at the post-office."

To an outsider it seems, that, with others, as well as himself, the Old Book is indeed becoming antiquated.

